Minority Group in Methodist Church Lauds Red Policy

Spirit of Yule Exploited for Moscow Way

By FREDERICK WOLTMAN, World-Telegram Staff Writer.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 29.—The spirit of Christmas and the Sermon on the Mount were invoked here this week end as justification for an all-out attack on America's foreign policies and a glowing defense of the Soviet Union in both her foreign and domestic affairs.

Keynote speakers denounced the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine, our atomic energy stand and our China policy at the annual meeting of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, a minority but highly articulate unofficial adjunct of the Methodist Church.

Had they been present, V. M. Molotov and William Z. Foster would have applauded enthusiastically. For what the speakers said, the Communists have been telling us all along.

But here religion was made the basic argument before about 75 delegates, including Methodist bishops, clergymen and church workers.

Charges U. S. Falsehoods.

The keynoter on American-Soviet relations was Jerome Davis, long an ardent Soviet apologist. He accused American "capitalistic interests" and newspapers of "perpetuating falsehoods about the Soviet Union."

Mr. Davis urged that "America be the good Samaritan to Russia."

"The Christmas story, the story of Mary," declared another speaker, "means not the improvement of the present social order but its revolutionary abolition and replacement anew." He was the federation's executive secretary, the Rev. Jack McMichael, 30, who was once active in the Young Communist League and has been a diligent supporter of Communist fronts to date.

He accused the United States

This meeting was followed by a long statement bearing names of prominent Methodist church leaders who did not attend; but claimed to have endorsed this infamous meeting!

of backing "the rich and privileged of the world, the princes on their thrones, the grafters and the rich exploiters in China."

"The greatest moral and spiritual problem facing the American people," Mr. Davis told the delegates, "is not the struggle between Communism and democracy; that is a spurious issue. It is the struggle between reaction, the old order, the control of property and an emerging new order pushing its way up through blood, tears and strife."

The subject of the conference was "The Christian Church and Present Day Tensions." The Social Action program formulated here, according to Mr. McMichael, will be presented to the Methodist church for its formal adoption.

What the meeting's planners had in mind for the federation's stand on international affairs was evident from their literature display. It contained many books and pamphlets on the Soviets but not one by a critic.

On the contrary, there was "Soviet Russia Since the War," by the Dean of Canterbury, England's leading apologist for the Stalin dictatorship.

Display Red Pamphlets.

Scattered throughout the display were pamphlets from the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, which the Department of Justice recently termed a subversive, Communist group. One item from the council, the foremost pro-Soviet propaganda agency in America, was entitled "Bibliography, Recommended Readings of the Soviet Union."

While the speakers on foreign affairs spoke a line that paralleled the Communists, those on labor and agricultural problems did not. One was the Rev. Kermit Eby, CIO research and education director, who praised Walter Reuther, United Auto Workers president and chief foe of the Communists in the CIO.

Mr. Eby called for "Christian social action in co-operation with labor to conquer poverty and eliminate substandard conditions."

The guest of honor was the former Chinese war lord and so-called Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, who last week defied his government's order to return to China.

Feng Assails Chiang.

Through an interpreter, Gen. Feng, who claimed to speak "in the name of 450,000,000 Chinese," attacked Chiang Kai-shek as a dictator. Under Chiang today, the general said, "anybody who uses the word 'democracy' or 'peace' will immediately be condemned as a Communist and put into a concentration camp or thrown into a river and drowned."

"The Communist side," Feng said, "is really the army of the people, the peasants."

To escape concentration camps under Chiang, according to Feng, the wealthy have to pay 5,000,000 Chinese dollars and the poor "are told to sell their daughters to the bank to raise $5,000,000." He did not explain what the banks do with the daughters.

Following Dr. Davis' speech there was some skepticism expressed from the floor about his all-out defense of the Soviet Union. One delegate said:

"The crowd in control in Russia seems to me as totalitarian as Hitler. How can I stand up in my pulpit and make the speech you ask?"

Answers Questions.

"Russia isn't perfect," replied Dr. Davis. "But we, too, have some people who occasionally make some mistakes. We have all sorts of restrictions on Communists here."

He was asked about labor camps in Russia and replied "they are simply places to keep criminals." He was asked about Russia's seizure of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and replied she was entitled to them.

"It is true," said Dr. Davis, "that you can't attack socialism in Russia or Stalin personally and say Stalin should be hung. But the average Russian doesn't want to.

"If Russia sends innocent people to concentration camps and is tightening up on its civil liberties," he declared, "that is the fault of America—the terrific campaign of war talk in the United States."

Asks More Missionaries.

"It's possible the Americans will come to their senses and realize they've got to get along with Russia," he stated. "I don't think we're absolutely bound to have Fascism in this country."

Bishop Lewis O. Hartman of Boston, president of the federation, called for more social missionaries in the opening address.

Bishop Hartman warned against "the blind alley of partisanship" in the federation and remarked:

"The totalitarians—both Fascist and Communist—seek, by stifling freedom of the press, assemblage and discussion, and by calling down fire from heaven in the form of secret police, to impose the millenium at once upon the ignorant masses of mankind."

There are times, he said, however, when Christians, Fascists, Communists, atheists and Republicans might be found supporting "some common program for humanity," but that does not mean all should be classified in the same bracket.

McMichael Denies Communist Link

By the United Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 29.—The Rev. Jack R. McMichael, New York, executive secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, said last night he had never been chairman of the Young Communist League, as stated in a United Press dispatch.

"The reporter apparently became confused," he said, "by the fact that I was once chairman of the national student division of the Young Men's Christian Assn."

Dr. McMichael said he was not a Communist and had never belonged to a Communist organization.

The dispatch dealt with a speech Dr. McMichael made before a meeting here of about 75 delegates representing more than 4000 members of the federation.

Dr. McMichael, in the speech, said that the U. S. foreign policy was one of "giving to the rulers of the corrupt machines instead of to the poor."

Frederick Woltman, in his Friday dispatch from Kansas City, did not refer to the Rev. Jack R. McMichael as chairman of the Young Communist League. Mr. Woltman termed Mr. McMichael "a former youth leader in the Young Communist League." This Mr. McMichael also denies.

Excerpt from Comrade Green's Report for the National Bureau to the meeting of the enlarged National Executive Committee, held in New York on Feb. 2nd and 3rd,, 1935.

WE MUST ASK ourselves what is the guarantee that this movement (the American Youth Congress.—Ed.) which we are helping to create will not become a Frankenstein which will later fight us? What guarantee have we that this movement will continue to base itself on a class program and will continue to remain an anti-capitalist movement? We must see clearly that the danger is very great that this movement may be swung off its present proletarian rails into petty bourgeois swamps. This is due to the mixed class composition of the movement, the fact that it contains not only young workers, but also large masses of farming and especially middle class youth. Also the fact that while the program of the movement is proletarian, as yet its leadership has come in the main from the middle classes.

The guarantee cannot be to eliminate these non-proletarian youth. It can only be to insure the working class leadership over this movement by increasing the role of the proletarian youth, especially the youth from the basic industries. If this is not done, and if on the other hand strong pressure is exerted by our enemies on the leaderships of the youth organizations, we will face the danger of having this movement transformed from its present class struggle program into one which may even later fight us.

This means the strengthening of our work precisely at its two weakest points: first, the work in the shops and trade unions and the leadership of the economic struggles both of the employed and the unemployed youth; and secondly, improving our work inside the large mass organizations controlled by the bourgeoisie and the winning of the youth within these organizations for a working class policy.

Without understanding this key question before our League, we will forget one of the main lessons taught us by events in Europe, especially in Germany; namely, that the prerequisite for uniting the non-proletarian strata in support of the working class is to achieve the unity of the proletarian masses first of all. As there is as yet no single political party whch unites the broad masses of workers, the key to achieve the unity among the working class youth is first of all in the economic organizations of their class—the trade unions.

Thus, in the broadest movement ever participated in by our League we run smack up against the main weakness of the Y.C.L., its weakness in basic industry, its weakness in the leadership of economic struggles. And through this movement we only come once more to the realization that without solving this basic weakness we can make no permanent improvement in our work. The weakness of our League in trade union work can be seen not only in the small role played by our League in the large strikes that took place since our convention, but also in the work for the local congresses and in preparation for the Washington Conference. Very few trade unions were drawn into the youth congress movement. Even in Detroit where the Central Trades and Labor Council endorsed the Congress, the necessary follow-up steps were not taken to get the locals of the various unions to affiliate to the Youth Congress.

To achieve class unity on the economic field today means that we must center all of our work within the unions of the A. F. of L. Already the majority of the Red unions have merged with the A. F. of L. unions in their particular industries. The Red unions which still exist are working in the direction of unification within the shortest possible time. The question of improving our work inside the A. F. of L. is connected not only with the American Youth Congress movement,, but with our preparation for the gigantic strike struggles which are on the order of the day in the basic industries, especially in steel, auto, mining and textile. The spring center will control what every district is doing in the camps, as we must state quite openly to the Plenum that our League to date has not seriously undertaken the work in the camps and that this situation cannot and will not be tolerated any longer.

Importance of Our Work in Mass Youth Organizations

The second aspect of the problem of achieving working class leadership over this broad united front movement, is that of work in the present mass organizations of American youth. We know that the young workers are not to be found as yet in the majority in strictly class organizations. The trade unions, unemployed, and cultural workers' organizations as yet include only a small percentage of the organized young workers. The vast majority of American young workers and youth generally are organized, but in organizations directly or indirectly controlled or influenced by the ruling class. These organizations are the Y's, Settlement and Community Houses, Church Organizations, Amateur Athletic Union, etc. It is precisely in these organizations where we must work to win the youth for a working class program and leadership—not only the young workers, but also the farming and student youth.

Work in these organizations today is a life and death question which will greatly determine the outcome of the whole youth congress movement. Many of our comrades in the last months have learned to speak in terms of hundreds of thousands of youth involved in the youth congress movement. But let us not fool ourselves. Certainly the movement is broad, but these hundreds of thousands of youth do not as yet know about the congress program and are not actively mobilized to fight for same.

Experience has also taught us that the leaders of these organizations are not going to draw their memberships into such active participation. And further, if pressure is put on them to withdraw from the movement, many of them may even do so. The guarantee that these wide masses will remain in the united front and actively struggle for its program, depends upon our work in the local branches of these organizations, how we bring the program of the youth congress to these members and draw them into struggle for the realization of same.

How prepared are we for this task? In Michigan the Youth Congress represents 300,000 organized youth. In this district our whole Y.C.L. has but 19 members in the mass organizations influenced by the ruling class. Can this small handful of comrades succeed in mobilizing these masses for the Youth Congress program despite the position of the leaders of these organizations?

The situation in Detroit is more glaring because of the broad character of the Youth Congress, but it is essentially the same in all the districts. This makes necessary a drastic radical reorganization of the forces of our League. Every Y.C.Ler must be active in a mass organization, and I speak not of our sympathetic organizations but of the real mass organizations of American youth. The slogan put forth at our convention of 20% of Y.C.L. members in mass organizations must be rejected as incorrect. Our slogan and immediate aim must be: Every Y.C.Ler active in a mass organization.

This slogan demands boldness and decisiveness on our part. In the next few weeks we must go over our League section by section, and unit by unit, sending our members into the most important youth organizations. Here too we must not alone send individual comrades into mass organizations, but whole street units. The creation of units in these mass organizations is far more important for us than street units. For it is in these organizations where we come in contact with large masses of youth. The unit in the mass organization is only second in importance to the shop unit, and hundreds of our present street units must be transformed into units in these most important organizations.

While in most districts the major problem is to send the bulk of our members into these organizations of the youth, in some places the problem is to reorganize the work of our present League so as to give leadership to our comrades already in these organizations. For example, in the South we have more than 300 members who are also members of church youth organizations—especially the Baptist Young Peoples Union. In this district (Alabama) the problem confronting the leadership is to completely change the organization structure of the League. Where possible we should build shop units and everywhere else units in the church youth organizations. Why? Because in the South, especially for the Negro youth, the church is the center of all cultural and social activity. It is here that we must work. By building our units in the church organizations we can also improve our work under the illegal conditions, as it will be easier to work in the church organizations. In Alabama there are certain places in which we can in a short while take over the church organizations of youth, under our leadership, and these can become legal covers for our work in the South.

However, our League in the North is not like that in the South. In most districts the problem of work in the mass organizations will be more difficult. We will have to teach many of our comrades how to work in these organizations. There is a big difference between work in the street and work in a mass organization. On the street, comrades put up a soap-box and speak to the workers. Those who are interested listen. Others who are not, go away. Sometimes our comrades get away with making general rah-rah speeches. But in the mass organizations rah-rah speeches will not go. Our comrades will have to learn how to speak simply and to the point. They will have to learn how to answer the arguments of skilled, trained leaders, many of whom have had years and years of experience in mis-educating youth.

We have already seen sectarian tendencies to solve this problem by creating inside these organizations narrow discussion groups or clubs of sympathizers. Among these our comrades feel at home and at the same time ease their conscience in the belief that this constitutes work in these organizations. We must fight against the creation of these narrow groups. Our comrades must attend the lectures and activities of the whole organization. They must be where the majority of youth are and not isolated from them. We have an advantage today that we did not have at the time of our Convention. Our comrades can enter any settlement house or "Y" and speak to the youth on the basis of the program of the American Youth Congress. Around this broad program our comrades can educate the youth, set up committees for the Youth Congress and draw the most advanced youth into the Y.C.L.

Our work in these Settlement Houses, "Y's" and Church organizations must result in rapid recruitment for the Y.C.L. This is of great importance not alone because we must numerically strengthen our League, but because experience shows that the comrades we now send into these organizations will, in most cases, not become the recognized leaders of these youth for some time to come—and some of them not at all. These comrades we send in can immediately make friends, can develop influence, can recruit, but to become the leaders of these youth we need something more.

In New York, for example, most of the youth who are today active in Settlement Houses have been active in these for many years. They entered when they were children and graduated from one group to another, and in the course of years became known to thousands of children and youth. We cannot expect that a comrade we send in to a House for the first time should immediately become known to all youth and accepted by them as a leader. That is why by recruiting from the youth in these Houses we will get for our League a new type of Y.C.Ler—one who is known in his organization, who grew up with it and is accepted as one of the fellows. It is from these new recruits that our leadership for these organizations will come. This does not mean that our comrades who go into these organizations should enter with an exaggerated idea of their difficulties. Experience has already proven how easily our comrades can recruit and build the League if they work correctly. Just a few examples: In the Bronx House in New York we had two or three comrades. In a few weeks of work they discovered some five youth in the House who formerly had been members of the Young Pioneers. These are now in the Y.C.L. In th Y.M.H.A. we had four comrades. These set themselves up as a committee to form a unit. In three weeks a unit was established with twelve members. In a "Y" in Philadelphia, in a period of three weeks two or three comrades also multiplied themselves into a unit of ten. These examples must be duplicated in hundreds of mass organizations.

> "Victory never comes by itself—it has to be dragged by the hand. Good resolutions and declarations in favor of the general line of the Party are only a beginning, they merely express the desire to win, but it is not victory. After the correct line has been given, after the correct solution of the problem has been found, success depends on the manner in which the work is organized, on the organization of the struggle for the application of the line of the Party, on the proper selection of workers, on supervising the fulfillment of the decisions of the leading organs."

Southern Conference For Human Welfare

"THE NATIONAL Emergency Council's report on social and economical ills of the South must be followed by effective action to remedy those ills. The Southern people are determined to take that action."

It was Mrs. Louise O. Charlton, U. S. Commissioner at Birmingham and member of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, speaking the night of September 6th at the organization meeting of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, held in the Tutwiler Hotel, Birmingham.

The meeting, attended by representatives from each of the 13 states covered in the NEC report, unanimously elected Mrs. Charlton general chairman for the conference, which is being hailed as "the South's answer to the NEC report."

The Southern Conference, which will be held November 20-23 in Birmingham, will attract hundreds of the South's most progressive leaders—educators, ministers, labor leaders, industrialists, editors, congressmen, s ators and others. Discussions will include those on health, education, suffrage, constitutional rights, prison reform, labor relations, farm tenancy, race relations and child labor.

"Panel discussion of these problems will be held," Mrs. Charlton said, "and the findings of the committees referred to the general sessions for action. It is definitely hoped that from these recommendations and suggested remedies a strong South-wide sentiment for immediate action will be born. The committee planning the conference believes that it is, of course, vitally important to determine the better courses to follow in remedying our ills, but realizes the equal importance of having these determinations translated into action."

It was revealed at the session September 6th that the conference has clear-cut plans for its continuous existence over a period of years as a progressive force for human betterment in the South. This was shown in announcement by Miss Mollie Dowd, Birmingham, national board member of the Women's Trade Union League, that the conference is setting up a South-wide Committee to make an annual award of a Thomas Jefferson medal to the Southern statesman judged most outstanding in work for human welfare and justice as embodied in the tenets of Thomas Jefferson. Rockwell Kent, famous American artist, she said, has consented to design the medal as his contribution to the movement.

Three vice-chairmen elected for the conference were William Mitch, district president of the United Mine Workers of America; Sam Roper, president, Alabama Federation of Labor, and the Rev. Clyde Helms, Columbia, S. C. Dr. H. C. Nixon, New Orleans, was chosen field chairman; Miss Mollie Dowd, secretary, and Mrs. Virginia Henry Mayfield, treasurer.

Committee chairmen named were Tarleton Collier, Atlanta newspaper columnist, publicity; and Mrs. Willie Hughes Tarpley, Birmingham, vice-chairman; Postmaster W. Cooper Green, finance, and James K. Feibelman, New Orleans, vice-chairman; Dr. W. T. Couch, director of the University of North Carolina Press, program, and Miss Josephine Wilkins, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters, vice-chairman; Congressman Luther Patrick, sponsorship and participation, and Brooks Hays, Arkansas National Democratic Committeeman, vice-chairman.

Sponsors listed to date include Virginius Dabney, editor, The Richmond Times-Dispatch; Dr. William E. Dodd, Sr., former U. S. ambassador to Germany, Round Hill, Va.; Dr. Edwin A. Elliott, NLRB regional director, Fort Worth, Tex.; Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia; Dr. C. Vann Woodward, Florida author and educator; the Rev. Charles Hamilton, Aberdeen, Miss.; George Fort Milton, publisher of The Chattanooga News; Clarence Poe, editor, The Progressive Farmer, Raleigh, N. C.; Mark Ethridge, The Louisville Courier-Journal; Donald Comer, Birmingham industrialist; H. L. Mitchell, secretary, Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, Memphis, Tenn., and a host of other distinguished Southern progressives.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare has established permanent offices at Room 212, Tutwiler Hotel. Inquiries of all kinds are invited from those interested in the aims of the conference.

"I understand this conference has not turned to the past to lament events beyond recall; that you have examined the facts of the present; that you look into the future. Those who accept the dynamic philosophy of Jefferson as sound must believe such deliberations and actions will not be in vain. Such free and open conferences should promote the welfare of the South and of the nation".

—Justice Hugo L. Black in an address to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

THE SOUTH recently demonstrated its own ability to meet and work out practical solutions for what President Roosevelt has called the "Nation's No. 1 Economic Problem". More than twelve hundred Southerners from every state below the Mason and Dixon Line met at Birmingham, Ala., in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. They represented every walk of life and all sections of the population. Outstanding business executives and trade union leaders, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergymen, professors and students, WPA workers. Federal and state government officials, members of Congress and state legislators, editors, and sharecroppers, all with one aim in view, met in various panels and in the general sessions of the conference. This gathering, which united the entire South as never before in its history, frankly faced realities which for decades have fettered Southern progress.

This conference was the South's answer to the National Emergency Council's report. The report had presented the problems facing the South. The solution for these problems was the objective which brought the most representative Southern citizens to Birmingham for three days of discussion and deliberation. It is hardly surprising that the South and the nation have yet to grasp the full extent of the achievements made at Birmingham. Only historians of the distant future will be able to measure the influence this conference will have in coming years.

Letter from President Roosevelt to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare

"The long struggle by liberal leaders of the South for human welfare in your region has been implemented on an unprecedented scale these past five and one-half years by Federal help. Yet we have recognized publicly this year that what has been done is only a beginning, and that the South's unbalance is a major concern, not merely of the South, but of the whole nation.

"It is heartening, therefore, to see the strength of Southern social leadership mustered to face these human problems, not locally or individually, but in a united front from Fort Raleigh to the Alamo.

"You know from years of trying, the difficulties of your task. I believe you will find it impossible in many instances to separate human from economic problems. But if you steer a true course, and keep everlastingly at it, the South will long be thankful for this day.

(Signed) "FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT"

Recommendations made by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare covered such fields as education, housing and slum clearance, freight differentials, credits to small business, farm tenancy, labor relations, crime prevention and prison reform, youth, race relations, constitutional rights and suffrage.

Proposals adopted by the conference included:

The Harrison—Thomas—Fletcher bill providing Federal aid for education. Under the provisions of this bill Federal aid would be given to the states, especially those with insufficient revenue to provide adequate school facilities.

Abolition of freight differentials.

Expansion of the Farm Security Administration.

Increased appropriations for the U. S. Housing Administration.

Expansion of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenancy act to provide government insured loans for farm ownership.

Abolition of sectional differentials in industrial wages and pay on WPA.

Pay for Negro teachers equal to that of white teachers.

Federal and state legislation for abolition of the poll tax "and other restrictions on the free and universal exercise of the franchise by all American citizens".

Lower interest rates, both for industrial and farm credit. (Endorsement of the Pepper bill).

Endorsement of an anti-lynching bill.

A national health program, including campaigns for the eradication of syphilis, tuberculosis, malaria, pellagra and occupational diseases. Federal grants to strengthen city, county and state public health departments as well as Federal aid to extend hospital and free clinic facilities.

Continuation and extension of the National Youth Administration.

No one in the conference expected the adoption of this program to complete the tasks facing the Southern people. Only active support of millions of Southerners can break through the resistance and hostility of selfish interests and remnants of feudalism which seek to block every move in the direction of progress and human welfare. Active campaigns must be carried on in every Southern state before the recommendations of the conference materialize in the concrete form of Federal and state legislation. As progress is made new problems will be faced which must be solved in that spirit of calm determination which characterized the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Therefore, the conference correctly decided to set up a permanent organization and to hold annual conferences similar to the one in Birmingham.

Officers of the permanent organization include Hon. Louise O. Charlton, Honorary Chairman; Dr. Frank Graham, President of the University of North Carolina, Chairman; Miss Mollie Dowd, of the Alabama Dept. of Labor, Secretary; Prof. H. C. Nixon, author and educator, Executive Secretary; and Clark Foreman, of Atlanta, Treasurer. Fifteen vice-chairmen were elected, also a Southern Council of over 100 members.

Objectives of the permanent organization are:

1. Promote the general welfare.

2. Improve the economic, social and cultural standards of the Southern people.

3. Advance Southern functional growth in accordance with safeguarding American institutions and ideals.

4. Initiate and support progressive legislation in Congress and the states in harmony with the principles and program of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

5. Continue and expand activities started at the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

6. Secure the cooperation and cooperate in the activities of other organizations now existing in the Southern states.

* * * * *

Among the outstanding speakers who addressed the conference were Mrs. Roosevelt, Aubrey Williams, NYA Director, and Justice Hugo L. Black of the United States Supreme Court. The conference was opened with an address by Dr. Frank Graham, President of the University of North Carolina.

Birmingham's city auditorium was filled to capacity and thousands were turned away when Mrs. Roosevelt spoke at the conference. She placed special emphasis on the importance of education.

The concluding session of the conference was devoted to the presentation of the Thomas Jefferson medal to the South's famous statesman and jurist, Justice Hugo L. Black, and to his address. In clear and forceful language Justice Black quoted Jefferson at length and applied his principles to the problems facing the South and the nation today. Seldom if ever has a member of the United States Supreme Court spoken in such plain language on broad social and economic questions. The historic address by Justice Black brought to a close the first Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

* * * * *

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare had its origin at a meeting in Birmingham September 6th of representatives from seven Southern states. In addition to those who attended that meeting prominent individuals in other Southern states joined in the movement for the conference, and as sponsors signed the formal call. The list of sponsors included outstanding Southerners in business, labor, education, health, and other fields.

Business interests were represented at the conference by such executives as Prentiss M. Terry of the Southern States Industrial Council, and Donald Comer, Birmingham textile mill owner. All sections of the labor movement was represented, with representatives including William Mitch, District President of the United Mine Workers, Stanton E. Smith, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers (AF of L), and many others, including workers from the mills, mines and factories. Many of the South's most distinguished newspaper men, including Barry Bingham, Louisville publisher, Tarleton Collier of Atlanta, and John Temple Graves II contributed to the work of the conference. Among clergymen who attended were Rev. Clyde Helms, Rev. Andrew Smith, Rev. Fred E. Maxey and Rabbi Myron Silverman. Youth delegates included representatives from many Southern universities, YMCA and YWCA, etc. Miss Helen Fuller of the U. S. Dept. of Justice (a native of Ala.) presided over the Youth panel. Carl Thompson, assistant NYA director of North Carolina, and many youth delegates from NYA projects took an active part in the conference. Among distinguished educators one could at random mention such individuals as Dr. A. H. Collins, state supt. of schools of Alabama, Dr. Ralph Wanger of Emory University, Dr. Ralph Boothby of New Orleans who headed the panel on education, Dr. Arthur F. Raper of Atlanta, W. T. Couch of the Univ. of N. C. Press, Dr. Chas. S. Johnson of Fiske, Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, E. C. Peters, president of Paine College, Augusta, Dr. Wm. Hepburn of the Univ. of Ala., Dr. J. R. Morton, coordinator of adult education of Miss., Dr. James J. Morrison, of Tulane, Dr. Charles W. Pipkin of La. State University, Prof. Nick Comfort, dean of the School of Religion at the University of Oklahoma, C. M. Ewing, also of the University of Oklahoma, and Dr. Wm. C. Lehman, of Tulane.

Francis P. Miller, member of the legislature of Virginia, Brooks Hays, Arkansas member of the Democratic National Committee, and Senator Claude Pepper of Florida were among the fifteen vice chairmen elected.

This was a conference of Southerners, who cherish the traditions of the South and who wish to make the South a better place in which to live. Those participating in this conference are proud of the South, its culture, resources and tremendous opportunities. They were not afraid to admit the poverty and the many problems facing the Southern people today. It was because of their love for the South and the country of which it is a part that they so earnestly set about the task of solving these problems. They have charted the road to progress. The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was not the end but the beginning of a road to a better, happier, more prosperous South—a NEW SOUTH.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio, July 21--A general Presidential pardon for the 11 convicted Communist Party leaders was urged here by the Methodist Federation for Social Action, although their appeals have not yet been ruled on by the lowest Federal appellate court.

The Federation's annual conference here, it was learned at the same time, had been given documented evidence of the extensive Communist affiliations of its executive secretary, the Rev. Jack R. McMichael.

Prepared by 21 members, it showed he has supported at least 10 groups termed Communist and subversive by the Attorney General.

The move for his ouster failed, nevertheless, when only two of the 21 signers showed up. At the concluding session, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, the Federation's re-elected president, praised Mr. McMichael who thereafter was given a rising vote of thanks.

A proposal was introduced to change the name of the Federation, an unofficial but influential adjunct of the Methodist Church. That was in response to demands from official church bodies that the word "Methodist" be eliminated.

To "eliminate confusion," the executive committee suggested a new name--Methodists Federated for Social Action. The conference voted down the proposal, but agreed to submit it to the Federation's 5000 members by mail.

The conference called for the defeat of the Mundt-Nixon Communist-control bill. It also asked Presidential amnesty for what it referred to as "political prisoners." In addition to conscientious objectors, these included such Communist groups as the Holllywood Ten, the executive committee of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee and the director of the American-Soviet Friendship Council.

Condemnation of Russian propaganda, which "pictures America as a warmongering nation, and itself as the chief exponent of peace," was approved at the final session. The Federation said:

"We believe this campaign of half-truths and lies can be dispelled by the forthright offer of universal disarmament through the UN according to the terms of the Tydings resolution."

During consideration of this report, the fewer than 100 delegates present debated briefly a suggestion that a stand be taken on American intervention against Red aggression in Korea.

This was voted down, however, after Rev. McMichael argued that "the matter is too complicated and the time too short for us to work out a resolution which would be satisfactory for everybody."

Earlier, Rev. McMichael had sharply criticized U. S. policy in the Far East. The future of Korea, he declared, should be determined "peacefully, if possible, by the Koreans themselves." He neglected to explain how this might be accomplished.

In a statement widely circulated within the Federation, the 21 members, most of them clergymen, said "a careful investigation has shown that Jack McMichael has supported or signed statements of many groups with a pro-Communist bias. He has supported plain united fronts with Communists or pro-Communists." His removal was asked "for a more effective" federation.

The conference re-elected three Methodist bishops as vice-presidents: Bishop James C. Baker, Los Angeles; Bishop Donald H. Tippett, San Francisco; and Bishop Lewis O. Hartman, Boston. Six additional bishops were elected to the Federation's top committees.

Since the Scripps-Howard Newspapers reported the Communist bias of its 1947 conference in Kansas City, the Federation has been under fire within the Methodist Church itself.

WILBERFORCE, Ohio, July 20--The Communist issue broke wide open here at the opening of the annual national conference of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, unofficial but influential adjunct of the Methodist church.

The issue arose over an attempt to remove the Federation's executive secretary, Jack R. McMichael, for his continued "support of many groups with a pro-Communist bias."

The move was started when a group of Federation members throughout the country, mostly Methodist clergymen and editors, circularized its executive committee, setting forth Mr. McMichael's record.

It was overwhelmingly defeated at a closed session by a vote of 58-to-2.

After the vote of confidence, Mr. McMichael told a public session that he could not approve America's current Far Eastern policy.

A second speaker, Dr. Lucius Porter of Milwaukee, Wis., declared that "every Christian should support" the Chinese Communist Government, which he insisted on calling "the People's Government."

The Federation has been a storm center within the Methodist Church since the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, in a series of articles by Staff Writer Frederick Woltman, reported its 1947 conference in Kansas City.

According to the articles, the prestige of the Methodist Church was used at the conference to furnish a national sounding board for Communists and fellow travelers to expound the Communist line.

Speakers then strongly attacked America's foreign policies, aimed at stemming Communist aggression, and glowingly defended Russia's.

Although the Federation represented a very small minority of the nation's 11 million Methodists, the articles pointed out that the Federation was the only articulate social action body in the church and spoke in the name of 17 Methodist bishops.

Since then, the Federation was hotly debated at the church's top-ruling quadrennial conference in Boston but the issue never was permitted to reach the floor. Church congregations on a wide scale have been passing resolutions demanding that the word "Methodist" be dropped by the Federation.

Listed as a participant at the conference here is Bishop James E. Baker, president of the Methodist Council of Bishops.

The drive to oust Mr. McMichael was spearheaded by John Mecartney, Garrett Biblical Institute student, and Professor Hiel D. Bollinger, secretary of the Methodist Student Movement. Mr. Mecartney said today he would continue the campaign.

In criticizing our Far Eastern policy, Mr. McMichael said: "I believe the decision as to the future of Korea should not be made by Russia, China, or the U. S. and its Allies but peacefully, if possible, by the Koreans themselves."

Though many countries have recognized the "new" Chinese Government, he said, "our country still believes in the myth that the clique in Formosa represents the people of China."

The 100 members present cheered Dr. Porter's criticism of America's Far Eastern policy which was coupled with his outspoken approval of the government headed by Communist Mao Tse-tung.

Dr. Porter called the Red regime "a responsible government determined to help the people" and added:

"I decline to use the word Communist in reference to the present Chinese Government. It does not represent Kremlinism or Stalinism. It is a Marxian movement based on Chinese conditions and Chinese culture."

Dr. Porter, who until last year was a professor at Yengching University in China, told the Federation that Mao heads the government, not because he was chosen by Communist leaders, "but because he won the support of the Chinese masses..."

Another speaker is the Rev. John B. Thompson, Dean of the University of Chicago Chapel. During the Hitler-Stalin neutrality pact in World War II, Dean Thompson was president of the American Peace Mobilization, set up by the Communist Party to sabotage President Roosevelt's defense program.

Communist Party Digs Deep Underground Against U. S. Unity's Roots, Hoover Warns

J. Edgar Hoover warns in the following special article that American Communists are burrowing farther and farther underground and working harder than ever, from hidden positions, to destroy the United States. He pinpoints the dangers, explains what the Reds are doing and calls upon all Americans to be vigilantly on their guard against "the insidious . . . Communist game" to wreck U. S. democracy.

BY J. EDGAR HOOVER
(Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation)

WASHINGTON, April 21 (INS) —The Communist party is endeavoring, in every possible way, to infiltrate non-Communist groups.

Civic clubs, churches, labor unions, schools and similar patriotic American groups—these organizations are today the targets of an insidious campaign to increase Communist strength.

The pressure is tremendous. The Communists are determined to advance their cause by cunning, stealth and downright dishonesty.

These tactics depict, most vividly, the current status of the Communist party, USA.

The party is dropping deeper and deeper underground.

More and more of its operations are being carried on in clandestine channels—the training of leaders execution of policy, holding of meetings.

Membership cards no longer are issued, records have been destroyed, open meetings virtually disbanded.

The party virtually is submerged—only here and there elements protrude above ground.

The rising wrath of the American people, expressed throughout the nation, has caused the party to seek underground shelter. The prosecution of its leaders, investigation of congressional committees, tireless spotlight of the press, radio and television—all these factors have caused the Communists to reverse their tactics.

They know the true feelings of this nation—but they will not give up. Indeed not. They are insidious workers. They have retreated to the catacombs of stealth to devise a new plan of battle.

"Let's infiltrate non-Communist groups. Let them do our work." This is the Communist strategy today.

They want you, the loyal citizen of the nation, to promote their unholy cause.

Sounds fantastic doesn't it? But it's true. That is what they are doing today.

Communists are trying to join legitimate organizations—a women's community club, a youth organization, a parents' study group. They are working hard, taking an active interest. Why? To gain control of the organization? No.

The Communists are few in number, probably one, two or even three. They desire, rather, to influence policy: Perhaps elect a "favorable" candidate, determine a policy decision, postpone action on an anti-Communist proposal. In this way, by being "inside" a legitimate organization, they are misguiding many unsuspecting loyal citizens into support of policies fostered by the Communists.

Take, for example, the issue of "peace." This topic occupies an important role today in Communist strategy. They proclaim their support for "peace," urging that "peace petitions" be signed.

But the Communist "peace" is a phony peace. They utilize this word to mean a peace in which world Communism reigns supreme, a peace in which democracy submits to the overlordship of the Russian dictator.

They would have America disarm, render herself powerless. Then the "Communist peace-lover" would devour this nation!

Many thousands of signatures have been obtained on these phony peace petitions—including the signatures, unfortunately, of many loyal Americans. These individuals have been misled by the Communists—Communists often operating within legitimate organizations. Americans must beware of this evil device for the tactic of infiltration pays off highly to the Communists.

Communist membership is declining. Not that fewer Communists are in operation. Indeed not. They simply, for security reasons, are not enrolling. They still are here—as dangerous as ever before. Theirstrength lies not in numbers, but in cunning and fanaticism. They have a hard core of disciplined membership—with this nucleus they are enticing non-Communists to support their endeavors.

Be alert! Don't play the Communist game. Make them show their own colors! We Americans can defeat this challenge!

Dear Federation Member:

Something of the full story of Jack McMichael's historic session before the Un-American Activities Committee will soon be out and you will know more of its epic proportions. You will thank God again, and yet again for such men as the Federation has helped produce - McConnell, Ward, Worley, McMichael and scores of others.

The present attempt to crush out the life of the Federation by the attack on two of its great leaders is but another step in the plans of those who would crush out Christianity itself, and Democracy, too.

From this new attack the Federation has already gained added significance and importance. Almost fifty years of patient, persistent, and loving attempt to preach the Gospel of Jesus has brought our Federation new responsibilities and new leadership. WE MUST NOT FAIL!

It is yours to confirm the leaders of the Federation for the present year, leaders carefully selected and voted upon at the annual membership meeting last June. It is for you to tell these leaders of your whole-hearted support, spiritual, moral, and financial, which you will bring to this age old fight against entrenched wrong. Send in your ballot as quickly as possible - not later than the 20th of this month.

Send along with it your pledge for financial support for this year.

Consider these propostions prayerfully and earnestly -

Will you be one of four hundred members to say -

☐ 1. I will pledge $1 per week or $50 for the year ending 5-31-54

☐ 2. I will secure gifts and pledges from friends, members of my church, lodge, trade union, or other group to equal $50. This will include -exclude-(which?) my own gift or pledge.

☐ 3. I cannot give $50 but I will secure or give _____ for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1954. (amount)

Give or secure as much of the above as soon as you can. BUT - BY THE GRACE AND POWER OF GOD GRANTED UNTO YOU TO DO THE THING THAT NEEDS TO BE DONE - WONT YOU MAKE ONE OF THE ABOVE PLEDGES - NOW!

WE MUST GO FORWARD!

WE CAN GO FARTHER WITH YOUR HELP!

Yours in the Master's name.

some momentary advantage in dealing with Satan, might look at the record and take caution. No good has ever come out of Hell.

The madness of the past fortnight has been another Communist triumph. It has given this hell-brood another advantage in our country. They are skillful in their lies, and our people seem to be so easily taken in. Everybody enters this row to get his name in the newspapers. Even Tito had a comment on it. I wonder why. I wonder why.

Who wants us to lose this battle against Communism?

The Communists have long attacked the integrity of the FBI. They hate the FBI. Senator Fulbright is not a Communist, but suddenly he gives comfort to the Communists by attacking the FBI, without providing proof of anything.

Sanity dictates that a halt be called to all this personal quarreling, and that this nation return to its normal business. Nobody gains from all this shouting and cursing—no one, that is, but the Kremlin. The David Schine argument is sheer nonsense. He has had no special privileges. Rather, he has become a pawn in a fight among politicians. The real culprits are the Communists, not those who fight them.

Thank you. This is George Sokolsky. Good night.

In personal knowledge and experiences, I have seen the Communists infiltrate the churches in their effort to destroy them from within, through the strategy of the Trojan horse."

"It's time to quit the monkey business of not looking through the pink mist around church and educational circles to where the communists are working," Lowman said. He charged that Communists have infiltrated the American clergy by specific design and that "the comparatively small number concerned should be ousted." He declared that the exposure of 800 to 900 Reds in the American clergy should be no more of a discredit to the "several hundred thousand loyal American clergymen than was the overt act of Judas in the betrayal of Jesus a discredit to the 11 other disciples."

Lowman listed Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Dr. Harold F. Ward, Rev. Jack R. McMichael and others as "American protestant clergymen who are principle causes of our trouble in American churches." Of Oxnam, Lowman said: "I am not of the opinion that he is a pro-communist nor that he has ever been a Communist, but I charge him with having done more to aid Communism than Earl Browder or than any other six communists."

To prove his claims of communist infiltration into American church life, Lowman dramatically called from the audience a former top Communist, who had flown from New York City for the occasion. He is Manning Johnson, presently a consultant in the Immigration and Naturalization Service, who first served the Communist conspiracy as a member of the American Negro Labor Congress. He has held positions of authority at the section, district, state and national levels in the Communist machine.

The Caracas Conference, at which America won a victory, is unnoted. The tax bill is forgotten in the shuffle. What is happening in China? What is happening in Indo-China? In Turkey? In Greece? All we hear is: Liar! Blackmail! Deceit! Falsehood!

Big headlines over nothing fill the newspapers. Radio commentators fill the air with vigorous, almost sweaty, reading of the exciting items about Joe McCarthy, Roy Cohn, Secretary Stevens, John Adams. David Schine is called out of line to a press conference as though he were a movie star, rather than a soldier undergoing basic training.

The Fifth Amendment Communist dentist, Major Peress, must be having a wonderful laugh. He has split the Republican Party right down the middle; he has started a clamor and a yakity-yak all over the country which prevents the Congress from doing its proper work; he has taken the mind and thought of our people off the recession and danger of depression, and got every household arguing as to who is telling the truth—McCarthy, Cohn, Stevens or Adams. And how important is it all?

I have read, as you have, the releases of both sides. I know there was horse-trading between the McCarthy Committee and the Department of the Army. Why this Major Peress case should be so important to the Army, I do not know. After all, Secretary Stevens is a fine, upright American of breeding and education. And McCarthy is sincere in his fight on those whom Vice-President Nixon has called rats.

Why should this case of an open Communist who was a dentist in the Army be so important? Why should it get all parties into such a jam, and disturb the entire nation?

We must take it that Peress is not the real issue, that, without knowing it, McCarthy has somehow hit a raw nerve somewhere, and that pressures have been brought upon Stevens either to soften him by holding out considerations for the hostage, David Schine, or by smearing Roy Cohn, who is a brilliant investigator and lawyer, so that McCarthy's committee will lose his services and be slowed up.

Actually, the Fort Monmouth investigation WAS slowed up by yanking David Schine into the Army, thus neutralizing his investigation of this area of infiltration. Schine had done the [illegible] work on this and could [illegible] his [illegible] before [illegible]

I should like to review what happens to men who fight Communists:

Martin Dies took a moribund committee of Congress and made it an active investigation committee -- the House Committee on Un-American Activities. He was hounded until he actually gave up public life. He is now back in Congress.

Robert Stripling was the chief investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Though suitable officer material, he was inducted into the Army and kept there as a "yardbird" picking up cigarette butts and doing similar work. No advantage was taken of his special abilities.

J. Parnell Thomas, another chairman of this committee, was indicted and sent to jail on an issue which, if investigated, would have been found not to be unusual in Congress. His career was wrecked.

Dr. J. B. Matthews, the most effective battler against Communism in the United States, was knocked down over an article which he wrote for a monthly magazine, "The American Mercury," prior to his joining the McCarthy Committee. He has never been given an opportunity to defend himself.

David Schine, investigator for the McCarthy Committee, graduate of Harvard, president of a large hotel company, brilliant investigator, was grabbed suddenly, put into the Army, made an object of ridicule and notoriety, with perhaps HIS career ruined.

Now they are after Roy Cohn, one of the best investigators in the country. As assistant United States attorney in New York, he worked on most of the big cases which sent Communists to prison, including the Rosenberg case. His record of achievement is astonishing for one only 27 years of age. So, they are now trying to destroy him.

When Senator McCarran was investigating Communists, an effort was made to smash HIS reputation; but that strong personality somehow managed to survive.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell, devoted to anti-Communism, entered the lists and was silenced. Scott McLeod was cleansing the State Department of Communists, but has been divested of control over personnel, which is the heart of the job.

I could go on and on, listing men who have been destroyed because they dared to serve their country against a competent, unscrupulous, all-pervading enemy.

I should like to ask this question: Do you believe the Communists could be so powerful if they were not protected by a force inside our government, that has been inside our government through three administrations—the Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower administrations?

Look at what is happening to Senator McCarthy.

He is trying to discover who it is in our government that possesses so much power to protect the Communists. Little by little, he gathers a fact here and there. It is slow, unpleasant, even unpalatable work. He is abused to his face by Fifth Amendment Communists. If he answers back in kind, he is accused of being unfair. If an insulting, shrieking Communist exasperates him — as they exasperated Judge Harold Medina or Judge Irving Kaufman — and he loses his temper, he is accused of kicking witnesses in the shins. Pressure is brought on his colleagues to quarrel with him as to methods; but nothing said about the methods of the Communists.

Maybe in the end Joe McCarthy will be silenced, as Martin Dies was silenced, as the great educator, William A. Wirt, was silenced, humiliated and driven to his death by the Communists and their allies.

This is a time for us to pause. The state of the world, the perils to our country, our own lives are at stake. The men involved in the present fracas are unimportant. Most of them will sooner or later disappear from our memories. But the struggle between Marxism and the Judaic-Christian civilization will continue—must continue—if we are not to be conquered by default. This is the issue, not whether McCarthy or Stevens is right, or even whether the Republican Party or the Democratic Party is in office. I suppose most of us prefer the sensational to the fundamental. It makes life so much easier.

Yet that is how we lose sight of the main target. And that is what the Communists want us to do. They want us to forget about them, to quarrel among ourselves, to hate each other, to bargain and trick and horse-trade over careers until the country is in a turmoil. It is under such circumstances that they have always triumphed.

Country after country has fallen to the Communists without a shot being fired. And it is always that they create so much confusion that one does not know what to think. Thus men concentrate on the wrong issues; they fight over nothing; society becomes disordered; the will to resist is weakened. Then the beasts come in and take over.

Always they find, weak, spineless men who witlessly become their pawns. While such men in Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany, and even France and Italy have their day of glory with their names and faces in the newspapers, when the Communist triumph is complete, they step on their faces and obliterate their image. Before me, the undersigned authority, this day personally appeared MARTHA N. EDMISTON and JOHN J. EDMISTON, to me well known and known to be the subscribers hereto, and being by me first duly sworn, deposed and said that they are residents of Wayne Township, Warren County, Ohio and they further deposed and said as follows:

That during the years 1940 and 1941 they were members of the Communist Party of the U. S. A., having joined this conspiracy while working as undercover operatives for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. That they also were members of several Communist "transmission line" or "front" organizations, such as the Workers Alliance of America, the Emergency Peace Mobilization, the American Peace Mobilization, the YANCS (The Yanks Are Not Coming), the North Side Peace League, the Linden Peace League, the South Side Peace League (the latter three being local front groups in Columbus, Ohio) and from time to time served as delegates and observers from these groups to meetings of the Ohio Youth Congress, the Southern Ohio Youth Conference and the American Youth Congress, at the direction of Communist Party officials as a part of their regular Communist Party assignments.

That they first met the Reverend Jack R. McMichael in Columbus, Ohio at a meeting of the Ohio Youth Congress in the Southern Hotel. To the best of their recollection this meeting was held in May or June of 1940. (The date of this meeting can be established by reference to a report of it prepared by the deponents, now in the possession of the FBI). At the time, the deponents were members of the Franklin County (Ohio) Chapter of the Workers Alliance of America, an organization which was then under the complete domination of the Communist Party. At the Workers Alliance meeting just prior to the opening of the Ohio Youth Congress, the Workers Alliance selected delegates to the Congress. These included the deponent, Martha Edmiston, Lula Mae Leigh and others whose names the deponents do not recollect at this time.

To the best of these deponents' recollection, the sessions of the Congress occupied two or three days and some 200 delegates and American Youth Congress officials were present. The deponents personally knew a number of the delegates from Columbus organizations, such as the Workers Alliance, the American Student Union, the Young Communist League and union groups. These delegates included the following Communist Party Members: Jack Perloff, Ruth Williams Perloff, Lula Mae Leigh, Irwin Barkan, Virginia Dillon, Betty Erhart, Esther Rodgers, Donald Rodgers, Robert Evans, Regina Rosen, Manny Rosen, LeVerne Slagle, Bernard Rucker, Lillian Rothenburg, Herbert Seins, John Davis, Beatrice Dunn Davis and Nelrene Grattan. These people included several officers of the Franklin County Section of the Communist Party. Nelrene Grattan was treasurer; Perloff was Organizer for the Young Communist League; Ruth Perloff was a member of the Party's County Committee as was Bernard Rucker. Also visiting several sessions of the Congress, but not known to us to be delegates were E. S. Grattan, Communist Party Secretary, and Joseph Socoloff, Communist Party Organizer in Franklin County.

That the Workers Alliance delegates to the Congress received their instructions from Jack Perloff, YCL Organizer, and Joseph Socoloff, Communist Party Organizer. All advance literature on the Ohio Youth Congress was distributed from the Franklin County Headquarters of the Communist Party at Sixth Avenue and Summit Streets, Columbus.

The principal speakers and prime movers at the Ohio Youth Congress were the three top-ranking officers of the American Youth Congress: the Reverend Jack R. McMichael, AYC Chairman; Joseph Cadden, and Robert (Bobbie) Thompson, AYC Secretary. All spoke and outlined the purposes and program of the Congress. These purposes were incorporated in resolutions at the final session of the Congress.

That in substance these resolutions set forth:

1) The Ohio Youth Congress and the AYC was against any American intervention in World War II.

2) Against any assistance to the Allies, either in shipments of munitions or supplies, or any convoys to protect them.

3) Against conscription and military training.

4) That the OYC and AYC would support the YANCS organization which recently had been formed at the direction of the Communist Party by one of Harry Bridges' Communist controlled unions on the West Coast.

5) Would join in forming organizations which would send delegates to a proposed Emergency Peace Mobilization meeting to be held in Chicago in the late summer.

The deponents noted that the various pieces of "peace literature" which were passed out at the sessions of the OYC had been received and were distributed from the local Communist Party Headquarters. The resolutions noted above were mimeographed at the completion of the Congress on the local Communist Party's mimeograph, loaned for the occasion by E. S. Grattan, Communist Secretary.

During a recess in one of the evening sessions an event occured which the deponents found rather odd and amusing. The deponents, Martha Edmiston and John Edmiston were standing on the mezzanine floor of the hotel with E. S. Grattan, Communist Party Secretary; Jack Perloff, YCL organizer, and Joseph Scoloff, Communist Party Organizer. This group was joined by the Reverend Jack McMichael and Robert Thompson. (This is the same Robert Thompson who later became general secretary of the Communist Party of New York; who was convicted in the New York Federal Court of teaching the overthrow of the American Government by force and violence, and who now is at large, having jumped bail following his conviction.) Thompson and the Reverend Jack McMichael launched into a discussion of alleged attempts by "FBI agents" to infiltrate the American Youth Congress. This led to further remarks by the two AYC officials on how to spot "an FBI agent" in Communist Party meetings. The deponents found this both educational and entertaining.

The deponents' next meeting with the Reverend Jack McMichael was at the Emergency Peace Mobilization in Chicago, August 31, 1940. The deponents, who covered this meeting for the FBI were able to report that this convention was entirely Communist-hatched and Communist dominated. It was at this 3-day meeting that the Communist Party sought to pull all of its various front organizations and captive unions into a national convention to form yet another huge subversive organization. During the previous months the deponents had been able to trace the course of the Emergency Peace Mobilization from the formation of apparently unrelated and spontaneous "peace leagues" into a national network of "peace" organizations carefully nurtured, guided and completely dominated by the Communist Party.

ded by more than 23 thousand delegates.

The Reverend Jack McMichael was one of the principal speakers at the Emergency Peace Mobilization. He spoke at the "Anti-Conscription Rally" held in the Stadium on the first day of the meeting at 8 p. m. Dr. John B. Thompson was general chairman of the "Rally."

On the final day of the Emergency Peace Mobilization, the new organization, The American Peace Mobilization, was founded. At that time the Reverend Jack McMichael was named vice chairman of the new organization. The objects of this organization are well known: in short, they were to keep America from rendering any assistance to the Allies, from taking defense measures, and to impose every kind of opposition to the building up of America's Armed Services. This organization long has been on the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations.

The deponents further depose and say that the Communist Party instantly abandoned its "peace" activities when Germany invaded Russia on June 22, 1941. Until that very day the American Peace Mobilization was the Communist Party's principal front organization for weakening America's military defense. Shortly after that date the American Peace Mobilization had a change of name to the "American People's Movement" and the group now called for all-out aid to Soviet Russia and the Allies, urged American intervention in the war and the setting up of a "second front."

On July 4, 1941, the deponent Martha Edmiston attended a national conference of the American Youth Congress in Town Hall, Philadelphia, at which time the Communist Party officially announced the change in the "party line" to the American Youth Congress.

Once again, the Reverend Jack McMichael took a leading role in the conference. He was at that time the chairman of the American Youth Congress and vice chairman of the Emergency Peace Mobilization. At that meeting, attended by some fifteen hundred delegates of the youth organization and allied Communist front groups, the Communists abruptly dropped all "peace slogans" and began talking about "Youth For Victory."

The deponent Martha Edmiston sat with the Reverend Jack McMichael on a panel devoted to aid to China, at which time Mr. McMichael discussed conditions in China under Japanese occupation and the urgency of need for American aid.

The deponent attended this meeting as a delegate of the Workers Alliance of America, Hamilton County Chapter (Cincinnati). Her appointment as a delegate and her instructions were given by Marjorie Dowers, open Communist and member of the Hamilton County (Ohio) Communist Party's Executive Committee, and Jeanne Moore, Secretary of the Hamilton County Young Communist League. All delegates from the Cincinnati area attending this convention were members of the Communist Party. All persons to whom the deponent was introduced in Philadelphia were introduced as Communist Party members.

There was some friction at the meeting. The Communists had to force their "party line" change down the throats of a small minority of delegates who were Socialists, but in general the conference went smoothly and the American Youth Congress made its about-turn, meekly accepting the new Communist Party line as its program, as it had accepted the "peace slogan" in the past.

And the deponent further notes that this was the first of any of the meetings of the American Youth Congress or any of its affiliated organizations at which she heard the Star Spangled Banner sung.

In December, 1941 both deponents were expelled from the Communist Party as "proven FBI spies." They testified to some of the facts contained above at a hearing before the U. S. House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities on July 13 - 14, 1950.

On or about July 18, 1950 the deponents again met the Reverend Jack McMichael. He was at the time the Executive Secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Action. The occasion of meeting him was the Conference of the Federation held at Wilberforce University. Mr. McMichael was one of the principal speakers at the meeting. Also speaking with him was Dr. John B. Thompson who had spoken with Mr. McMichael at the Emergency Peace Mobilization ten years before.

At the Wilberforce meeting Mr. McMichael voiced what then was the accepted Communist Party line. He blamed America for "aggression" in Korea and saw the United Nations as an "invader." Absolving Soviet Russia of blame, he and other speakers at the meeting advocated the immediate withdrawal of United Nations troops from Korea. He also advocated the recognition of Red China's "democratic government of the people of China" by the United Nations. He spoke against conscription and defense re-armament.

At this meeting, attended by relatively few delegates, there appeared a report prepared by several members of the MFSA urging the ousting of Mr. McMichael as Executive Secretary for his "known activities" in Communist front organizations. This report, containing more than 20 pages, listed 48 Communist Party front organizations in which, the report charges, Mr. McMichael had been active since the beginning of 1948.

The deponents learned that this report, however, failed to create any wide distrust in Mr. McMichael on the part of the great majority of the delegates. On the contrary, they gave him a vote of confidence, voting to retain his services by an overwhelming majority.

Unfortunately, the deponents had no opportunity to talk with the Reverend Jack McMichael at this meeting. When the deponent John Edmiston caught Mr. McMichael's eye, Mr. McMichael hurriedly left the room and the deponents were unable to interview him.

WITNESS the signatures of the deponents this 31st day of January, 1953:

TESTIMONY OF BISHOP G. BROMLEY OXNAM

BEFORE THE

COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JULY 21, 1953

Bishop OXNAM. Thank you, sir.

Mr Chairman, since this has been read, may I say that I did everything that I could to get Mr. McMichael out of the organization. Certain information reached me to this effect. I talked to Mr. McMichael. He said that it was absolutely false and wanted the source of the information. I was unable to give him that source because it was confidential. We had——

Mr. VELDE. Bishop, may I interrupt? Why did you attempt to get him out of the organization?

Bishop OXNAM. Because frankly I believed that Jack McMichael was so tied up with the Communist group that whether or not he were a Communist, I couldn't prove whether he was a member of the Communist Party or not, but I was sure that that organization ought not to be under that leadership any more, and I did everything I could. Others talked to Mr. McMichael. He denied this completely. Now, that raises quite an issue, sir.

Mr. WALTER. Will you yield at that point?

Bishop OXNAM. Yes.

Mr. WALTER. What caused you to reach the conclusion that McMichael was a Communist?

Bishop OXNAM. Sir, I hope you will not press that question. I will be glad to state it to this committee if I could meet it in executive session. The source of that information was strictly confidential, and I think I would be betraying a trust if I said it in public. I would be glad to convey it to the chairman of this committee. I am not hedging here at all, but I think I have an obligation because the source was of such a nature—I think the chairman would be the first to recognize this. I will not refer to the source other than that.

Mr. WALTER. You couldn't make it much plainer.

Mr. VELDE. I don't think the witness should be required to answer except in executive session. We appreciate that.

Bishop OXNAM. I will be very happy, sir, to give you the source of that.

Mr. SCHERER. Bishop, at the time you got this information that Reverend McMichael was a member of the Communist Party, you reported it to the FBI, did you?

Bishop OXNAM. It was not necessary to report it there. Don't misunderstand me, sir. I am trying to keep a confidence here which I will be glad——

Mr. WALTER. You have said it very well, I assure you.

Reuther's

★ REVOLUTION ★

By J. B. Matthews

GAW IS A foredoomed economic illusion, certain to be dispelled sooner or later, so far as the wage earners of the UAW are concerned. In the meantime, however, the Guaranteed Annual Wage is a pleasing and profitable political reality for Walter Reuther, the president of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Any general wage increase throughout industry which is not based upon increased productivity is an economic mirage which lures the thirsting wage earner into the desert of inflation. GAW is just one more of the economic fallacies of socialism, the brunt of which must be borne by the poor socialist stiffs while the rewards of the fallacy accrue to their bosses, the socialist politicians.

All his adult life, Walter Reuther has been planning revolution. Only the forms and labels of his revolutionary plans have changed from time to time. First, last, and always he has been a left-wing politician.

Despite the efforts of his press agents — both the paid and the volunteer — the Reuther record of commitment to revolution is in the books where all who wish may read.

The New York Times has said, believe it or not, that Walter Reuther possesses a combination of "the most engaging qualities of Albert Einstein and Van Johnson."

The Saturday Evening Post has likened this Einstein-Johnsonesque fellow to "an undissipated Prince of Wales."

On December 16, 1949, one thousand self-styled liberals gathered in the Astor Hotel in New York to watch Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt present Walter Reuther with a silver plaque and to listen to laudatory outbursts from Herbert Lehman, Maurice Tobin, Chester Bowles and others. Bowles averred that Walter Reuther is the sort of fellow who has "spearheaded the development of the American dream." Reuther himself announced to his assembled claque that the choice is not "between Wall Street and the Kremlin, Joe Stalin or Standard Oil, totalitarian communism or laissez-faire capitalism." What Reuther really meant was that he is the choice.

Harvard's Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., who brain-trusts the ADA (Americans for Democratic Action), is one of those who overflow with admiration of Walter Reuther. In his book, The Vital Center, Schlesinger writes: "Walter Reuther, the extraordinarily able and intelligent leader of the United Auto Workers, may well become in another decade the most powerful man in American politics." Which obviously means President of the United States!

The central fact about Walter Reuther's career is, of course, that he was the rabble-rousing, driving force of the sit-down strikes of 1936–1937. Those sit-down strikes were the largest single insurrectionary defiance of law and order in the history of the United States, excepting only the Civil War.

First Phase: Early Socialist Training

Walter Philip Reuther was born in Wheeling, West Virginia, September 1, 1907, the son of Valentine Reuther.

Walter's grandfather, Jacob Reuther, was well known as a socialist, a militant pacifist, and a labor agitator. Jacob gave his sons a thorough indoctrination in socialism.

As a young man, Valentine Reuther moved to Wheeling where he became a steel worker, and then a teamster for a Wheeling brewery. Throughout Walter's childhood and youth, socialism was a lively topic of discussion in the Reuther home.

Walter quit high school in 1924 at the age of 16, and went to work for the Wheeling Steel Corporation as an apprentice tool and die maker, and at once plunged into unionism. In 1927, he was fired, and set out for Detroit to seek a job in the automotive industry. Walter's first job in Detroit was at the Briggs body plant. In a few weeks, he switched to Ford.

Walter had night work at Ford's, and so he took up his high school studies once more. In 1929, he entered the College of the City of Detroit (later renamed Wayne University).

In 1930, his brothers, Victor and Roy, went to Detroit and enrolled at Wayne University. All three became known as campus agitators. Continuing what was by then a Reuther tradition, the brothers harangued the Wayne students on socialism. In 1932, Walter brought a chapter of the League for Industrial Democracy to the Wayne campus.

When an effort was made to establish an ROTC on the Wayne campus, Walter and his brothers put their radical agitation into high gear. A Wayne professor who joined them was suspended from the faculty and was brought up on charges before the Detroit Board of Education. The Reuthers promptly organized a demonstration in behalf of the suspended faculty member. Their campaign was successful. The Wayne University authorities dropped the plan for an ROTC.

Second Phase:
Reuther Goes to Russia

A few weeks after the 1932 election, Walter and Victor decided to abandon the formal education of Wayne University in favor of a less academic preparation for their messianic careers — namely, experience in the workers' paradise of the Soviet Union.

For years, Walter and Victor have tried to distort the facts of their travel to and stay within the Soviet Union. In this effort, they have had the assistance of a wide variety of writers. They have tried to make it appear that Walter and Victor simply went on a general world tour, covering more than a score of countries without any special interest in any one of them. A press biographical service simply says that Walter "embarked on a world bicycle tour of Europe with his brother Victor, working in factories and studying union movements along the way." The Reuthers' trip abroad lasted from February, 1933, to October, 1935, or at least 32 months. Most of the period was spent in the Soviet Union, but there isn't a hint of that fact in the press biography.

Despite the wholesale distortions and false impressions, the fact is that the Reuther brothers embarked on an enthusiastic pilgrimage to the Soviet Union. That was their goal when they boarded ship in New York Harbor, in February, 1933. That was the goal they had achieved when they walked down the gangplank in San Francisco, in October, 1935.

By the beginning of 1934, Walter and Victor were in the Soviet Union at work in the large automobile plant at Gorky. They were writing letters to their friends in the United States, giving vent to unqualified enthusiasm over what they had found in the Soviet Union.

One letter to Melvin and Gladys Bishop has been widely quoted.

The Reuthers do not deny that they wrote a letter to the Bishops on or about January 21, 1934. Walter claims, however, that the printed letter has been distorted. Both he and Victor decline to specify exactly where the distortions have been made. Walter's alibi is that the letter they wrote the Bishops was "a burst of adolescent enthusiasm," which amounts essentially to an admission of the letter's authenticity.

The letter reads, in part, as follows:

> Dear Mel and Glad:
> . . . the daily inspiration that is ours as we work side by side with our Russian comrades in our factory, the thought that we are actually helping to build a society that will forever end the exploitation of man by man, the thought that what we are building will be for the benefit and enjoyment of the working class, not only of Russia but the entire world, is the compensation we receive for our temporary absence from the struggle in the United States.
> Mel, you know Wal and I were always strong for the Soviet Union. You know we were always ready to defend it against the lies of reactionaries. . . . Here are no bosses to drive fear into the workers.
> . . . In all my life, Mel, I have never seen anything so inspiring. Mel, once a fellow has seen what is possible where workers gain power, he no longer fights just for an ideal, he fights for something which is real, something tangible.
> Carry on the fight for a Soviet America.
> VIC. and WAL.

There is no doubt about the authenticity of the "Vic and Wal" letter, despite the squirming of the Reuther brothers over its circulation.

The record leaves no doubt that the Reuther brothers went to Russia as Marxists and came away even more so. The pretense that they went and "found out the ugly truth" for themselves is an afterthought dictated by their interests as political adventurers.

Third Phase:
Collaboration with Communists

Walter and Victor came back to Detroit from the Soviet Union in the fall of 1935, having spent at least 18 months in the Communist Utopia.

Shortly after Reuther's return from the Soviet Union, he addressed a meeting of the Young People's Socialist League. After lauding the Soviet Union with enthusiasm, he declared pompously: "We do not believe in God."

In the early days of the organizing of the automobile industry, the Communists set up what they called "the unity caucus." Sworn testimony before the Dies Committee incorporated the following memorandum:

> There were present at this caucus Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall, Walter Reuther, and about 90 delegates to the convention who were actually Communist Party members. Also present were William Weinstone, Michigan secretary of the Communist Party; Jack Stachel, of New York, a member of the central committee of the Communist Party; Morris Childs, of Chicago, secretary of the Communist Party . . . Jack Johnstone, of Chicago, a member of the central committee . . . and Louis Budenz . . . a member of the staff of the Daily Worker.

Fourth Phase: Sit-down Strike Leader

Whatever happens to the Reuther ambitions along the way, he deserves a place in American history as the generalissimo of the sit-down strikes. His present position rests entirely upon those acts of violence in which he collaborated to the fullest with the Communist Party of the United States.

Shortly after his return from the Soviet Union, he joined the insignificant little union in the automotive industry. In practically no time, he had achieved the presidency of the West Side local of the auto union.

With a mere seventy-eight members in his local, half of whom were employed in the Kelsey-Hayes wheel plant, Reuther established his reputation for a fantastic boldness by introducing the sit-down strike to Detroit. This unlawful seizure of property was an importation from France where the Communists of that country had shown how it could be used for "collective bludgeoning" wherever government was palsied in the face of Communist violence.

Reuther called a meeting of fifteen reliable UAW goons who were employed at the Kelsey-Hayes plant. With a callousness toward moral considerations, this man who has received wide acclaim in religious circles recalls unblushingly how the plot was hatched at this meeting in his home. He says: "We needed something dramatic. We had a big Polish gal at the meeting who had fainted on the assembly line once before. We assigned her to faint again, and showed her how to do it. That was to be the signal. When she fainted, someone else was to shut down the assembly line. We trained a couple of men in pulling the right switches."

Everything went according to schedule. The Polish gal fainted; the switches were pulled. Kelsey-Hayes employees who had attended the plotting session at Reuther's home began to yell, "Strike! Strike!"

To make a long story short, Walter Reuther and his brother, Victor, engineered a ten-day sit-down seizure of the Kelsey-Hayes plant, and their union membership grew from seventy-eight to thirty thousand.

Fifth Phase: UAW Presidency

Walter Reuther became president of the UAW in March, 1946. The achievement of this milestone in the Reuther career was most significant.

Walter's victory over R. J. Thomas was tenuous, indeed. The vote was 4,444 for Reuther and 4,320 for Thomas. This smallest of majorities catapulted Walter toward his ultimate goal.

During the debate which preceded the balloting at the 1946

UAW convention, Reuther revealed something of the measure of his demagoguery. It should be remembered that Reuther's long and costly 1945-1946 strike against General Motors came to an end the week before the UAW convention. In the course of that strike, Reuther in true demagogic fashion harangued the American public with the contention that General Motors' "ability to pay" was a fundamental issue in his demand for a thirty percent wage increase. In connection with this alleged issue, Reuther introduced the novel labor union demand that he be allowed to "look at the company's books." Attacking Reuther's conduct of the GM strike, R. J. Thomas chided him about his "ability to pay" formula and his "look at the company's books" demand. Walter Reuther's amazing retort which did much to plumb the depths of his hypocrisy was that Thomas knew that his demand to see GM's books was "just a maneuver" calculated to "get the company over a barrel."

Even more significant in its revelation of Reuther's hypocrisy was his statement to the UAW convention immediately after his elevation to the union's presidency. Thousands of UAW members and many more thousands of the American public had been led by Reuther to believe that the major issue in his election contest with R. J. Thomas was Communism. Reuther had ranted up and down the ranks of the UAW with patriotic-sounding attacks upon the Communists in the union. The acknowledged leader of the so-called Communist faction in the UAW was George Addes, the union's secretary-treasurer. It was assumed on all sides that Reuther would, in the event of his election, proceed at once to the business of ousting Addes from his strategic position in the union. How else could the Communists be purged from the UAW? Addes was the symbol of Communist domination.

Imagine the shock, therefore, when Walter Reuther stood up and faced the convention, immediately after the voting, and said: "I want now to extend my hand to George Addes . . . and tell him that together we can unite this organization." Addes and his Communists refused Reuther's "extended hand."

Immediately after his election to the UAW presidency in 1946, the New York Herald Tribune editorially described Walter Reuther as a "dangerous and disingenuous opportunist" and a "reckless politician" and commented upon his "aggressive demagoguery." The aptness of these phrases cannot be questioned.

Sixth Phase:
Building Political Fences

Rightly, we should speak of Walter Philip Reuther, LL.D. He is, in fact, a Doctor of Laws. This degree was conferred on Reuther, May 30, 1948, by (Catholic) St. Mary's College, Moraga, California.

The Catholic weekly, Commonweal, has joined the parade of Reuther adulators. A lengthy article in that paper was subtitled "a man you can bet on."

Commonweal also falls for the Reuther propagandistic line about that stay of Walter and Victor in the Soviet Union. The paper says: "Then came the year in Russia, during which he [Walter] and Victor taught tool-making to Russian workers, studied the Soviet System from the inside and decided they didn't want that kind of socialism."

Lest anyone draw the rash conclusion that certain Catholics have been singled out for attack because of their moral astigmatism in the matter of Walter Reuther, let it be noted with emphasis that the standing of this socialist labor politician is equally high in Protestant officialdom. In the National Council Outlook, official organ of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (October, 1954, page 21), Walter Reuther is pictured in the pose of handing a check for $200,000 to Methodist Bishop William C. Martin, then president of the National Council of Churches, "to help finance the Council's educational program in the area of the church and economic life."

This was not bad publicity for one aspiring to the Presidency of the United States. If Adlai Stevenson [illegible] in the same magazine in the [illegible] handing a check for $200,000 to the highest official in American Protestantism, the odor would be distinct in the most unsensitive nostrils.

Walter Reuther addressed the third annual convention of the United World Federalists in Cleveland in October, 1949.

World Government News, monthly magazine of the UWF, featured Reuther's appearance at this convention of crackpots, quoting an excerpt from his speech and publishing his picture. Said Reuther to the World Federalists: "I do believe that the work you people have been doing is the beginning of something that has tremendous importance in the world." On May 22, 1955 Walter Reuther was elected vice-president of United World Federalists.

Reuther has seized every opportunity to keep his name before the public. In season and out of season, he comes up with a "Reuther Plan." All of these "Reuther Plans" have one thing in common: they call for greater and greater government control over all the aspects of our economic life. He is by all odds the country's foremost national socialist. He has demonstrated that he is not in the slightest averse to the use of illegal and violent methods to achieve his ends. He has never repudiated the violence and terror of his sit-down strikes. Lacking such repudiation, his current disavowal of Communist sympathies is not worth the breath required to announce it.

Mr. TAVENNER. What is your full name?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Anzelm A. Czarnowski.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Czarnowski, I interrupted your testimony in executive session this afternoon to ask you about an entirely different matter than that about which you have been testifying today. For purpose of the record I want to ask a few questions about your background.

When and where were you born?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I was born in Poland, August 12, 1896.

Mr. TAVENNER. When did you come to this country?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. In 1913.

Mr. TAVENNER. Are you a naturalized American citizen?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you naturalized?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I was naturalized by act of Congress while I was in the Army, in Waco, Tex.

Mr. WILLIS. What Army?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. In the the United States Army.

Mr. WILLIS. When?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. In 1917.

Mr. WILLIS. The First World War?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. The First World War, yes. I served 2 years in the United States Army.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Czarnowski, where do you now reside?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I reside at 7513 West 63d Street, Argo, Ill.

Mr. TAVENNER. Is that a suburb of Chicago?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you lived in the vicinity of Chicago?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. About 30 years.

Mr. TAVENNER. During that period of time did you have occasion to become a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir; during the war——

Mr. TAVENNER. Which war?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. The Second World War; I had a boy in the service. The same business that I was in the First World War, and I got a job in a defense plant in La Grange, Ill., at the Electric Motors Corp. I was employed at the Electric Motors plant.

I had reported some Nazi activities or anti-American activities such as preventing of purchase of bonds and other Nazi activities for the FBI. They asked me whether I wanted to help them in combating communism and I agreed to that, provided I see my priest. So when that was done I joined to help them out.

Mr. TAVENNER. You wanted an explanation made to your priest as to the reason why you were entering the Communist Party?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir. You see, my church, if I would be a member of the Communist Party, I would be subject to excommunication.

Mr. WILLIS. What church?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. The Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. TAVENNER. After conference with your priest, you agreed to help the United States Government by working for the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I didn't have a conference with the priest. I asked them to do it.

Mr. WILLIS. When was that?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. That was about October 1943.

Mr. TAVENNER. For how long a period of time did you work for the United States Government in that capacity?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Up to January 20, 1955, when I became a star witness in the Lightfoot case.

Mr. TAVENNER. You were a witness for the Government in the Smith Act case against Lightfoot?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes.

Mr. TAVENNER. Of course, that exposed your identity.

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. I understand you are giving the committee in executive testimony the benefit of your knowledge and experience during that period of time from 1943 until 1955.

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIS. What was that question again?

Mr. TAVENNER. I say I understand that he is now giving to the committee in executive session the benefit of his experience and knowledge within the Communist Party from 1943 until 1955. I do not want to duplicate effort by going into the general experience in the Communist Party and general knowledge at this time. What I do want to ask you is this. What position did you attain in the Communist Party, between 1952 and 1955?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I was a literature director for the Argo Branch and for the Electromotive Branch. They used to call that the Auto No. 1 Branch.

Mr. TAVENNER. Of the Communist Party?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, that is an industrial branch.

Chairman WALTER. What union was that?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. That was United Automobile Workers of America, CIO.

Mr. TAVENNER. Did your work in the Communist Party bring you in touch with the Communist Party section organization?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir, I attended some of the section conventions and several section meetings.

Mr. TAVENNER. We are inquiring here at this open hearing about Communist Party activities in the propaganda work relating to the Rosenberg case. I want to confine my questions to that subject. While you were working as literature director, did the Communist Party take any action or engage in any activity in connection with the Rosenberg case?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. There was some literature that was promoted by the section to be distributed to the cells, and they in turn distributed it to the public.

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you required to participate in any way in that matter?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir. The way we worked it is some of the literature, I am thinking of general literature, how they work it, which were 5 or 3 cents apiece, it is up to me to buy several of them and if I can collect my 3 or 5 cents, it is O. K., but if not, it is more important to have the person I contact read than to collect the 3 cents, even though it is out of my pocket. But the main thing was to distribute the literature. In our club each member had to take at least 5, some of them took 10, 25, 50.

Mr. TAVENNER. What particular literature are you talking about?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I am talking about all kinds of Communist literature. For instance, about the A-bomb, the Rosenberg case, the propaganda that is going on now to free Sobell, and many other such things. The Five-Power Conference, Peace Conference in Stockholm, and other such literature.

One interesting one was William Patterson's booklet, We Charge Genocide.

Mr. TAVENNER. Where did you obtain these documents?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. I always got them from the Modern Bookstore, which is a Communist-controlled bookstore.

Mr. TAVENNER. In the city of Chicago?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, 64 West Randolph Street in Chicago.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee just how you managed to get the material, what was the plan for getting the material from that bookshop?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Well, it all depends on the section or the branch. Now, in the section that I belonged to, I always had a certain amount of PA's which is Political Affairs. Then some Masses and Masses and Main Stream, and the Bucharest Peace is a paper from Bucharest, and then when I got to the bookstore and they had something real important they told me, "Now, here is a leaflet that should be used at the educational and for distribution." Some of that was one of the—if I see it—Rosenberg booklet, with the pictures of the Rosenbergs in it. It was gotten from the bookstore, distributed to branches, and the branches distributed it to the public.

Mr. TAVENNER. You have examined a number of pieces of Rosenberg literature presented to you by the staff and identified them as documents which you obtained from this Communist Party bookstore, have you not?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir. I want to mention, too, that since a lot of people—you know, the American people despise the Communist, there is no question about it, but to have them read it, they go in a place and lose a leaflet, you know what I mean. I want to have it distributed here among people, I just drop one here and let it go. Then somebody else picks it up and reads it. Some people will get interested and read it. That is one way of distribution.

Mr. TAVENNER. Have you identified certain of those articles of literature which you obtained?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. Those particular ones which you identified were published by the National Committee To Secure Justice for the Rosenbergs?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was material also published by the Communist Party?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. There was some literature it published.

Mr. TAVENNER. What were you told to do with this material which you got from the Communist Party bookstore dealing with the Rosenberg matter?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. We were supposed to distribute that to the public. Each member of the Communist Party was responsible to purchase many copies and then distribute them to the public.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was that done in Chicago?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you advised in any Communist Party meeting whether or not there was an organization that had been set up outside of the Communist Party to do the same thing?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. No, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. You yourself don't know of any separate organization doing that same thing with regard to the Rosenberg documents in Chicago?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. No, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. You are just telling us what was done by the Communist Party in regard to it?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir, because I purchased some of this literature, whether I needed it or not.

Mr. TAVENNER. How was that Communist Party literature paid for, or was it paid for? I am speaking now of the Rosenberg material.

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. By the individual members of the Communist Party.

Mr. TAVENNER. Did you have to pay the bookstore for it, or did the bookstore make some arrangements about payment for it?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Well, I was told that I should lay out money for the section and they would pay me back, but they had a credit account, the southwest section of the Communinst Party.

Mr. TAVENNER. Had a credit account at the bookstore?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, at the bookstore, and at times when I didn't have any money, with me, they just put it on the books.

Mr. TAVENNER. Do you know whether the bookstore was actually paid or not by the Communist Party at a later date?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, I know, because at one time they owed around $8 and they told me to tell the section.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was that work going on right up until the time that you stopped your work in the Communist Party to become a witness in the Lightfoot case?

Mr. CZARNOSKI. Yes, sir. I don't know just how close to it.

Mr. TAVENNER. I think that is all I want to ask him.

Chairman WALTER. Any questions?

Mr. WILLIS. Where were you born?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. In Poland.

Mr. WILLIS. When did you enter the country?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. In 1913.

Mr. WILLIS. And you are an American citizen?

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILLIS. We have had a lot of witnesses appear before us, Mr. Czarnowski, and while you were testifying I noticed some snickering going on in the room.

During these hearings there have been present Congressman Doyle from California, the Far West; Mr. Scherer from Ohio, somewhere in the midpart of the United States; Mr. Moulder from Missouri, which would be somewhere in the Midwest; Mr. Walter, our chairman, from the East; I am from the South, from Louisiana.

Now, let me tell you something. This Congress is composed of 435 Representatives of the people on the House side, and 96 on the Senate side. We disagree on many things—South, West, East, North. But there is one thing we don't disagree on, and that is our feeling toward people like you, born abroad, coming over here, dedicated to documents such as the Constitution of the United States, the Sermon on the Mount; you have come here without a lawyer, without a thick book before you to tempt us to question you about the book, opened your soul and told us exactly how you feel about these things.

May I say further: Don't give up. I think we know what we are talking about. I think that the representatives of the people here reflect by and large how we the people of America feel about this thing. We wouldn't be here very long unless we reflected that feeling. There may be some defections here and there, and now and then one who might go wrong, but by and large this Congress knows how the people feel.

Now, my dear friend, don't you give up what you are doing. You keep it up, and never mind the snickering from the back row. I compliment you, sir.

Mr. CZARNOWSKI. Thank you Mr. Congressman. I have one thing to say. This snickering is an old thing with me because I was helping the snickering, too, when I was a member of the Communist Party. That is one good way of finding Communists. I sure thank you very much.

Chairman WALTER. I think in that connection you might be interested in knowing that when the appropriation bill for the work of this committee came up in the House of Representatives there wasn't one single vote cast against it. When you consider that there are a great many very liberal Members in the House of Representatives, I think it bears out the truth of Mr. Willis' observation. Thank you very much, Mr. Czarnowski.

(Whereupon the witness was excused.)

Do you have another witness, Mr. Tavenner?

Mr. TAVENNER. Josephine Granat, will you come forward, please.

Chairman WALTER. Will you stand and raise your right hand. Do you swear the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mrs. GRANAT. I do.

Chairman WALTER. What was your reply?

Mrs. GRANAT. I said "I do."

TESTIMONY OF MRS. JOSEPHINE GRANAT, ACCOMPANIED BY COUNSEL, JOSEPH FORER

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you state your name, please.

Mrs. GRANAT. Mrs. Josephine Granat. G-r-a-n-a-t.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will counsel please identify himself for the record.

Mr. FORER. Joseph Forer, 711 14th Street NW., Washington, D. C.

Mrs. GRANAT. I would like to say that I also have a statement to make to the committee. I noticed the other witness did.

Chairman WALTER. If you just answer the questions asked by Mr. Tavenner, we will get along nicely.

Mr. TAVENNER. Where do you reside?

Mrs. GRANAT. 1163 East 54th Street, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you lived in Chicago?

Mrs. GRANAT. Since the early forties.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee, please, where you were born.

Mrs. GRANAT. Griffin, Ga.

Mr, TAVENNER. What has been your formal educational training?

Mrs. GRANAT. I am a graduate of the Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, Ill., 1948, department of political science. I studied at Chicago Teachers College, Chicago, Ill., during the summer of 1948, I believe, to get educational courses. Inasmuch as there is a tremendous amount of discrimination in employment, I could not find a job in my profession. I had to enter a business college. I entered a business school in 1949, Cortez-Peters Business College.

Chairman WALTER. Where is this discrimination?

Mrs. GRANAT. Chicago. I couldn't find a job.

Mr. TAVENNER. What is your profession?

Mrs. GRANAT. Teaching.

Mr. TAVENNER. What has been your employment since 1949?

Mrs. GRANAT. Presently I am working for the Christian Advocate.

Mr. TAVENNER. What has been your employment from 1949 on?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will say regarding my employment, in 1949 I worked for the Chicago Tenants and Consumer Council.

Mr. TAVENNER. For how long a period?

Mrs. GRANAT. It was a period of a little more than a year, I don't remember exactly when; some time in 1950, in latter 1950 or 1951, I believe. The organization, after the rent-control act went out, after rent control expired, went out of existence.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was that a Federal employment job?

Mrs. GRANAT. No, it was not.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was the nature of your position?

Mrs. GRANAT. I was secretary.

Mr. TAVENNER. Secretary of what?

Mrs. GRANAT. Of the Tenants Council.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was your next employment?

Mrs. GRANAT. Regarding any other questions along this line, I will tell you now I will refuse to answer on the basis of my privilege under the fifth amendment not to be a witness against myself.

Mr. WILLIS. In other words, you refuse to answer before you are questioned?

Mrs. GRANAT. He asked me.

Mr. WILLIS. Did he?

Mr. TAVENNER. I asked what her employment was after 1951.

Mr. WILLIS. I am sorry. I didn't realize it.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee whether or not Mr. Nelson Algren was at any time chairman of the Chicago Committee To Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case?

Mrs. GRANAT. It is a matter of public record, I am pretty certain, who the officers were of any committee that was established in Chicago.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you answer the question, please?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer for the same reason I have given before.

Mr. TAVENNER. May I ask a direction of the witness to answer.

Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will abide by my refusal.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, Nelson Algren, if you recall, was subpenaed as a witness before the committee, but you postponed his appearance for some special reason that he took up with you.

Chairman WALTER. I believe he was ill.

Mr. TAVENNER. I am not sure that was it, but he was finally reached in Montana and you continued his appearance.

I hand you a photostatic copy of any authorized signature for the Chicago Committee To Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case which was procured by subpena duces tecum by the committee, and I will ask you to examine it, please, and state whether or not the name Jo Granat appears as secretary of the organization in August 1952 (handing document to witness).

Mrs. GRANAT. It says Jo Granat.

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you the secretary as indicated on the authorized signature card?

Mrs. GRANAT. I feel very strongly about the Rosenberg case.

Chairman WALTER. Never mind that. We don't care how you feel about the Rosenberg case.

Mrs. GRANAT. I want to answer in my own way, if you don't mind.

Chairman WALTER. You are not going to make a speech. Answer the question.

Mrs. GRANAT. I am sorry, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman WALTER. You are not going to make a speech. You understand that?

Mrs. GRANAT. Mr. Chairman, if I am going to answer questions, I will answer it in my own way.

Chairman WALTER. We have our own feeling about the Rosenberg case. What was the question?

Mr. TAVENNER. Whether or not she was executive secretary in August 1952 of the Chicago Committee To Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case.

Mrs. GRANAT. Do you want my answer to that question?

Chairman WALTER. That is a simple question.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will answer it in my way. No one will tell me how to answer a question.

Chairman WALTER. Yes or no, or the fifth amendment, but I don't want to hear your views.

Mrs. GRANAT. I don't want you to put words in my mouth.

Chairman WALTER. Answer the question.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will answer it in my way, if this committee wants to hear my answer.

Chairman WALTER. You are not going to make a speech.

Mrs. GRANAT. I have no desire to make a speech, and I will answer the question.

Chairman WALTER. No, you are not going to read whatever this drivel is, this Commie stuff that we have heard so much.

Mrs. GRANAT. Inasmuch as you have made up your own mind about this committee, I don't know why you are wasting the taxpayers' money with these hearings.

Chairman WALTER. Will you answer the question, please.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will answer the question this way.

Chairman WALTER. No, you are not going to read that paper.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will answer the question, I will refuse to answer the question based on my basis of the fifth amendment, which is my privilege not to testify against myself.

Mr. TAVENNER. Attached to the photostatic copy of the authorized signature card is a certificate of authority for organization which closes with this language:

> In witness whereof, I have subscribed my name as executive secretary and have caused the seal of said organization to be hereunto affixed. Jo Granat, Secretary.

Is that your signature (handing document to witness)?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer for the same reason I have given before.

Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask it be marked as "Granat Exhibit No. 1," for identification purposes only and made a part of the committee files.

Chairman WALTER. Mark it and let it be received.

Mr. TAVENNER. The committee's investigation, Mrs. Granat, shows or indicates that you were a member of the policy committee of a convention held in the city of Chicago in 1953, and on that committee were Herman Tamsky and Dr. Leonard Tushnet of New Jersey.

Did you serve on such a committee with Dr. Tushnet of New Jersey and Herman Tamsky of Massachusetts?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer for the same reason that I have given before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was Dr. Tushnet known to you to be a member of the Communist Party?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer for the same reason I have given before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was Herman Tamsky known to you to be a member of the Communist Party?

Mrs. GRANAT. I think you know the purpose; this has nothing to do with what your stated purpose of this investigation was.

Chairman WALTER. We are the best judges of that. Proceed.

Mrs. GRANAT. I resent this line of questioning. I think that it is a real abridgment of the first amendment of our Constitution, which guarantees the right of free speech, the right of freedom of association. For that reason I will refuse to answer and also I will refuse to answer on the same basis that I have stated before.

Mr. WILLIS. Why don't you stand only on the first amendment?

Mrs. GRANAT. You will not tell me how to answer these questions.

Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

Mr. TAVENNER. Did Donald Rothenberg from Ohio and Reid Robinson from California serve on an organizational committee at that convention in Chicago in 1953?

Mrs. GRANAT. I refuse to answer for the same reason.

Mr. TAVENNER. The committee in the course of its investigation has learned that you remitted certain sums collected in the city of Chicago to the national organization of the Committee To Secure Justice in the Rosenbergs Case. It was indicated that only half the sum collected was remitted. Will you tell the committee whether or not it was the practice to reserve for local purposes one-half of such funds collected?

Mrs. GRANAT. Your question is a very vague one. I have no idea what you are talking about, and I would refuse to answer it anyway on the basis of the——

Mr. TAVENNER. Did you make remittances to the national organization of funds collected?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer on the same basis I have stated before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Did you make remittances on the basis of 50 percent of what was collected?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer that on the same basis I have stated before.

Mr. TAVENNER. The committee's investigation further discloses that a Civil Rights Congress and Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade rally—that is, a rally sponsored by those organizations—was held on March 4, 1953, in honor of Steve Nelson at the People's Auditorium in Chicago. Did you participate in it?

Mrs. GRANAT. I refuse to answer on the same basis that I have stated before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Did you shortly after March 4, 1953, resign as executive secretary of the Chicago Committee To Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case?

Mrs. GRANAT. That is a loaded question and you know it. I wi refuse to answer on the same basis I have stated before.

Mr. TAVENNER. It is not a loaded question. I want to know wheth or not you withdrew from that organization in order to select anothe position. I don't care how the question is put. You can put the question yourself and answer it.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer on the same basis I have stated before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Didn't you a few months after March 4, 1953, b come the executive secretary of the Civil Rights Congress?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer that on the same basis.

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you secretary of the Lightfoot Defense Co mittee?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer that question on the same ba

(The witness consulted with her counsel.)

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you at any time a member of the Internati Workers Order?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer on the basis that I have st before.

Mr. TAVENNER. Wasn't your appointment or selection as exec secretary of the Civil Rights Congress announced publicly on M 1954, by John T. Bernard, former member of Congress, acting as ch man of the Civil Rights Congress?

Mrs. GRANAT. Mr. Tavenner, I have never been selected, appoint or any of these things that you are trying to infer. Whatever I h ever done I have done on the basis of my own, the dictates of my conscience, whatever I have said I have said, whatever I felt ever actions I have taken, nobody tells me what to do, just as not going to tell me here today how to answer anything, because n body does.

Chairman WALTER. Answer the question, please.

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer on the basis of my priv lege under the fifth amendment.

Mr. TAVENNER. You said you were not elected or appointed. Were you in any manner acting as executive secretary of the Civil Rights Congress?

Mrs. GRANAT. I refuse to answer on the same basis.

Mr. TAVENNER. Are you now a member of the Communist Part ?

Mrs. GRANAT. I refuse to answer on the same basis as I have st ted before. You know if you were really interested in doing somet about the injustices or what you consider un-American activitie seems to me you ought to participate or join in the request for an vestigation of the Rosenberg-Sobell trial. In that way the fact of the case will be revealed.

Mr. TAVENNER. Are you connected in any way with an organiza- tion or committee for justice or for clemency for Morton Sobell?

Mrs. GRANAT. I will refuse to answer that on the same basis.

Mr. TAVENNER. I have no further questions.

Chairman WALTER. The witness is excused. Call your nex ness, Mr. Tavenner.

(Whereupon the witness was excused.)

LAYMEN AND CLERGY AT ODDS ON ROLE OF CHURCH IN POLITICS

A five-year controversy in the Protestant church is disclosed now for the first time.

The issue: Should the clergy take sides in political, social, economic questions?

A committee of prominent laymen, says the chairman, believes the church is getting too deeply into political action.

Protestant clergy, the lay group believes, ought to hold more closely to religious matters, stop issuing controversial statements in other fields. But the clergy, with the upper hand, now have permitted the 190-person committee to be dissolved.

The final outcome: Still uncertain.

A conflict has been boiling up within the Protestant church over the question of whether the clergy should take sides in political controversies.

This dispute, going on beneath the surface for five years, has come out into the open now with the final report of a laymen's committee of the National Council of Churches of Christ, central organization of Protestant denominations.

The lay group, composed of 190 persons, was dissolved last year after a protracted argument with the clerical heads of the National Council.

Members of the lay group represented many fields—20 in education, 15 in banking, 29 in manufacturing, 14 in labor-union executive positions, 15 in law, 10 in medicine, 8 in agriculture. They also included editors, publishers, State and federal officials, judges, scientists, people in various other fields.

Dangers pointed out. J. Howard Pew, chairman of the lay committee and former president of the Sun Oil Company, summed up the disagreement in a letter accompanying his final report to members of the committee:

"Throughout our Committee's term of life, it repeatedly brought to the Council's attention the seriousness of the problems involved in its issuance of controversial statements and studies in the fields of sociology, economics and politics; and the danger inherent in speaking to official Washington and the United Nations General Assembly in behalf of Protestantism on matters outside their field and for which they possessed no mandate."

In pressing these views on the Council's General Board, Mr. Pew eports the lay group found itself "not only deeply in the minority but often poles apart from the clergy who invariably outvoted us 10 to 1."

The lay report contends that the clergy's view, while predominant in the Council, would not necessarily prevail if put to the test in congregations of the member churches.

"It was at a General Board meeting in Chicago, May 18-19, 1953," the lay chairman reported, "that we realized the extent and character of the philosophy held currently by most of the ordained executives and officers directing the work of the several denominational headquarters staffs, and therefore of the National Council.

"Their philosophy, it seemed to the lay committee, looked to an ever-expanding government. Clergy and laity active in organized Protestantism seemed to have lost the capacity to understand each other.

"We, as lay people, were alarmed and unhappy as the National Council assumed the right to speak increasingly on subjects in which it was difficult to see ethical or spiritual content for that inarticulate and voiceless body called '34 million Protestants.'"

Long-standing protest. By and large, Mr. Pew said, members of his committee agreed to serve in the first place only because they were assured that the National Council would avoid "political involvements and controversies."

Yet, says the Pew report, the National Council's policies turned out to be substantially the same as those of its predecessor organization, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which was in existence until 1950. The old Federal Council, in the words of the Pew report, "had been the object of protest from many lay sources for more than 40 years for its issuance of pronouncements which elevated the state to a position where it would increasingly control the production and the lives of its citizens."

A number of specific issues—political, social and economic—became involved in the controversy between the Pew committee and the various agencies of the National Council.

In 1953, for example, a study conference in Cleveland, convened under authority of the Council's General Board, adopted a resolution opposing the Bricker Amendment, then under consideration in Congress. This proposed Amendment to the Constitution, if it had been adopted, would have restricted the President's authority to make treaties.

Mr. Pew and others protested against any Council action on this subject, asserting the issue was not "ethical or religious," Bishop William C. Martin, then president of the Council, pointed out that the resolution was passed only by a study conference, not by the General Board. However, the Pew report argues, a widespread impression was created that the Protestant church had taken an official position.

Red investigations an issue. On another occasion, the National Council urged Congress to put an end to "procedural abuses" on the part of investigating committees. The Council protested, among other things, "the forcing of citizens, under pretext of investigation of subversive activities, to testify concerning their personal economic and political beliefs."

On that stand of the Council, again, the Pew report says the announcement was given to the press "as reflecting the views of over 34 million church members assumed to be represented by the National Council." The report adds: "Certain members of the Lay Committee have indicated their belief that such statements from the National Council might influence the American people to believe that Communism is nothing more than a personal economic or political belief and that it is a gross invasion of personal privacy for a congressional witness to be questioned as to whether he is or ever has been a member of the Communist Party."

The Pew report criticizes the National Council for expressing views on "controversial" issues involving the United Nations. In September, 1954, the Council authorized officers to write the U. S. delegation to the U. N. General Assembly on issues such as strengthening the U. N., unification and rehabilitation of Korea, collective security, reduction of armaments, technical assistance to underdeveloped countries, refugees.

In April, 1953, members of the lay committee spoke out sharply against a statement of economic principles drafted by the Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life. After a meeting at which the lay group voted unanimously to recommend against approval of the statement by the General Board, Mr. Pew wrote as follows to members of the committee who had not been present:

"Almost every member of the Committee spoke against this statement. It was frequently labeled a 'socialistic statement' and almost as frequently 'communistic.' Mr. John T. Jones, of the United Mine Workers of America, said that he would never have joined our Committee had he known that such a statement would be considered by the National Council."

In the end, the General Board voted to send the statement back to the Department of the Church and Economic Life for revision.

Criticism of Board. In his report, Mr. Pew says the following are "typical" of the comments he received from committee members in the late months of 1954:

"Greater concentration and attention than ever is being given economic and political questions; I thought that this was a religious organization."

"The majority of the General Board decisions are made without proper consideration and far too little research."

"Questions that Congress must take months to decide are disposed of in the General Board inside a half hour."

. . . would avoid "political involvements"

In another effort to persuade the National Council to avoid taking sides on public issues, the Pew committee adopted a "lay affirmation" in September, 1954, by a vote of 115 to 15. The key paragraph read:

"Our Committee believes that the National Council of the Churches impairs its ability to meet its prime responsibility when, sitting in judgment on current secular affairs, it becomes involved in economic or political controversy having no moral or ethical content, promoting division where unity of purpose should obtain, nor do we believe that the National Council has a mandate to engage in such activities."

Laymen see chasm in thinking. As for what happened, Mr. Pew now writes:

"When the General Board took no action on this 'Lay Affirmation' beyond voting to receive the document with gratitude, most of the members of the Lay Committee came finally to the realization that a wide chasm existed between the thinking of the laity and the clergy and the executives of the denominational bodies which comprise the National Council."

After this setback, B. E. Hutchinson, member of the lay committee and a retired executive of Chrysler Corporation, stepped in to seek a meeting of minds with top officers of the National Council. Mr. Hutchinson was chairman of a subcommittee appointed for that purpose.

At stake was not only the National Council's policy, but also the existence of the lay committee itself. Unless continued by the Council, the committee was to go out of existence in mid-1955. In a lengthy session with the Council officers on Oct. 29, 1954, Mr. Hutchinson proposed that the committee be continued, but with more autonomy than it had enjoyed in the past.

Committee's role ended. Three months later, on Jan. 26, 1955, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, who had succeeded Bishop Martin as president of the National Council, notified Mr. Hutchinson that the lay committee would not be continued. Dr. Blake invited committee members to take part in other activities of the Council. This, he said, was based on a decision of the Council's policy and strategy committee.

In reply, Mr. Hutchinson said, among other things: "The action of the committee on policy and strategy you report tends to confirm the attitude of official intransigency on the part of the National Council leadership to which such widespread exception is taken by so many good people, both ministerial and lay, and is so at variance with my own personal experience of Christian fellowship with some of the Council leaders individually as to leave me more than a little bewildered and confused."

That is the story, as related by Mr. Pew's report and accompanying documents. Mr. Pew, looking back over his committee's work, speaks of it as "the failure of this most important effort to bring about an enduring partnership between the clergy and laity."

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN PART II

The subject of pro-communist activity at the University of Wisconsin was discussed at the recent meeting of the National Americanism Commission. As a direct result of this deliberation a resolution was approved by the National Executive Committee of The American legion which reads as follows:

WHEREAS, The University of Wisconsin, a land grant college, maintains a policy of officially recognizing the Labor Youth League, an organization declared to be a Communist front organization by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and further declared to be subversive by the Attorney General of the United States and the Subversive Activities Control Board and;

WHEREAS, the University of Wisconsin, a land grant college, has followed a policy of allowing definitely pro-communist speakers to regularily appear before the Student Body, allowing them use of tax supported facilities to spread their vicious propaganda, and;

WHEREAS, Attempts by The American Legion, Dept. of Wisconsin for the past 3 years to effect a change in such policy of the University has not produced any change in such policy or indications that any changes are contemplated, and;

WHEREAS, An investigation of the University by the House Un-American Activities Committee would provide an impartial review of the seriousness of the situation in respect to Communist infiltration of said University.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, By the National Executive Committee of The American Legion that the National Commander or his designated representative is hereby mandated to call upon the House Committee on Un-American Activities to conduct such an investigation as expeditiously as possible.

INVESTIGATION NEEDED

An investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities Committee seems to be very much in order. There are a number of witnesses who might be able to enlighten us about past and present subversive activity on the campus.

BARBARA ANN DARLING who attended the University in 1946 appeared before the HUAC on June 17, 1953 and refused to answer questions relative to membership in the Communist Party. (See HUAC, Investigation of Commu-

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, PART II

Resolution No. 446 of the recent National Convention of The American Legion charges that the ACLU continues to defend both individuals and organizations whose aims and purposes are inimical to the best interest of the United States. The Legion position is substantiated by the public record of the ACLU.

RECENT ACTIVITIES

October 1, 1956

The American Civil Liberties Union is providing counsel for Paul Wellman, Communist convicted under Smith Act, in proceedings to have his VA pension restored. Its prime concern is "equal treatment under the law."

It has also undertaken a suit to test constitutionality of the Illinois state election code. It contends that refusing to put Howard Mayhew, Socialist Workers' Party candidate for Congress on the ballot, on the grounds that his party is "subversive," constitutes violation of 1st and 14th Amendments as well as of free speech provisions of Illinois constitution. (See "Industrial Worker", October 1, 1956, page 4).

September 26, 1956

The American Civil Liberties Union filed an Amicus Curiae Brief with the United States Supreme Court defending the right of an individual to write, publish and disseminate obscene or indecent literature.

"The statute at bar proscribes obscene literature by punishing those who write, publish and disseminate it. There are approximately forty-six other states, and numerous local committees, with similar legislation. These statutes, however, appear to be bottomed on the notion that sex discussion is somehow unfit to assume its preferred position in our constitutional system. It is the belief of petitioner that this view is inconsistent with the principle that freedom of expression is indivisible; and that the statute at bar is, on its face, and as construed and applied, unconstitutional as a prior restraint on speech, and as unwarranted state action in the absence of an immediate and serious casual relation between the objectionable passages of a book, and the reader's overt response thereto." (See Motion For Leave To File Brief Amicus Curiae and Brief, In The Supreme Court of the United States, October Term, 1956, David S. Alberts vs. State of California, page 2).

September 8, 1956

"The American Civil Liberties Union filed an Amicus Curiae Brief with the United States Supreme Court to void the Smith Act and set aside the conviction of members of the Communist Party under that Act." (See Brief For American Civil Liberties Union, Amicus Curiae In The Supreme Court of the United States, October Term, 1956; Oleta O'Connor Yates, Henry Steinberg, Loretta Starvus Stack, Frank Efroim Spector, Albert Jason Lima, Carl Rude Lambert, Rose Chernin Kusnitz, Ernest Otto Fox, Ben Dobbs, Dorothy Healey Connelly, and Frank Carlson vs. United States of America; Stephen Mesarosh, also known as Steve Nelson, Benjamin L. Careathers, Irving Weissman, James H Dolsen, and William Albertson, vs. United States of America.)

August 14, 1956

Patrick Murphy Malin, Executive Director, American Civil Liberties Union, attacked the House Committee on Un-American Activities stating:

"You will not be astonished to learn that the American Civil Liberties Union still believes that the letter and spirit of the First Amendment make the mandate of the House Committee on Un-American Activities unconstitutional or unwise, or both. That has been the Union's belief ever since the committee was established in the late 1930's. . .

"Inside or outside its mandate, the committee has heretofore usually limited its investigation of opinion and association to that which it has held to be related to illegal action. But large parts of the questioning in the recent hearings on two activities of The Fund For The Republic--the John Cogley report on blacklisting and the Plymouth Friends Meeting library award--have overstepped even the committee's own established boundaries. So this is the time to urge that no committee with such a mandate should be appointed when the new Congress convenes next January. (There are other committees on internal security with much better mandates.)..." (See "The Washington Post", August 14, 1956, page 22).

The opposition of American Civil Liberties Union to state Sedition Laws was reported as follows:

"A bill to restore the validity of state anti-sedition laws was opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union in a statement issued yesterday. The bill, it was declared, would lead to "substantial infringements on the rights of free speech, association and due process. . .

"The ACLU argued in its memorandum that local enforcement efforts have resulted in violations of free speech and due process. 'The most glaring example of this abuse,' it said, 'is the California Un-American Activities Committee, when it was headed by State Senator Jack B. Tenney. The reports of this Committee are jammed with the names of persons and organizations who have no sympathy for Communism but who nonetheless are labeled as supporters of Communist-front organizations and charged with Communist sympathy. No opportunity was given to reply to these charges.'

"The ACLU memo stressed that retaining anti-sedition efforts in the hands of the Federal government would 'minimize the possibility of multiple harassment through repetitive prosecutions.' It cited the case of Communist leader Steve Nelson, who is facing federal prosecution for violation of the Smith Act's prohibition against advocating violent overthrow of the government. At the same time, the state of Pennsylvania pressed a sedition prosecution based on the same prohibitions as in the Smith Act, and the U. S. Supreme Court ruled the Pennsylvania law unconstitutional." (See "Daily Worker", June 4, 1956, page 3).

The American Civil Liberties Union was reported to have given support to a convicted Communist as follows:

"The American Civil Liberties Union urged the United States Supreme Court yesterday to reverse a decision of the California Supreme Court.

"The decision upheld the dismissal of a laboratory employe who had been a member of the Communist Party, the union said. An arbitration board ruled that Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley had dismissed Miss Doris Walker for trade union work. It ordered her reinstatement.

"The California Supreme Court refused to accept the award. The court declared that reinstatement would be against public policy because it would be assumed that as a Communist she was dedicated to the practice of sabotage. The court referred to Cutter's manufacture of antibiotics and medical supplies for civilian and military use.

"In a friend-of-the-court brief the Civil Liberties Union said the state court ruling had violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution." (See "New York Times," May 28, 1956).

Support of defiance of a congressional committee was reported as follows:

". . .A subpenaed Los Angeles Philharmonic violinist hurled a direct First Amendment challenge at the Committee's very existence. Violinist George Kast, with the full backing of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, refused to answer the committee's questions on grounds they violated the First Amendment and other portions of the Bill of Rights by 'invading my personal opinions and associations about which I may speak or remain silent as I choose.' Kast was recently banned from the Philharmonic's current goodwill tour of Asia by the State Dept. The ACLU told the press it is prepared to back his challenge all the way to the Supreme Court." (See "Daily Worker", April 25, 1956, page 7).

The Philadelphia chapter of the ACLU was reported to have urged repeal of the Smith Act as follows:

"Repeal of the Smith Act has been urged by the American Civil Liberties Union. In a letter to Senator Thomas C. Hennings (D-Mo.), chairman of the Senate's Committee on Constitutional Rights, the civil liberties group charged that the Smith Act 'opens the door to prosecution of people for their political beliefs and activities.'

"The letter was signed by Alexander H. Frey, president of the local ACLU branch and professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania. (See "Daily Worker", April 24, 1956, page 3).

February 21, 1956

The American Civil Liberties Union was reported to have directly assisted the communist cause as follows:

"The American Civil Liberties Union has called upon the U. S. government to reverse a ruling removing social security benefits from employes of the Communist Party.

"Patrick M. Malin, executive director of the ACLU, in a letter to U. S. Welfare Secretary Marion B. Folsom, argued for reversal on the grounds that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had confused foreign governments with foreign agents.

"According to Malin, the government is operating on the theory that the social security laws bars payments to persons in the employ of a foreign government and equates Communist Party employment with that of employment by a foreign government." (See "Daily Worker", February 21, 1956, page 3).

January 11, 1956

The American Civil Liberties Union was reported to have gone to the aid of a convicted World War II deserter from the United States Army as follows:

"The American Civil Liberties Union has filed a complaint in the Federal District Court here challenging a section of the 1940 Nationality Act which requires loss of citizenship by native-born Americans convicted by court martial for desertion from the Armed Forces in time of war.

"Patrick Murphy Malin, ACLU executive director, said yesterday that Osmond K. Fraenkel, ACLU counsel, filed the complaint in behalf of Albert L. Trop of Long Beach, N. Y.

"When Trop applied in 1952 for a passport, he was informed by the State Department that he had lost his citizenship as a result of his World War II conviction as a deserter." (See "Daily Worker", January 11, 1956, page 8).

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

The American Legion has asked the House Un-American Activities Committee to investigate the American Civil Liberties Union. National Commander W. C. "Dan" Daniel has telegraphed Rep. Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, Committee Chairman, urging such an investigation in keeping with a resolution passed by the Legion's recent National Convention in Los Angeles.

At the same time, Commander Daniel called on the American Civil Liberties Union to prove that "the Communist Party in the United States does not constitute a danger, as it contended in a recent brief which it filed before the Supreme Court."

"The Brief", he explained, "urges the Supreme Court to reverse the conviction of 16 communists under the Smith Act."

Commander Daniel challenged the American Civil Liberties Union suggestion that "the strength of the communist party has been so slight since 1950 that it could not be supposed that any attempt to overthrow the government by force would be feasible in the foreseeable future."

Asserting that The American Legion disagrees strongly with such an assumption, Commander Daniel said:

"The validity and constitutionality of the Smith Act are not dependent upon the relative strength of the Communist Party in the United States. Those who suggest otherwise might just as well contend that a murderer of only a few persons should be released because he didn't kill hundreds or thousands of people."

Commander Daniel called on the American Civil Liberties Union "to reconcile its position with finding of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that there are at least ten fellow travelers and sympathizers in this country for each of the more than 21,000 card carrying members of the communist party in the United States".

He also called on that organization "to justify its brief in the face of evidence from Congressional Committees that the Communist Party in this country is 'a Russian-inspired, Moscow dominated, anti-American, quasi-military conspiracy against our government, our ideals, and our freedoms.'"

If the American Civil Liberties Union has evidence to refute the findings of the FBI and Congressional Committees concerning the danger of the Communist conspiracy in this country, it owes it to the American people to make known such evidence", Commander Daniel said.

COPYRIGHT 1956 BY THE AMERICAN LEGION
REPRODUCTION IN WHOLE OR PART WITHOUT AUTHORIZATION IS PROHIBITED.

Acknowledging that his challenge places The American Legion in open opposition to the American Civil Liberties Union, Commander Daniel declared "we welcome this challenge. The American Legion stands ready to battle that organization or any other group we believe is not serving the best interest of our country. If need be, we stand ready to educate the American Civil Liberties Union in the fundamental facts of life concerning the true nature and danger of the communist conspiracy".

"It is tragic that any Americans could be so ignorant of or indifferent to these facts. They need not be because a realistic and objective review of the past will reveal that the communist conspiracy does pose a present and dangerous threat to the safety and security of the United States, the position of the American Civil Liberties Union to the contrary notwithstanding".

WHERE DOES THE ACLU STAND IN REGARD TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY?

The American Civil Liberties Union on September 8, 1956 filed an Amicus Curiae Brief on behalf of two groups of convicted Communists. The first group constisted of:

Oleta O'Connor Yates, Henry Steinberg, Loretta Starvus Stack, Frank Efriom Spector, Albert Jason Lima, Carl Rude Lambert, Rose Chernin Kusnitz, Ernest Otto Fox, Ben Dobbs, Dorothy Healey Connelly, and Frank Carlson.

The second group consisted of: Stephen Mesarosh, also known as Steve Nelson, Benjamin L. Careathers, Irving Weissman, James H. Dolsen, and William Albertson.

To recount the activities engaged in by these individuals to destroy our country would take volumes. Each of them has been found guilty of violation of federal statutes in a United States Federal Court. Both of these cases are now up for review by the United States Supreme Court. IN ITS BRIEF THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION ASKS THE SUPREME COURT TO REVERSE THE CONVICTION OF THESE COMMUNIST LEADERS.

By its Brief the ACLU endeavors to show that the Communist Party does not constitute a menace to the United States.

"Affirmatively, the evidence would tend to support the opinion that the strength of the Communist Party has been so slight since 1950 that it could not be supposed that an attempt to overthrow the government of the United States by force and violence would be feasible in the foreseeable future, or that the Party could recruit any sizeable number of its sympathizers to aid it in the commission of illegal acts outside the framework of our existing democratic institutions." (See Brief For American Civil Liberties Union, Amicus Curiae In The Supreme Court of The United States, October Term, 1956, cases No. 6 - No. 20; page 21).

This contention by the ACLU was disproved recently by J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, when he stated:

"These are the things I think of when people ask me, 'Can the danger be great when the membership of the Communist Party, USA is consistently falling? Is there an existing danger if Party membership numbers only about 20,000 persons'"

"To that I can only say that numbers mean nothing and that those nations which have attempted to assess the threat of communism on the basis of numerical strength alone are eating the bitter bread of slavery for their shortsightedness."

"The Communist Party in the United States presently numbers an estimated 20,000: however, this group is a fanatical, dedicated body of individuals operating under the strict discipline which the Communist Party imposes. The investigations we have conducted indicate beyond doubt that the Communist Party, USA, wears a foreign label which can be interpreted to mean: 'Property of the U.S.S.R. -- subject to orders from Moscow. . .'"

"The Communist Party, USA, is not 'just another political party' as its adherents and apologists would have you believe. It is a fifth column which no American who values his freedom can afford to ignore. Its most menacing quality is its ability to pursue inflexible objectives--fixed, unvarying goals--by means of flexible tactics. Falsehood, trickery, and cold-blooded deception are part and parcel of the communist plan of action." (See "The Elks Magazine", August 1956).

In summation the ACLU Brief contended that:

"On the basis of our examination of the strength and influence of the Communist Party in the United States, as compared to the strength of this nation's political institutions and the healthiness of its economy, we believe it clear that whatever the danger from the Communist Party may be, it comes not from petitioners' participation in a conspiracy to teach and advocate, but from 'enforced silence.'" (See Brief For American Civil Liberties Union, Amicus Curiae In The Supreme Court of the United States, October Term, 1956, cases No. 6 - No. 20; page 27).

This position taken by the ACLU was likewise discredited by Mr. Hoover when he stated:

"The fact that some Communist Party leaders have been convicted in American courts of conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force and violence has not deterred the Party. It is readying itself for an intense new effort in a new disguise. Behind the exploitation of the coexistence theme are underlying sinister objectives: chiefly, the relaxing of America's security measures. The specific goal is to obtain a repeal or nullification of the Smith Act of 1940, the Internal Security Act of 1950, and other anti-communist legislation in order that the Communist Party can expand its operation without further fear of prosecution." (See "The Elks Magazine", August 1956).

OTHER ACTIVITY BY THE ACLU

INTERNAL SECURITY ACT OF 1950. The ACLU in its own report states: "Title I of this Act establishes the Subversive Activities Control Board and late last year the Communist Party of the United States challenged the Board's order that the Party must register as a Communist action organization. The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia handed down a decision on December 23 confirming the Board's order. In a 2-1 decision, the court ruled that the Communist Party, as proved by government witnesses and documentary evidence, had, as one of its goals the overthrow of the government of the United States, and since, 'The right of free expression ceases where it leads to harm to the government' the Board had the right to demand registration as a means of national protection.

The case will go to the U. S. Supreme Court on appeal. The Board has later ruled that the Labor Youth League and the Jefferson School are Communist-front organizations. The ACLU has intervened on the issue of the party's being required to register, on the ground that some of the party's activities are legitimate and may not be circumscribed." (See 35th Annual Report of the American Civil Liberties Union, July 1,1954 to June 30, 1955, pages 27 and 28).

COMMUNIST CONTROL ACT OF 1954. The ACLU in its own report states: "Testing of the constitutionality of this law has hardly begun. Bert Salwen, Communist candidate for county freeholder in Trenton, N.J., was removed from the ballot under this law; an intervening brief was filed by the ACLU; the decision went against Salwen who will apparently not appeal. Another 1954 law, requiring registration of communist printing presses will be vigorously opposed by the ACLU if enforcement is attempted." (See 35th Annual Report of the American Civil Liberties Union, July 1, 1954 to June 30, 1955, page 28).

The ACLU further states that: "Philadelphia ACLU has continued its fight in the past year against the state's Pechan Act which required signing of a loyalty oath or other basis for loyalty certification of all employees of the state or of state-aided institutions. The Act has been misused in action against teachers and others whose continued employment in no way contravenes the provision of the Act. According to ACLU's Philadelphia branch, 'To date, so far as we know, the loyalty oath provision of the Act has resulted only in the dismissal of eight state employees with conscientious scruples against taking the oath and against whom not the slightest suspicion has been breathed. Other provisions of the Act seem to have been equally ineffective.'" (See 35th Annual Report of the American Civil Liberties Union, July 1,1954 to June 30, 1955, page 33).

VICTORY IN WISCONSIN

"The (Madison, Wisc.) Capitol Times" of October 2 reported that the Labor Youth League had ceased to exist at the University of Wisconsin when it failed to register. Matthew Chapperon, the former chairman of the group was quoted as saying that the local chapter was "completely and permanently dissolved."

The Department of Wisconsin had protested vigorously against the fact that the Labor Youth League, an organization which had been officially cited as subversive by the U. S. Attorney General, had been permitted to operate openly on the campus of the University of Wisconsin.

The effects of this victory of The American Legion will be felt by left-wing groups on whatever college campus they may be active. In closing down the Labor Youth League at Wisconsin the Communist Party lost the respectability and standing which the LYL achieved by its open activity in the campus of a great University. To the Communist Party any loss of such prestige is a defeat. Renewed communist activity at other key universities and colleges may well be expected.

To those Legionnaires led by immediate Past Department Commander Emory Sipple who weathered the verbal abuse of the left-wing and psuedo - liberal groups from all parts of the country we offer our sincere praise and commendation.

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, PART III

Readers will recall that the October 15th and November 1st issues of The Firing Line were devoted to reports relative to recent activities of the American Civil Liberties Union, Inc. (ACLU). With national offices located at 170 Fifth Avenue, New York City, this 36 year old organization, together with 19 state affiliates, claims a total membership of about 35,000. Continuing The American Legion's investigation of the ACLU, this issue of The Firing Line studies another phase of its background and current activities. (See ACLU "Civil Liberties", February 1956, page 3 and ACLU 35th Annual Report: "Clearing The Main Channels", 1955, pages 132-134).

DIRECTORS OF ACLU - NATIONAL LEADERSHIP

Based upon a September 1956 letterhead, the following 24 individuals are listed as members of the Board of Directors or National Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union:

BISHOP JAMES C. BAKER, ACLU National Committee member was a 1947 Vice President of the Methodist Federation For Social Action. According to a recent report of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, the Methodist Federation For Social Action was formed by the Communist Party as a religious front organization. In 1948, BAKER sponsored the Committee of One Thousand, a "Communist created and controlled front organization"; and was listed as a 1951 initiator and sponsor of the National Committee To Repeal the McCarran Act, another Communist front. (See HUAC, Review of the Methodist Federation For Social Action, 1952, page 82; Committee of One Thousand letterhead, 1948; "Daily Worker", 3-23-51, page 2; Internal Security Subcommittee, "A Handbook For Americans", 1956, page 91 and HUAC, Guide To Subversive Organizations and Publications In The United States, 1951, page 38).

ROGER N. BALDWIN, ACLU National Committee member and Advisor, International Work, has been affiliated with over 15 organizations which have been cited as subversive and Communist according to a report in the February 1, 1955 issue of The Firing Line, page 14. A World War I draft evader, BALDWIN testified before the Special Committee To Investigate Communist Propaganda in the United States in 1930 "which was to the effect that the American Civil Liberties Union upholds the right of aliens or nationals to advocate murder, assassination, and the overthrow of our Government by force and violence." BALDWIN wrote in the Harvard University Year Book of 1935 that he was for "socialism, disarmament and ultimately for abolishing the State itself as an instrument of violence and compulsion. Communism is the goal." (See Special Committee on Un-American Activities, Investigation of Un-American Propaganda Activities In The United States, Volume I, 1938, pages 161, 462 and 533).

RUFUS E. CLEMENT, ACLU National Committee member and an incorporator of the Southern Regional Council, has been affiliated with the following subversive organizations: American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom, American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born and the American Council on Soviet Relations. J. FRANK DOBIE, ACLU National Committee member was mentioned as having cooperated with the Civil Rights Congress campaign "directly aimed against the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities and in opposition to all legislative efforts to destroy Communist forces in the United States." The Civil Rights Congress is now a defunct subversive organization. In 1950, DOBIE sponsored the National Conference to Defend the Bill of Rights which was held under the auspices of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born and was also affiliated with the Committee of One Thousand in 1948. DOBIE also sponsored the subversive Mid-Century

REV. FREDERICK MAY ELIOT, another member of the ACLU National Committee, signed an open letter to the President on behalf of the now defunct subversive American Council on Soviet Relations. In 1943, ELIOT signed a statement on behalf of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship and was listed as a sponsor of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee the same year. He also sponsored the Congress of American Soviet Friendship, signed a message on behalf of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties and was an Editorial Advisor of the now defunct Protestant magazine. According to a 1948 letterhead, ELIOT was listed as a sponsor of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, "one of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States." (See HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, pages 519, 619, 730, 795 and 1176; National Lawyers Guild letterhead, 1956; and HUAC, Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications in the United States, 1951, page 85).

WALTER F. GELLHORN is a member of the ACLU Board of Directors. According to the testimony of LOUIS F. BUDENZ before the Select Committee to Investigate Tax-Exempt Foundations on December 23, 1952, GELLHORN was identified as a member of the Communist Party. On page 52 of the May 31, 1956 Three-Year Report of The Fund for the Republic, Inc., GELLHORN was listed as having received a "Grant-aid" for "research costs incurred in preparing the 1956 EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE lectures at Louisiana State University on Administrative restraints on freedom of expression." He was also a former member of the subversive National Lawyers Guild and the National Emergency Conference for Democratic Rights. (See Hearings, Tax-Exempt Foundations, 1952, page 725; and HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, pages 1210 and 1277).

FRANK P. GRAHAM, Vice Chairman of the ACLU National Committee and Chairman of the National Sharecroppers Fund, Inc., has been affiliated with 16 subversive organizations according to the March 8, 1955 issue of The Firing Line, page 30. He was a 1947-1948 Honorary Chairman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a now defunct Communist front which served "the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States." GRAHAM has also supported the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom; American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born; International Labor Defense; National Council of American-Soviet Friendship; and the American League for Peace and Democracy. (See HUAC, Report on Southern Conference for Human Welfare, 1947, pages 1 and 14; National Sharecroppers Fund Letterhead, 1956; and HUAC, Guide To Subversive Organizations and Publications in the United States, 1951, page 104).

(See HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, pages 380, 472, 619, 758 and 977; HUAC Report on the Communist Peace Offensive, 1951, page 149; and "Daily Worker," 1-15-53, page 8).

B. W. HUEBSCH is the ACLU Treasurer and a member of the Board of Directors. He was listed on page 7 of The American Legion's Report On UNESCO of April 1956, as a former member of the United States National Commission for UNESCO who had been affiliated with "nine organizations cited as subversive by the United States Attorney General or the House Committee on Un-American Activities." According to page 36 of the Report on UNESCO, HUEBSCH has supported the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom; American League for Peace and Democracy; Book Union, Inc.; Citizens Committee to Free Earl Browder; Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee and the Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. ROBERT M. HUTCHINS, member of the ACLU National Committee and President of The Fund for the Republic, Inc., needs no introduction to readers of The Firing Line and The American Legion Magazine. In May, 1956, the National Executive Committee of The American Legion in approving Resolution No. 559 (Maryland), stated that "we strongly urge the House Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States Congress to initiate its announced intention of further investigation and hearings on The Fund for the Republic and its activities."

On November 17, 1955, the National Commander of The American Legion stated that "on the basis of our evaluation of the record, the principal direction (of The Fund for the Republic) emanated from DR. ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, the President of the Fund...DR. HUTCHINS' record (See The Firing Line, 9-15-55, pages 91 and 92) shows a wilful refusal to consider Communism as anything more than a political ideology...the record of DR. HUTCHINS, and the record of The Fund for the Republic under his direction, is replete with evidence that he does not believe Communism is a clear and present danger in this country and that he is more interested in opposing Communism's enemies than in opposing Communism." (See "The Firing Line", 11-15-55, page 123).

JOHN PAUL JONES is a member of the ACLU Board of Directors. JONES has been affiliated with the following organizations which are cited as subversive and Communist by the United States Attorney General or the House Committee on Un-American Activities: Consumers National Federation; International Labor Defense; League for Mutual Aid; National Federation for Constitutional Liberties; People's Institute of Applied Religion; Mid-Century

Conference for Peace; Methodist Federation For Social Action and the Committee of One Thousand. (See HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, pages 659, 843, 984, 1247 and 1464; HUAC, Report on the Communist Peace Offensive, 1951, page 149; HUAC, Review of the Methodist Federation For Social Action, 1952, page 81; and "New Republic," 9-27-48).

In 1950, MISS KENYON appeared before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee On Foreign Relations and admitted under oath that she had sponsored the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc. in 1948, and was affiliated with the Conference on Pan-American Democracy; League of Women Shoppers; American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom; Lawyer's Committee on American Relations with Spain and was a member of the Advisory Committee of Descendants of the American Revolution. (See Report, State Department Employee Loyalty Investigation, 1950, page 44).

MAX LERNER, another ACLU National Committee member has a record of affiliations with subversive organizations according to the 1954 Report of Tax-Exempt Foundations, pages 325-328. "On June 2, 1949, the Daily Worker, page 2, reported that LERNER, identified as columnist for the New York Post had asserted that the trial against the leaders of the Communist Party 'has no business being in court. I don't see how anyone with a rudimentary knowledge of the history of Communist movements can doubt the basic rightness of William Z. Foster's plea, in his long manifesto, that under American conditions the attempt to use it would be fantastic.'" LERNER has been affiliated with the following subversive organizations: American Student Union; American Congress for Peace and Democracy; Frontier Films and American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom. He has been listed as a signer of the Golden Book of American Friendship with the Soviet Union, a cited "Communist enterprise signed by hundreds of well-known Communists and fellow travelers." ROBERT S. LYND is a member of the ACLU National Committee. According to a congressional report, LYND has been affiliated with the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born; League of American Writers and the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. In 1940 he signed a statement defending the Communist Party and was a member of the Board of Directors of the subversive American Russian Institute. In 1949 LYND sponsored the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace and was listed on a 1956 letterhead as an Initiator of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act. This latter organization was cited as a Communist front by the Internal Security Subcommittee this year as one that defends "the cases of Communist lawbreakers." (See HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, pages 354, 980, 1096, 1125 and 1200; HUAC, Review of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace, 1949, page 59; Internal Security Subcommittee, "A Handbook for Americans," 1956, page 91; and National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act letterhead, 1956).

J. ROBERT OPPENHEIMER, member of the ACLU National Committee has been mentioned many times in past by The Firing Line. In June 1954, OPPENHEIMER was denied security clearance and access to classified government information by the United States Atomic Energy Commission. This Commission found that OPPENHEIMER'S "continuing conduct and associations have reflected a serious disregard for the requirements of the security system...(and) have found a susceptibility to influence which could have serious implications for the security interests of the country." In 1943, OPPENHEIMER stated that "he was not a Communist, but had probably belonged to every Communist-front association on the West Coast and signed many petitions in which Communists Communists were interested." He has made "periodic contributions through Communist Party functionaries to the Communist Party in San Francisco Area in amounts aggregating not less than $500 nor more than $1000 a year during a period approximately four years ending in April 1942." (See United States Atomic Energy Commission, "In The Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer," May 27, 1954, through June 29, 1954, pages 4, 7 and 21).

OXNAM stated before the Committee that the ACLU renders "very valuable service in maintenance of the civil liberties of this country." (See HUAC, Testimony of Bishop G. Bromely Oxnam, 1953, pages 3599, 3629, 3645, 3653, 3656, 3724 and 3734).

BISHOP EDWARD L. PARSONS, Vice Chairman of the ACLU National Committee signed an Amicus Curiae Brief in September 1955 to the Supreme Court of the United States asking that the Court "void" the Internal Security Act of 1950. According to the California Committee on Un-American Activities, PARSONS has contributed to the Communist Daily Worker, sponsored the subversive California Labor School, American Committee for Yugoslav Relief, American Youth For Democracy and the San Francisco Branch of the American Friends of the Chinese People. (See "The Firing Line", 10-1-55, page 100; California Legislature, Report of Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities, 1947, page 79; and California Legislature, Fourth Report of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities, 1948, pages 132, 144 and 185).

PATTON has been affiliated with the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax and was listed as an initiator of the National Congress on Civil Rights held in Detroit, Michigan in 1946, out of which emerged the subversive Civil Rights Congress. He sponsored a testimonial dinner which was held under the auspices of the American Slav Congress and submitted a statement to the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1950 in opposition to proposed anti-Communist legislation. (See HUAC, Appendix IX, 1944, page 1167; HUAC, Report on the American Slav Congress, 1949, page 106; California Legislature, Fourth Report of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities, 1948, page 201; and HUAC, Hearings on Legislation to Outlaw Certain Un-American and Subversive Activities, 1950, page 2353).

ELMER RICE, member of the ACLU Board of Directors was reported to have been affiliated with 17 subversive organizations and publications according to "The Firing Line" of February 1, 1955, page 16.

AUBREY WILLIAMS, editor of The Southern Farm & Home and contributing editor to The New Southerner, is a member of the National Committee of the ACLU. According to a report of the Internal Security Subcommittee, "AUBREY W. WILLIAMS was identified as President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., who had been a member of the Board of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare...MR. WILLIAMS was identified by a witness as one who had been a member of the Communist Party. He was also identified by another witness as one who accepted the discipline of the Communist Party. "The Firing Line" was instrumental in exposing WILLIAMS in its July 1, 1955 issue. (See Internal Security Subcommittee, Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., 1954, pages VI and VII; and "The New Southerner," April 1956.)

Scherer Rebukes Critic Of Anti-Red Committee

By SAM WILSON
(TIMES-STAR Bureau)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—Representative Gordon H. Scherer today defended the House Un-American Activities Committee of which he is a member.

Persons who "smear" groups such as the committee "have ignored the criminal and attacked the policeman," Scherer said.

"UNFORTUNATELY, some reputable citizens and organizations have unwittingly joined in this smear," he asserted.

The First District congressman's remarks came in a letter to Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, which recently editorially criticized the comimttee chairman, Representative Velde (R., Ill.).

It is a "known fact," wrote Scherer, that Communist activity in the U. S. has extended into Government, education and religion.

"THOSE FINE and splendid citizens in our educational and religious institutions who are now following the Communist line of criticizing the Un-American Activities Committee and similar movements, should be down on their knees thanking God for such agencies, since it is the Universities and churches which will suffer most should the Communist conspiracy prevail," he said.

Scherer described Velde and the comimttee members as "fine, competent American citizens who have been delegated by their fellow members of Congress to do an unpleasant job vital to the security of the nation."

Bishop Oxnam Blasts Methods Of Probers

WASHINGTON, Feb 24—(AP)—Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam struck out today against methods he said are being used by congressional committees searching for Communism in education.

Oxnam said they are a threat not only to the freedom of educational institutions, but to the freedom of churches as well.

He said eduactors are disturbed because they feel they are "about to be subpected to serious attacks by men who have sought political advantages in an hour of hysteria 'by capitalizing upon fear and, in the name of Americanism, by attacking our institutions, discrediting our leaders, and dividing our people."

Oxnam said he had no sympathy for the Communists.

"Wherever there is a conspirator who would overthrow this Government, let him be found, and, in the American way, punish him," he said.

RESOLUTION

Adopted in Chicago, February, 1952, by

THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

HOUSE OF DELEGATES

RESOLVED THAT THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION EXPRESS ITS APPROVAL OF THE MANNER IN WHICH THE INVESTIGATION AND HEARINGS OF THE PRESENT COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND THE SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE ON THE SECURITY ACT ARE NOW BEING CONDUCTED AND WE COMMEND SAID COMMITTEES FOR THEIR CONTINUING INQUIRY INTO THE ACTIVITIES OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY, ITS MEMBERS AND FOLLOWERS, IN ORDER TO ESTABLISH A BASIS FOR APPROPRIATE LEGISLATION.

In another sectional meeting Dr. Walter G. Muelder, dean of the Boston University Divinity School, warned against government investigation of American universities as dangerous to intellectual freedom.

"Freedom is at the heart of a valid education process," he said. "Christian education has a stake in conserving this principle in every church and in every church-related institution. It has a stake in the conservation of freedom in all other American educational institutions.

"Religious educators must give Americans an understanding of the religious basis of civil liberties and civil rights," Dr. Muelder declared. "The moral foundations of our political structures are being undermined by processes which upset the balance of power between the judiciary and the legislative branches of government and make people afraid to speak their minds either in constructive proposals or negative criticism of government," the Boston dean stated.

Good replies have come from many, over 100, BUT! If MFSA is to really GROW .....we need to hear from EACH OF YOU!

Let me "refresh" from that letter of last month.
We need -

2. Five new memberships or subs to SQB from each of you.
3. All who can to hold one or more house parties for MFSA.
4. 100 members to pledge $60. extra to employ a field sec'y.

Dr. Harry Ward in his excellent column in SQB, in each of last two issues, emphasizes anew the great importance and need for discussion groups. Tie this in with your house party. Center it around SQB - nothing better. Every issue has been chock-full of valuable info. Send to Gresham for 10 to 100 copies of any recent issue, free.

Here's an additional aid enclosed, Weekly National Guardian, a "must" for those who want the real news. No better way to invest $3.

Everyone wants PEACE. Let your House Party WORK for PEACE. Provide writing materials for all who will to write to

EDITORIALS:

Why Not Outlaw The Reds?

The Supreme Court, having, with preoccupied diligence, opened the cell doors to Communists and generously thrown the protection of the jurisprudence all Communists are vowed to destroy about them, a good many thoughtful Americans are wondering what shield is left standing against Red infiltration and subversion.

It has not escaped public notice that, as Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.) observed, in all recent cases dealing with the Soviet conspiracy and conspirators, the Court has leaned over backward to decide in favor of the Communists, acknowledged or legitimately suspected.

The Court, arrogating to itself powers over the executive arm, the Congress and the States never before claimed for it, seems to have put insuperable barriers in the path of agencies seeking to discover and detect the operations of the many-headed conspiracy directed from Moscow.

We have thought for some time that the Smith Act formula, which seeks to punish Communist leaders on the ground that they are seeking to overthrow our government by force, is a half measure. The real objective of Moscow and its agents, dupes and sympathizers in this country is not revolution in its accepted pattern. What they intend, and this goes for the guilty, leftist intelligentsia at work in our universities, journalism, entertainment industries and the pulpit, is so to soften and bewilder the mind of America that it loses its capacity to judge of good or evil and hence becomes ripe for conquest from within.

A Communist, or Communoid, professor is unlikely to exhort his classes to take to the barricades. What he does is to spread a haze of relativity and historical inevitability before his students. One politico-economic system is as good as another, he puts it, moreover, historically systems succeed each other and the day of the organic, "capitalistic" West is over.

The crypto-Communist cannot now, it seems, be unmasked because the Court holds that what he says is merely a matter of opinion instead of the rigid doctrine of a foreign conspiracy. The open Communist can no longer be convicted unless he can be shown to have incited persons to physical acts.

There remains a remedy against the public figures in the Moscow conspiracy; a remedy invoked by the Philippine republic. President Carlos P. Garcia has just signed an act outlawing the Communist Party. His reasoning as he signed the act is relevant to the situation into which the Supreme Court has placed us.

THE COMMUNISTS, said President Garcia, make no secret of their objective, which is the "destruction of our social, political and economic system." But the Philippines finds itself handicapped in resisting the conspiracy because the Communists now "expediently (seek) the protection of the very laws of the land which they seek to destroy."

Those laws, modeled on our own, were designed to foster the expression of opinions, unpopular as well as popular, by citizens. They were not intended to provide a cover for a worldwide conspiratorial apparatus.

By outlawing that conspiracy we may be able to recover methods of defense against it denied us by the Supreme Court.

THE TRUTH ABOUT REUTHER

Sir Galahad's Common Cause with the Reds

By J. B. MATTHEWS

WALTER PHILIP REUTHER, Doctor of Laws (Wayne University), Doctor of Laws (St. Mary's College), Doctor of Laws (Boston College), Doctor of Humanities (West Virginia University), Doctor of Humanities (Wilberforce University), and Gaston Lecturer (Georgetown University), would appear to be a renowned scholar whose eminence in some undesignated branch of learning had merited extraordinary academic recognition.

Of course, if one knows anything about American colleges and universities, he will pass over Walter Reuther's impressive array of doctorates with a big horse laugh. Financial tycoons and political buffoons, as well as scholars, are the recipients of academic honors.

Actually, Walter Reuther never finished college. He chose instead to complete his education by a long sojourn in the Soviet Union.

Judged by the code of puritanical morals, Walter Reuther is a Sir Galahad among labor bosses. According to intimate associates, he does not dip snuff, imbibe intoxicating beverages, wager on the horses, shoot craps, commit petty larceny with union funds, or use obscene language.

Murray Kempton, a journalist who serves on the side as a public relations propagandist for the Reuther brothers, says that all over America there are people to whom Walter Reuther has appeared "like some Archangel Michael."

Stepping down to a lower level of sublimity, The New York Times declares that Walter Reuther possesses "the most engaging qualities of Albert Einstein and Van Johnson."

The Saturday Evening Post has likened Walter Reuther to "an undissipated Prince of Wales."

Around the banquet tables at the Astor Hotel in New York a few years ago, one thousand self-styled liberals listened to testimonial outbursts during which Chester Bowles, then Governor of Connecticut, pictured Walter Reuther as the man who has "spearheaded the development of the American dream."

Walter Reuther has always had the capacity (and in recent years the organization) to get himself in the news in a big way.

In addition to the large volume of day-to-day news about him, there is a rapidly growing Reutheriana in current books. In his newest book just off the press (America's Next Twenty Years), Peter Drucker illustrates his point that American politics have undergone a revolutionary change during the past sixty years by a transition "from Mark Hanna to Walter Reuther."

Drucker's observation tells in a compact phrase what could be expanded into a thick volume.

In the ten years of his presidency of the United Automobile Workers, Walter Reuther has supervised the spending of more than two hundred million dollars ($200,000,000) of union funds, much of which has been spent in the pursuit of political and ideological objectives.

There's more than one way to misuse union funds. Dave Beck's way is to appropriate union funds for his personal business interests. Reuther's way is to appropriate union funds for his personal ideological interests. Beck's misappropriations have apparently run into thousands of dollars; Reuther's have run into the millions.

Reuther's UAW balance sheet for the year ending December 31, 1956, shows total "fund" disbursements of $28,521,425. Of this grand total, $17,253,969 came from the "general fund"; $9,312,097 from the "international strike fund"; $918,543 from the "citizenship fund"; $181,032 from the "fair practices and anti-discrimination fund"; $575,595 from the "education fund"; and $280,186 from the "recreation fund."

How much of Reuther's vast treasury has been paid out to politicians or for political purposes, only a voucher by voucher accounting would reveal. One thing is fairly certain: no committee of the United States Senate is going to conduct such a probe.

Reuther has criticized Dave Beck sharply for invoking the Fifth Amendment in response to questions about his raids upon the Teamsters'

Union treasury. His indignation toward Beck in this matter is not matched by any corresponding moral fervor on the subject of invoking the Fifth Amendment in response to questions about Communist Party membership. In February, 1952, the two top officers of the Distributive, Processing and Office Workers of America (both of them having records of Communist affiliations extending over a period of many years) appeared as witnesses before the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security and invoked the Fifth Amendment when questioned about Communist party membership. Fifteen months later, Walter Reuther personally welcomed them and their union into the CIO. Two months after Reuther had extended this personal welcome, vice-president of the DPO (William Michelson) invoked the Fifth Amendment in response to questioning about Communist Party membership by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Reuther's wrath was not in evidence.

Much of the current Reutheriana is a falsification of history. In his recent book entitled The Practice of Unionism, Jack Barbash writes: "Walter Reuther has always been a Communist bête noire." This is a glaring distortion of well-known history.

Walter Reuther was not a Communist bugbear when he and his brother Victor spent some 18 months in the Soviet Union. He was certainly not a Communist bugbear when they wrote their famous letter to the Melvin Bishops, ending with the exhortation, "Carry on the fight for a Soviet America." (The text of the letter follows this article.) He was not a Communist bugbear when he collaborated to the fullest with the Communist party leaders in the force and violence of the sit-down strikes, and in the founding of the UAW.

PUTTING ASIDE the ancient history of Walter Reuther's pro-Communist writing and collaboration, anyone who has been reading the Communist press during the past year knows that Reuther is not a Communist bête noire at the present time.

The most important resolution adopted at the recent convention of the Communist Party was not the one which dealt with "independence." Of far greater significance was the resolution entitled "Social Democracy and the Communists." Disdaining to conceal their aims, as Marx and Engels put it in the Communist Manifesto more than a hundred years ago, this resolution named names, making it crystal clear that Dave Dubinsky, Walter Reuther, A. Philip Randolph and the Americans for Democratic Action are the special objects of the Communists' present-day affections. "We strive for their cooperation, not liquidation," is the closing sentence of the resolution.

The key sentence of the resolution adopted by the Communist Party convention, cumbersome though it is with its long parentheses, must be understood as the revelation of the Communist party's major strategy in the immediate future. It reads as follows:

> "To a degree the cooperation of labor reformists (trade union leaders who stand for capitalism and with no socialist background or traditions), social reformists (those labor leaders like Dubinsky, Reuther, Randolph, etc., who have a socialist background), and bourgeois reformists (liberal wing of the Democratic Party) in such organizations as Americans for Democratic Action is, in the absence of a mass Social Democratic Party in the U.S., and under the conditions prevailing in our country, performing the function of Social Democracy."

During the past year, Political Affairs, the most authoritative medium through which the Communist party line of the moment is expounded, has the highest praise for Walter Reuther's program. In the June, 1956, issue, in an article signed by Erik Bert, we read: "Despite all obstacles, however, since the Reuther proposals are intended to meet the issues of peace, prosperity, and progress, they will undoubtedly tend to gather support in labor's ranks and thus influence the course of development in Congress."

What is Reuther's program, according to the writer in Political Affairs? Erik Bert's answer: "Reuther's two major points, taken together, provide for participation by the United States and the Soviet Union in a common effort to bring to the poverty-ridden peoples of the world the wherewithal for upgrading of their economies."

And how would Reuther attain this goal? The answer: "The United States should contribute two percent of its gross product each year (about $8 billion this year) for the next 25 years into a World Fund to provide economic and technical aid to less developed countries, whether aligned with the U.S. or not. The program would be administered through the United Nations and multilateral agencies. U.S. aid would be made available at once through existing multilateral agencies, pending UN action on the creation of the World Fund."

On the heels of this unilateral action in donating $200 billion to a nonexistent fund of the UN, what then? Answer, according to Walter Reuther: "The U.S. would request that the Soviet Union make a similar commitment of two per cent of its gross national product for the same purpose."

This hearty concurrence of the Communist party's Political Affairs in the program of Walter Reuther is an obvious bid for a new understanding between the Communists and the large following of the automobile workers' boss in the ranks of the Democratic party.

If anything more were needed, it is supplied by an article in Political Affairs entitled "The '56 Elections," by Albert E. Blumberg, national legislative representative of the Communist party who was recently convicted under the provisions of the Smith Act.

In Blumberg's article it was made clear that the present Communist objective is a political coalition which specifically includes the Communist Party, the New York Post, Americans for Democratic Action, and Walter Reuther's UAW.

AT THE TIME that his brothers, Walter and Victor, were writing revolutionary sentiments from the Soviet Union, Roy Reuther (who is also a big shot in the UAW) was expressing his Communist beliefs in the following language:

> The aim of socialism is to establish a Workers' Republic. In the achievement of this aim it is necessary to acquire possession of the state power so as to transform capitalist society into socialist society by means of the dictatorship of the proletariat. . . . We make no fetish of legality. The law in a bourgeois democracy is largely the law of property rights, laid down by those who have "rights" because they are owners. The class character of a capitalist society means that no institution or instrument set up by the capitalist class can be depended upon to establish the Workers' Republic . . . Workers' Councils organized in direct response to a growing revolutionary situation shall constitute the basic unit or organs by which the working class can carry through an armed insurrection . . . Once socialists are in possession of the state machinery by the mandate of the workers, their task is to secure and insure the governmental power for the victorious revolution by arming the workers for its defense against all possibility of a counter-revolutionary resistance, and to proceed to transform the economic and social basis of society.

Walter and Victor Reuther, Roy's brothers, probably wish they could expunge from the record that letter written from the Soviet Union on January 21, 1934. Their friends have either tried to ignore it or to brush it aside as a piece of youthful exuberance.

For example, the "liberal" weekly, Commonweal, devotes a single sentence to the Reuthers' experience in the Soviet Union, as follows: "Then came the year in Russia, during which he [Walter] and Victor taught tool-making to Russian workers, studied the Soviet system from the inside and decided they didn't want that kind of socialism." This is an abbreviated account which completely ignores the Reuther enthusiasm for Soviet communism, as expressed in the famous letter, and, by its condensation of the record, amounts to a gross distortion of history.*

Among Walter Reuther's loyal press agents is Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. Schlesinger's political heroes of the "democratic left" are three in number: Franklin D. Roosevelt (of course); Aneurin Bevan, "in whom is distilled the whole tradition of British dissent"; and Walter Reuther, "labor's man of vision and will." It is noteworthy that Schlesinger brackets Aneurin Bevan and Walter Reuther together. With respect to Reuther, Schlesinger predicts: "Walter Reuther, the extraordinarily able and intelligent leader of the United Auto Workers, may well become in another decade the most powerful man in American politics."

Following is the text of the letter from the Soviet Union, signed by Victor and Walter Reuther, as it appears in congressional records (emphasis supplied):

"January 21, 1934

Dear Mel and Glad:

"Your letter of December 5 arrived here last week from Germany and was read with more than usual interest by Wal and I. It seemed ages since we had heard from you, so you might well imagine with what joy we welcomed news from Detroit. It is precisely because you are equally anxious I know to receive word from the 'Workers' Fatherland' that I am taking this first opportunity to answer you.

"What you have written concerning the strikes and the general labor unrest in Detroit plus what we have learned from other sources of the rising discontent of the American workers, makes us long for the moment to be back with you in the front lines of the struggle; however, the daily inspiration that is ours as we work side by side with our Russian comrades in our factory, the thought that we are actually helping to build a society that will forever end the exploitation of man by man, the thought that what we are building will be for the benefit and enjoyment of the working class, not only of Russia but the entire world, is the compensation we receive for our temporary absence from the struggle in the United States. And let no one tell you that we are not on the road to socialism in the Soviet Union. Let no one say that the workers in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are not on the road to security, enlightenment, and happiness.

"Mel, you know Wal and I were always strong for the Soviet Union. You know we were always ready to defend it against the lies of reactionaries. But let me tell you, now that we are seeing all the great construction, watching a backward peasantry being transformed into an enlightened, democratic, cultured populus, now that we have already experienced the thrill, the satisfaction of participating in genuine proletarian democracy, we are more than just sympathetic toward our country, we are ready to fight for it and its ideals.

"And why not? Here the workers, through their militant leadership, the proletarian dictatorship, have not sold out to the owning class like the S. P. in Germany and like the Labor Party in England. Here they have against all odds, against famine, against internal strike and civil war, against sabotage, against capitalist invasion and isolation, our comrades here have maintained power, they have won over the masses, they have transformed the 'dark masses' of Russia into energetic, enlightened workers. They have transformed the Soviet Union into one of the greatest industrial nations in the world. They have laid the economic foundation for socialism, for a classless society. Mel, if you could be with us for just 1 day in our shop you would realize the significance of the Soviet Union. To be with us in our factory Red Corner at a shop meeting and watch the workers as they offer suggestions and constructive criticism of production in the shop. Here are no bosses to drive fear into the workers. No one to drive them in mad speed-ups. Here the workers are in control. Even the shop superintendent has no more right in these meetings than any other worker. I have witnessed many times already, when the superintendent spoke too long, the workers in the hall decided he had already consumed enough time and the floor was then given to a lathe hand who told of his problems and offered suggestions. Imagine this at Ford's or Briggs'. This is what the outside world calls the 'ruthless dictatorship in Russia.' I tell you, Mel, in all the countries we have thus far been in, we have never found such genuine proletarian democracy. It is unpolished and crude, rough and rude, but proletarian workers' democracy in every respect. The workers in England have more culture and polish when they speak at their meetings, but they have no power. I prefer the latter.

"In our factory, which is the largest and most modern in Europe, and we have seen them all, there are no pictures of Fords and Rockefellers, or Roosevelts and Mellon. No such parasites, but rather huge pictures of Lenin, . . . etc., greet the workers' eyes on every side. Red banners with slogans 'Workers of the world unite' are draped across the craneways. Little red flags fly from the tops of presses, drill presses, lathes kells, etc. Such a sight you have never seen before.

"Women and men work side by side — the women with their red cloth about their heads, 5 days a week (our week here is 6 days long). At noon we all eat in a large factory restaurant where wholesome plain food is served. A workers' band furnishes music to us from an adjoining room while we have dinner. For the remainder of our 1-hour lunch period we adjourn to the Red Corner recreation, where workers play games, read papers and magazines or technical books, or merely sit, smoke, and chat. Such a fine spirit of comradeship you have never before witnessed in your life. Superintendent leaders and ordinary workers are all alike. If you saw our superintendent as he walks through the shop greeting workers with 'Hello, Comrade,' you could not distinguish him from any other worker.

"The interesting thing, Mel, is that 3 years ago this place here was a vast prairie, a waste land, and the thousands of workers here who are building complicated dies and other tools were at that time peasants who had never before even seen an industry, let alone worked in one. And by mere brute determination, by the determination to build a workers' country second to none in the world, urged on by the spirit of the revolution, they have constructed this huge marvelous auto factory which today is turning out modern cars for the Soviet Union. Through the bitter Russian winters of 45° below they have toiled with bare hands, digging foundations, erecting structures; they have, with their own brute strength, pulled the huge presses into place and set them up for operation. What they have here they have sacrificed and suffered for; that is why they are not so ready to turn it all over again to the capitalists. That is why today they still have comrades from the Red Army on guard at the factory at all times to prevent counterrevolutionists from carrying on their sabotage.

"About a 20-minute walk from the factory an entirely new Socialist city has grown up in these 3 years. Here over 50,000 of the factory workers live in fine new modern apartment buildings. Large hospitals, schools, libraries, theaters, and clubs have sprung up here and all for the use of those who work, for without a worker's card one cannot make use of all these modern facilities. Three nights ago we were invited to the clubhouse in 'Sosgor' (Socialist City) to attend an evening of enjoyment given by the workers of the die shop. Imagine, all the workers with whom we daily work came together that evening for a fine banquet, a stage performance, a concert, speeches, and a big dance. A division of the Red Army was also present as guests. In all my life, Mel, I have never seen anything so inspiring. Mel, once a fellow has seen what is possible where workers gain power, he no longer fights just for an ideal, he fights for something which is real, something tangible. Imagine, Mel, Henry Ford throwing a big party for his slaves. Here the party was no gift of charity from someone above, for we own the factory, we held the meeting and decided to have the party, and it was paid for from the surplus earnings of our department. What our department does is typical of the social activities which are being fostered throughout the entire factory and the entire Soviet Union.

"Mel, we are witnessing and experiencing great things in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. We are seeing the most backward nation in the world being rapidly transformed into the most modern and scientific, with new concepts and new social ideals coming into force. We are watching daily socialism being taken down from the books on the shelves and put into actual application. Who would not be inspired by such events?

"And now my letter is getting long and still I have said little, for there is so much to say and so little time in which to do it. We have written Merlin and 'Coach' rather lengthy letters and have requested they forward them to you to save duplicity of material. I believe there is little in this letter which they have not already received, so there will be no need of your forwarding this to them.

"A word about your letter. You mentioned that . . .

"Keep your eye on the S. P. It being affiliated to the Second International I am not so certain it is 'drifting' in the right direction, certainly not in the light of recent events.

"Let us know definitely what is happening to the Y. P. S. L. and also the Social Problems Club at C.C.C. . . .

"Carry on the fight for a Soviet America.

"Vic. and Wal."

THE
Dan Smoot Report

Vol. 3, No. 28 Monday, July 15, 1957 Dallas, Texas

DAN SMOOT

Roman Holiday

By GORDON H. SCHERER, Member of Congress

Gordon H. Scherer (Republican) is in his third term as Congressman from the First District of Ohio (Cincinnati). He is a member of the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives. The following is the full text of a special statement which he released on June 26, 1957:

Just ten days ago when the latest controversial decisions of the Supreme Court were handed down, the Un-American Activities Committee was commencing hearings in San Francisco. Although the press in California asked me to comment on those decisions, I hesitated to say anything at that time because I was so shocked and stunned that I felt my observations might be too intemperate.

Since then I have reviewed a series of decisions by the Supreme Court over the last two years. As I come to realize the full impact of these decisions on the security of this nation, I become more alarmed about the direction in which we are heading. Legal principles, investigatory and judicial procedures which I learned in law school and which have been followed during 25 years of practice at the bar have been shattered.

When the most significant of these decisions were handed down by the Court on June 17, a former chairman of the Communist Party in California rejoicingly exclaimed that it was "the greatest victory the Communist Party in America has ever received." She said: "It will mark a rejuvenation of the Party in America. We have lost some members in the last few years, but now we are on our way."

The Committee saw and felt that rejuvenation at the San Francisco hearings. During the last few years, the Communist hangers-on at such hearings had diminished. Enthusiasm had been dampened. The witnesses exhibited less confidence in the rightness of the Communist cause. All this was changed last Monday. The Communists filled the large hearing room and overflowed into the corridors. Their snide and vituperative remarks to Committee members as they passed through the halls and on the elevators were again in evidence. The witnesses and the lawyers were jubilant as well as arrogant. The delaying tactics, the evasiveness, and the long Communist propaganda speeches returned.

As we grappled during the hearings with the strangling directives of the Court, we came to the conclusion that Justice Tom Clark, in his dissenting opinion, was right when he said that the investigating committees and the Federal Bureau of Investigation "may as well close up shop" and go home. Yes, it was a great day for the Kremlin but an ominous one for the people of the United States.

I predict that, unless these decisions can be nullified by action of the Congress, there will be a resurgence of Communist activity in the United States that will not only make your hair curl but your stomach turn.

Lenin, Stalin, and other top Communists have always predicted that the United States would be destroyed from within, as have been most of the countries that have been taken behind the Iron Curtain since 1933. Their predictions have a far better chance of becoming a reality as a result of these decisions.

Not too many years ago the agents of the Kremlin succeeded in infiltrating the various agencies of the government of the United States and the various institutions of American life. Our most vital secrets, including those of the atom bomb, found their way to the Kremlin. The new method of warfare, namely, the internal subversion of the free countries of the world, made phenomenal headway.

Most of the 800 million people of the free world who have been taken behind the Iron Curtain since 1933 got there not by outward aggression but through the internal subversion of their countries by those who owed their loyalty to the Kremlin. One traitor within is more dangerous to our safety and security than 10,000 enemy troops poised on the other side of the Iron Curtain.

Although the Federal Bureau of Investigation did its job well throughout the years and reported its findings faithfully, it was not until the investigating committees of the Congress moved in and brought to light this insidious subversion that we finally began to clean out this fifth column in America. Patiently and carefully the Congress passed law after law recommended by the investigating committees to enable this nation to deal effectively with this new menace from within, this new method of warfare.

In one fell swoop these decisions of the Supreme Court have all but destroyed the most powerful weapons that the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Congressional investigating committees have in their fight against the internal subversion of this country.

The Court has usurped the powers of the Congress. It has rewritten and nullified laws to fit its own social, political, and economic philosophies. It has destroyed basic and fundamental states' rights. It has invaded and taken over prerogatives of the executive branch. It has supplanted the jury and trial judge when expediency demands. It has handcuffed the police and F.B.I. in criminal cases as pointed out by Justice Tom Clark in his dissenting opinion.

Perhaps I can illustrate by example how one of these decisions, namely, the one in the Watkins case, affects the Committee's fight against subversion. Following the public hearings in California, the Committee on last Saturday held an executive session for the purpose of obtaining evidence in the commencement of an investigation into a new and unexplored field of Communist subversive activity in the United States. The hearings were held in executive session because it was imperative that for the time being at least the objectives of our investigation be kept highly secret and that no notice be given to the Commists as to the fact that the Committee had even any knowledge of these particular operations.

It was apparent that, if they had such knowledge, the whole investigation might fail completely. As an example, some witnesses and documents would conveniently disappear; witnesses would be alerted and their testimony changed or slanted. Of course, if Communist agents were aware of the fact that we had knowledge of the activity, it might be discontinued or go underground.

Now let's see what happened. When the witness appeared, his lawyer, armed with the decision in the Watkins case, demanded, before he would let his client even answer as to his occupation, that we outline in detail the nature and object of our investigation and then explain fully how each question we asked his client was pertinent to the subject and object of the investigation.

Obviously, we had no alternative except to dismiss the witness and forego the investigation. Certainly it was better to do this than to tell the Kremlin what we knew.

The Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are similarly handcuffed by the decision freeing the five California Communists convicted for advocating the overthrow of this government by force and violence. By these decisions the F.B.I. must either bare its secret files to the enemies of this country or forego the prosecution of these traitors. Do you wonder why I say June 17 was a Roman holiday for the Kremlin but an ominous day for the United States?

The tragedy of the Watkins decision is that the conclusion reached by the Court is based on a false premise. The Court assumes that the Un-American Activities Committee is investigating Communism as an economic and political philosophy and that the Communist Party in the United States is a political party as we know political parties in this country. On the basis of this false assumption, the Court comes to an apparent logical but novel conclusion.

However, every school boy should know by this time that the Communist Party is not a political party but a conspiratorial apparatus — a fifth-column arm of the Soviet Union with whom we are at war even though it may not be a shooting war. In fact, the Congress of the United States has by law so stated.

Perhaps the Court has never read the secret oath an individual takes when he joins the Russian conspiracy — the Communist Party. This oath reads:

> "I pledge myself to rally the masses to defend the Soviet Union, a land of victorious socialism. I pledge myself at all times to remain a vigilant and firm defender of the Leninist line of the Party, the only line that insures the triumph of Soviet power in the United States."

* * * * *

Less Than Supreme

Americans have come to think of the Supreme Court as the final arbiter — the authority which has the last word — in all questions of governmental power.

Actually, the Constitution grants no such power to the Supreme Court. The federal courts — including the Supreme Court — were intended to be creatures of Congress, not its masters.

I have carefully read through the Constitution and all its amendments, and I reproduce here, verbatim, every word in the Constitution which deals in any way with the federal courts or the officers thereof:

> The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.
> The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies between two or more states, between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

When the President of the United States is tried (by the Senate in an impeachment), the Chief Justice shall preside.

The Congress shall have power . . . to constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court.

No fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

Judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

Feeling that the Constitution had not sufficiently limited the judicial power of the United States, the original framers of the Constitution drew up the 11th Amendment, which was adopted as a part of the Constitution in 1798, and which says:

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States, by citizens of another state, or by citizens of any foreign state.

The key sentence in the Constitutional definition of the power of federal courts is this one:

The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution.

This means that the federal courts were given no jurisdiction over the great body of common law which governs the lives of people. The federal courts were to have jurisdiction only over the statutory law of the federal government — the relatively few federal statutes permitted by the Constitution.

This basic jurisdiction of the federal courts was extended, as you can see from the Constitutional language itself, to certain specified types of litigation. But jurisdiction over virtually all legal matters affecting the lives of individuals was left with the courts of the individual states.

The Eisenhower Court

Current reports from Washington indicate that President Eisenhower is out of sorts with the Supreme Court and is calling upon Congress to enact legislation which will curb the court.

The President no doubt realizes that the nation is boiling with anger over the conduct of the Supreme Court; and the President probably does not want to share the Court's unpopularity.

The public should not forget that the Supreme Court which (according to David Lawrence, editor of U. S. News and World Report and an Eisenhower enthusiast) has given "treason . . . its biggest victory" is the Eisenhower Court.

Justices Brennan, Harlan, Warren, and Whittaker are Eisenhower appointees.

Justices Black, Douglas, and Frankfurter are Roosevelt appointees.

Justices Burton and Clark are Truman appointees.

The worst of the lot is Chief Justice Earl Warren. His appointment was obviously a political pay-off for his service in swinging the California delegation to Eisenhower at the Republican National Convention of 1952.

This, within itself, would be no great wrong. It has been customary for Presidents to pay political debts by appointing important political supporters to the Supreme Court. This political pay-off system has put some fine men on the Supreme Court.

Warren, however, is the only Chief Justice in history who had absolutely no previous judicial experience. It would have been difficult for President Eisenhower to find a practicing lawyer more ignorant of constitutional law than Earl Warren was when he was nominated for the Chief Justiceship.

Warren is the leader and unwavering center of the hard core of ultra-liberals on the Court. Yet, President Eisenhower has repeatedly defended his appointment of Warren, publicly characterizing Warren as one of the greatest Chief Justices of all times.

Curbs on the Court

On June 17, 1957, the Supreme Court climaxed a three-year leftward drive which has: (1) made it virtually impossible for the American people, either through their federal or state governments to protect themselves against the communist conspiracy in the United States; (2) seriously restricted private-property rights — the Girard College case; (3) usurped the powers of the national Congress; (4) invaded the rights of the sovereign states; and (5) practically scrapped the Constitution of the United States as an inviolable charter of government, holding that whims and opinions of the court justices are more authoritative than the Constitution itself.

The June 17, 1957, decisions of the Supreme Court caused unrestrained jubilation (and arrogance) among the communists.

On June 21, 1957, Harry Bridges (Australian-born communist) had a long column in the Dispatcher (newspaper published by Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union).

Bridges refers to Congressman Gordon H. Scherer as "a two-bit political hack." Bridges mentions Senator James O. Eastland and Congressman Francis Walters — and then lumps them together with all other Congressmen and Senators who have served on committees of Congress investigating the communist conspiracy as "an ugly running sore on the face of America."

Harry Bridges said:

> "To refuse to crawl and to spill your guts for the edification of such a committee (any Congressional committee investigating communism), to decline to finger former friends and associates is an honorable thing to do. . . . When the Supreme Court reaffirmed this fact last week, the judges themselves showed a courage and an integrity which unfortunately too few Americans have demonstrated in recent years."

Meanwhile, the Congress of the United States has started groping for a means to repair some of the damage which the Supreme Court has done.

On June 24, 1957, Senators James O. Eastland and Olin D. Johnston proposed a constitutional amendment which would make Supreme Court justices subject to Senate approval every four years.

Several lawmakers are giving close study to a proposal made by David Lawrence (editor of U. S. News and World Report). Lawrence, pointing out that the Constitution empowers the Senate to give "consent," to the appointment of judges, says there is no constitutional reason why the Senate cannot withdraw its consent when Supreme Court justices get on the wrong track. He suggests a law of Congress requiring Supreme Court justices to come before the Senate periodically (perhaps every six years) for "reconfirmation."

The best news to come out of Washington with regard to efforts at curbing the Court was the announcement on June 24, 1957, that Congressmen Noah M. Mason (Republican, Illinois) and George W. Andrews (Democrat, Alabama) are sponsoring a movement to start impeachment proceedings against all members of the Supreme Court.

There is more drive behind this impeachment movement than general newspaper coverage indicates.

On February 22, 1957, the General Assembly of Georgia unanimously adopted a resolution calling for impeachment of six members of the Supreme Court.

Throughout the nation, organizations of various sizes and kinds are circulating petitions calling for impeachment of the court.

In Dallas, Texas, for example, the Public Affairs Club (well-established and influential women's luncheon club) met in special session on June 27, 1957, and unanimously adopted a resolution asking for impeachment.

Two days later, J. Evetts Haley, Sr., State Chairman of Texans For America (P. O. Box 1944, Fort Worth, Texas), announced that this organization will distribute petitions throughout the state, giving individual citizens a chance to petition Congress for impeachment of the Supreme Court.

Here is an issue that every citizen can do something about: at the least, he can make himself heard; if he wants to do more, he can sign and circulate a petition demanding impeachment of the Supreme Court justices, and mail it to his Congressman.

The Sovereign States

By Warren Jefferson Davis

The Sovereign States has just been published by Henry Regnary Company, Chicago (price $5.00). The book was written by James J. Kilpatrick, Editor of The Richmond News Leader. (This commentary on the book was written for The Dan Smoot Report by Warren Jefferson Davis, Counselor at Law in Los Angeles and President of the American Academy of Political Affairs.

A Supreme Court, moving leftward, bent upon destroying the sovereign states of the union; an outraged Bar, trying to find some quicker remedy than impeachment; more than one hundred members of Congress, anxious to curb the Supreme Court before the sovereign states of the union are reduced to impotent provinces of a powerful centralized government — these conditions are the makings of a revolt of the people.

And these conditions exist.

The Virginia Resolution of 1798 (written by Thomas Jefferson and James Madison and later expounded by one of the greatest constitutional lawyers of all time — John C. Calhoun, Vice President and Senator of the United States) enunciates the Doctrine of Interposition:

> "In case of a deliberate, palpable, and dangerous exercise of other powers not granted by the said compact, the States who are parties thereto, have the right, and are in duty bound, to interpose for arresting the progress of the evil, and for maintaining, within their respective limits, the authorities, rights, and liberties appertaining to them."

The purpose of Interposition is "to arrest the progress of the evil."

The evil is the exercise of an usurped power — by the Supreme Court.

James J. Kilpatrick recommends Interposition as a constitutional way to save the American union from destruction by the Supreme Court.

The object of Interposition, as Kilpatrick phrases it, is:

> "to suspend this usurpation alone, within the limits of the objecting State, and thus to force a decision by the arbitrament of the ultimate umpire — the sovereign people themselves, acting in their respective States."

According to the theory of Interposition as advanced by Jefferson, Madison, Calhoun and other great constitutional leaders, when either branch of the federal government violates the Constitution by usurping more power than the Constitution grants, the "States may be appealed to, three fourths of which, in fact, form a power, whose decrees are the Constitution itself."

Under British rule, the American colonies were separate, one from another.

The colonies revolted from British rule and declared themselves "free and independent States." Their revolt succeeded; and, as individual, independent, sovereign states, they made a Treaty of Peace with the British Government. It was as individual, independent, sovereign states that they entered into the mutual agreements known as the Articles of Confederation, and later formed the compact known as the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution is the solemn compact (or contract) by which the individual, independent, sovereign states created the federal government.

The states, not the people, formed the Union. The states did not surrender their sovereignty: they merely delegated certain specified powers to their creature, the federal government. These delegated powers were relatively few in number. All other powers were retained by the states.

The Supreme Court, created under the terms of the Constitution, has no legitimate power to change the Constitution. When the Court does usurp power to change the Constitution (as the present Supreme Court is doing) the states can, and should, invoke the Doctrine of Interposition — to make the Court observe the terms of the contract which created the Court.

This, in brief, is the philosophy of States' Rights which James J. Kilpatrick wrote into his fine book, The Sovereign States.

A former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, well versed in constitutional law, said:

"Since we must rest our decision on the Constitution alone, we must set aside predilections on social policy and adhere to the settled rules which restrict the exercise of our power to judicial review."

Another learned justice is on record as saying:

"It is when a judiciary with life tenure seeks to write its social and economic creed into the Charter that instability is created."

Even Justice Holmes once remarked:

"I cannot believe the (14th) Amendment was intended to give us carte blanche to embody our economic or moral beliefs in its prohibitions."

Dwight D. Eisenhower, as a candidate in 1952, said:

"The Federal Government did not create the States of

WHO IS DAN SMOOT?

Dan Smoot was born in Missouri. Reared in Texas, he attended SMU in Dallas, taking BA and MA degrees from that university in 1938 and 1940.

In 1941, he joined the faculty at Harvard as a Teaching Fellow in English, doing graduate work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the field of American Civilization.

In 1942, he took a leave of absence from Harvard in order to join the FBI. At the close of the war, he stayed in the FBI, rather than return to Harvard.

He served as an FBI Agent in all parts of the nation, handling all kinds of assignments. But for three and a half years, he worked exclusively on communist investigations in the industrial midwest. For two years following that, he was on FBI headquarters staff in Washington, as an Administrative Assistant to J. Edgar Hoover.

After nine and a half years in the FBI, Smoot resigned to help start the Facts Forum movement in Dallas. As the radio and television commentator for Facts Forum, Smoot, for almost four years, spoke to a national audience giving both sides of great controversial issues.

In July, 1955, he resigned and started his own independent program, in order to give only one side — the side that uses fundamental American principles as a yardstick for measuring all important issues. Smoot now has no support from, or connections with, any other person or organization. His program is financed entirely from sales of his weekly publication, The Dan Smoot Report.

this Republic. The States created the Federal Government. The creation should not supersede the creator. For if the States lose their meaning, our entire system of government loses its meaning; and the next step is the rise of the centralized national state in which the seeds of autocracy can take root and grow."

As President, however, Mr. Eisenhower has continued the policies of Roosevelt and Truman. In the appointment of Earl Warren, he overlooked many competent and qualified men with judicial experience, and selected a social theorist and politician, who has followed personal predilections and political convictions rather than legal precedent, in basing court decisions on sociological phantasy rather than on law.

The Supreme Court's 1954 decision in the school segregation cases, says Mr. Kilpatrick, "had no basis in law; it had none in history."

This is the mild language of a southern gentleman, stating what constitutional lawyers have no hesitancy in saying:

The Court usurped the functions of Congress and amended the Constitution by judicial fiat — thus rapidly pushing the American nation toward a situation which Congressman Noah Mason (Republican, Illinois) and other authorities have designated as a "centralized federal tyranny."

The 1954 School Segregation decision was followed by the Pennsylvania Sedition Case (Steve Nelson); the New York Slochower Case; the Michigan "Dirty Book" case; the Alabama Bus Segregation case; and now (1957) the Girard College Case: voiding a private will which set up a valid trust in 1831 — and for the reason that the terms of that will did not suit the predilections and sociological opinions of the present members of the Court.

The remedy? Interposition!

The individual States have the constitutional power — and they have the solemn duty — to invoke the doctrine of Interposition as a means of saving the union and protecting the people against tyranny.

Members of State Legislatures can act, Mr. Kilpatrick says, as "sentinels placed over the ministers of the Federal Government" to shield the people from federal tyranny, "or, at least, to sound the alarm when it is threatened with invasion."

Have our sentinels overslept? Is it too late to reclaim the powers illegally seized by the Supreme Court?

In the people, through their states, rest the answers.

HIGHLANDER FOLK SCHOOL

The Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was organized around 1932 by Myles Horton and Don West. (See testimony of Paul Crouch, May 6, 1949, Subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, page 193.) In his testimony, Mr. Crouch said: "I would like to mention in this connection that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was a school organized by Myles Horton and Don West, and which Mr. [James] Dombrowski shortly thereafter joined."

Paul Crouch, who gave the foregoing testimony concerning the Highlander Folk School, was the top Communist Party functionary in the South.

Speaking of James Dombrowski, Mr. Crouch testified as follows: "I have met officially with him on a number of occasions as head of the Communist District Bureau of Tennessee...at this conference Mr. Dombrowski gave me the impression of being completely pro-Communist and anxious to collaborate with the Communist Party and follow its leadership, without taking the risk of actual Party membership."

A three-page tabulation of James Dombrowski's Communist affiliations is attached to this report.

In March 1954, the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security held hearings in New Orleans on the subject of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of which James Dombrowski was and is the executive director. Among the witnesses who testified before the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security in New Orleans was one John Butler who had formerly been a functionary of the Communist Party in Alabama. In the course of his testimony, Mr. Butler stated that he attended a meeting of Communist Party leaders in July of 1942, in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel in Birmingham, Alabama. Mr. Butler stated that Alton Lawrence introduced James Dombrowski to him on that occasion as a Communist Party member. (See Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security Hearings, March 18, 1954, page 45.) According to Mr. Butler, this meeting of Communist Party leaders was held in Dombrowski's own hotel room. In November, 1956, Alton Lawrence was indicted on a charge of conspiring to file a false non-Communist affidavit with the National Labor Relations Board, which non-Communist affidavit is required of trade union officials by the Taft-Hartley Act. (See New York Times, November 17, 1956.) Alton Lawrence is currently an official of the Communist-controlled International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

In the early period of the Highlander Folk School, Alton Lawrence was a member of its faculty. On August 13, 1938, Mr. John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the AFL, testified before the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, and named Elizabeth Hawes, Alton Lawrence, and Myles Horton as persons who "attended a secret convention in North Carolina, at which time plans were made for spreading the revolutionary theories throughout the South." Mr. Frey further testified: "In connection with this I might mention that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was mixed up in this secret convention, in which these three C.I.O. organizers took a very prominent part." (See Dies Committee Hearings, Volume 1, page 126.)

Paul Crouch testified before the Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security, as follows: "The Highlander Folk School is a school operated at Monteagle, Tennessee, ostensibly as an independent labor school, but actually working in close cooperation with the Communist Party." (See Hearings, page 47.) Dombrowski was an instructor at the Highlander Folk School for a number of years.

The following colloquy took place between Senator Eastland, Committee Counsel Arens, and Mr. Crouch during the latter's testimony:

> SENATOR EASTLAND. Mr. Crouch, did you ever visit Dr. Dombrowski's home?
> MR. CROUCH. I visited the Highlander Folk School where he was working. I didn't visit at his home, but we spent a night at the same home together, Caroline Stevenson's, and he and Leo Sheiner discussed in my presence the actual hideout of Communist leaders the night we were traveling to Winter Haven.
> MR. ARENS. He and Sheiner discussed in your presence the hideouts for Communist leaders, top flight leaders; is that correct?
> MR. CROUCH. That is correct, sir.

(See hearings, page 52.)

Don West, who has already been mentioned as connected with the Highlander Folk School, was district director of the Communist Party of North Carolina. (See House Committee Hearings, May 6, 1949, page 191.)

At the New Orleans hearings of the Senate Committee, on March 20, 1954, Myles Horton was ejected by the United States Marshal from the witness stand and the hearing room. (over)

Dear Ruth:

Thank you so much for your inquiry about Mr. M. G. Lowman. I can tell you that he has been an agitator, of first one kind and the other, ever since I have first known him. He was a member of our Westwood Methodist Church when I attended there and he caused a great deal of trouble. I feel about him that he really was not successful in his business and so managed to get himself a position as executive secretary of the Circuit Riders. You know, of course, that they are an unofficial body and are trying to undermine many of the agencies of the Church as well as many of the ministers. He takes it upon himself, with his wife, to go to the various congregations in Cincinnati and then articles appear about the ministers. The Council of Churches know about him here in the city and really he is simply tolerated, but people do not feel too much concern about him. He is truly a thorn in the flesh, but I don't know of anything that we can really do about him. Of course, if it is proved as in the article which was contained in your letter, there might be something that they could do about his activities. I really feel that he is doing a lot of harm across the country because people do not know him, but when they know him, at least here in Cincinnati, they do not pay very much attention to his disclosures.

I trust that I have answered in a partially satisfactory way at least, for I do not know anything more about him than this.

doing to win over these forces for themselves and of the plan they have to set up a "red" guard that will mow down all deserters once they are in power here as they are in Russia. We hear little about the guards that were ready to refuse action in Michigan during the auto strikes, many of them are said to have worn C. I. O. bands about their arms as signs of solidarity. If it could be known, there is no doubt but that many a "red" has been fired out of the guard ranks over the Nation. This may be an avenue of investigation for this committee to tackle if you think that the leaders of the guardsmen can speak out at this time. Sincere peace movements should not be discouraged. However, we have no place for those that would pick our pockets, that seek to internationalize us, or assume the shape of the Trojan Horse, in sheltering the exponents of communism. To weaken our national defense would not prevent war; to weaken would be to destroy.

Groups of persons, swayed by various impulses and motives, allegedly have endeavored to establish permanent peace. Many of the leaders of the peace movements were idealists and their schemes were impracticable and fantastic. Today, many peace organizations have been penetrated by radical doctrines and are a national menace. In these, pacifism, internationalism, and communism are intermixed. Pacifism, with its alleged goal of everlasting peace regardless of foreign aggression, when combined with internationalism with its supercontrol of constituent societies regardless of ethnic and national antagonisms, present an inimical political combination. When these two are intermixed with communism, with its system of social organization to be brought about by bloody revolution and the doctrine of a community of property, we have a combination that shall ultimately undermine and destroy our Republic. Just how long the pacifist movement has been guided by the "reds" is difficult to say, but during the past 20 years they have practically taken it over, as the story of many peace groups tell. Modern history records the International Peace Congress, often convened after it was first assembled in London in 1843. It was the imperial rescript of Czar Nicholas II of Russia that registered the primary gesture that led to the first Hague Peace Conference of 1899, which was followed by the second in 1907. Out of the first grew the Hague Court of Permanent Arbitration. In 1906 the Conciliation Internationale and the American Association for International Conciliation were formed. The latter disbanded with the advent of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Its fund of $10,000,000 has afforded much aid and comfort to many radical peace groups. About this time the Maryland Peace Society was formed. Under the stress of the World War and the doctrine that modern strife involves combatants and non-combatants, many people became interested in peace and formed organizations to effect that end. We recall Bryan's League for World Peace, Marburg's League to Enforce Peace, the World Peace Foundation, League of Peace, American Peace Society, Women's Peace Conference, and The American Society for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes. The Ford peace ship afforded an opportunity for radical argonauts to war between themselves and plan for future action. German propagandists organized peace societies to keep us out of war; failure to keep their own country out of war did not discourage their activities. Some maintain that enduring peace is strictly an international problem; apparently they have no fear of entangling alliances. The Kellogg-Briand Pact, the Nine-Power Pact, the League of Nations, and the World Court are types.

Disraeli once observed that "the world is governed by very different personages from what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes." There is no doubt but that much of the opposition to our national defense is conducted by powerful unseen forces whose personnel is not constant and whose theories are foreign to our institutions and policy. They are well organized and assemble in internationals and congresses which dictate so-called peace policies.

The International Fellowship of Reconciliation was organized under the alleged motive to reconcile people. Yet, it maintains that class war is necessary and that all must work for the radical reorganization of society and replace the present system of individual capitalism by collective ownership. Its activities extend to more than 20 nations. It advocates the abolition of compulsory military service and supports movements for disarmaments. It maintains that as long as military force is ready for possible international war, there is a grave danger that it may be used in class war. Its American section is The Fellowship of Reconciliation, organized in 1915. Soon thereafter it became active in the defense of the so-called "conscientious objectors" in special connection with the World War. It sponsored a pamphlet against military training. However, its members are not opposed to a war that would end capitalism. They seek a fellowship of religious pacifists and keep close to the churches in order to spread radical Christian views. Christian terms are employed to spread its communist peace propaganda. Connected with it are many ministers and professors; all working for a new social order. Its members refuse to participate in any war or sanction military preparedness. Its publication is called Fellowship. Its activities are many. Some of its members initiated the Brookwood Labor College; others set up the National Civil Liberties Bureau, now the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Council for the Prevention of War, and the Committee on Militarism in Education to oppose military training in schools and colleges. The Fellowship advocates the right of an individual to refuse to obey the State, even in the emergency of war. They have a youth section called the Fellowship of Youth for Peace which was organized about 1928. In 1932 there was circulated the fellowship of reconciliation petition for Russian recognition. The Fellowship is said to be affiliated with the Socialist Pioneer Youth of America and is a section of the ultra-radical War Resisters International and sponsors the Youth Crusade for Disarmament and World Peace. Evidently the Fellowship of Reconciliation is a foreign conceived and planted movement in our country to destroy the spirit of national patriotism of our American people and to oppose our various agencies of national defense.

The War Resisters International is called a Communist organization which desires to bring about a new social order through revolutionary uprisings. It initiated the War Resisters International Council, which comprises the War Resisters International and its sections, together with the International Fellowship of Reconciliation, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Friends' Peace Committee, Friends' Service Council, and others. Their first international conference was held in Holland; one in Austria in 1928, where resistance and revolution were discussed. They unite for the suppression of capitalism and imperialism and would establish their new social and international order. They maintain that war resistance is a practical policy, but do not oppose war of their own making. Its American section is the War Resisters League, whose honorary chairman in 1933 was Albert Einstein. They advise that we change our economic system and thus get rid of war. In an Armistice Day peace letter to the President of the United States, they announced their "deliberate intention to refuse to support war measures or to render war service" should our Government have to resort to arms.

The Women's International Congress was called by British, Dutch, and Belgian radicals and met at The Hague in 1915. They organized the Women's International Committee for Permanent Peace, which in 1919 became the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Its United States section is the Women's Peace Party. Active Communists and Socialists were prominent in its formation and it was financed in part by the Garland Fund. It has members in 47 countries. Their Vienna Congress decided to "transform the economic system in the direction of social justice." This meant to favor laws in reference to the abolition of individuals' property ownership. In 1925-26 special attention was paid to the subject of economic imperialism in the United States. In 1934 they sponsored the Nye resolution to investigate the manufacture of armaments. They were active in trying to bring the United States into the World Court. It has been referred to as the feminine branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. Their international headquarters is in Geneva, Switzerland. It is their aim to unite women in all countries who are opposed to every kind of war and who work for universal disarmament. The charge has been made that it is closely allied with the Third International and that radical leaders for bloody revolution helped to vote funds for some of their "peace" bulletins as well as for some of the speakers on the "pax special." It is a section of the War Resisters International Council. Its literature bears the names of the World Peaceways, Inc., Public Action Committee, and the National Council for Prevention of War.

The International League Against Imperialism centers in Moscow and has branches in all countries of the world. Its section in our country is called the All-America Anti-Imperialist League. Special attention is devoted to Latin America and its endeavors to create hatred between their people and ours. It also aims to spread revolutionary doctrines among colonial people and persuade them to throw off the control of the parent country. Should they do so they might be easily conquered by the Communists. It is an important Communist agency

Court, disarmament, world control of this and that, theories that were brought to the United States from the conspiring and warring nations of the Old World. They have attempted to persuade the American people to lay aside our own interests and join with them in a carefully conceived human lottery in Europe. Other movements sprang up in America in succession: the Foreign Policy Association, the War Resisters, the World Peace Society, the Women's Peace Society, the Women's Peace Union, the League of Nations Association, the World Court Committee, the Peace Patriots, the American League Against War and Fascism, Congress Against War, National Student League, New History Society, the Youth Peace Federation, and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, etc.

Many of these organizations, as well as the Socialist and Communist Parties and certain international bankers, are striving constantly to internationalize America. The ultimate results of which would unquestionably break down our national character and lower our standards of living to those of the peons of the Old World set America back to the pre-Declaration of Independence period and subject us to some form of an international oligarchy. It might be news to some of our good people who have been led into following some of these movements to learn a few things concerning some of these organizations.

Let us take as an example the "Women's International League for Peace and Freedom," also a section of an international organizations with headquarters in Geneva. Parading as a "peace" movement, they have gained a wide following among advocates of peace. The following is an analysis of their program and of the pronouncements of some of their leaders: Abolition of property privileges (by means of taxation, death duties, and land-reform laws); adherence to League of Nations, World Court, consultative pacts; abolition of military training in American schools and colleges; reduction in size of National Guard; cancelation of war debts; repeal of Japanese Exclusion Act; hands off Cuba, Nicaragua, Philippines, and other American possessions; passage of anti-lynching law; forbiddance of shipment of munitions to any country by the United States. They urged the recognition of Russia, international boycotts against the aggressor, open reception of aliens, reduction in tariffs, and international control of raw materials etc.

In addition, Mrs. Sara Bard Field, one of the leaders of the Women's International League, is quoted as stating on the eve of the launching of one of the organization's "world disarmament caravans:" "I have no confidence in anything short of revolution, peaceful by all means, if possible, bloody if necessary, in every land, resulting in the establishment of the Communist idea in some form. * * * Go about the building of a new world as Russia is painfully trying to do."

Gradually they became quite frank in stating what might be construed by some the real purpose of the movement. We quote here reference to the resolution which was adopted at the last International conference of the Women's International League for Peace and and Freedom held in Europe last year, reference to which was published in the Socialist Party Press Service, issued from Chicago: "Conscious that these aims cannot be attained * * * under the present system of exploitation, privilege, and profits, they (members of Women's International League) consider that their duty is to facilitate and hasten by nonviolent methods of the social transformation which would permit the inauguration of a new system, founded on the needs of a community and not on profit."

That appears to some to have been the purpose of the Women's International League for years, instead of pacifism.

The War Resisters is another so-called peace movement that was originally founded in Europe and transplanted in the United States. Here is a portion of their program: Abolition of war and signed pledges by Americans to refuse to defend the Nation in the event of war, and the destruction of the capitalist system. They stated: "We agree that the class war is a fact * * * We must stand in this matter and must work toward a radical reorganization of society." They urge their members to join political movements aiming toward replacement of the capitalist system by a system of collective ownership. They also demand the abolition of military training.

Let us now consider the Green Shirts, a militant organization originating on foreign soil. This movement advocates the following: War resistance, abolition of national governments and creation of "a United States of the World," world patriotism, refusal to defend the Government in the event of war. Its affiliated movement, the New History Society, stands for the following: Radicalization of

TURNING SEARCHLIGHT ON REDS

By Walter S. Steele

. . . Literally millions of pamphlets and hundreds of pages of abuse have appeared through Communist auspices, in the effort to undermine and destroy the Senator, which is the Red way of attempting to destroy investigations of the Red traitorism which had reached into the very top echelons of our government, union labor, colleges and schools, the United Nations, and other fields. It would matter little if McCarthy happened to be Jones insofar as he attempted to expose the Red Menace. The people of the Nation will recall how similar campaigns of vilification were launched against Cong. Hamilton Fish, and each of the members of the committee he headed. They will recall how an even wider and more vicious campaign was registered against Martin Dies, Joseph Starnes, Fred Busbey, Parnell Thomas, John Wood and others of similar Congressional committees. They recall what efforts have been made to undermine and to destroy Senator Pat McCarran, who preceded Senator Jenner as chairman of the present Senate Internal Security Committee, now the efforts on Cong. Harold H. Velde, and others of the present House Committee. So it matters not what the name of the member of a Congressional committee is; all that matters to the Reds is whether or not he is too successful in exposing the traitorism of the Reds and their brethren. If so, they are the targets of the Reds' vicious smear campaigns.

Recently the Communists have opened fire on some of Senator McCarthy's so-called "friends." This smear campaign was launched recently in Texas, the backers of the Facts Forum, originating out of Dallas, becoming the chief target. Into the picture with Facts Forum was brought a myriad of others throughout the Nation including the writer of this column, Walter S. Steele. . . .

. . . But the smear-bunder for the Communists, in this instance, is no other than Art Shields, writing in the official organ of the Communist Party, heaping all the lies he can, directly or by inference, upon Sen. McCarthy, trotting in odorous lies, in an effort to prove his attacks on the Senator as factual. It is an open book that the NATIONAL REPUBLIC approves of Senator McCarthy's attacks on the Reds. This does not mean that it approves of all of the Senator's pronouncements or that it accepts all of his "friends." This is not meant to be critical of any of his friends, for ones we know of seem to be respectable, but we are not in a position to know who all of his friends may be or of their backgrounds.

However, we do know a little about Art Shields. He has been active in the Red ranks since 1926, according to our own records, when he was a member of the Young Workers (Communist) League. He graduated into the adult field of the Reds ten years later. If he has had time between his propaganda efforts in behalf of the Communist movement and its fatherland, the Soviet Union, to be of any service to our country or to humanity, he must be a man of steel, for he has devoted 28 years to the Red cause, having served them on the staffs of the Young Worker, Peoples World, Daily Worker, Sunday Worker, Political Affairs, Labor News, Solidarity, Party Organizer and Federated Press, and has been an instructor at the Communist School in NYC. His real name is Thomas Arthur Shields, born in the British West Indies, Oct. 31, 1888. His father was a clergyman, and the young sprout is a product of Moravian College, took to school teaching originally and finally to waging propaganda for the Communists. There's one thing significant in studying the Red organs: one finds this pattern over a period of many years, always critical of the U.S.A. and favorable toward the Soviet Union; apologists for the Soviet and its satellites and always anti-American. Always a kind word for Soviet officials, always unkind words for officials of the U. S. Government. Features on anniversaries of the Soviet and its leaders, never on truly American historical events and on its leaders. . . .

M. G. LOWMAN
To Be Interviewed on WCMW

Red Clergymen Authority Will Be on Air Here

One of the leading authorities on alleged Communist infiltration into American churches, M. G. Lowman, will be interviewed at 10:30 a.m. Thursday over WCMW by Ray W. Hambleton and I. G. Harman on the "Keep America Free" program.

Lowman, executive secretary of Curcuit Riders, Inc., an independent national group of Methodists, has appeared on radio forums and addressed service clubs, civic organizations, religious groups, college assemblies and patriotic socities in various sections of the United States.

While, in Canton, he will meet with, consult and advise local Protestant laymen concerning the attempts of the Communists to infiltrate the churches, and will discuss with them effective methods of combating such designs.

Lowman asserts that no stigma is attached to the American clergy because of overt acts of a few, any more than a stigma was attached to the 11 disciples because Judas betrayed Jesus.

Lowman, a Cincinnatian, is active in his city's civic and public affairs including projects for the physically handicapped, religious organizations and college youth. He has collaborated with various security agencies and investigating committees of the government and earlier this month appeared as a witness before the Ohio State Un-American Activities Commission.

I want to tell you that you left behind remarkable friends. I did not realize the effect of that meeting until two or three days had passed. Then it began to roll in. I have no reason to tell you tales. But the meeting, and your speech in particular, has had a colossal effect upon all people. One was so moved by it that he could not sleep that night but spent the night writing a poem in praise of you all. I enclose the poem. It is not good from the literary viewpoint. But from the viewpoint of the emotion behind it, it is of value. It is a deeply passionate poem. It is not good enough to publish, but it is good enough to carry next to your heart in the years to come. To that meeting, it may interest you to know, came delegations sent by every institution. Many institutions could not cross the rivers. But they sent activists, groups of six to a dozen. They later gave extensive reports. I am getting those reports from instructors day by day. All are deeply impressed and moved and grateful to you and all of you. There has never been anything like this here before."

Room 432

Dear Mr. Fleming:

May I first thank you for making available to us the figures on Negro voting in the South. I was able to make good use of them on the floor of the Senate on Monday and I am enclosing a copy of my remarks on that day. You may have noted that Mr. James Reston of the New York Times commented on the speech in his column today, June 12.

I checked as many figures as possible on potential Negro voters against the official census figures and in most cases they were correct. However, the figures for the 95 Texas counties were obviously incorrect for they appear to be the total number of Negroes in those counties rather than the number 21 years of age and over. Further, my attention has been called to some inaccuracies for specific counties. Therefore, I have made a re-check County by County of the figures for those over 21 by going directly to the official census figures. I thought you should know this for you may wish to check them yourself before they are further distributed.

Nonetheless, I appreciate having the figures and of course, they are the only ones and the best ones available. I hope you think I made good use of them on the floor of the Senate.

With best wishes,

Faithfully,

PROPOSED CIVIL RIGHTS LEGISLATION—THE JURY TRIAL AMENDMENT

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the Senate Committee on the Judiciary has adopted an amendment to S. 83, the civil-rights bill, providing for jury trials in all contempt cases which might arise under the provisions of the bill.

I may say in all kindness, without reflection upon the motives of any Senator, that this particular amendment is designed to weaken and destroy the effectiveness of the civil-rights bill and, in particular, to destroy those sections which would help to guarantee the right of Negroes to vote.

I have secured for the information of Members of Congress—and I ask unanimous consent to have it made a part of the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks—a memorandum prepared by the Research Office of the Southern Regional Council, which I received from the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress, concerning Negro voter registration in 11 Southern States. In most cases classified by county. I shall include in the RECORD the explanation of how the figures were gathered and some comments on their accuracy, all of which I ask unanimous consent to have printed at an appropriate point in the RECORD.

Alabama's Negro Vote By Counties

The rock bottom race issue in the South is not race mixing in schools, but the registration of Negro voters. In the Senate debate over providing jury trial in the civil rights bill, the enemies of jury trial saw away at the theme that white Southerners would not vote for conviction and Negroes are excluded from juries because they are not qualified voters. Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois argued last week:

> We believe that in the interest of justice . . . this cause will be better aided by having the judges, who are Southern whites, who come from Southern communities, and who share the mores of those communities, but who are somewhat insulated from improper pressure by life tenure, make the decisions, than by having cases tried by juries chosen from carefully culled jury lists, which either completely or preponderantly exclude Negroes.

In this connection, Senator Douglas had inserted into the Congressional Record a county-by-county breakdown on the number of Negro voters in Alabama. His figures were supplied by the Southern Regional Council. There is no perfectly accurate count of Negro voters, but this compilation is perhaps as accurate as any available:

County—	1950 potential Negro Voters	1956 number of Negroes registered

Douglas Blasts Alabama Juries

BY GENE WORTSMAN
Post-Herald Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 12 — Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), warming up to the civil rights fight, yesterday lambasted Southern juries and customs, particularly those in Alabama.

He said low registration of Negro voters in Alabama and other Southern states "is the very reason" why civil rights legislation is needed.

Douglas' remarks were printed in full in today's Congressional Record.

Accompanying his statements was a county-by-county breakdown of the number of Negro residents in 11 Southern states in 1950 and the number of Negro voters in those counties in 1956.

Douglas said the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress obtained figures for him from the research office of the Southern Regional Council.

Citing Alabama, Douglas declared:

"There were 516,245 Negro males and females over the age of 21 who were entitled to vote; but the number of Negroes registered was 53,336, or 10.3 per cent."

He said Southern states vote fewer people by percentage than other regions.

Alabama, with 28.5 per cent of the population voting, ranks 46th, followed by South Carolina and Mississippi.

His figures showed in part:

Jefferson County with 121,667 Negroes had 7000 Negro voters; Calhoun with 8304 had 1800; Cherokee, 736 had 250; Chilton, 2027 had 350; Cleburne, 380 had 60; Colbert, 4519 had 291; Cullman, 249 had 81; Etowah, 7672 had 2000.

Fayette, 1497 had 326; Franklin, 700 had 200; Lamar, 1204 had 100; Lauderdale, 4022 had 495; Lee,

Douglas Takes On South

A View That the Senator Is Emerging As Chief Champion of Civil Rights Bill

By JAMES RESTON
Special to the New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 11—Senator Paul H. Douglas, Democrat of Illinois, is emerging as the most effective advocate of the Eisenhower Administration's civil rights bill in the Senate.

The white-thatched professor from the Middle West is contending with another powerful orator in the Democratic party, Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina, for domination of what promises to be the most acrimonious debate of the session.

Every few days now, Senator Douglas appears on the floor armed with heavy catalogues of facts, to prove that the Negro in the South is being deprived of his right to vote in Federal elections.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 85th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 103 WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1957 No. 133

House of Representatives

The House was not in session today. Its next meeting will be held on Monday, July 29, 1957, at 12 o'clock noon.

Senate

FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1957

(Legislative day of Monday, July 8, 1957)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, whose rule is law, but whose name is love, Thou hast given us Thy wide and wonderful earth where Thou hast housed us as royal children. Keep us, we beseech Thee, from absorption in our own selves and from irritable haste as we face the tasks Thou hast given us to accomplish. Let Thy refining fire burn through all our falsehoods and evasions. Deliver us, and especially those who stand above their fellows in posts of public office, from the arrogance which lurks in earthly power. Help us to know that when we forget Thee whatever we build is labor lost; that only in Thy life is our enduring life, and only in Thy will is our peace. Through Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. JOHNSON of Texas, and by unanimous consent, the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, July 25, 1957, was approved, and its reading was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Maurer, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7697) to provide additional facilities necessary for the administration and training of units of the reserve components of the Armed Forces of the United States, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 7697) to provide additional facilities necessary for the administration and training of units of the reserve components of the Armed Forces of the United States, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Armed Services.

CORRECTION OF THE RECORD

Mr. POTTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to correct the permanent RECORD of Friday, July 19, on page 10996. In my remarks, I asked unanimous consent and received unanimous consent to submit an exhibit as a part of my remarks. The exhibit was not submitted. I ask unanimous consent that the permanent RECORD be corrected so that the exhibit which was listed in the RECORD as exhibit 1 be included at the conclusion of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The correction will be made.

THE DEBATE ON THE CIVIL-RIGHTS BILL

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, as the Senate continues to debate the civil-rights bill, it becomes more and more apparent that the Senate was very wise in the beginning in insisting on a thorough examination of the bill which was sent to Congress by the Attorney General.

Many groups in the United States now realize that the bill cannot be approached on the basis of "do not touch a hair on it." They understand that the bill has far-reaching implications, and that thoughtful Senators must be absolutely certain of what they are doing when they finally vote on this proposed legislation.

This morning the Washington Post published an editorial presenting some very interesting points concerning the procedures of the commission which will be set up under the bill.

Some representatives of organized labor have expressed to me deep concern over the absence of an adequate jury-trial provision. These members of organized labor—thoughtful men, Mr. President; not yes men—recall the days before the Norris-LaGuardia Act was passed, when Federal judges had absolute power to break a strike, and when workingmen were not permitted to submit the facts to a jury composed of their fellow citizens. Some of them have told me that they believe new life should be breathed into the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

Mr. President, many very able Senators on both sides of the aisle are now working on this problem, and are attempting to devise suitable language to incorporate proper and enduring safeguards. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLARK] have submitted amendments; and other amendments will be proposed, I have no doubt. These are proposals, Mr. President, which in my judgment would state clearly that a court has powers to enforce its decrees, but which also would maintain the fundamental basis of our freedom, namely, the right of trial by jury.

I have every confidence in the ability of the Senate to work out a meaningful and effective right-to-vote bill. A meaningful and effective bill does not require the Senate, however, to indulge in any dressed to the editor by a former judge, Dorothy Kenyon, published in this morning's issue of the New York Times, protesting against the inclusion of a jury-trial provision in the pending bill.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TO PROTECT CIVIL RIGHTS: ELIMINATION OF JURY TRIALS IN BILL SEEN AS EFFECTIVE LEGAL REMEDY

(The writer of the following letter is a former justice of the municipal court:)

To the EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

Women won the right to vote less than 40 years ago. Negroes were luckier; they won it almost 60 years earlier. But once won nobody opposed women's exercising their hard-won right. The same is not true of Negroes. In certain parts of the country, although possessing the right to vote. Negroes cannot do so. They have no effective means of enforcing their right. The old remedies have broken down.

Right without remedies, that paradox of the law so puzzling to most lay people, could have no better illustration. What part IV of the pending civil-rights bill seeks to do is to supply an effective new remedy.

In certain areas of the South (we have to face it) the old remedy by criminal process and trial by jury of one's peers is worthless. No remedy worthy of the name exists for deprivation of his voting rights, there being no justice for black men before all-white juries. So we have to invent another remedy. The history of the law is full of just such examples of the age-long search for remedies to give meaning and substance to otherwise empty rights.

AMENDMENTS OPPOSED

The heart of this section of the bill, make no mistake, is its elimination of trial by jury. Hitch on a jury provision (no matter how limited, as suggested by some, to facts actually in dispute; and what cases cannot be so converted by the simple expedient of the defendant's pleading not guilty?) and you will have cut out the heart of this new remedy. The bill becomes a worthless piece of paper.

Why, then, all the outcry about the sacred right of trial by jury, the conflict of civil liberties involved, and so forth? Many people are confused by such talk. What is the answer and the argument in favor of this new remedy?

First, there is no constitutional right to trial by jury in injunction cases where the Government is the plaintiff. In the strict sense, therefore, no civil liberties issue is involved. It becomes merely a question of the wisdom, on balance, of extendiing jury trials to cases such as these and whether greater or less fair play is thereby brought about.

The standard illustration brought forward by its proponents is the requirement of jury trials in labor injunction cases.

DIFFERING CASES

But note the difference: In labor injunction cases the Government or a great corporation is the plaintiff; the defendant is frequently a solitary individual, economically weak and powerless. Jury trials in these cases tend to redress the balance, to protect the weak against the strong.

In our case, Government sues instead of an individual for the reason that the individual is frequently too intimidated to dare to sue for himself. And it sues, in almost every case, a government official, register of voters or the like, who in his governmental capacity has attempted to deprive that individual of his right to vote. Here the roles are reversed, the plaintiff represents the weak, the defendant the strong. To give the defendant, a government official, this added protection of trial by jury is to strengthen the strong against the weak, a precisely opposite result from that achieved in the labor cases.

No, this is no situation that calls for jury trials. On the contrary, they have become only too often a tragic mockery of justice for Negroes in the South. The whole purpose of this bill is to get away from just this type of failure of justice and to carve out a new and fair and effective remedy for this ancient right.

DOROTHY KENYON.

NEW YORK, July 24, 1957.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, at various times in the past I have quoted the publications of the Southern Regional Council. The Southern Regional Council is composed entirely of southerners, men and women of good will of both races in the South. It is in no sense a lobbying organization. I have been able to obtain material it provides through the Library of Congress, at my request.

I think the statement which has been prepared on the origins and aims of the Southern Regional Council should be printed in the RECORD at this point so as to indicate the high qualifications of the council and its emotional attachment to the South. So I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the statement be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL: A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF ITS ORIGINS AND AIMS, APRIL 1956

"The South of the future toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritances from the past. It is a South where the measure of a man will be his ability, not his race; where a common citizenship will work in democratic understanding for the common good; where all who labor will be rewarded in proportion to their skill and achievement; where all can feel confident of personal safety and equality before the law; where there will exist no double standard in housing, health, education, or other public services; where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed; where, above all, every individual will enjoy a full share of dignity and self-respect, in recognition of his creation in the image of God." (From a Statement of Policy and Aims of the Southern Regional Council (1951).)

SRC AND THE COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

The Southern Regional Council and its predecessor, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, have a history of 35 years of constructive activity.

In the troubled days following World War I, race conflict and the lawlessness of terror organizations reached such proportions that the need for new techniques of restoring harmony could not be ignored. To meet this need, interracial committees were formed in cities and towns throughout the South. It was found that by bringing together influential members of both races grievances could be aired, mutual problems discussed, and a meeting of minds effected. This method had such beneficial results that interracial committees became an established part of the life of the South in the early twenties. Their influence became southwide through the formation of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, a central organization with headquarters in Atlanta.

The commission was founded in 1919 by a group of the South's leading church men and women. Among them were Dr. M. Ashby Jones, prominent Baptist minister, Dr. John Hope, president of Atlanta University, Mr. John J. Eagan, businessman and philanthropist, Dr. Plato Durham, dean of the Emory University Theology School, Dr. Robert Moton, president of Tuskegee Institute, and Dr. Will W. Alexander, the commission's director. Its work in behalf of sound race relations was acclaimed by the South's leading newspapers, religious leaders, and by many public officials.

The commission helped organize, extend, and guide the work of State and local interracial committees. It assisted them in making their influence felt by newspapers, civil authorities, churches, school officials, police administrators, and health officers. It gave much attention to factual analysis of the problem of lynching and other forms of interracial violence. Its auxiliary, the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, did much to educate public opinion in the causes and possible remedies for such violence.

From these early activities, the commission built up a body of acquaintance and confidence that has been an increasing asset through the years. The traditional barrier between the races was broken down to allow an interchange of ideas and mutual trust. The notion of cooperative action by people of good will, both white and Negro, took root and has continued to grow. In its 25 years of operation, the commission made the meeting of white and Negro citizens for the discussion of common problems an accepted practice almost everywhere in the South. It marshalled thousands of southern church people in opposition to lynching and other injustices, brought new light to bear on race relations, issued 2 million copies of pamphlets and leaflets, and symbolized the faith of the southern white people and Negro people in the processes of mutual agreement and cooperation.

Transition to SRC

In 1939 the leaders of the commission began to explore the possibility of expanding the activities of the organization to permit a broader approach to the problems of the South. In October, 1940, the commission instructed its executive committee to "take whatever steps are necessary to carry out the plans for the formation of a council on southern regional development," which would include in its program "the work of the commission and other activities connected with the economic, educational, and social development of the South."

Meanwhile the efforts of other progressive southerners were leading them to a similar purpose. The first movement in that direction took place when a group of southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., on October 20, 1942, to set forth just what the Negro wants and is expecting of the postwar South and Nation, and to enlist the aid of interested white southerners. The result of this historic conference was a comprehensive statement covering the following areas: Political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, and social welfare and health. Many social thinkers regarded the Durham statement as the most hopeful pronouncement on race relations that had come out of the South in the last 75 years.

In April 1943 a group of southern white leaders met in Atlanta to consider the statement of the Durham conference. These white leaders found the statement so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion tial fiscal and monetary danger will be thoroughly explored.

Mr. President, no war has ever been won without sacrifice. We will not defeat the forces of inflation without paying the price—but the cost of victory will be small indeed as compared to the disasters that could be inflicted upon us by runaway inflation.

In the war to preserve the economic health and strength of our Nation there will be casualties—and these may include political casualties—because there is no way of controlling inflation that will be universally popular. There is no magic formula. We cannot buy security, stability, and increasing prosperity on the easy payment plan.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY EXCHANGE STUDENTS

During the delivery of Mr. DOUGLAS' speech,

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield to me in order that I may have the privilege of introducing 25 exchange students who are seated in the gallery?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield, with the understanding that I shall not lose the floor, and that the interruption will appear elsewhere.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I am most grateful to the Senator from Illinois. With his usual courtesy and generosity he has yielded in order that I may invite the attention of Senators to the fact that in the gallery are seated 25 exchange students, most of them from Germany, with 2 or 3 from Austria.

They have been in the United States for a little more than a year, living in the homes of Americans. They came to our country under what we call a student-exchange program. They are here today under the leadership of Mr. Leroy Doty, of the Church of the Brethren.

I have had an opportunity to visit with these young people this afternoon. We discussed the debate in the Senate. They are greatly interested in our processes of democracy. I tried to explain to them a little about this important controversy.

I said to them what I repeat here, that we are enriched by their presence in America, and we know that our young people who have gone to their countries have been enriched by their visits.

It is very gratifying to me to have the privilege of introducing these fine young people. I ask them to rise in order that we may greet them.

(The visitors rose in the gallery and were greeted with applause, Senators rising.)

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting a nomination was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Tribbe, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session,

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Farrant Lewis Turner, of Hawaii, to be Secretary of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1957

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6127) to provide means of further securing and protecting the civil rights of persons within the jurisdiction of the United States.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I am very much pleased that the debate on the pending subject has developed along the lines it has, because my prepared speech, documented with records, will answer a great many of the questions raised.

The Senate, and the entire world, for that matter, has heard a great deal about figures issued by the Southern Regional Council, Inc., dealing with the issues of how many Negroes in the South, including my native State of South Carolina, are alleged to have registered to vote or have been deprived of this right. These figures, too, were accompanied in many instances, as in the Washington Post of yesterday, with comments about how Negroes in the Southern States are coerced and otherwise prevented from registering and from voting. The extremely biased magazine, Time, in today's issue, has picked up these figures issued by the council for further propaganda.

Tables issued by the Southern Regional Council have been used at great length to allegedly show that Negroes are being deprived of the right to register in order to vote in the South.

These tables were inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 10, 1957. Subsequently, they have been used in support of this bill in public statements and elsewhere—and, I might add, convincingly so to those otherwise uninformed of voting and registering conditions in the South.

However, Mr. President, I believe there are several points regarding the Southern Regional Council, its members, and officials, which have not been brought to light fully, and certainly there are some very important facts regarding their method of arriving at the figures they published, that should be fully aired.

I charge, Mr. President, that the figures used by the Southern Regional Council to attempt to show that Negro registration in the South is exceptionally low because Negroes are being deprived of the right to register in order to vote, are highly misleading, in error, and in fact were distorted purposely in order to slander the South.

In the first instance, Mr. President, let us take the figures issued by the Southern Regional Council as regards my own native State of South Carolina, with which I am most familiar.

Southern Regional Council states that in 1950 there were 98,890 Negroes registered, or about 25 percent of the Negro voting age population. The State of South Carolina, until the election law was amended this very spring, had never practiced or required the practice of indicating race or color on registration certificates in South Carolina.

If the Senator from Illinois and other Senators who have been speaking on this subject will kindly get in touch with us after the registration for 1958 has been completed, they can then ascertain the number of colored persons who are registered. But at the present time that information is not included in the registration at all.

Allow me to quote from a telegram from the secretary of state of South Carolina I received yesterday:

> Voting registration in South Carolina is made without reference to race. Any figures given as to the number of colored or white registered is purely an estimate. There is no way insofar as this office knows that an accurate estimate could be given.

Mr. President, if the State does not require indicating on a registration certificate, or the records of those certificates, race, then how in the world can anyone determine how many people who registered were Negroes, or whites, or Indians, or what have you? It is impossible.

The Southern Regional Council stated, in issuing these figures, that they were compiled from official records and from best figures available.

In South Carolina, there were no records to go by at all. What I would now like to know is just what available figures did they use in determining registered Negroes in South Carolina? Did they use figures submitted to it by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People? They claimed they took a field check of the 46 counties in South Carolina. Such a task would be as formidable as a general census-taking in that particular field. If they did, I am sure such a study in the southern States would have taken more than the money with which the Ford Foundation provided the council, even though it received the largest amount ever granted by the foundation.

With this question in mind, I asked the Southern Regional Council for their system used in arriving at these figures. I now quote from the reply, which, in my opinion, is as broad as it is long, and still tells nothing as to the formula:

> As our foreword reprinted in the RECORD at page 7684 states: "The attached material on Negro voter registration was compiled in the summer of 1956 from official records or from the best estimates available from reliable sources in each county." Since official figures are not available in South Carolina, we arranged for county-by-county field survey to gather best estimates. Estimated figures as published were derived from interviews with knowledgeable persons in each county. These estimates indicate total increase of approximately 20,000 over our estimate for 1952; 50,000 over 1947.

Now they claim they arranged for a county-by-county survey in South Carolina.

tional Fund, Inc. (of 822 Perdido Street, New Orleans 12, La.), "was initially an adjunct of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. After the exposure of the Southern Conference for Humen Welfare as a Communist front, it began to wither and was finally dissolved, but the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., continued." The subcommittee found that after 'an objective study,' the 'Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., is operating with substantially the same leadership and purposes as its predecessor organization, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare." (See Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, hearings, Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., 1955, pp. V and VIII.)

For the information of Firing Line readers, the following eight current directors of the council have been affiliated with the aforementioned Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., which was fully exposed in the July 1, 1955, issue of this publication: F. Woods Beckman, Blailsford R. Brazeal, Rufus E. Clement, James M. Dabbs, Charles G. Gomillion, Duncan Hunter, Benjamin E. Mays, and Josephine Wilkins. It may be of interest to recall that the former southern regional director, Aubrey Williams has been VII, and 102; and Southern Conference Educational Fund since 1948. He was named a a member of the Communist Party during the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee's 1954 hearings. (See Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, hearings, Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., 1955, pp. VI, VII, and 102; and Southern Conference Educational Fund, leaflets and letterheads, 1953–56.)

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, the picture of this matter boils down to this. Figures compiled by an organization closely tied or related to a Communist front organization are being used in the United States Senate to attempt to shove this civil rights bill down the throats of the American people.

Mr. President, the record of the Southern Regional Council and its shady affiliates and tie-ins with red activites and fronts should be enough to convince anyone of the unreliability of its figures and of the probable design behind their creation.

These figures and accompanying charges were designed to slander the South, divide the Members of Congress, promote race hatred and generally confuse the picture. No doubt, some of the same people who promoted these figures will be the first knocking at the door of the Attorney General or the President's office for a job on the proposed Commission on Civil Rights if it is ever set up.

This bill, Mr. President, contains the vehicle by which people of the type of the Southern Regional Council and Communist front organizations can get into Government. They cannot get elected on their philosophies and programs, but they worm their way into the halls of Congress through such erroneous, generalized official sounding but shallow figures as the Southern Regional Council's report on registration and voting in the South.

Mr. President, I am ready to yield the floor unless there are some questions.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am very sorry that the Senator from South Carolina, who, in my experience, has always appeared to be fair, has made the statements which he has made, and which I am sure are not founded on fact.

Earlier in the day I introduced a statement, which will be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of today at an earlier point, describing the history and composition of the Southern Regional Council. That statement will show that this council did not spring from the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, but that it sprang from the Committee on Interracial Cooperation.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Does the Senator deny that the same men were on the Southern Conference on Human Welfare?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I simply say that the Southern Regional Council did not spring from the Southern Conference on Human Welfare. It came from the Committee on Interracial Cooperation.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Were not some of the same individuals members of the other body?

Mr. DOUGLAS. There may have been a few, before that other body was taken over by subversive interests.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Does not the Senator find the names of 11 individuals who are members of the Southern Regional Council, which names also appear on the list of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I believe that in every case they got out of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare when un-American groups took that organization over. In its beginning, I think that also was an innocent and decent group.

As I was saying, the Southern Regional Council did not develop from the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, but from the Committee on Interracial Cooperation, started in 1919. This committee included leaders of the churches and church organizations in the South and one of its leading members was the late W. W. Alexander, who was a very fine citizen.

Mr. President, in view of the statements of the Senator from South Carolina, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a direct refutation of the statements which the Senator from South Carolina has placed in the RECORD, together with an editorial from the Atlanta Constitution for February 1, 1957, which clearly differentiates the Southern Regional Council from the other group mentioned.

There being no objection, the statement and editorial were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AN ANALYSIS OF THE ATTACK ON SRC IN THE FIRING LINE OF MAY 15, 1957

The Firing Line is the publication of the American Legion's National Americanism Commission, Post Office Box 1055, Indianapolis, Ind. * * * In the issue of May 15, the Firing Line contains an article on the Southern Regional Council. This article presents in the guise of facts allegations against SRC and various of its past and present board members that range from outright falsehoods to cunning distortions designed to support utterly unfounded conclusions. Following is a point by point analysis; the quoted paragraphs are quoted verbatim from the Firing Line.

"Readers of the April 15, 1957 issue of the Firing Line will recall the Council was identified as a 'Southern Red front by Manning Johnson on March 8, 1957, before the State of Louisiana Legislative Committee on Segregation.' The Firing Line report also revealed testimony which reflected the Council was 'formed by James E. Jackson, a Southern organizer of the Communist Party' and 'is affiliated with the Mississippi Council on Human Relations.' "

The Louisiana State body referred to here was set up to combat desegregation and is headed by State Senator William M. Rainach, who is also the chief leader of the White Citizens Councils in that State. Manning Johnson is a self-styled ex-Communist whose testimony has been repudiated by the United States Department of Justice and the Subversive Activities Control Board. His testimony about SRC is demonstrably false. The founding of SRC by a group of outstanding Southerners is a matter of public record. The incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist Church, Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. Any claim that these men would have permitted the James E. Jackson in question or any other person of communistic persuasion to play any part in the founding of the organization is fantastic. The founding of SRC is a matter of extensive public record, as reported in the press and official documents, all clearly showing that this charge is an outright falsehood.

The statement that SRC "is affiliated with the Mississippi Council on Human Relations" is both inaccurate and irrelevant. The Mississippi Council is a thoroughly respectable body of the citizens of that State, including among its officers the wife of a cotton broker and the Catholic Bishop of Mississippi. It was for a time affiliated with the Southern Regional Council (not vice versa) though it now functions as an independent group.

"Records of the American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the SRC and the Southern Conference For Human Welfare, a defunct Communist-front organization. According to the files of the National Americanism Commission, the following 16 former directors of the SRC have been supporters of this aforementioned subversive organization: Charlotte H. Brown, Louis E. Burnham, George E. Clary, Herbert Davidson, J. M. Ellison, Clark H. Foreman, Guy B. Johnson, David D. Jones, George S. Mitchell, Howard W. Odum, F. D. Patterson, Edwin A. Penick, Homer P. Rainey, Ira DeA. Reid, Forrester B. Washington and Aubrey Williams.

The charge that SRC was related to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare continues to be used by the detractors of this organization although it has long since and repeatedly been refuted. SRC was the official successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by a group of outstanding southern churchmen. SRC came into existence at a time when the southern conference had been operating for six years, and it was attacked by some persons on the grounds that it was a more conservative organization set up in competition with the southern conference. It was never in any way connected with the southern conference.

The spurious technique of connection by association used here was exposed for what it is by the Atlanta Constitution in 1953. At that time, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, the distinguished president of Atlanta University, had announced his candidacy for the Atlanta Board of Education. Prosegregationists

Dear Mr. Fleming:

Our use of the excellent factual material of the Southern Regional Council, secured through the Library of Congress, has led to the usual attacks upon the Council.

I sought to head this off in the Senate by inserting in the Congressional Record yesterday the positive information about the Council's origin. But later in the day, the attack from Firing Line was put in the Record, and I countered with the Council's answer to that attack and an editorial from the Atlanta Constitution of February 1.

I am sending you a copy of the Record at once so that you may have full information about what was said in the Senate yesterday.

It is most regrettable that any currency is given to these irresponsible charges. I have tried to get the true facts about the Council before the Senate as fully as possible. Do let me know if there is further information we should have or issue.

We appreciate the fine work you are doing and the difficulties under which you have to work.

Faithfully yours,

My dear Senator Douglas:

This will acknowledge with keen appreciation your letter of July 27 and the enclosures which you were thoughtful enough to send us.

As I read the Record for Friday, July 26, my admiration for both your skill and your fairness in debate continued to grow.

An organization such as ours comes to expect the kind of attack that was made upon us in the Senate, although I must say we are sorry to see the name of the American Legion used to lend respectability to the charges.

We could ask for nothing better, however, than the able and sympathetic defense which you gave. I know I speak for the Council as a whole when I say that we are warmly grateful.

With every good wish, I am

Dear Mr. Wright:

I was more than pleased to have been able to place the materials about the Southern Regional Council in the Record immediately following the attack on the organization.

I have had some personal experience with unfair attacks and I was determined to have the answers appear with the charges.

Your organization has been of great service throughout this civil rights debate. It is true that you, as a private organization, have provided more information and more facts concerning the voting situation than has the Department of Justice. In fact, it is some reflection on the Department that it was necessary for us to turn to private groups for help, especially when that help demands such a high degree of courage on your part.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
"TOP KNOT"
LINVILLE FALLS, NORTH CAROLINA

June 18, 1953

Dear George:

I have given a good deal of thought to what we should do about One Methodist Voice in view of its more recent issue.

In so far as SRC is concerned I am still of the opinion that we should continue to ignore this publication.

That is also my feeling as to your own personal attitude. I realize, however, that your personal problem is one for solution by you and you may feel that you, individually, should act. I do not think so, but feel that the decision on that point should rest entirely in your hands. I can see, however, that any litigation which you personally may institute would collaterally involve SRC. Hence, if you do contemplate any action--I trust that you do not--I would like to suggest that your course be first submitted to the executive committee in order that you may have the benefit of its thinking.

Now other matters:

1. Does the postponement of the Supreme Court's decision in the segregation cases give us a desirable opportunity for a fresh approach to the Ford people? The point would be made in such approach that the South is given an additional four months of grace within which to prepare to handle the gravest situation with which it has been confronted in many decades. During this interim there should be an organized movement to prepare public opinion for the change which must inevitably follow the decision. We are the one body equipped--with everything except funds--to undertake that task.

2. Even without additional funds from the Ford people should we not, during the next four months, use all of the time and energy we have in preparing the mind of the South for the impending changes?

We might:

a. Convert New South into a bi-monthly containing largely re-prints of editorials and other articles which are sanely written and which urge the South to abide faithfully by what the court shall order. Myidea would be that we should like to put before the editors, to influence their own policy, expressions such as those recently appearing in the Atlanta Journal and Asheville Citizen. It may be that the Field people would make us an additional grant to cover this extra expense.

b. Induce certain radio and TV stations to give us ten or fifteen minutes to be utilized by southerners whom we would induce to speak in favor of gracious acceptance of the court's decision. The preachers are showing a little more independence and some of them might appear for us.

c. Suggest to our state divisions that each of them hold a meeting during the summer at which the same idea of acceptance would be stressed and, if possible, a statement adopted and issued.

My point is that it will be much easier to have harmonious meetings in advance of the decision than after the fat is in the fire.

d. Speed up as rapidly as possible the work of our representatives who are compiling information on present discrepances in public education and the cost of equalization. This information might be released to the press piecemeal--state by state or county by county--so that the public could now be forming some intelligent opinion of the actual situation which will be presented when the decision comes down. The material might be used in the form of press releases to the papers of the particular areas covered by the report. I have no doubt that a great many of our figures will be challenged, but it will be worth something to get the problem discussed, even if it there is no unanimity on the data.

3. Reverting to OMV, I am entirely willing to write Bishop Moore along the general line that I was interested in knowing if the church had taken or planned to take any official action on Brother Craft. I might remind him that when I was last in Atlanta the impression was created on my mind by him and Mr. Mackey that something would be done by way of officially advising Methodists that the allegations of Mr. Craft were completely unsanctioned by the church.

If you think that such a letter would accomplish anything, I would be glad to have you write it and send it up for my signature. I think that it is well for you to do this since I might inadvertantly commit a diplomatic breach.

It was good to see you and Alice the other night. We do hope that you will both come back sometime during the summer. The supply of country ham here is practically unlimited.

Yours sincerely,

M. A. Wright

Mr. Leonard Haas

Dear Mr. Haas:

In re: Complaint of George S. Mitchell vs. Blake Craft and
"One Methodist Voice"

I am addressing this letter to you, due to the fact that Mr. Abram stated to me on the occasion of my first conversation with him about this matter that he was pinch hitting for you in your absence. I, therefore, assume that you are interested in following up on it.

Mr. Abram had suggested the possibility of a prosecution of Blake Craft under Section 1718, of Title 18, U.S.C.A., on the theory that since the publication was mailed without any outside cover the front page containing the objectionable matter became the outside cover and, therefore, brought it within the provisions of this statute.

We find out, however, on research by Mr. H. A. Stephens, of this office, that the Courts have considered this matter and construed the statute against your interpretation. Please see United States vs. Higgins, 194 Fed. 539, in which a situation very much on all fours with the present case was considered. The Court there held that the exposed portion of a newspaper mailed without any outside cover did not come within the meaning of the statute.

Mr. Stephens has run this case through Shepards and, insofar as he can find, the matter has never been held otherwise since the date of the Higgins decision, nor has it ever been considered by the Supreme Court of the United States. It is, therefore, possible that the Department of Justice might approve our instituting action in order to further litigate this point. I also notice that in the Higgins decision no mention is made of the fact that the statute covers objectionable statements contained on a postcard. It is possible that an analogy to the postcard situation might strengthen out contention in the present matter.

However, I notice by the daily papers that the Annual Conference of the Methodists of Georgia took strong action in condemning the Reverend Craft and his publication, and it may be that Mr. Mitchell will feel that he has been sufficiently vindicated in the minds of the people to whom Reverend Crafts publication has been addressed. He also has available to him his rights under State law to bring an action for damages for libel and otherwise to protect himself against this situation. Under these circumstances he might prefer not to press any kind of Federal criminal action at this time. I would appreciate your comments on this point.

If it seems desirable, I will write the Department in Washington for an expression of their views on the advisability of bringing any action in the face of the Higgins decision.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Reference is made to that portion of your letter of June 25, which you addressed to the Solicitor for the Department, concerning the circulation of the publication mentioned by you.

The law, Sec. 14,20 Stat. 359, as amended; 39 United States Code 226, contained in section 34.20, Postal Laws and Regulations, which is the general law governing the second-class mailing privilege, requires among other things, that a publication to be entitled to second-class entry thereunder and to retain such entry must have a "legitimate list of subscribers" and must not be "designed primarily * * * for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates." The circulation of the publication should be mainly to persons who have themselves subscribed for it and paid or agreed to pay therefor at a rate not less than 50 percent of the regular advertised annual subscription price.

The records in the case indicate that at the time admission of the publication as second-class matter was authorized, its circulation conformed to the requirements prescribed for second-class matter.

My dear Senator Jenner:

The Southern Regional Council has published since January, 1946 a small monthly magazine with the title New South. Associated Press despatches on September 20th and thereabouts wrote your Subcommittee as releasing testimony by one Paul Crouch, touching upon publication on behalf of the Communist Party of a sheet with the same title. The release is unclear as to the period in which this Communist publication was issued.

Naturally, as our magazine has this title, we are open to some public confusion on the matter. I would be grateful for your assistance in sending me so much of the transcript or summary of the Crouch testimony as may be publicly available, in order that we may pin down the complete absence of any connection between the two publications.

Our warm thanks for the time and research that went into your reply of July 3 to the Southern Regional Council's inquiry as to possible Federal prosecution of the Rev. Our Executive Committee has considered the matter, and I am instructed to write you that the Council does not at this time wish to push the possible case. We are impressed by the value of the action of the North Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church in its condemnation of Mr. Craft and his publication, and incline to the view that action will adequately steer public opinion.

Dear George:

I mailed this morning the interesting copy of The Statesman. Of course, we were all looking for Talmadge to react as he did to the Ford grant. I think that we should have searched our hearts to find what was wrong with us if the good governor had not loosed his blast.

I think that there is nothing more for us to do about this than has been done beyond fortifying ourselves against future attacks by him and others similarly disposed.

My impression is that the material developed when the Methodist minister was dropping his poison into the mails constitutes about what we would need in the future. While I do not have that material at hand, my recollection is that it consisted in part of:

a. Names of all of our officers and directors from organization date, with a brief who's who of each one.

b. List of names of at least some prominent people who were associated with all of the other organizations mentioned, particularly the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

c. Your own full who's who with all of the embellishments.

d. Copies of letters written by people of stature to the Ford Foundation.

e. Editorials, news articles and ~~the~~ letters certifying to our good morals.

If it would not disrupt the office too much, it seems to me that it would be wise now to collect all of this material and bring it down to date against the time when we will properly need it.

One other point:

Would it be well to issue a form letter to all of the members of our board asking for their advice and suggestions as to enterprises which should properly be undertaken by the central office and the state divisions? There is but little contact between the staff and the board. We do not wish any member of the board to acquire the conviction that on the important question of policy or program he is not being properly consulted.

Best regards.

Here is what we did up the last time. I agree with your excellent suggestion that we should collect still more answering material, and we will get busy. The Williamsburg business is on us for the rest of this week, but starting Monday, will do.

Also correct that we should write the Board about new program. Suppose I write them of what we are proposing, and ask their further suggestions or changes?

CONVENTION RESOLUTION NUMBER 7

1. On May 17, 1954, the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Oliver Brown versus Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas, held that the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the States from maintaining racially segregated public schools, even though the physical facilities and other tangible factors, such as curricula and qualifications and salaries of teachers, may be equal.

2. By this decision said Federal Supreme Court overturned principles long established in law, which had been announced and applied in 5 decisions of the Federal Supreme Court, 13 decisions of other Federal Courts, and 59 decisions of the highest courts of States and Territories.

3. By this decision, said Court also assumed legislative power and authority, and acted in violation of the express provisions of the Tenth Article of Amendment of the United States Constitution providing that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States ~~reserved to the States~~ respectively, or to the people,

4. In order to arrive at said decision, said Federal Supreme Court held, as a matter of fact, that colored children could not learn and study as well in their own schools, as they could learn and study in mixed schools. This conclusion, based as it was upon the opinions of certain psychologists whose writings were deliberately selected by the members of said Court, is contrary to the facts as known to the people of this State, and an affront to the intelligence of all reasonable men and women.

5. By said decision, the present members of said Court have undertaken to substitute their private and personal views for the law of the land, and to elevate their own eccentric notions to the high plane of constitutional law.

6. This decision of said Court was politically inspired and promulgated, and in our judgement those who rendered it have thereby demonstrated their lack of fitness for judicial office.

7. This decision was pronounced at the urging and prompting of Herbert Brownell, Attorney-General of the United States, appointed to that important office by President Eisenhower, and the text of the opinion bears the name of the California politician, Chief Justice Earl Warren, who was appointed to said Court by President Eisenhower, upon the recommendation of said Brownell, with instructions, as the members of this Convention do believe, to make the rule of decision subsequently announced by him in said case.

8. Said Supreme Court of the United States is not possessed of power or authority, under the Constitution of the United States, to construe the Constitution of the United States; and the sole power and authority of said Court to construe said Constitution arises from the power given it to decide those classes of cases which the Judiciary Act of Congress permits said Court to entertain and determine.

9. The purpose of said decision is not to afford equal educational opportunities, but to destroy the social order now existing in this State, the continuation of which is desired by her people, and necessary for their continued happiness, concord, prosperity and mutual respect and regard.

10. After the rendition of said decision, the Southern Regional Council which has offices in this State, acclaimed the same and announced its purpose and intention of undertaking agitation to implement and effectuate the purposes thereof.

11. After said decision, those in charge of the leadership of the Georgia Education Association carried a delegation of Georgia teachers to the Convention of the National Education Association, and at said Convention of the National Education Association a resolution was adopted in favor of the mixing of the races in the public schools, for which resolution said delegation of the Georgia Education Association voted, said delegation later stating that it cast said vote under misapprehension.

NEW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Democratic Party of the State of Georgia in convention duly assembled in the City of Macon on this September 30, 1954, as follows:

First: We condemn the Supreme Court of the United States for the decision which it rendered against the separate public schools. We denounce said decision as a gross and flagrant abuse and perversion of power and authority, and we denounce the personnel of said Court for the rendition of this political opinion.

Second: We condemn President Eisenhower for his appointment to said Court of Chief Justice Warren, for his having caused said Brownell, as Attorney General of the United States, to urge the Court to make said decision, and for having set in motion the forces which led thereto.

Third: Said Southern Regional Council is condemned for its activity in support of said decision. In the judgment of this Convention the workings of said Southern Regional Council are a menace to the institutions of this State, and the people of Georgia, by the force of their opinions, should drive this organization from out midst.

Fourth: We deplore the conduct of those of the present leadership of the Georgia Education Association who have caused the great teaching profession of this State to be credited in the National press with acts and opinions contrary to the actual views of Georgia teachers, and out of harmony with the ideals of Georgians.

Fifth: We call upon our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States to introduce in that body appropriate Amendments to the Federal Judiciary Act, so that the Federal Courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States, may be stripped of all power and authority to decide cases against the public schools of Georgia or any other State of the Nation.

Sixth: It is the sense of the members of this Convention that said usurped decision of the Federal Supreme Court should not be accepted in this State, but that it should be resisted.

Seventh: We applaud the position of our distinguished leader, Governor Nominate Marvin Griffin, with reference to said decision, as stated by him in the recent campaign before the people, in that he pledges that at all hazards separate schools will be maintained in Georgia and the Georgia way of life preserved. We in turn pledge him our support in this regard and stand ready to do whatever is necessary to this end.

Eighth: It shall be the duty of the nominees of this Convention said decision to the contrary notwithstanding, to uphold, maintain and defend the provisions of the Constitution of this State that there shall be separate schools for the white and colored races. Upon election to their respective offices, it shall be their duty to maintain this law with all the resources of the State and every power at their disposal, which duty each nominee, by acceptance of his nomination, pledged himself to perform.

The Honorable Eugene Cook

Dear Mr. Cook

We were somewhat concerned by a news broadcast on Monday to the effect that you might be considering an investigation of the Southern Regional Council, upon some theory of its alleged subversive nature.

We are gratified to observe in today's Constitution that you had been incorrectly quoted, and did not contemplate such an investigation any more than you contemplated it against the American Legion or the Baptist Church.

We do not wish to seem to be unduly proud of our personnel. However, it is our conviction that the men and women who compose the organization, its Board of Directors, and its staff, will compare favorably with any group in the South. Each of them has a reputation which may be damaged by carelessly initiated investigations or rumors of investigations. It is encouraging to note that you are sensitive to the value of a good name and will not impair that value unless there is substantial reason for you to do so.

Your disclaimer of any present purpose to take action which would be detrimental to many of the South's foremost citizens, in our opinion, reflects a proper conception of the duties of your position.

Editor, ...
Dear Sir,

Roy Harris' political weekly, publlished in Augusta, gave most of its issue of June 28 to what he calls an exposure of the Southern Regional Council. His main charge was that the Council was "the successor" to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This is the kind of baseless attack which Georgians have come to expect from Mr. Harris, and the article is full of gross misstatements, cunning omissions, and deceitful innuendo.

The Southern Regional Council was chartered in 1944, after a series of meetings of prominent Southern people, and was and is an independent body, successor only to the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation, begun in the South in 1919 and continued until the Council took over its work.

The Southern Regional Council is an organization combining people from the ministry, church lay leadership, education, business and labor. It has been reasonable, accurate, non-inflammatory, educational, and non-political. It has worked to get an even break for all the people of the South, regardless of race, in matters of health, education, housing, employment, and farming. It can point to some achievements, in lessening violence and tension, in getting better and fairer law enforcement, better public services, and a growing understanding of the dignity of all human beings. It is widely held to be the South's most useful body in race relations.

The Council and all of its officers are opposed to Communism and all that Communism stands for. Mr. Harris does his State and the South a disservice in equating the Council's careful, thoughtful approach with Communism. Nothing pleases Communists more than to have people's own, native, intelligent efforts to solve problems confused with the Communist method of wrecking and revolution.

Georgia has a statute which makes it a crime to engage in subversive activity. If Mr. Harris believes his own charges let him prosecute the Southern Regional Council under the law. The Council's sound Americanism can stand any honest investigation.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Mr. Marion A. Wright
"Top Knot"
Linville Falls,
North Carolina

Dear Marion:

You asked about Blake Craft. The ministerial court convicted him of "Unchristian tempers, words and actions" and "imprudent or unministerial conduct." He was acquitted on charges of "disobedience to the order and discipline of the Church." He was suspended from the ministry until the beginning of the 1955 meeting of the North Georgia annual Conference next June. That means his authority to preach, perform marriages, burials, etc., is in suspense. He has given notice that he will appeal the decision before the Southeastern Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church.

Except for one mention of SRC in a round-up story a day or two later in one of the newspapers, we have not been brought publicly into the matter of the trial of Mr. Craft.

Mr. Roy Harris again, in his issue of June 12, 1954, spouts in his red ink, "Ford Foundation Particular Affinity Toward Financing Left-Wingers Shown." He repeated in a front page column a summary of his earlier "findings" against the Southern Regional Council, and in another column said that SRC was using the big grant to force mixing of the races in the schools.

He reprinted, as a cut, a letter which Ralph McGill, unknown to us had written Roy Harris June 29, 1954, as follows:

Mr. Roy Harris
Attorney at law
Augusta, Georgia

June 29, 1954

Dear Roy:

I received in the mail today a copy of the Courier with the article concerning the Southern Regional Council. I do not at all agree with the conclusions reached in the article, since not only was Bishop Arthur Moore among the incorporators, but leading men in every Southern state are, or have been, members of it. Certainly it contains nothing subversive.

There were at least twenty serious errors of fact in the article. What I chiefly want to say to you, and to make a metter of record, is:

There was a direct quotation from me saying that I had joined the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, but had left it when I saw the direction it was taking. This is completely false. I never at any time was a member of this organization nor did I ever attend any of its meetings.

For a number of years it was a respected organization, but later became infiltrated with Communists, and it is a matter of record that I and the Atlanta Constitution helped drive it out of existence.

I simply want to call your attention to the fact that this direct quote was a deliberate falsehood without any substance of fact whatever.

Sincerely,

Ralph McGill

Roy Harris went on to say that McGill had lied and Harris' item to prove that was a reprint of an earlier column Ralph McGill's (characteristically, date not given) in which after describing the SCHW and its fall from grace , if any, McGill had said that a small Communist Southern headquarters at Birmingham did participate openly in the first SCHW meeting at Birmingham. When this happened, he knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that"the SCHW was finished as it began." Now Mr. Harris says, in some triumph, Mr. McGill had lied and if he was not in it how could he get out. Harris went on to appeal to McGill, in the issue of July 12, to do with the Southern Regional Council, as Harris assumed McGill did with the SCHW, and report to the FBI similar exposition of SRC. Or, if not the FBI, he suggests the House Unamerican Activities Committee. etc., etc.

I have only the one copy of this July 12th issue, and don't know that I can lay hands on another, though I am trying hard to find one to send up to the Fund for the Republic.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Statement by Mr. Seegrist of WEAS
August 4, 1954

(taken over telephone)

Last Wednesday we called Dr. Mitchell at his office at 63 Auburn Avenue and advised him that we had reported the highlights of the Roy Harris charges regarding the Southern Regional Council. We advised Dr. Mitchell further that the purpose of our call was to give him, in behalf of himself and the Southern Regional Council, equal opportunity to reply to the Harris charges. We explained to Dr. Mitchell that we felt we should be remiss in our purpose and obligations as an American newsman should we not afford him and the Council such an opportunity on this broadcast. For, as we told Dr. Mitchell, we thought the charges severe. We offered Dr. Mitchell the opportunity to come to our studios at any day at any time from that moment until today (Monday, August 9) to make an advance tape recording of any answer which he might see fit to make.

Dr. Mitchell replied that, and we quote, "The charges are poppycock," and refused further comment.

RECEIVED

Southern Regional Council

Editor of the Greenville News
Greenville
South Carolina

Dear Sir:

This letter is not for publication but is for your own information.

On November 10, 1954 there appeared on your editorial page a letter from Stanley F. Morse of Charleston attacking the Southern Regional Council. The letter picks up its material from the Augusta (Ga). Courier and repeats the Courier's insinuations of disloyalty or subversion.

Incidentally these insinuations were made many weeks ago and have been uniformly ignored by the reputable Georgia press. That press is familiar with the Courier's background and reliability. It is also informed about the Southern Regional Council which has its headquarters in Atlanta. The Georgia press, as the enlightened press generally, likewise knows that any group concerned with a larger measure of justice for the Negro population and with the application of Christian principles to an ancient problem runs always the grave risk of being called Communistic.

On the same page on which the letter appeared you had an excellent editorial on the late Dr. Howard Odum. You are perhaps not aware of the fact that Dr. Odum was the first president of the Southern Regional Council and, more than any other individual, may be considered as its author—a fact commented upon in many press notices about Dr. Odum's death. He is one of the 38 officials whom the Courier brands as having records of association with communist-front groups. The remaining 37, while perhaps not so eminent as Dr. Odum embrace a bishop of the Methodist Church, teachers, lawyers, editors (including Ralph McGill and Hodding Carter) and others who would be well known to you as loyal and intelligent American citizens.

The juxtaposition of the Morse letter and your editorial about Dr. Odum seems to be a bit incongruous. We believe that the editorial represents the real views of The News.

As for New South, our magazine is not related by blood, marriage, identity, purpose, personnel or otherwise to any other magazine. If there should ever have been a magazine by that name launched by one Henry Winston and associates (as to which I have no information), it has never had the slightest relationship or connection with our own publication--a fact which Mr. Morse could easily have learned. The name, of course, derives from the title of Henry W. Grady's famous Boston speech.

There are several Greenvilles scattered throughout the country. For all I know, there may have been many papers titled Greenville News. One of them may have been a Communist organ. I should hesitate to print a charge, based upon the mere use of a name, that your paper was communistic when the truth could be so easily ascertained.

The insinuation in Mr. Morse's letter is completely false and libelous.

The Council has heretofore followed the policy of ignoring the fulminations of the Augusta Courier, Mr. Morse and others of their ilk. We shall probably continue that course, relying upon the reputable press, such as the Greenville News, to protect us from such malicious libels. We are therefore now acquainting you with the facts in order that you may be on guard if communications similar to the one from Mr. Morse should come to you for publication.

Judge Richard Foster of your city is president of the South Carolina division of the Southern Regional Council. In addition to being some evidence of the devotion of that group to American principles, his presence in Greenville gives you the opportunity to secure personally any information which you would like to have in regard to the Council.

Yours very truly,

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Dear Mr. Tindall:

That was certainly mighty kind of you to send the piece from The Greenville News of November 10.

You are quite right in your appraisal of Stanley Morse. I think that informed South Carolinians have his number. The paper called the Augusta Courier which he quotes as though it was a reputable sheet, is actually a political organ of a leading politician in Georgia, one Roy Harris. It gave many issues early this past Summer to piling up a record that our Council was red-related. All poppycock. And as the paper has no reputation we do not dignify it with reply. But we have tried to stamp on the lies when they appear in reputable organs. I arranged for the President of our Council, Marion Wright, to visit the Editor of the Greenville Piedmont about November 24th and point out to him that Morse's letter was silly.

Harris had also picked up the visible circumstance of some Communist sheet published years ago having the name New South. When the Council picked that name for its publication, it had never heard of the Communist sheet, and the two things have no connection organically, historically, or otherwise. I doubt if the Communist Party one showed for more t an three issues. In any case, it is down in the minutes of the Council that the Executive Committee considered twenty-odd names as possibles, and finally settled on this one -- reminiscent of Henry Grady.

The Louisiana Council on Human Relations, which is in part an outgrowth of our movement in that state, now has its employed secretary, Milton Vigo at 303 Board of Trade Annex Building in New Orleans. I hope you and he will be in touch and doing things together.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

On a recent trip to South Carolina to attend the meeting of the Southern Historical Association I picked up the enclosed item from my hometown paper, the Greenville News. You have probably seen it by now, but I am sending it along in case you have not.

I have noticed screwball letters from Stanley F. Morse in a great many other papers. He usually gives his address as Wadmalaw Island. I suppose the most generous assumption would be that he has confused the SRC with the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the New South with some Communist propaganda sheet of the same name.

I hope this does not come too late to be of any use to you.

I thought it particularly ironic that the page that carried the Morse letter also had the editorial eulogy of Dr. Odum.

Dear Dr. Pepper:

Thank you for writing me August 17th.

We have had an occasional annoyance in the past from whatever it is that calls itself the Grass Roots League, Inc., at Charleston, South Carolina.

We think this is the creature of a man named Stanley F. Morse of that city. So far as the proposed publication of the Grass Roots League goes, its principle accusation against us is that "The Southern Regional Council was exposed last year as an offshoot of the Communist defunct front Southern Conference for Human Welfare by the Augusta Courier." This is cunning language contrived to leave the impression that the Augusta Courier is a reputable newspaper. There is a well known newspaper called the Augusta Chronicle which is published daily. The Augusta Courier is a weekly sheet owned by a Georgia political figure named Roy Harris. It is in the bad tradition of free-booting weekly newspapers in Georgia: red letter headlines; confederate flag at the masthead. It constantly foams at the mouth in opposition to the established constitutional rights of Negro persons and in opposition to most worthy causes.

The facts are that the Southern Regional Council was established in 1944 by a group of people, little if at all related to those who had embarked in 1938 on the enterprise of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The mere founding of this new organization, while the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was still vigorously alive, indicates a quite different point of view among those who set up SRC. As a matter of fact, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare had its own proper successor in a would-be-tax-exempt wing of itself called the Southern Conference Educational Fund, which is still in existence. It is fraudulent to claim that the SRC is an offshoot of the SCHW. At the time of the Augusta

Courier's original charges of this nature, the reputable press ignored it, with one or two exceptions, and in those instances the papers called us for our comments and printed our comments along with the Augusta Courier's charges.

It is a clear misstatement to say that I was vice-chairman of the SCHW in 1938. I do think I held some office in the Committee for North Carolina at about that time, and the Committee for North Carolina was an affiliate of SCHW. Quite true that I am against the use of injunctions in labor disputes. Quite true that I allowed my name to be used as a sponsor for the first meeting of the Civil Rights Congress, supposing that it would be an honest and responsible movement. But I went to none of its meetings, paid no dues, never joined it, and when next they wrote and asked me to be a sponsor again, indicated that I would not be associated with them. I was from 1944-47 a member of the Board of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. And I have been for a good many years a member of the Executive Committee of the Highlander Folk School. Highlander would vigorously resist the charge that it knows or follows the Communist Party Line.

I assume that the charges of the Grass Roots League against other persons are at least equally baseless or distorted.

The thing to have in mind is that the Grass Roots League and its companion organizations are engaged in a genuine effort to subvert lawful government in the United States, and in pursuit of that aim resort to charges of subversion against those who propose compliance!

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Criticisms of SRC

FILE COPY

Any charges that the Southern Regional Council has Communist connections or is influenced by Communist ideas are poppycock. The Southern Regional Council is made up of reasonable, tolerant, and forward-looking citizens who wish to see the states in the South do a sober, responsible job of accommodating themselves to the changes in the world around us. As to investigations, they are perfectly welcome. We have nothing to hide. All that will result will be red faces for those who set on the investigators.

The Southern Regional Council is made up of some eighty people, who are members of its Board of Directors. Some of them are white and some are Negro. All of them are distinguished for their active and thoughtful careers within the South. What a tragedy for a state attorney general, sworn to uphold the law, to attack one of the few efforts which proceeds within the South to deal truthfully and in mutual respect with the problems which the region confronts! Watch the birdie. Who is proposing conduct subversive of the Constitution and courts of our land?

MEMORANDUM

TO: HCF

FROM: GSM

There was talk at the Board meeting yesterday afternoon about getting around to our state offices something that they called directives on how to counter the attacks on SRC.

eab/

Hon. Brooks Hays,
Member of Congress,
U. S. Capitol,
Washington, D. C.

December 14th, 1955.

Dear Brooks,

The absurd man Roy Harris, who publishes a weekly sheet called the Augusta Courier, devotes the main column of his issue of December 12th,'55 to an open letter to members of the Georgia delegation in the Congress. It is a diatribe against the Fund for the Republic, and an appeal for sharply limiting what foundations may do, and for putting ordinary taxes on their money. Generally in the spirit of the Reece Committee, to which he refers.

The references to SRC are as follows:

"The Augusta Courier has proved beyond any doubt that the Ford Foundation and its subsidiaries have contributed three hundred and ninety thousand dollars to the Southern Regional Council to fight segregation in Georgia".

"Not only have we proved this beyond any doubt, but our charges have never even been denied".

"In addition, we have proved that the Director of the Southern Regional Council is an ex-official of the communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare, that twenty-four members of the Board of Directors of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare are now Directors of the Southern Regional Council and that at least thirty-eight officers, members of the Executive Committee or members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with various organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General of the United States of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities".

Bilge, but sent to members of Congress it achieves dignity.

Hon. Brooks Hays,
U.S. Capitol,
Washington, D. C.

December 14th, 1955.

Items: No difficulty about "proving" that the Fund for the Republic gave us $390,000. We put out a press release on the grant April 1st., 1954 of $240,000; and a press release on the grant October 1st. of $150,000. "To fight segregation in Georgia", our 1951 statement of policy and purposes, enclosed, said that the South of the future was one in which segregation would be recognised as a cruel and needless burden on the human spirit, and would no longer be imposed; and we said we were working to that end. And we and our affiliated Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation support the decision of the Supreme Court.

The Director of the SRC is GSM. Quite true that GSM was a member of the Board of the SCHW, from about 1944 into 1947, I do not take it as established that the SCHW was a Communist front. The Attorney-General of the U. S. has not so listed it, so far as I have heard. Doubtless true that the Un-American Activities Committee has charged it with being a bunch of bad eggs; all I know is that there were plenty of good guys on it, and that as long as I was with it I worked to keep it straight.

"Twenty-four members of the Board of Directors of SCHW are now Directors of the Southern Regional Council". This is "achieved" by making use of the list of all persons who had ever served on our Board, which list was duly supplied to the Cox Committee on its request. I can count on our present Board of Directors of SRC maybe 9 or 10 who were identified with any prominence with the SCHW.

"Thirty-eight officers, members of the Executive Committee or members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with various organizations ..."

Same screwball business of taking the list of the whole 109 people who at the time of the Cox Committee had ever served on our Board. I daresay most of those thus charged with disloyal associations would answer with proof that their associations, if existent, were not disloyal.

The truth is that this sort of guff is raked together by professional hate-mongers, and given currency by Mr. Harris in his unhallowed sheet. Anybody sensible knows it is lies, trotted out in pursuit of subversion of the Constitution and Courts of the United States. But I wanted to make sure that at least one member of Congress had the answers. Harris' paper has been printing this sort of thing, in detailed mis-charges, for months. I could answer it with a showing of ten or a dozen flat lies; but never mind for now.

Sincerely yours,

(Dr. George S. Mitchell,
Executive Director.)

Here is a stab at cataloging Roy Harris' lies about SRC. I dare say it would be possible, by tediously plowing through more issues, to turn up some further nonsensical items. Dear Mr. Waring:

We do not feel called upon to speak in derogation of any other organization. But we think that the record should be set straight as to the origin of the Southern Regional Council; in view of a recent letter in the News and Courier from Mr. James E. Godkin from Beaufort.

Mr. Godkin charged that the Southern Regional Council is the successor of an organization called the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The Southern Regional Council was chartered early in 1944 and is the direct outgrowth of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, which was founded in 1919. The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was organized in 1938 and survived until about 1949. One can readily see that the Council was in existence about five years prior to the disbandment of the SCHW; and therefore, the Council could not possibly be the successor of the SCHW as Mr. Godkin charges.

Clerics Predict Racial Problem Will Be Solved

TUSCALOOSA — The Ala. Council on Human Relations heard predictions that a solution to the South's racial problem would be realized through "patience and discipline".

Approximately 400 members of the council heard this prediction from two speakers, one white and the other Negro.

They were Dr. Dan C. Whitsett, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Sylacauga, Ala., and the Rev. Raymond F. Harvey, pastor of the Greenwood Baptist Church for Negroes at Tuskegee.

Dr. Duncan Hunter, pastor of the First Methodist Church Alexander City, was re-elected chairman of the council, which met at Stillman College, a Presbyterian school for Negroes.

Dr. C. G. Vomillion, dean of students at Tuskegee Institute, was reelected vice chairman William Irby, Sylacauga, was named secretary, and J. E. Brooks, Alabama State College Montgomery, was reelected treasurer.

The council originally was called the Alabama Inter-Racial Commission, founded in the early 1920's.

WE QUOTE:

Mr. J. C.

Wouldn't you know that the K. K. K. would get out its literature at the most inopportune time. This morning, not long after coming into the Chamber office, an industrial prospect walked in, and we began talking about the excellent opportunities and facilities which Alexander City offers his firm. After talking for some length, he stated that all these things seemed to be true, but that the K. K. K. literature which he found left on his windshield wiper this morning left a bad taste in his mouth, and a bad impression about the community. He stated that attitudes of a community were important to his firm and that when they heard about the incident, he was not too sure about their reaction as to their wishing to continue to consider Alexander City as a possible location.

I tried to explain that such material must have come from outside Alexander City. Unfortunately, I am afraid the damage has been done, and that we can forget this particular person's firm as a potential industrial prospect.

Lewis Lawrence, Mgr.,
Chamber of Commerce, Inc.

Statement concerning SRC which appeared in Research Bulletin No. 2, issued by the Grass Roots League, Inc., Box551, Charleston, S. C.

"The Southern Regional Council of Atlanta is conducting racial integration propaganda among church and other groups, and recently has received a $240,000 grant from the "Fund of the Republic" (Ford Foundation) for "educational purposes" in 12 Southern states. The Southern Regional Council in 1951 received $2,500 from the Sidney Hillman Foundation (C.I.O.) for improvement of race relations and social justice in the South* (N. Y. World-Telegram, March 31, 1951). Communist affiliations of members of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council are disclosed by a series of articles in the AUGUSTA (Georgia) COURIER beginning with its issue of August 16, 1954, based on reports and records of the House-Un-American Activities Committee and the U. S. Attorney General, stating: "At least 38 of SRC's officials and members of its board of directors have association with groups and activities which have been branded as Communist-fronts by responsible federal officials or congressional committees...That Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of SRC, was also a top official in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and his name has been linked to other 'red' fronts, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities." The Red records of many of these SRC officials are being published currently. The official monthly publication of the SRC is called NEW SOUTH. Is it the successor or continuation of the Communist Party organ, NEW SOUTH, launched August, 1938, with negro Communists Henry Winston and Benjamin Davis among its editors? Also the Southern Conference Educational fund, (whose address is 822 Perdido St., New Orleans), under investigation by the Senate Internal Security Sub-committee as a poosible Communist-front, is headed by James A. Dombrowski, formerly secretary of the Communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare, at 808 Perdido St., New Orleans. In addition, the House Un-American Activities Committee lists as subversive some 87 Communist and Socialist organizations which have been active in the pro-negro campaign.

One (can) hardly tell from members of various Southern states that there has been no deprivation of the right to vote because of a man's color. I like to believe what my colleagues tell me, and I might say that at first blush I do believe them, but there are many contradictions of what these gentlemen state. For example, there is a report by the research office of the Southern Regional Council received from the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress which clearly indicates deliberate attempts to exclude Negroes from voting and those exclusions are very serious.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was designated as a Red front, and the American Legion publication, the Firing Line, of May 15, 1957, gave this list of former directors of the Southern Regional Conference who were connected with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare: Charlotte H. Brown, George E. Clary, J. M. Ellison, Guy B. Johnson, Louis E. Burnham, Herbert Davidson, Clark H. Foreman, David D. Jones, George S. Mitchell, F. D. Patterson, Homer P. Rainey, Forrester B. Washington, Howard W. Odum, Edwin A. Penick, Ira DeA. Reid, and Aubrey Williams.

Any organization that has such a long string of directors who have a long record of connection with subversive and front organizations in the House Committee on Un-American Activities, I say is not a respectable source of information for us to use when we are dealing with the bill before us.

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD - HOUSE

MR. CELLER: (8073)

One (can) hardly tell from members of various Southern states that there has been no deprivation of the right to vote because of a man's color. I like to believe what my colleagues tell me, and I might say that at first blush I do believe them, but there are many contradictions of what these gentlemen state. For example, there is a report by the research office of the Southern Regional Council received from the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress which clearly indicates deliberate attempts to exclude Negroes from voting and those exclusions are very serious.

Now to get down to this amendment the gentlement from New York (Mr. Celler) gave as an authority for some statement he made on the floor here a few minutes ago the Southern Regional Council, Inc. I want to tell you something about the Southern Regional Council. It started off as that organization which was designated as a Communist-front organization by the Attorney General, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

MR. DAVIS

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was designated as a Red front, and the American Legion publication, the Firing Line, of May 15, 1957, gave this list of former directors of the Southern Regional Conference who were connected with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare:

Charlotte H. Brown	Louis E. Burnham
George E. Clary	Herbert Davidson
J. M. Ellison	Clark H. Foreman
Guy B. Johnson	David D. Jones

For surpassing all human philosophies and ideologies, is an imperishable Reality: the Love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Leader and People (in unison): Being thus rooted and grounded in his love we bow our knees before the Father, from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named, that he may grant us the power to comprehend what is the breadth and length and height and depth of the love of Christ, that we may be filled with all the fullness of God.

Leader: Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall famine?

People: Lord, we thank thee for our daily bread. Thou hast taught us to take it no longer simply for granted by having made us taste physical hunger. Glory to thee that at the same time thou hast also evoked the hunger and the thirst of our soul for thy eternal Word.

Voice: I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall not thirst.

Leader: Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall nakedness?

People: Lord, we have lost many things. All that we called "life" before has fallen from us like an old cloak. We find ourselves shivering and naked in a changed world. Yet, O Lord, thy mercy has turned our loss into gain by stripping our life of flimsiness and cheap decoration as well, so that the X-rays of the Truth should freely penetrate us.

Voice: My word is living and active as it discerns the thoughts and intentions of your heart. And before me no creature is hidden but all are open and laid bare to my eyes.

Hon. James C. Davis
House of Representatives
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Davis:

In this morning's Atlanta Constitution, the following paragraphs appear:

> The Stone Mountain congressman attacked statistics on Negro voting in the South as prepared by the Southern Regional Council and quoted to the House by Rep. Celler (D-NY).
> Davis, in his speech, linked the Southern Regional Council with an earlier Southern Conference for Human Welfare, some of whose members he said had long records of connection with subversive front organizations.
> "I say that is not a respectable source of information for us to pass on in connection with this bill," he asserted.

While we have not seen the full text of your remarks, the views attributed to you above are wholly unjustified. The Southern Regional Council is the direct successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, which was founded in 1919, and has never had any connection with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare or its successor, the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

Furthermore, any suggestion that the Southern Regional Council is or has ever been sympathetic to the Communist movement is utterly false. Since it was founded, the Southern Regional Council has been squarely opposed to Communism and all other totalitarian philosophies. Untrue allegations to the contrary do a grave disservice to some of the South's finest citizens, and give comfort only to the Communists themselves.

The Southern Regional Council's findings on Negro voter registration in the South stand on their own merits. The study was conducted last summer as part of the Council's continuing survey of progress in this field, and the results were supplied to the Library of Congress at its request.

Wherever available, official sources were drawn on. You may be interested to know that the Georgia registration figures cited in our report were those on file at the office of the Georgia Secretary of State as of late summer 1956.

Very truly yours,

Harold C. Fleming

STATEMENT OF CONFERENCE OF WHITE
SOUTHERNERS ON RACE RELATIONS

Atlanta, Georgia
April 8, 1943

In October , 1942 a representative group of Southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., and issued a statement in which they addressed themselves "to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations, within the democratic framework."

Their statement is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to cooperate.

We do not attempt to make here anything like a complete reply to the questions raised nor to offer solutions for all the vexing problems. We hope, however, to point the pathway for future cooperative efforts and to give assurance of our sincere good will and desire to cooperate in any sound program aimed at the improvement of race relations.

These Negro leaders rightly placed emphasis in their statement on discrimination in the administration of our laws on purely racial grounds. We are sensitive to this charge and admit that it is essentially just. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande there are some ten million Negroes. While all citizens are governed by the same laws, it is recognized that Negroes have little voice in the making and enforcement of the laws under which they must live. They are largely dependent upon the will of the majority group for the safety of life and property, education and health, and their general economic condition. This is a violation of the spirit of democracy. No Southerner can logically dispute the fact that the Negro, as an American citizen, is entitled to his civil rights and economic opportunities.

The race problem in any Southern community is complicated by our economic limitations. The factors which have kept the South a tributary section have also kept it poor and lacking in sufficient industry to develop and to provide enough jobs and enough public funds for every public need. Yet the only justification offered for those laws which have for their purpose the separation of the races is that they are intended to minister to the welfare and integrity of both races. There has been widespread and inexcusable discrimination in the administration of these laws. The white Southerner has an obligation to interest himself in the legitimate aspirations of the Negro. This means correcting the discrimination between the races in the allocation of school funds; in the number and quality of schools, and in the salaries of teachers. In public travel where the law demands a separation of the races, primary justice and a simple sense of fair play demand the facilities for safety, comfort and health should be equal. The distribution of public utilities and public benefits, such as sewers, water, housing, street and sidewalk paving, playgrounds, public health and hospital facilities should come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need.

It is recognized that there is often practical discrimination by some peace officers and in some courts in the treatment of Negro prisoners and in the abrogation of their civil rights. There is no such discrimination incorporated in the laws of any of the Southern states. False arrests, brutal beatings and other evils must be stopped.

In the economic field, unquestionably procedures should be undertaken to establish fully the right to receive equal pay for equal work. To do otherwise works a wrong to our entire economic life and to our self respect. With so large a proportion of our wage-earning population belonging to the minority race, if we cannot plan for a well-trained, well-employed and prosperous Negro population, the economic future of the South is hopeless.

Most of the Negroes in the South are on farms and in rural communities. Failure to provide for them all the facilities for improving agricultural practices through schools, county agents, supervision holds back all of the South. Fair wages, longer tenures of leases and increased opportunities for farm ownership are also necessary.

All men who believe in justice, who love peace and who believe in the meaning of this country are under the necessity of working together to draw off from the body of human society the poison of racial antagonism. This is one of the disruptive forces which unless checked will ultimately disturb and threaten the stability of the nation. Either to deny or to ignore the increased tension between the white and the colored races would be a gesture of insincerity.

That there are acute and intricate problems associated with two races living side by side in the South cannot be denied. But these problems can be solved and will ultimately disappear if they are brought out into an atmosphere of justice and good will. If we approach them with contempt in one group and with resentment in the other group, then we work on hopeless terms. The solution of these problems can be found only in men of both races who are known to be men of determined good will. The ultimate solution will be found in evolutionary methods and not in ill-founded revolutionary movements which promise immediate solutions.

We agree with the Durham Conference that it is "unfortunate that the simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices continue, with such considerable popular support, to be interpreted as the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life." We agree also that "it is a wicked notion that the struggle by the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity, and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government."

It is futile to imagine or to assert that the problem will solve itself. The need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation and a mutual respect.

SRC Big Moguls Meet In Wesley Memorial To Plan Drive For Finances And Members

Dr. Harry V. Richardson, president of Gammon Theological Seminary, (Negro); Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president, Morehouse College, (Negro); Dr. Channing H. Tobias and Col. A. T. Walden, Atlanta Negro lawyer whom many call "Kingfish" and believe he keeps in his vest pocket the Negro block vote of Atlanta met at Wesley Memorial Church, September, 1951 reports the Daily World to devise plans to raise money for the support of S. R. C., and to increase the membership.

The Southern Regional Council has had to turn elsewhere for funds since losing the substantial support from the Rosenwald Fund.

THE ROSENWALD FUND had been a great financial help to this agitating organization which is for the abolition of segregation whose headquarters are permitted to stay in Wesley Memorial Church. Ac-

"A SOLEMN STATEMENT"

We send out this issue of OMV with the consciousness of the gravity of its contents. It is filled with awful facts. It carries terrible truths. We are not unmindful of the possible varied reactions on the part of our readers.

This issue has been prepared prayerfully, intelligently and patiently. It has been edited without fear or favor of any man, but with the sincere desire to tell the truth at a time when Americans need to know the truth.

The general public is not aware of Russia's design and pattern to take over the control of America. Her techniques and methods are insidious to fool us trusting Americans. We who have made a study of the Kremlin's Plan shudder and stagger at its treasonable effectiveness.

I, as a Minister, a Methodist Minister am gravely concerned over the Soviet Union's scheme to enlist the aid, names, and influence of gullible Church folk into Communist fronts. I am disturbed over the undisputable fact that there are outright Communists parading under the banner of religion to hide their affiliation while they have the voice of Jacob, but the hand of Esau.

When the security of our nation is at stake. When our American boys are spilling their blood and dying in a war planned, originated and continued by the godless forces of Russia. When that godless and ruthless bunch has a thousand fronting organizations in this Country dedicated to destroy our freedom. When an organization is in one of my churches which has on its Board of Control people who belong to Russia's fronts—I can't remain silent. I MUST speak out. I HAVE SPOKEN OUT IN THIS ISSUE. I HAVE PUT IT IN PRINT. I AM SENDING IT THROUGH THE MAILS. IF IT IS NOT THE TRUTH, SILENCE ME. IF IT IS THE TRUTH, EVERY METHODIST IN GEORGIA SHOULD RISE UP AND DEMAND TO PURGE WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH FROM EVERY VESTIGE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL.

REMOVE THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL FROM WESLEY MEMORIAL

The Southern Regional Council's occupancy of rooms within the sacred and hallowed walls of beloved Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga., is embarrassing to every Georgia Methodist who is properly informed of the true situation. Certainly, the Church should encourage every organization which is endeavoring to improve human relations that travels the roadway of Americanism. It certainly would be permissible for an orgaization whose record is clean to be permitted to have its headquarters in that part of Old Wesley Memorial which is designated for lease. But there is no rhyme or reason why SRC should be tolerated any longer. It doesn't deserve the privilege of hiding behind the sanctity of a building dedicated to the preaching of the gospel whose denomination has in its Constitution the allegiance to one Country.

Those in authority are not playing fair with Georgia Methodists by permitting the occupancy in OUR building of an organization which has on its policy forming councils communist fronters who fraternize and associate with such Negro Communists as Langston Hughes, Paul Robeson and Dr. DuBois and then assemble themselves in a meeting in Dixie to tell us how

The main offices for the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC., are in the Historic Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, Atlanta on the fourth floor which also houses the offices of many activities of the North Georgia Methodist Conferences. From this point of advantage and influence the Southern Regional Council, whose Board of Directors for years has been honeycombed with leftists, radicals, Communist fronters is able to carry on its stubborn program for racial mixture which is obnoxious to Southern Methodists and which foments racial strife and hatred in an area where sympathetic citizens have been doing much to develop the descendents of our grandparents' slaves. Unfortunately, some good and intelligent people who have not taken the time to personally investigate SRC's connections have lent their names to the organization.

GEORGE S. MITCHELL a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter is the Executive Secretary who directs the work of SRC from his office in Wesley Memorial Methodist Church.

At a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952 under the sponsorship of the Friends Service Committee, a young Negro man when speaking to the group said to the effect that it was a shame that one could not present an effective program on peace in his community without being called a Communist. The person presiding according to a reliable source said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that". The leader then said, "Dr. Mitchell, will you answer that"? George S. Mitchell, arose and said, "I am not talking today, but I will say that we will never get anywhere by moral force alone". According to my source of information, Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party.

The official organ of the Southern Regional Council is the "NEW SOUTH" which was consciously or unconsciously borrowed from the old official organ, "NEW SOUTH" of the now defunct Communist originated and Communist

we ought to treat the Negro. Atlanta Methodists resent the fact that a member of the Board of Directors of SRC writes a column in a Northern Daily, uncomplimentary things about Georgia then enters Old Wesley Memorial to lay plans to reconstruct us. Georgia Methodists are insulted that a leading official of SRC sits in Moscow inspired meetings with the fat, flabby, former pin-up girl of American Communists and then comes down to Georgia to sit somewhere in Wesley Memorial Church with a Georgia Methodist woman to make plans for their program.

NO ORGANIZATION OUGHT TO BE PERMITTED TO HAVE ITS HEADQUARTERS IN A METHODIST CHURCH OR ANYBODY'S CHURCH WHICH HAS JUST ONE MEMBER WHO BELONGS TO JUST ONE COMMUNIST FRONT. But the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL has more than twenty Directors within the past few years who belong to numerous Communist fronts. The Southern Regional Council has on its Board of Directors people who are fraternally known to notorious Communist fronters in every section of our nation. The Southern Regional Council has leading members whose names are listed in the files of patriotic investigators in every large city of America. The Southern Regional Council is largely directed by persons whose names are commonly known to state legislative and national congressional investigating committees. THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL HEADQUARTERS OUGHT TO BE MOVED FROM THE CHURCH BUILDING IN ATLANTA.

Not all members of the Board of Directors come within this regrettable catagory. There are those who would not be unpatriotic to identify themselves with just one subversive front. It is our opinion that they are unaware of what is going on in the organization to which they have lent their name and influence. We believe that they, not because of expediency but of conviction will withdraw their names and demand that the SRC move immediately from our Church. This responsibility does not rest in the hands of the Pastor. It is the responsibility of the Board of Trustees of Wesley Memorial Church which is elected by the North Georgia annual conference. Dr. E. G. Mackay is chairman of this Board. We brought to his attention in the October, 1952 issue of O. M. V., a little of what was going on. We had expected then that some action would be taken. He knew how to say, "NO" to the Warren A. Candler Chapter of Circuit Riders, Inc., an organization composed of true, tried and loyal Methodists. We would like to remind Dr. Mackay that for every Georgia Methodist who is in sympathy with the program of SRC, there is twenty-five Methodists in Georgia who believe what the Circuit Riders, Inc., stand for. If the Board fails to do its duty—then, the only other course is for the annual conference meeting in June to take appropriate action.

The continued presence of SRC in Wesley Memorial is a reflection upon our loyalty to Americanism. It would be most embarrassing to have leading dailies across this country carrying screaming headlines of a Congressional investigation of an off color organization in a Methodist Church in the heart of Dixie where patriotism to country is a passion and Old Glory is an adored sacred symbol.

Come on Dr. Mackay, you have a great opportunity to do a patriotic duty.

THE RED HAND OF RUSSIA REACHES INTO GEORGIA

One of Russia's most effective plans to sell Communism to America is to cause discontent and strife among so-called minority groups. Their prize weapon to destroy freedom and our American way of life is to stir up racial strife and discord among the Negro, the Southern Negro. The Soviet Union has no love for the Negro. It seeks to bring about a revolution by pitting one race against another race. Communists seek to capitalize on every racial incident so as to turn it into effective propaganda for the gospel of the Soviets. All persons acquainted with Russia's diabolical pattern know of her program to create racial discord. This design includes the forcing of a changed social pattern which will bring confusion. In this they hope to start a Revolution.

Nowell a Georgia born Negro and former Communist told Judge Medina, on the witness stand in the dazed and hushed Federal Court room at the trial of the top eleven American Communists, that he was trained at Moscow in the technique for the overthrow of the government of the United States. He told under oath that it was the plan of the Soviet Union to foment a revolution among the Negroes of the South and to set up a Communistic regime with Negroes in complete and absolute control in the 'Black belt'. He said it was the Reds' further plan to capture the industrial worker of the North by constantly condemning private capitalism, and then to tie together the 'red-black' man of the South with the labor revolutionists of the North for the establishment of complete Communistic control in America.

In Russia's iniquitious pattern she has very effectively set up such Communist fronts as: the "National Negro Congress"; the "National Negro Women's Council"; the "Negro Cultural Committee"; the "Negro Labor Victory Committee"; the "Negro People's Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy"; the "African Blood Brotherhood"; "All Harlem Youth Conferences"; the "Southern Negro Youth Congress"; the "Southern Conference for Human Welfare" and many other such fronts which have drawn into their propaganda nets American liberals, radicals and some gullible, innocent 'pretty good folk' with American and foreign born Communists to foment a revolution. One church member in a place of authority and in a position of influence working in a Communist front can do Communism's Cause more good than a dozen card toting members of the Communist Party.

The Southern Regional Council with its Board of Directors top heavy with fellow travelers and Communist fronters is unknowingly to some of its members aiding the Russian Cause to stir up the Negro question in the South. That is what pleases the Kremlin. The Red hand of Russia reaches into Georgia.

Mitchell—

inspired organization known as, "The Conference For Human Welfare". Earl Browder, well known Communist leader in this Country according to the Daily Worker praised this organization for its fine work. Paul Crouch, before his conversion from Communism, James Ford, Negro Communist candidate for vice president of the United States and Ben Davis, Jr., convicted for his conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States were associated with the old "NEW SOUTH".

A dozen or more of the leftist leaders in the now deceased Communist front, The Southern Conference for Human Welfare are either now or have been on the policy making board of the Southern Regional Council. This organization was incorporaated under the laws of the State of Georgia in January, 1944 with general objectives which on the face seem to be commendable. But its program, conduct and much of its personnel have removed it worthiness to be permitted quarters in a Church much beloved and respected by the rank and file of loyal Georgia Methodists.

MITCHELL'S shameful record of affiliations with polices, idelogices and organizations which are Communist inspired is certainly unknown to many good American Methodists who ride the same elevator to the fourth floor of Old Wesley Memorial which is dear to the heart of every Methodist within the bounds of the North Georgia Conference. MITCHELL was an endorser and sponsor of Brookwood College at Katonah, N. Y., which the American Federation of Labor put a ban on it because of the school's Communistic affiliations. He is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS which the House Committee On Un-American Activities says, "it was dedicated to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party and controlled by individuals who are either members of the Community Party or openly loyal to it". Mitchell was a sponsor

Mrs. M. E. (Dorothy) Tilly, Director of Women's Work, Southern Regional Council has quite a record of affiliations with Communist fronts. Her connection with the WSCS of the Methodist Church has placed her in an advantage position to preach the doctrines of SRC to many Church Women Groups. Here is a partial listing of her affiliations:

She was a sponsor of the Mid-Century Conference For Peace held in Chicago, May, 1950. A Congressional Committee says the purpose of this so-called Peace Rally was the aim of assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding board for Communist propaganda. Some of her fellow sponsors were James Durkin, recently expelled from the CIO because of his Communist activity; Haloise Moorehead, member several Communist front Negro organizations, sponsor of Communist Party in the city of New York and defender of indicted Communists. On her return as a delegate to the world conference, WIDF, "Haloise" attended a dinner held in honor of the delegates where America was ridiculed and the Soviet Union was praised, and testified that, "Hungary had provided her with her first real taste of human freedom: Other fellow sponsors of Mrs. Tilly were Sylvain Schnaittacker, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Rabbi Jack J. Cohen; Leo Krzycki; and a host of other radical labor leaders, liberal churchmen and Communist fronters.

According to the letterhead of the Communist front known as THE COMMITTEE FOR PEACEFUL ALTERNATIVES TO THE ATLANTIC PACT, Mrs. M. E. Tilly is listed as a member of the Executive Board. The House Committee says that "Communists in the United States did their part in the Moscow campaign by instigating a Conference for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, allegedly held in July, 1949 in Washington, D. C. This resulted in the formation of a front organization known as "the above mentioned of which Mrs. Tilly is listed as an executive member. The House Committee on Un-American Activities says, "Preparatory to the formal establishment of this 'peace' front, various preliminary conferences were called and statements issued which were featured and supported by the Daily Worker".

Mrs. M. E .Tilly was also a sponsor of the NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO ABOLISH THE POLL TAX which is cited as a Communist Front by the California Committee On Un-American Activities. It says in its citation that it is, "Among the Communist-front organizations for racial agitation which also serves as a 'money-collecting media' and 'as special political organizing centers' for the racial minority they pretend to champion."

She was a sponsor of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties according to the Daily Worker, April 16, 1948. The National Conference on Civil Liberties has been cited as a Communist front by the California Committee.

Mrs. Tilly was one of the initiators of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act and appears as Mrs. M. E. Tilly on the letter head while her signature appears with other signers of an open letter to all Congressmen as Dorothy Tilly.

Mrs. M. E. Tilly's name appears on the official roll of The Methodist Federation For Social Action several years as an executive member.

MRS. M. E. (DOROTHY) TILLY, of Atlanta, Ga., is listed as a member of "THE NATIONAL CITIZENS' POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE" on page 10300 of the Special Committee On Un-American Activities House of Representatives Bulletin entitled, "Investigation of Un-American Propaganda Activities in the United States". Here is a small part of the vast documentary evidences of this organization being an outright, powerful Communist front organization. On page 10303 of the above mentioned bulletin this question and answer is given. A member of the Committee asks Mr. J. B. Matthews, Research Director, Special Commitee To Investigate Un-American Activities, this question, "Would you call the 'National Citizens Political Action Committee' the most active Communist front organization in the United States today"? Mr. Matthews answer, "It seems to me that that is the unavoidable conclusion, that this is the Communist Party's major front organization. Furthermore, it represents the Communist Party's supreme bid for power throughout its 25 years of history in the United States. Never before has it set up a front organization with so ambitious an objective as that of the National Citizens Political Action Committee. It is the Party's supreme bid for power—and I use the word 'party' instead of the Communist Political Association, on the ground that the Communist Party has simply gone underground and has come up under the name of the Communist Political Association in order to advance the purposes which are INVOLVED in the National Citizens Political Action Committee". Mr. Costello, Congressman from California said, "The only purpose (of the Communist Party) in organizing the Communist Political Association is to lead the public into believing that that is the Communist activity, while this other, the National Citizens Political Action Committee, is put forward as not a Communist organization".

Mr. Matthew said, "If the list of membership of the National Citizens Political Action Committee had been drawn up by Earl Browder personally in Communist Party headquarters, it would be difficult to see how that list would have varied in any important respect".

The names of a few of the 82 Communist fronters, fellow travelers and outright Communists who are fellow members of Mrs. M. E. Tilly in this un-American and Communist honey-combed organization are: James Dombrowski; Bruce Bliven, Langston Hughes, the Communist Negro poet and author of the blasphemous poem, entitled "Good-Bye Christ"; Paul Robeson, the infamous Negro Communist Singer; Leo Krzycki, President, American Slav Congress, a subversive organization which there is nothing about it American but in every way Russian; Adam Kulikowski, publisher of OPPORTUNITY; James Loeb, secretary, Union for Democratic Action; Carey McWilliams, an affiliate of some fifty Communist fronts; W. T. Osowski, president, American Slav Congress, Michigan; Julian D. Steele, president, Boston Branch National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and George Soule, associate editor of New Republic an off color and wrong color magazine.

NO PERSON OUGHT TO BE PERMITTED AN OFFICE WITHIN THE SACRED WALLS OF WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH WHO HAS BEEN A MEMBER OF THIS GANG—UNLESS SUCH MEMBERSHIP HAS BEEN PUBLICLY REPUDIATED.

Mrs .Tilly's name appears on the letterhead of the "American Civil Liberties Union" as a member of the National Committee that was used in October, 1951, which the California Committee On Un-American Actiivties says it may be definitely classed as a Communist front or 'transmission belt' organization. She has been a member of the National Board, "Americans for Democratic Action". She was listed as one of the signers of a statement on Korea, released by the Communist inspired "Committee for Peaceful Alternatives—" as shown in the Daily Worker of July 28, 1950, the official organ of the Communist Party in the U. S.

Mrs. Tilly, according to the Daily World, April 6, 1952 addressed a three days' Women's Conference on World Peace at Daytona Beach, Florida called by the notorious Communist fronter Dr. Mary McCleod BETHUNE founder of the National Council of Negro Women. MARY McCLEOD BETHUNE'S affiliation with Communist and Communist front organizations are too numerous to mention. A House Committee Report includes her name among a group it des--cribes as they "were such fronters, if not ACTUAL COMMUNISTS".

McCallister Big Wheel At Southern Regional Conference Meeting, Atlanta

Frank McCallister, Director of the "Georgia Workers Education Service took part in all the functions of the Southern Regional Conference of SRC, which was held in Atlanta, Ga., March 4, 1948. McCallister was in charge of the Hall on Courtland Street, Atlanta which was used in 1948 for mixed dances until the Atlanta Police broke them up. According to an Atlanta daily, the apparent sponsors of these mixed dances were directors of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen organization.

Four Negroes and 17 white persons, among whom were ministerial students, were arrested by the Atlanta police on Friday night, July 16th, 1948.

One of the persons arrested was the Reverend A. J. Ritchie who said that his organization had no intention of causing trouble. He said he was a "Southern minister" but would not reveal his church affiliation to the police. Ritchie stated that he and his wife were staying at the Bethlehem Center a Home Missionary project supported by the WSCS of the Methodist Church. While he was living there, he was directing an interracial and interdenominational group on the campus of the Gammon Theological Seminary (Negro). This group was interested in making a study of the economic conditions in the (poor) South. The Southern Regional Council never condemn such mixed dances.

HERE IS A PARTIAL LIST OF PERSONS WHO EITHER ARE NOW OR HAVE BEEN MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WHOSE HEADQUARTERS ARE IN WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH, WHICH SHOW AN INCOMPLETE LISTING OF THEIR SPONSORSHIP, SUPPORT AND AFFILIATION WITH COMMUNIST FRONTS. GEORGIA METHODISTS, WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT

Dr. Clement is president of the Atlanta University, one of the organizers, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council. He is NOW in the race for election to the Board of Education in the city of Atlanta, Ga. We are not interested in the political campaign going on in Atlanta to the extent that we would claim the right to suggest as to whom should be elected in that great city. But, we must say that Clement's record of affiliation with Communist fronts disqualifies him to be on the Board of Education in any American city. HERE IS A PART OF HIS RECORD AS A COMMUNIST FRONTER:

"National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions: cited as a Communist front by the House Committee On Un-American Activities. The California Committee on Un-American Activities says it "is the most potent Communist-controlled cultural front in California—." Some of CLEMENT'S associates in this Communist front are Charlotte Bass, the vice presidential nominee on the Communist controlled Progressive Party in the last election; Paul Robeson, the infamous Negro Communist singer; John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker and one of the eleven convicted Communist AND Alexander Trachtenberg who was recently convicted in New York but preferred to go to jail in capitalist America than to go to the "good old USSR" he has been writing for. CLEMENT was associated with the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born which has been cited as subversive and communist by the Attorney General of the United States. The California Committee On Un-American Activities says it is, "Among the Communist front organizations for racial agitation which also serves as 'money-collecting- media' and as special organizing centers for the racial minority they pretend to champion. Works closely with the International Labor Defense, legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East ,a Communist organization says the Attorney General of the U. S., This 'Stalin Club' propagandized for the Reds in China who are killing American boys in Korea. Progressive Citizens of America which was cited as subversive by the California Committee. Some of RUFUS CLEMENT'S progressive associates are Dr. W. E. U. DeBois, Negro communist; The Reverend Jack McMichael, Methodist minister and a member of the Communist Party; the late Louis Adamic who affiliated with forty Communist fronts before he got so progressive and died in his burning farm house in New Jersey, September, 1951. The Southern Negro Conference which was cited by the U.S. Attorney General as subversive. The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, says the House Committee, "There can be no reasonable doubt about the fact that the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties - regardless of its high-sounding name is one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party". Sponser of the so-called World Peace Conference whose aims were to disrupt America's defense and to discredit American culture and extol the virtues of Soviet Culture. Among Clement's fellow sponsors which includes long haired, Russian named, fellow travelers is the Negro Communist poet, LANGSTON HUGHES, who is author of the blasphemous poem, entitled, "GOOD-BYE CHRIST".

DR. BENJAMIN E. MAYS

He is president of the Negro Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga. He is associated with "The American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born which the U. S. Attorney General says, is, "One of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States". The California Committee says it, "Works closely with the International Labor Defense, the legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". The crowd Dr. Mays associates with in this organization is quite different from Georgia Methodists he associates with when he appears on the programs in white Methodist Church and institutions in Atlanta. He was sponsor of the "DEMAND NEGRO RIGHTS NOW" delegation sent to Washington. He was one of the initiating sponsors of the Communist inspired Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in New York, 1950.

MAYS was initator and honorary chairman of the notorious Communist front known as "THE CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS". This organization condemned the indictment and conviction of the 12 COMMUNISTS. On page 2517, of the House Committee's Bulletin entitled, EXPOSE OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, a reprint of Dr. Mays' organization's explosive and lying circular appears which says, "MORE NEGROES WILL BE SHOT IN THE SOUTH FOR DARING TO VOTE—MORE LYNCHINGS—MORE JIM CROW—UNLESS YOU STAND UP FOR THE TWELVE".

MAYS has a daily column in the Pittsburg (Negro) Courier where he writes says the heading of one of his columns, "Uncomplimentary Things About Georgia" and calls for the abolition of segregation in the South. Speaking before the American Baptist Convention in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1951 he said, "Protestant churches throughout the country should take a daring step and throw their doors wide open to Negro worshippers".

AUBREY WILLIAMS

Williams is a friend of the Communist Party said David Whitaker Chambers under oath before the House Committee On Un-American Activities.

Supported the American Youth Congress which is subversive and Communist said Attorney General Tom Clark. Attorney General Francis Biddle said, "It originated in 1934 and—has been controlled by Communists and manipulated by them to influence the thought of American Youth.

Aubrey Williams is a fellow member of Carey McWilliams on the Board of the Progressive Citizens of America. McWilliams is affiliated with more than forty (40) Communist fronts. This organization encourages Communists to join.

Williams was a member of the National Citizens Political Action Committee which is dominated by communist fronters; the "Washington Committee for Democratic Action"; and the "Workers Alliance of America" which is the Communist Party's organization of the unemployed patterned after the "Unemployed Councils' of St. Petersburg, Russia.

He was national chairman in 1948 of the Communist front known as the "Civil Rights Congress". His name appears on the letterhead of Civil Rights Congress which bears letters condemning the indictment of the 12 Communists in Ohio and commends Eisler and Paul Robeson.

LOUIS E. BURNHAM

Member of Board of Director of SRC.

Mrs. Tilly's magazine called the "New South" lists him as Organizational Secretary, Southern Negro Youth Congress which was cited as subversive by the Attorney General of the U. S. Former Attorney General Tom Clark said it is "among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means". The House Committee says it is "surreptiously controlled by the Young Communist League".

Burnham before coming South to recruit members for this Communist front and to help direct the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL whose headquarters are in the Wesley Memorial Building in Atlanta, participated in young Communist strikes in New York. His name appeared frequently in young Communist publications.

BURNHAM was one of the three speakers at a home coming for the Negro Communist Paul Robeson in New York City, June, 1949, which was attended by five thousand. In his speech he deplored the lack of a rebellious spirit among the Negroes of the United States. Paul Robeson said in his speech, "It is unthinkable that American Negroes or Negroes anywhere would go to war on behalf of those who have oppressed us for generations, against a country (Russia) which in one generation has raised our people to the full dignity of mankind". Robeson had just returned from the Paris Conference where the theme song was "Rebellion against constituted government in the event of war with a Communist nation". It was designed to deceive us in America. The song is still heard on the battlefields in Korea and will be heard as long as an American veteran will slowly die in a V. A. Hospital.

He was the vice chairman of the AMERICAN YOUTH FOR DEMOCRACY which was cited as Communist by the Attorney General of the U. S., The House Committee On Un-American Activities says it was "a front formed in 1943 to succeed the Young Communist League and for the purpose of exploiting to the advantage of a foreign power the idealism, inexperience and craving to join which is characteristic of American college youth. Its high-sounding slogans cover a determined effort to disaffect our youth and to turn them against religion, the American home, against college authorities, and against the American Government itself."

BURNHAM was a sponsor and member of the notorious and powerful Communist front known as the Civil Rights Congress. He was sponsor of the Communist inspired National Youth Assembly against Universal Military Training.

BURNHAM sponsored supported and joined other such communist fronts and subversive organization as: "American Peace Mobilization"; "International Labor Defense"; "The Southern Conference For Human Welfare"; "the American Committee For Indonesian Independence" which endorsed and supported the Indonesian Revolution.

THE REVEREND D. V. JEMISON

He was president of the National Baptist Convention. A sponsor of the Communist front, "The Civil Rights Congress". He was the recipent of the seditious document of the Peace Now Movement which asked liberal Church leaders to call upon their followers in uniform to lay down their arms at once. Such action on the part of this movement went beyond "private conscientious objection" and advocated treason.

He is a prominent affiliate of the communist front known as the American League for Peace and Democracy. It has been the largest communist front in this country. Earl Browder was its vice president. The House Committee says that "it was nothing more nor less than a bold advocate of treason."

He was affiliated with the Conference On Constitutional Liberties In America which established the National Federation For Constitutional Liberties, "part of what Lennin called the Solar system of organizations, ostensibly having connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program" says former Attorney General Biddle. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, a high ranking member of the national committee of the Communist Party and recently convicted in a federal court for her attempt to overthrow the government of the United States worked with Tobias at this conference. Tobias has varied experiences from scheming with fat, flabby, former pin-up girl of American Communists at a Moscow inspired session to sitting in a room in the hallowed building of old beloved Wesley Memorial Methodist Church in Atlanta with a Georgia Methodist woman to lay plans for the raising of funds for and for the increasing of the membership of the Southern Regional Council.

He signed a Communist-originated petition to the House of Representatives to abolish the House Committee On Un-American Activities. Among his co-signers were such communist as Langston Hughes, the Negro poet; Negro Paul Robeson; and dozens of long haired, un-Americans.

of an urgent summons to a meeting of the CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS held in Detroit, Michigan, April 27 and 28, 1946. In the call he was identified as Dr. George Mitchell, Veterans Service, SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL. We would like to know if he signed that "urgent summons" for that Communist fronting organization in an office of old Wesley Memorial Church.

MITCHELL according to records of the Political Action Committee which were subpoened by the House Committee On Un-American Activities was head of Region 8, of PAC which embraced the State of Alabama. Telephone call slips of the Atlanta office of PAC show that Mitchell was in communication with Mr. Morgan prior to the primary campaign in that state. There is much documentary evidence to support the fact the PAC in many places was manned by Communists. The voice of Harry Bridges the notorious Communist was familiar to some people in the PAC offices.

SRC BIG MOGULS—

cording to the president, the FUND had some twenty million dollars to be used to bring about the amalgamation of the White and Negro races in the South.

May 7, 1943

Following the instructions of the group of White Southerners who met in Atlanta on April 8, 1943, authorizing me to appoint and act as convenor of a committee on collaboration, I am writing to ask you to serve as one of the committee which will meet with the one appointed last October by the Durham conference.

An effort has been made to have representation from each state which was represented at the Atlanta meeting. Also each of the religious, educational, business, professional, and journalistic groups is represented.

Through correspondence with the Chairman of the Durham Committee, the date for the joint conference is set for June 16 at Richmond, Virginia.

Selection of the list was most difficult in that so many worthy and splendid persons had to be left off. You will be glad to know that more than 200 persons have signed the statement, printed copies of which will be ready for distribution in the very near future. Even though you may not be able to attend, I hope that you will accept the appointment. Alternates will be named at a later date.

With deep appreciation of your services and interest, which I express on behalf of the entire list of signers, I am

Cordially,

Ralph McGill
Convenor

P.S. It was the opinion of the group in Atlanta that no publicity should be given the selection of the committee and the meeting until it had been concluded and some sort of statement adopted. I will ask you, therefore, not to give any public notice of the committee or the meeting.

COLLABORATION COMMITTEE AS A WHOLE

Richmond Meeting, June 16, 1943

This is a day of great differences, strong feelings, and epochal conflicts throughout the world. Yet the world's greatest need and hope is to find common ground for universal action and balanced harmony among all peoples. Manifestly, such a goal must be reached through cooperative approximation to the largest measure of agreement in line with the largest number of values and the largest number of people.

We face, therefore, the double crisis of standing firm for the conservation and preservation of human rights; yet to seek these ends by the way of peace and planning rather than by conflict and revolution.

In America, and particularly in the South, we face the problem of readjustments to meet the demands of present and post-war conditions with reference to the Negro and the future development of a great region of the nation. This, exclusive of the war, is the greatest crisis of the South and nation.

This is the problem of two great peoples caught up in the midst of transition between the powerful heritage of the past and the mighty pull of the future. For here is the white South, a great people often doing little things and good people often doing bad things. And here is the Negro South, caught as always between the upper and nether millstones of conflicting forces and also paying the price of extraordinary transition from level to level of cultural achievement, and needing plenty of understanding and cooperation. And here is the white South inexorably conditioned by cultural complexes, suffering terribly, too, and needing sympathy and help as few peoples have ever needed in the annals of man. And, even more important, the two, white South and black South, are part and parcel of the nation, whose people need, scarcely less than the two regional peoples, the sense of time and wisdom.

The war has sharpened the issue of Negro-white relations in the United States, and particularly in the South. A result has been increased racial tensions, fears and aggressions, and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights, and democratic freedom, as they apply practically in Negro-white relations in the South. These issues are acute and threaten to become even more serious as they increasingly block, through the deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elementary improvements in Negro status, and the welfare of the country as a whole.

This is a rare challenge to the leadership of the South to the white leadership to find new ways of cooperation and to justify increased confidence of the Negro leadership in the white South; to the Negro leadership, to sense the difficulties involved and to meet increasing demands, without slowing down their essential efforts.

As evidence of the promise of this leadership, two recent southern conferences on race relations, one at Durham, under the auspices of Negro leadership, and one in Atlanta, under the auspices of white leadership, have blazed new trails. As a follow-up of these and with the above problems and backgrounds in mind, we, a group of Southern whites and Negroes, representing both the Durham and Atlanta groups, meeting as a collaboration committee at Richmond, Virginia, June 16, 1943, and following the general trend of the Atlanta group, urge the general adaptation of the Durham statement entitled "A Basis for Interracial Cooperation and Development in the South," which has had extraordinary nation-wide endorsement.

The framers of this covenant, realizing that the situation calls for both candor and wisdom, have included adequate and searching analysis of the principal issues involved, duly interpreted in their proper perspective. The problems so featured include political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, social welfare and health.

In the area of political and civil rights the essential problems featured were those of franchise and the ballot, jury service, personal security, services in public carriers, the elimination of violence, within and without the law, the elimination of lynching, and the employment of an increasingly larger number of Negroes in the public service.

In the area of work opportunities: the increased training for all skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled labor, and opportunity for employment; the readaptation of labor union policies both for the best interests of Negroes and labor unions; the problems of dual standards of pay; support of but guarding against discrimination in local, state, and federal procedures; special problems of service workers and standards of living.

In the area of education: equalized opportunities in all aspects but especially including institutions of higher learning, professional training and equal salaries.

In the area of agriculture: adequate opportunity for the Negro farmer, including a sound system of tenancy, adequate state and federal assistance, increased opportunity for farm ownership, fair farm wages, and the wider employment of Negro farm and home agents.

In the area of military service: along with the obligation to serve, the opportunity for full participation and advancement in the war activities and a continuing better adjustment of unsatisfactory situations.

In the area of social welfare and health: adequate provisions for safeguarding the public health, for training physicians and nurses, and for their employment. Also, the erection of low-cost housing and other facilities for improving community life.

We recognize now the importance of affirmative action, without which we shall fall far short of our hopes and possibilities. To this end we direct that the continuing committee, as appointed by the two groups now consolidated in this larger collaboration committee, be charged with the responsibility for working out methods and practical means of approach. We urge especially that efforts be begun to prepare the post-war world for a wise and successful reception of our returning soldiers and to prepare both our soldiers and the people for attitudes and procedures adequate to carry the great load of post-war needs. In all these, we urge the public to a new sense of the meaning of these needs as they accord with our professed principles of Christianity and democracy.

WHAT KIND OF SOUTH

do YOU want?

A GROUP OF SOUTHERNERS

representing both races, many occupations, all faiths and denominations got together in 1943 and decided . . .

IT'S UP TO US, as Southerners, to join together, face up to the South's problems honestly, and work to solve them . . .

That's how the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WAS BORN

SRC belongs to its members. It is non-profit, non-denominational, non-political. It is Southern in its make-up and its work.

SRC is not, however, an "isolationist" movement to separate the South's problems from the Nation's. It welcomes support and understanding from all sincere people, wherever they are. But voting membership is limited to persons living in the South.

SRC members include people from all walks of life - white and Negro - city and country, men and women, church people, businessmen, educators, labor men and and plain everyday citizens.

SRC BELIEVES that the South can be prosperous and healthy, free of poverty, prejudice and fear . . .

It believes in the ideal of democracy for which this Nation was founded.

It believes - in the name of democracy, Christianity and common decency - that the Negro must have equal opportunity in the schoolroom, on the job, and at the polls . . .

SRC BELIEVES THAT DEMOCRACY IS SAFE ONLY WHEN EVERYBODY CONTRIBUTES TO IT AND EVERYBODY SHARES IN IT.

TO ACCOMPLISH ITS AIMS

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WORKS THROUGH . . .

Its local groups — SRC has State Divisions and affiliated committees in eleven Southern states and smaller groups in communities over the South.

Its Regional Office

SRC's headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. guides the work of the local groups, advises private and official agencies, issues timely statements and publications. . .

A monthly bulletin — NEW SOUTH keeps members and friends of SRC informed about Southern problems and progress.

Special pamphlets — These give the facts, based on careful study of the region, in simple, illustrated form . . .

Public opinion — SRC helps to create a better climate of opinion through newspapers, radio, speakers . . .

Cooperating groups — SRC works with civic clubs, church groups, labor organizations, and other groups to bring about wholesome improvements. . .

Home Town Self-Surveys — SRC helps local groups organize to collect the facts about their communities and to follow through with corrective action.

TO ACCOMPLISH ITS AIMS

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WORKS FOR. . .

BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE RACES. SRC helps lessen the violence that has plagued the South by providing a meeting ground where people of good will, white and Negro, can come together, air their common problems, achieve honest solutions . . . When trouble brews, SRC members know whom to reach and what to do . . .

EQUAL JUSTICE SRC watches the courts ... points out injustices ... works for fair police practices ... has successfully urged the hiring of Negro policemen in towns and cities throughout the South ...

EQUAL PUBLIC SERVICES. SRC works to get a square break for ALL people in

HOSPITALS AND MEDICAL CARE

SCHOOLS

FARMING OPPORTUNITIES
VETERANS SERVICES HOUSING

FULL CITIZENSHIP for everyone in VOTING - JURY SERVICE
REPRESENTATION ON OFFICIAL BODIES

STATE GOVERNMENT for ALL people. SRC works for the day when out States will serve all citizens equally.

SOME ACHIEVEMENTS

OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL:

* Supplied the basic facts in successful campaigns to secure Negro policemen in Atlanta, Memphis, Nashville, Conway, S.C. and other cities . . .

* Helped smooth the path for the returning veteran by a widespread field program.

* Has encouraged and aided bi-racial committees in Southern towns and cities to make community self-surveys. These have brought striking improvements in Negro communities - most notably in Jacksonville, Florida and Greenville, S. C.

* Has worked for Negro representation on school boards, and other official bodies, elective and appointive.

* Has assisted church women in a Southwide program for better law enforcement and equal justice in the courts.

* Has successfully encouraged improved practices in the handling of racial news in Southern newspapers.

* Aroused public opinion against the Ku Klux Klan and played an active part in getting local ordinances passed curbing the activities of such terroristic groups.

* Persuaded numerous white churches throughout Georgia to be hosts to interracial meetings.

* Took the lead in getting Kentucky's Day Law amended to permit Negroes to receive medical and nursing education in formerly all white institutions.

T O D O T H E S E T H I N G S and more, the Southern Regional Council needs YOUR support. Here are three things you can do to help:

1. Join SRC and work actively with other members in your community.

2. CONTRIBUTE to SRC's operating funds.

3. GET YOUR FRIENDS to work with you and SRC.

What They Say About The Southern Regional Council

"The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is bi-racial, non denominational and non-political. It does not indulge in tom-tom beating, parades, or lengthy pronounciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's - - or from the nation's concern."
- Hodding Carter

"The sort of organization which makes ... progress possible and which therefore deserves the support of all Southerners."
- Richmond Times Dispatch

"The most widely respected interracial group in the South."
- Asheville Times

"Progress can surely be made if liberals, North and South, will sit down and reason together along the lines this group suggests." - New York Times

"A voice from the informed and moderate South."
- Christian Science Monitor

"Southerners directly interested in the welfare of their own section." - Chattanooga Times

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

January 25, 1944

In accordance with the instructions of the first organization meeting of the Southern Regional Council on November 27, the temporary Executive Committee, which was authorized at that time, met in Atlanta on Saturday January 8 and fixed the date for the full meeting of the Board for Wednesday and Thursday February 16-17. We are, therefore, calling a meeting to convene at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the Conference Room of the Administration Building of Atlanta University, 223 Chestnut Street, S. W., Atlanta, Georgia.

Dr. William E. Cole, whose election to the directorship of the Council was recommended at the November meeting, found it impossible to break away from his duties at the University of Tennessee and TVA. At the meeting of the Executive Committee on January 8, therefore, Dr. Guy B. Johnson, well known as professor and author from Chapel Hill and member of the Board of Trustees of Howard University, was elected Executive Director of the Council on full time. The election of Dr. Johnson has met with enthusiastic approval, in both North and South, and carries with it the enthusiastic support of Dr. Cole and the group at the TVA. Dr. Ira DeA. Reid's previous appointment as Associate Director on part time was confirmed. Miss Emily H. Clay was elected Secretary and Comptroller. All these officials have accepted and have begun their work. Provisions have been made for monies to be transferred from three or four of the contributing sources. You will be glad to know, also, that the Southern Regional Council has been duly chartered.

You will recall that the business for our February meeting includes the completion of a full list of Board members not to exceed 75, of which approximately one-third will be selected from the general fields of business, industry, labor, agriculture, and the professions of law and medicine; the further consideration of establishing 100 honorary fellowships and of beginning the selection of fellows; the further consideration of a national advisory council and its election; and the adoption of various items in the program being prepared by the Executive Directors of the Council to be presented at that time.

We feel that this is a moment of great importance and for great enthusiasm, and we hope that a full attendance may be had. Expenses of the Board will be paid by the Council. In order that accommodations may be arranged for you, please let Miss Clay know at the earliest possible moment whether or not you will be present and when you plan to arrive.

Cordially yours,

Chas. S. Johnson

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

On October 4, 1940, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc., instructed its Executive Committee "to take whatever steps are necessary to carry out the plans for the development of a council on southern regional development," which would include in its program the work of the Commission and other activities connected with the economic, educational, and social development of the South.

On January 6, 1944, after many months of work, and following the developments and instruction growing out of the conference of Southern Negroes, held in Durham, North Carolina October 20, 1942, the conference of Southern whites held in Atlanta, Georgia, April 8, 1943, and the conference of Negroes and whites held in Richmond, Virginia, June 16, 1943, the Southern Regional Council was incorporated. At the meeting of the incorporators of the Southern Regional Council held in Atlanta, Georgia, February 11, 1944, charter members of the SRC were designated: all members of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation and all active participants in one or more of the conferences leading to the formation of the Southern Regional Council.

On February 16, 1944, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation met in Atlanta at a special meeting and took the following action:

> It being made to appear to the meeting that all of the Commissions obligations and liabilities have been fully discharged, and further that the Southern Regional Council, having been duly incorporated to carry on the work with ideals and program similar to those of this corporation: It was, upon motion duly made and seconded - Resolved that the corporation transfer and convey to the Southern Regional Council, Inc. a corporation of Fulton County, Georgia, all of its property of every nature whatsoever and wherever situated, absolutely and in fee simple.
> On the same date charter members of the Southern Regional Council met in Atlanta, adopted by-laws, elected officers, and formulated the initial policy of the organization.

ITS PROGRAM AND METHODS

The Southern Regional Council will operate in all of the states of the South in an effort to improve the regions economic, civic, social and racial conditions.

It proposes to promote greater unity among people and agencies in all efforts for regional and racial adjustment; to attain, through research and action, progress and equal opportunity for all people; to reduce race tensions, misuderstanding, distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of national, regional and racial development. These are its long time goals.

For its immediate objectives the SRC proposes to perfect its organization, to conserve and enlarge the scope of work now being done by the local and state interracial bodies; to take the preliminary steps necessary to bring about a realization of the long-time goals mentioned above, and to give immediate attention to war and postwar problems in the South.

The SRC plans to operate through several commissions in the fields of human relations, economic affairs, community welfare, public affairs, and cultural development.

The programs under these commissions will be sponsored with the aid of approximately 100 elected Fellows of the SRC, selected from the several states, and with the cooperation of local and regional religious, social and economic groups.

One of the chief purposes of the SRC will be the development of new techniques and strategies for meeting constructively the problems of the region. To achieve this end the SRC will encourage the development of action groups at local, state and regional levels; recruit and develop leadership; develop necessary research through the universities and colleges of the region; seek to remold and articulate public opinion through the radio, press, speakers and publications; cooperate with and stimulate action in the region from Federal, state and local governments; conduct special experiments and programs in an effort to effect desirable changes in the South; render such specialized services as may be necessary in this connection; render such emergency services as may be necessary; hold technical conferences, promote fuller participation in democratic processes in the South.

Records of the American Legion's Americanism Commission, Florida Legislative Investigation Committee reports of 1959 and 1961 discloses that directors of the Southern Regional Council have, in the past, supported the subversive Southern Conference for Human Welfare and the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

From 1947 through 1957, Director of the Southern Regional Council was Dr. George S. Mitchell, former Southeastern Regional Director of the C.I.O. Political Action Committee.

The Southern Regional Council issues a monthly magazine, New South, which has featured articles by Stetson Kennedy, writer for the Communist Daily Worker, and Federated Press Communist news service.

Today the Southern Regional Council has expanded its activities into twelve (12) States. Virtually supported by the grants from the "Fund for the Republic", it has organized "Councils on Human Relations", with interracial boards and staffs in the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky,

Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia

The Ford Foundations, Fund for the Republic, Inc., Two Year Report issued May 31, 1958, reveals the following facts relative to the Southern Regional Council's source of funds, and its affiliation with Councils on Human Relations in the Southern States:

September 1956 - $110,000.00 "To support the expansion of the educational work of the Council in twelve Southern States, and to assist the central office in Atlanta for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1957."(Quote, Fund for Republic, May 31, 1958)

May 1957 - $200,000.00 "To support the Council's educational program in the South for the three year period beginning October 1, 1957 or such longer period as Council may determine".(Quote, Fund for Republic, May 31, 1958)

September 1957 $1,500.00 "To help defray the cost of the staff work of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations in its work in Western Arkansas". (Quote, Fund for Republic May 31, 1958)

Sept. & Nov. 1957 $1,000.00 "For work in the Little Rock Area by the Arkansas Council on Human Relations". (Quote, Fund for Republic, May 31, 1958

May 1958 $1,250.00 "For the purchase of the booklet "South Carolinians Speak", by the Southern Regional Council to be distributed by the State Councils associated with the Council". (Quote, Fund for Republic, May 31, 1958)

The Alabama Organ of the Southern Regional Council is the "Alabama Council on Human Relations", offices in the Comer Building, Birmingham, Alabama. Rev. Robert Hughes, Methodist Minister, formerly residing on 3209 Ridgley Drive, Cahaba Heights, was the Executive Director through 1960. (See Alabama Council on Human Relations for further details.)

The Southern Regional Council was represented at the Highlander Folk School Seminar, Labor Day week-end, August 30 - Sept. 7, 1957 at Monteagle, Tennessee by Fred B. Routh. Mr. Routh bears the title of Assistant Director of the Southern Regional Council. Notorious Communists, veteran Communist fellow travelers, and Negro leaders in all the recent major incidents attending integration were present at the Highlander Folk School, 25 anniversary on "the human aspects of the integration struggle."

The Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was organized around 1932 by Myles Horton and Don West. (See testimony of Paul Crouch, May 6, 1949, Sub-committee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, Page 193). In his testimony, Mr. Crouch said: "I would like to mention in this connection that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was a school organized by Myles Horton and Don West, and which Mr. James Dombrowski shortly thereafter joined".

(4) Paul Crouch, who gave the foregoing testimony concerning the Highlander Folk School, was the top Communist functionary in the South. His Communist record given to the Senate Committee by Crouch himself attests his importance.

(3) In the early period of the Highlander Folk School, Alton Lawrence was a member of its faculty. On August 13, 1938, Mr. John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the A.F.L., testified before the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, and named Elizabeth Hawes, Alton Lawrence and Myles Horton as persons who "attended a secret convention in North Carolina, at which time plans were made for spreading the revolutionary theories throughout the South". Mr. Frey further testified: "In connection with this I might mention that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, was mixed up in this secret convention, in which three C.I.O. organizations took a very prominent part". (See Dies Committee Hearings, Volume 1, Page 126)

Myles Horton was ejected by the United States Marshall from the witness stand and the hearing room, for disorderly conduct at the New Orleans hearings of the Senate Committee, on March 20, 1954.

Don West, who has already been mentioned as connected with the Highlander Folk School, was district director of the Communist Party of North Carolina. (See House Committee Hearing, May 6, 1949, Page 191)

In March 1954, the Senate Sub-committee on Internal Security held hearings in New Orleans on the subject of Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of which James Dombrowski was and is Executive Director. Among the witnesses who testified before the Senate Sub-committee on Internal Security in New Orleans was one John Butler who had formerly been a functionary of the Communist Party in Alabama.

In the course of his testimony, Mr. Butler stated that he attended a meeting of Communist Party Leaders in July of 1942, in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel in Birmingham, Alabama. Mr. Butler stated that Alton Lawrence introduced James Dombrowski on that occasion as a Communist Party member. (See Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security Hearings, March 18, 1954, Page 45) According to Mr. Butler, this meeting of the Communist Party leaders was held in Dombrowski's own hotel room. In November, 1956 Alton Lawrence was indicted on a charge of conspiring to file a false non-Communist affidavit with the National Labor Relations Board, which non-Communist affidavit is required of trade union officials by the Taft-Hartley Act. (New York Times November 17, 1956) James Dombrowski along with Aubrey Williams, were signers of the brief amici curiae submitted to the United States Supreme Court, 1955 Term, on behalf of the Communist Party, U.S.A.

The presence of a prominent Communist Party Negro leader at the Highlander Folk School Seminar is of major significance. Through Abner W. Berry, the Communist Party established personal contacts with the Southern Leaders of the Fight for Integration. The Party, in its present-day strategy, sets the highest value on such personal contacts. It is the current strategy of penetration. Abner W. Berry is a veteran Communist Party leader with over 25 years service.

Another individual who has a long record of Communist affiliations and activity was also a prominent participant in the Labor Day week-end Conference at the Highlander Folk School, namely Pete Seeger. Pete Seeger has been prominently identified with the Communist Movement for many years,

The Reverend John B. Thompson was billed as a Seminar Director at the Highlander Folk School Labor Day week-end affair. Thompson is Dean of the Rockefeller Memorial Chapel at the University of Chicago.

From 1940 to 1942, John B. Thompson was head of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a Communist Organization.

Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Alabama, and the Rev. Martin Luther King were the two featured speakers at the closing session of the Highlander Folk School Seminar.

According to Abner W. Berry's account of the Highlander Folk School Seminar in the Daily Worker (Sept. 10, 1957, Page 5) Aubrey Williams spoke "prophetically" when he declared that the present situation in the South "is only a short step to general violence"and that the "stuff out of which rebellions are made is definitely being planted".

The Rev. Martin Luther King, President of the Montgomery, Alabama Improvement Association and Pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, delivered the closing address at the Highlander Folk School Seminar.

King is the nationally acclaimed Negro leader of the integration forces in the South. Leading Communists have been writing enthusiastically about King's movement. Writing in Political Affairs, James E. Jackson (one of the top Negro leaders of the Communist Party) says:

> "It has for decades been the honorable (sic) task of Communists to set a high standard of devotion to and energetic leadership in the fight for Negro rights. Recognizing the special national character of this question, we have raised our voices among the workers when others stood mute." (Resolution presented to the 16th National Convention of the Convention of the CPUSA by James E. Jackson, chairman, Sub-committee on Negro Rights, Political Affairs, March 1957, Page 34)

Mrs. Rosa Parks was in attendance at the Highlander Folk School. It was Mrs. Parks who started the Montgomery bus boycott. Shortly prior to her dramatic defiance of the segregation ordinance, Mrs. Parks had taken a course at Highlander Folk School. Mrs. Parks promptly became a heroine to the Communists. The Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, a Communist front, arragned meetings for her in New York City, including one at the home of Mr. & Mrs. Corliss Lamont.

Charles G. Gomillion, Dean of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama and Director Southern Regional Conference, was one of the prominent participants in the Labor Day Conference at the Highlander Folk School.

As president of the Tuskegee Civic Association, Gomillion received a considerable amount of publicity in the nations press and the summer of 1957, in connection with his leadership of a Negro boycott against the white merchants of the town of Tuskegee.

Dean Gomillion's pro-Communist connections have been significant. In testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on July 21, 1947, he was identified as a current member and Secretary of the Advisory Board of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, an outright Communist organization. (See biographical data for further associations)

Others present, included Rev. David A. Brooks, Protestant Episcopal high church clergyman (Negro), speaker at the Highlander Folk School Seminar. He was a leader of the Tallahassee bus boycott which occurred during the last seven months of 1956.

Allen McSwain (Negro) was a speaker who represented the Clinton, Tennessee school incident.

Bernice Robinson, also a speaker at the Highlander Folk School Seminar, discussed the Johns Island, South Carolina, integration incident.

Conrad Browne (white) who addressed the Birmingham Council on Human Relations October 8, 1957, was present representing Koinonia Farm, an interracial colony near Americus, Georgia. This interracial community has been an incitement to prolong violence.

Ralph Helstein, President of the United Packing House Workers of America, AFL-CIO, was also a speaker. This union has been heavily infiltrated by known Communist.

Reverend C. H. Oliver, Chairman of the Alabama Council on Human Relations, was in charge of the meeting. The meeting was titled "Second Annual Cultural Meeting for Elementary Teachers". The theme for discussion being "Educating Children in an Anxious World".

Reverend Oliver is regular in attendance at the meetings of the Shuttlesworth and Martin Luther King groups of which Shuttlesworth is President, Eddie Gardner, Mt. Olive Baptist Church, First Vice President, and Reverend Abraham Woods, Pastor of the First Metropolitan Baptist Church, second Vice President.

At a meeting, May 1, 1961 at the Bethel Church in Ensley, Rev. Oliver reported "The Southern Regional Council, in Atlanta sends word that:

Mary Frances Early, a music teacher, had been approved for graduate study in music this summer - - she will be the first Negro to attend summer school at said university.

William D. Jones, an instructor at Abram's High School in Bessemer had received a Federal scholarship to study French. He is the first Negro from this area to receive one of these scholarships.

Three Negroes were accepted for the fall term at Georgia Tech."

Each Communist affiliation above referred to is properly shown by sworn testimony to be an act or association on the part of the individuals referred to that furthered the Communist aims in this country. This is not to infer, and there is no assumption that any of the individuals or organizations listed is Communist because of his or their Communist affiliations, unless the Communist Party itself is listed as one of his affiliations. It is however, absolute proof that the various individuals listed have knowingly aided the Communist cause in this country in the total number of times and ways listed as his Communist affiliations.

There seems to be little excuse for any reasonably well-informed citizen to continue association with these organizations, unless said association is knowingly intended.

ALABAMA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

The Alabama Organ of the Southern Regional Council is the Alabama Council on Human Relations, with offices in the Comer Building, Birmingham, Alabama. The Birmingham Chapter of the Alabama Council on Human Relations was organized in 1956.

Since its inception meetings have been held in various places including the Chamber of Comm. Building, Negro Miles College and prior to November 4, 1957, meetings were held at the Negro Y.M.C.A., 326 South 18th Street, Birmingham, Ala.

Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations was Reverend Robert E. Hughes. Hughes is a Methodist Minister in the North American Conference. Hughes formerly lived at 3209 Ridgley Drive, Cahaba Heights, Birmingham, Alabama. Hughes was born in Gadsden, Alabama - educated in Gadsden Public Schools, University of Alabama and Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia.

Rev. Hughes lived in Birmingham before he left to study languages necessary for his assignment in Africa. Rev. Hughes was assigned this post after the publicity received from his having been jailed in Bessemer, Alabama for contempt by the Grand Jury investigating his activities, September 2, 1960. Hughes refused to answer questions pertaining to the Council on Human Relations.

Mr. John Hall Jones, former professor at Howard College was President of the Alabama Council on Human Relations during 1956.

The Birmingham News of January 17, 1957 quotes Reverend Alfred W. Hobart, Minister of the Unitarian Church, Birmingham, Alabama, as President.

The Birmingham News of January 17, 1957, Page 2 lists the following directors: (Quote) "The Greater Birmingham Council is a part of a statewide organization. Its Board of Directors is composed of Perry Daugherty, Dr. Roger Hanson, Robert Johnson, Dr. Beryl McClasky, William Mitch, Rev. J. L. Ware, Rev. J. C. Wilson, Mrs. H. C. Bryant, Peter Cowin, Justine Barker, Dr. Fredrick Kraus, Dr. Locke White, Mrs. James Battle, Dr. John Hall Jones, John Martin, Mrs. R. M. Howard, Emory Jackson and Arthur Shores.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations met February 14, 1957 at Stillman College, a Negro Presbyterian Institution in Tuscaloosa, Alabama and elected the following officers:

Chairman:	Dr. Duncan Hunter, Pastor of the First Methodist Church, Alexander City, Alabama.
Vice Chrmn:	C. G. Gomillion, Dean of Students, Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama (See Bibliography Southern Regional Council for affiliations)
Secretary:	William Irby, Sylacauga, Alabama
Treasurer:	J. E. Brooks, Alabama State Teachers College, Montgomery, Alabama.

On October 8, 1957 at a meeting held at the Negro Y.M.C.A., 328 South 18th Street, Birmingham, Alabama, Conrad Browne, Head of the infamous and illegally operated interracial Kiononia Farms located in Americus, Georgia, was the principal speaker. During the speech he made in part the following statement; "Some people accuse us of being Communist . . . Well, I guess we are -".

On April 5, 1957, A Grand Jury in Sumter County, Georgia charged in a 20 page presentment that Koionia Farm "May be a front for the Communist Party". Summarizing its 7 day inquiry, the Grand Jury uncovered evidence the 1,100 acre interracial establishment had "close friends among known Communists and has entertained known Communists."

Mr. Conrad Browne, Director of Kiononia Farms attended the Highlander Folk School Seminar, Labor Day week-end, August 20 - Sept. 2, 1957 along with Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Alabama publisher, Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Ala. minister, Mr. Fred B. Routh Assistant Director of the Southern Regional Council, Abner W. Berry, prominent Communist Party Negro, Pete Seeger, who has a long record of Communist affiliations and Rev. John B. Thompson, Seminar Director. Few clergymen have better claims to qualifications as veteran Communist fellow travelers than Rev. John B. Thompson, Dean of the Rockefeller Memorial Chapel at the University of Chicago.

Aubrey Williams, editor and publisher of the "Southern Farm and Home", Montgomery, Alabama which has a circulation of 800,000. Aubrey Williams with Martin Luther King were principal speakers at the Highland Folk School Seminar.

Aubrey Williams is a Past President of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, President Southern Conference Educational Fund and signer of the amici curiae on behalf of the Communist Party, at the October 1955 Term of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Reverend Martin Luther King, former President of the Montgomery Alabama Improvement Association and former pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, delivered the closing address at the Highlander Folk School Seminar. Leading Communists, Benjamin J. Davis, Herbert Apthiker and James E. Jackson write enthusiastically about King's movement.

Charles G. Gomillion, Director Southern Regional Conference, Vice Chairman Alabama Council on Human Relations, Dean of Tuskegee Institute, leader of the Tuskegee boycott, was one of the prominent participants in the Labor Day Conference at Highlander Folk School. (See Bibliography Southern Regional Council)

Another interesting member of the Council on Human Relations is:

Claude Williams, R.F.D. Helena, Alabama. The American Mercury magazine, issue of February, 1954 features an article by Dr. J. B. Matthews, "Reverend Claude Williams, a Communist Party member under the name "John Galey".

Williams record on file before the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities is composed of seven single space type-written pages. His record places him as one of the most radical and revolutionary figures in the history of the Communist Party, U.S.A.

Claude Williams record - From the House Un-American Activities Committee - - Claude Williams left-wing radical record dates back to the early 1930's. In the early 30's he was minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Paris, Arkansas. During his ministry at this church, he carried a continuous campaign of agitation among farmers and workmen urging them to militant action by revolutionary means against our system of free enterprise. Finally, his congregation could no longer stomach his radicalism, particularly his advocacy of violent overthrow of our social, economic, and political systems, and expelled him from the Church.

In 1947 the Rev. Williams in company with six other American clergymen, visited Communist Russia-dominated Yugoslavia. Members of this group included Dr. Guy Emery Shiperland, Dr. William Howard Melish, individuals who like Rev. Williams have long records of support of Communist-front organizations. After returning from this trip, these despicable supposedly "Men of God" issued a report containing high praise of conditions in that Russian satellite, stating among other things, "that religious freedom exists in Yugoslavia". This in spite of the fact that irrefutable evidence from highly authoritative sources gives the lie to this report in toto.

Rev. Williams has been prominently connected with the Peoples Institute of Applied Religion, Inc., and organization cited by the United State's Attorney General as subversive and Communist, and identified in testimony before the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities as one of the most vicious Communist groups in the United States. In this testimony Williams was named as Director of the Institute and its location was given as 4105½ - 3rd Avenue South, Birmingham, Alabama.

The Peoples Institute of Applied Religion has for its avowed objective the destruction of Catholic and Protestant religions. In a speech in New York on December 29, 1945 at the National Convention of the Institute, Rev. Williams said:

"Catholic church religion came into being to buttress the decaying Roman Empire. It proclaimed the divine rights of kings. It prospered and protected lords and ladies. It oppressed and persecuted serfs and chattels. Today this church religion is controlled by a closely-knit politico economic leadership. This heirarchy has economic investments in virtually every country".

"Protestant church religion came into being to enchance the rise of capitalism. It proclaimed the divine right of property. It defied (sic) the kings of finance, the lords of commerce and the captains of industry. Today this church religion is directed by remote control from the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and the offices of cartel imperialists. With these it has economic investments in the capitalist exploits of the whole world".

"The Peoples Institute of Applied Religion, therefore, goes beyond church religion of all kinds, it goes back to the class struggle basis of true religion. It defines, reclaims, and acts upon the democratic dynamic of our Judaeo-Christian Heritage".

In addition to the foregoing, the following are more of Williams "left-wing Red" activities:

1. According to the Daily Worker of March 5, 1941, he was one of the signers of a statement sent to the President in defense of the Communist Party.

2. Former Director of Commonwealth College, Mena, Arkansas, an institute cited by the Attorney General as Communist.

3. Editorial advisor of "The Protestant's" publication cited by the Special Committee on Un-American Activities as "a magazine which has faithfully propagated the Communist Party line under guise of a religious journal".

4. In 1950 Williams was one of the sponsors of Mid-Century Conference for Peace, a conference cited by the House-Un-American Activities Committee as a sounding board for Communist propaganda.

5. Signed letter to U.S. Attorney General Biddle defending Harry Bridges, notorious West Coast Communist.

6. Member of Civil Rights Congress and National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, both of which are on the subversive list of the U.S. Attorney General.

7. Has participated in meetings of the National Negro Congress, an organization cited as subversive by the U.S. Attorney General.

Numerous other examples of the Communist tinge of Claude Williams could be cited but space does not permit. Need we say that this man presently living in our midst, and active in the Birmingham Chapter of Alabama Council on Human Relations is a dangerous, dedicated agent of Moscow, Russia.

Mrs. Clifford Durr, Montgomery, Alabama, member Alabama Council on Human Relations, Vice President Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Director Southerr Conference Educational Fund, member and vice chairman, National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, Virginia, Member of the Committee, National Citizen's Political Action Committee, major Communist-front organizations in the U.S.A., (House Un-American Activities Report.)

Reverend C. Herbert Oliver, Co-Chairman, Alabama Council on Human Relations, Dr. Albert C. Wynne, professor Stillman College, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and Earl Andrews are in regular attendance at the meetings.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations is divided into five (5) districts throughout the State of Alabama with two co-chairmen for each district, one white and one Negro.

The Council distributes the New South, a small magazine published (eleven issues annually) by the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta Georgia. The New South features articles on integration with special emphasis on areas hit by racial strife such as, Little Rock, Tallahassee, Birmingham and Montgomery.

Typical of these writings are:

"Birmingham Blues" from New Republic, May 30, 1960. "Jacksonville Experience is another Costly Lesson" by William K. Williams, Executive Director Florida Council on Human Relations.

"The South Says it Will Come" - Editorial May, 1960.

"Band Together for Genuine Unity" - Colbert S. Cartwright.

The basic theme of the publication is integration of the races. Graphic accounts of the freedom-rides, sit-ins, kneel-ins, and other racial disturbances are featured articles.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations, is a clandestine organization. The meetings are held in secret and membership lists are not available to anyone.

The Birmingham Police Department investigated a meeting held at the Negro Y.M.C.A., 326 South 18th Street, Birmingham, Alabama. There were approximately thirty persons present, equally divided between whites and Negroes.

Due to the hurried exit of some of the members present, it was difficult to identify everyone present. A partial list is avialable, however.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations is a Tax Exempt Organization, having qualified with the Internal Revenue Service, United States Treasury Department. The Alabama Council on Human Relations will not divulge its source of income, however, photostatic copies of their financial report indicates the main source of revenue to be the Southern Regional Council.

Reverend C. H. Oliver, Co-chairman of the Alabama Council on Human Relations is also active in Reverend Shuttlesworth and Martin Luther King's groups, who hold regular meetings throughout Birmingham.

Reverend Oliver was chairman and in charge of a meeting held, May 9, 1961 at Miles College, Birmingham, Alabama. The principal speaker being, Mr. Leslie W. Dunbar of the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. Leslie W. Dunbar was appointed Executive Director of the Southern Regional Conference, Atlanta, Georgia May 1961, replacing Mr. Harold C. Fleming.

The meeting was titled "Second Annual Cultural Meeting for Elementary Teachers". The theme for discussion was "Educating Children in an Anxious World."

The Alabama Council on Human Relations, Comer Building, Birmingham, Alabama, has a new Executive Director. The Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Georgia employed the new director to replace the notorious Reverend Robert E. Hughes; and, to direct the activities of the Alabama Council on Human Relations, commencing August 1, 1961.

Reverend Norman C. Jimerson, Baptist Minister, who resides at 1905 Saulter Road, Homewood, Alabama, is the new Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

Reverend Jimerson was formerly employed as a chaplain, Hopewell Prison, Hopewell, Virginia.

This report makes no accusation that every member of any of the aforementioned organizations is a Communist, nor is any accusation made that every such person is a deliberate subversive. However, every such person is either knowingly or unknowingly lending aid to the subversive thrust of the Communist Party.

An analysis of the entire list of members affiliated with these organizations shows several things:

(1) It follows the usual pattern of personnel in Communist-front-organizations - - so many trusted Communist Party lieutenants, so many veteran fellow travelers, so many gullibles picked up for the first time and used for a front for purposes which they do not fully comprehend.

(2) It serves as an excellent illustration of the well-known principle of the interlocking directorate which is common in the party's front organizations.

On May 28, 1942 the Attorney General issued an order for the deportation of Harry Bridges. Two things stand out in the text of the Attorney General's order:

(1) A finding of fact concerning the subversive character of the Communist Party.

(2) An observation concerning the nature and purpose of Communist front organizations.

Concerning the Communist Party, the Attorney General found the following:

"That the Communist Party of the U.S.A., from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States."

Concerning Communist-front organizations, the Attorney General made the following observation:

"Testimony on "front organizations" showed that they were represented to the public for some legitimate objective, but actually used by the Communist Party to carry on its activities, pending the time when the Communist believe they can seize power through revolution".

The foregoing statements of the Attorney General are amply substantiated by the overwhelming mass of evidence which bears upon them. These statements say categorically that the Communist Party is a subversive organization which aims at the violent overthrow of the United States Government, and that Communist-front organizations are one of the instrumentalities used by the Communist Party for this ultimate purpose.

Each Communist affiliation above referred to is properly shown by sworn testimony to be an act or association on the part of the individuals referred to that furthered the Communist aims in this country. This is not to infer, and there is no assumption that any of the individuals listed, is a Communist because of his Communist affiliations, unless a Communist Party itself is listed as one of his affiliations. It is, however, absolute proof that the various individuals listed have knowingly or unknowingly aided the Communist cause in this, in the total number of times and ways listed as his Communist affiliations.

There seems to be little excuse for any reasonably well-informed citizen to continue association with these organizations, unless said association is knowingly intended.

A NEW POLITICAL CLIMATE FOR THE SOUTH

Broad progressive movements in the South show that forces are at work toward that unity of all patriotic Southerners who see racial harmony as the key to progress and effectiveness in the war.

By Rob F. Hall
Birmingham, Ala.

In his 'Brothers Under the Skin,' Carey McWilliams does not soft-pedal the seriousness of the attacks on the Negro people, the increasing bitterness of anti-Negro discrimination, and the danger to national unity resulting from the intolerable conditions under which the Negro people live, work and fight. But Mr. McWilliams emphasizes that in the course of this war for survival against Hitlerism, there has developed a climate favorable for far-reaching improvements in racial relations.

Even the South has been affected by this climate and out of it has come the recently organized Southern Regional Council, Inc., with headquarters in Atlanta, consisting of some hundred leading Southern white and Negro citizens. The council is dedicated to the proposition that 'the Negro in the United States and in every region is entitled to and should have every guarantee of equal opportunity that every other citizen of the United States has within the framework of the American democratic system of government.' The founders established the council so that there will be 'actual realistic accomplishments rather than mere words.'

Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fiske University and Dr. Howard W. Odum of the University of North Carolina are co-chairman, and Dr. Guy B. Johnson, also of North Carolina has been made full-time executive director. Dr. Ira Reid, a well-known Negro leader of Atlanta University is associate director. Despite the prominence of academic names in the roster of officers, the movement is not confined to the Southern campus. The initiators and supporters of the Southern Regional Council include white industrialists, Negro business men and outstanding men and women of both races from the fields of church, labor, social work, government agencies and civic organizations.

The council has its beginning in a meeting of some 80 Southern Negro leaders in Durham, N. C., in October, 1942. The 'Durham Statement' issued as a result of the deliberations of that conference was notable both in the primacy it gave to the war effort and its demands on the 'first loyalty' of the Negro people, and for its frank and forthright posing of the demands of the Negro people in the South.

The Durham conference demands included.

1. Political and civil rights. This emphasized the right of suffrage and the right of 'personal security against abuses of police power by white officers of the law.' The touchy question of treatment of Negroes in public carriers was met with the demand that 'where segregation is mandatory by law...that these provisions be equal in kind and quality.'

2. Industry and labor. This pointed up the demand for the enforcement of the Fair Employment Practices Committee policies.
3. Service occupations. In this plank the degraded position of the domestic and other service workers was treated as an important question affecting hundreds of thousands of Negroes.
4. Education. The conference urged equalization of educational opportunities, including equalization of salaries. Where states cannot afford the requirements of this program, federal aid was called for.
5. Agriculture. Safeguards for the tenant and aids to the promotion of home and land ownership were emphasized.
6. Military service. The conference insisted upon the opportunity of full participation in all branches of military service and of advancement according to ability.
7. Social welfare and health. A drastic expansion of health facilities for the Negro people was advocated, including slum clearance and low-cost housing.

Following the publication of the Durham program there was widespread comment in the columns of the more responsible section of the Southern press. The Atlanta Constitution, whose editor is Ralph McGill said, 'It will be unfortunate if the South does not discuss calmly and intelligently the basis for interracial cooperation advanced recently by a group of Southern Negroes.' And partly due to the initiative of Mr. McGill, about 300 influential white Southerners gathered at Atlanta in April, 1943.

In their public document, now known as the Atlanta Statement, the white Southerners opened with an acknowledgement to the Durham group. 'Their statement,' said the whites, 'is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to cooperate.'

The Atlanta conference did not draw up a detailed program. It implied agreement with the Durham planks but addressed itself primarily to 'the widespread and inexcusable discrimination in the administration of these laws.'

Continuing, the Atlanta conference said, 'The white Southerner has an obligation to interest himself in the legitimate aspirations of the Negro.

'This means correcting the discrimination between the races in the allocation of school funds; in the number and quality of schools; and in the salaries of teachers...It is recognized that there is often practical discrimination by some peace officers and in some courts in the treatment of Negro prisoners and in the abrogation of their civil rights...False arrests, brutal beatings and other evils must be stopped.'

In the economic sphere, the Negro must have equal pay for equal work. 'If we cannot plan for a well-trained, well-employed and prosperous Negro population, the economic future of the South is hopeless,' the atlanta Statement declared.

The statement then emphasized the necessity of eliminating 'the poison of racial antagonism' which unless checked 'will ultimately disturb and threaten the stability of the nation.'

The story then moves more rapidly. The Atlanta Conference designated a committee of whites, including Dr. Odum, Virginius Dabney, editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, and Josephine Wilkins of the Georgia League of Women Voters, to meet with a committee of Negroes, to work out plans for collaboration.

The collaboration committee met in Richmond two months later. Their document was not as explicit as either the Durham or the Atlanta statements, but indicated a genuine desire to work together on the basis of an 'adaptation' of the Durham and Atlanta platforms. The collaboration committee itemized the most important of the Durham planks, including the franchise, personal security, employment, and equalized opportunity for education and professional training.

The thinking of Dr. Odum and certain other leaders seems to be in the negative. By training and background, Dr. Odum is inclined to rely on a small and select group and to distrust the average citizen, at least in the mass. The fact that foundations have underwritten the budget of the council for the coming year is in this sense both a strength and a weakness--a weakness in that the council will not need the financial support of the average citizen and may tend to ignore him, thus depriving itself of that strength, inspiration and effectiveness which comes from the participation of the rank and file.

The hesitancy of Dr. Odum and some of the other leaders has an explanation. It lies in their conviction that the Southern Regional Council may fight for improved race relation (sic) and improved conditions for the Negro people but must not under any circumstances raise a finger against segregation in the South.

When leaders of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare approached Dr. Odum and proposed a merger of their organization with the SRC, they were told politely but firmly that they were not wanted. The SCHW had opposed segregation, they were told, and their participation in SRC would perhaps commit the latter organization in the minds of the public to this position.

It would be easy to dismiss the Southern Regional Council as lagging behind the times, or as some think, hopelessly conservative. But actually, the issue is not so simple.

Those who really understand the character of this war of national survival recognize that the war crisis has made it possible to achieve complete equality for the Negro people in this period. Further, that the complete integration of the Negro people into American life, eliminating the cancerous institution of white supremacy from our social body, is vital to victory in the war and to the national unity of the post-war period. Thus the goal of abolishing segregation is a realistic and practical goal and all moves toward improving race relations will be most successful if they acknowledge this goal.

Unfortunately, this fact is not understood or accepted by a large and--at the present--dominant section of Southern liberal opinion. Even the Negro conferees at Durham, while expressing opposition to compulsory segregation, deliberately limited their program to demands which did not trespass on the hallowed precincts of Jim Crow. They declared.

'We are fundamentally opposed to the principle and practice of compulsory segregation...however we regard it as both sensible and timely to address ourselves now to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect.'

A New Political Climate in the South

The use of the word 'however' is most unfortunate, because it poses the fight on current problems as something in opposition to the fight against segregation. It was on the basis of this paragraph that Roscoe Dunjee, fighting editor of The Black Dispatch of Oklahoma City, jade his scathing criticism of the Durham conference.

Actually the Durham conferees should have said 'We are fundamentally opposed to compulsory segregation...and precisely because of that we are addressing ourselves to the current problems.'

The logic of this formulation is demonstrated when one considers that the fight for complete equality and for the abolition of segregation requires at this stage a militant unrelenting fight for the very platform of the Durham-Atlanta conference, for the franchise, for the elimination of police brutality, and for jobs for Negroes. It is in the course of such struggles that larger and larger sections of Southern whites will learn to know their Negro fellow citizens better and to see the utter unreasonableness of segregation and Jim Crow. They will learn how Jim Crow laws are degrading and humiliating to whites as well as Negroes. The educational process will be advanced.

No one at the Atlanta conference opposed tinkering with the basic Jim Crow structure of the South more vigorously than did Editor Virginius Dabney of The Richmond Times-Dispatch. But a few weeks ago, Mr. Dabney published a two column editorial urging the elimination of segregation in busses, street cars and railway trains in the state of Virginia. The response to this proposal by the people of Virginia was overwhelmingly favoralbe, Mr. Dabney reported subsequently. The fight for Negro rights in the South will unquestionably follow this pattern.

This assumes, of course, sincerity and good faith on the part of the leaders of the movement. Perhaps certain members of the Southern Regional Council do not at this time desire to eliminate segregation. There is room in the South for an organization with the limited program of merely achieving the unprejudiced administration of law to the Negro people. But the minimum essential is that the organization and its members shall energetically pursue this program.

In a recent issue of The Black Dispatch, M. S. Stuart, a columnist refrains from criticizing the SRC. But he issues a polite warning:

'Southern white friends of the race have been counselling patience and promising gradual improvement. Practical level-headed Negro leaders, North and South, have been inclined to subscribe to that theory. But many now are beginning to question whether or not the policy of these white friends is too darn gradual...They want concrete evidence of improvement, however small, to offset the contention that these Southern programs are only sugar-coated opiates to keep the Negro contented during the war. They would like grounds for hoping that at least some of the Negro babies born this year will not be too old to enjoy any of the fruits of this gradualness when, if ever, it ripens.'

The SRC, even if it does not adopt as a part of its program the elimination of segregation, can still make a tremendous contribution to Southern unity and thus to the Southern role in the war effort. But it does have an obligation to speak out without delay for the cardinal points of its program, for the abolition of the poll tax, against the white primary and for the right to vote for the Negro people; for the support of FEPC and for jobs for Negroes; for expansion now of educational health and housing facilities for Negroes.

If it will do this, and at the same time, organize the great mass of Southern white opinion behind this program, we can rest assured that the time of complete integration of the Negro people into Southern and American life will not be far off.

There is, we repeat, room in the South for a movement which does not include the elimination of segregation. But there ought to be room in the Southern Regional Council for men and women, Negro and white, who take the position that only the complete elimination of segregation will achieve genuine racial harmony, if they cooperate in the immediate program of the council.

Southerners can be confident that despite the error of Dr. Odum is (sic) rejecting the overtures of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the SRC is headed in the direction of that broader unity of all patriotic Southerners who know that racial harmony is the keystone of Southern progress and Southern effectiveness in the war. The Southern Regional Council therefore deserves the unremitting co-operation and support of all Southern people."

James Jackson's 40th Birthday:
Hero Son of the Negro People

By S. D. Rock

"This is the 40th birthday of James E. Jackson, Jr. It also marks roughly three-and-a-half years that this stalwart Marxist leader, Southern regional secretary of the Communist Party and member of its national committee, has lived the life of a political refugee, separated from his family, hunted by the vengeful, fascist-minded political police of the FBI.

Both these facts deserve widespread recognition and commemoration in the ranks of Communists, working-class militants and the Negro people.

As the Masses gird themselves for more decisive battles against the small handful of ruling class advocates of fascism and genocidal war, their ranks were weakened by the absence of Jim Jackson. For he symbolized and embodies these qualities and skills of leadership most sorely needed now.

Proud son of the Negro people, Jim Jackson's indelible contributions to their struggles began when, as a student in the jimcrow public schools of his native Richmond, Va., he turned his exceptional mind beyond the classroom to find the answers to the very segregation of which he and his fellow pupils were the victims; to the daily indignities and abuses which his people suffered at the hands of the 'white supremacist' lords of the town; to the miserable wages of the factory 'hands' in the tobacco plants, the plodding domestic workers and the servants in the big hotels; to the insufferable hovels and firetraps which the Negro workers of Richmond inhabited--and still inhabit.

Since those early days, there are few basic struggles of the Negro nation and people in the South, or of the Southern workers and poor farmers, Negro and white which have not borne to some degree the imprint of his direct participation or his guidance of the class-conscious forces waithin them.

As the drive to break the Wall Street-Dixiecrat stranglehold on the political life of the South (and consequently the nation) takes shape in an ever more energetic and demanding movement for the full franchise, for Negro and popular representation, it is appropriate to recall that Jim Jackson and a small band of young Southerners launched the first anti-polltax week in Birmingham, Ala., in 1940. This observance soon flowered into a national campaign which reduced the number of polltax states from eight to five and stimulated voter registration movements among the Negro masses in every Southern state.

And when, in 1946, the first concerted effort of this generation was made to register Negroes to vote in Mississippi ('paradise of the Ku Klux Klans); bitter-end defender of feudal oligarchy; current spawner of the misnamed 'Citizens.Councils' aimed at terrorizing Negro children and parents into forfeiting their constitutional right to equal and integrated education,

Jim Jackson was there as an officer of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, spearheading the movement, rallying his fellow-Negro veterans to take advantage of their poll-tax exemption and vote.

In the eyes of the big-planter clique that rules Mississippi on behalf of finance capital, the advocacy of Negro voting in 'their' state was strictly 'illegal' in 1946. Jim Jackson had to find ingenious methods to get his message over to the Negro veterans. Regular-sized leaflets would be too bulky; but thousands of vets found in their hands little slips of paper, slightly bigger than a calling card and inscribed with the legend:

Negro Veterans
You who laid old Hitler low,
Don't be scared of old Bilbo;
Just like Hitler's friend Tojo,
Bilbo, too, has got to go!
Register and Vote!
Join the S. N. Y. C.!

There was at least as much truth as poetry in Jim Jackson's 'calling card.' The exposure of the corrupt practices, fraud and intimidation which Bilbo used to keep Negroes from voting against him in 1946 led to a movement to deny him the seat he had held in the Senate by identical methods term after term. The movement developed mass proportions and was stopped only by Bilbo's belated death early in 1947.

It was said in Mississippi that 'The Man,' as he was called, died of natural causes, aggravated by an overdose of Negro militancy stimulated by Jim Jackson.

As an inspirer and organizer of countless struggles of the Negro youth and people against lynching, against the murderous brutality of the police agents of the trusts and planters; for jobs and upgrading, for schools, recreational facilities and cultural development, Jim Jackson maintains today a preferred place in the hearts of the Negro masses all over the South.

Further, for a period of 15 years he took part in every important general movement for advancement which involved Negro and white labor and progressive forces of the South.

In addition to serving as a founder, vice president and principal organizer of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, he participated in the formation and building of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the Southern Regional Council, and many other movements which in any important way challenged the states que (sic) quo of Negro oppression and Southern social backwardness.

Jim Jackson's constructive role in these movements stands as an effective refutation of the imperialist lie that the Communists join popular mass organizations to 'use' them for some ulterior motives. Throughout the South there are numerous leaders who could testify--and some day they will--that Jim Jackson's contributions to the organizations in which they shared with him the labor 'in the heat of the day' were always positive, helpful, and principled, whatever their differences on the fundamental questions of class struggle and the basic organization of society.

For Communists, Jim Jackson's mastery--though practice (sic) --of the united front tactic provides a model of great importance in carrying into life the objectives of the Party program. A primary characteristic of his style of work has been his persistent skill in developing mass struggles around the issues and through the organizational forms and methods closest and most congenial to the masses--all the while striving to raise a given campaign, project, or movement to higher levels of social consciousness and fighting capacity, all the while furthering the unity and initiative of Negro and white workers and the leadership of the Negro workers in the Negro liberation movement.

Jackson, a Leader in Labor, Negro Struggle

Following is the concluding article on the occasion of the 40th birthday of James E. Jackson, Jr., Southern regional secretary of the Communist Party and member of its national committee, who has lived the life of a political refugee:

By S. D. Rock

Jim Jackson combines with a deep involvement in the crucial struggles of the Negro people during his entire mature life, a rich experience as an organizer of labor and builder of the trade union meovement.

When the leaders of the Southern Negro Youth Congress undertook to organize the desperately exploited Negro tobacco stemmers and laborers of the Larus Brothers and E xport Leaf plants in Richmond in 1937-38, Jackson was the principal leader of the organizing drive and historic strike (first in the history of the tobacco industry) which followed.

The success which he and other youthful organizers had in rallying the workers to organized resistance to $5-a-week pay envolopes, the spiteful abuse and lustful advances of 'straw boss' foremen, 'dressing rooms' in which women changed clothes behind barrel staves involoped by foul tobacco-leaf fumes; their success in mobilizing the support of all groups and classes in the Negro community in the form of money and food to maintain the strikers' kitchen; their success in organizing a supporting parade of white workers down Main Street through the heart of town--all this threw fear and panic into the bosses and resulted in Jim Jackson's being jailed on a trumped-up charge.

But eventually the strike was won and the victory of the Richmond tobacco workers, who joined the new CIO movement, led to the further organization of tobacco workers in Virginia and North Carolina and provided an important exmaple and stimulus for the entire Southern organizing drive of the late Thirties.

Not only the tobacco workers, but the longshoremen of Louisiana and Texas, textile workers of the Carolinas, shipbuilders in Mobile, steel workers and miners in Birmingham and Bessemer, dan testify to Jim Jackson's contributions to their struggles for better wages and working conditions and for trade union democracy.

And in Detroit literally thousands of Communist and progressive auto workers recall his inexhaustible energy, great tactical skill and his fight for principle when, as leader of the Communist workers at the huge auto plants, he helped guide the building and development of a left and progressive workers' coalition against speedup wage-cuts, layoffs, and discrimination in 1947-48 and 1949.

Thus, the merging of experiences in the main stream of the Negro liberation movement and in various crucial struggles of the labor movement over a period of 20-odd years have molded a leader of rare qualities. The people must recall him to their service in the strenuous days ahead.

Most important, the two main ingredients that go to make up the revolutionary 'charge' in Jim Jackson--the fight for Negro freedom and for labor's rights--have been tempered to an unusually fine degree in the fire of Marxist-Leninist-Stalinist science.

At the time of the Smith Act indictments against the 17 leaders of the Communist Party, Jackson had begun to arrest our attention with his important contributions to our theory. His articles in Political A ffairs, his speeches at Party conventions and conferences bear the marks of a major and seasoned theoretical talent.

All the features are there which characterize the work of an outstanding Marxist scholar: (1) a concrete and thorough examination of economic and social reality and the experience of the masses as the basis for political and theoretical conclusions and generalizations; (2) the abhorrence of dogma and the shunning of cliches, however hallowed by time and extravagent(sic) usage; (3) a bold, creative, 'pioneering' approach to new and unsolved problems; (4) a confident but not mechanical recourse to the accumulated experience of the world proletariat as summarized in the classical work of Marx, Engles, Lenin and Stalin.

Jackson's theoretical contributions have been along two major lines. First, he has heightened the Party's understanding of the nature of the popular struggle in the South. He has constantly reminded us, as in his report to the 15th Party conventions, that '...in our trade union work and in our Negro work we cannot win the battle against opportunism, white chauvinism and reformism so long as work in these fields is characterized by a neglect and underestimation of the South.'

He proceeded in the same report to show that: 'The development of higher levels of the Negro national revolutionary struggle in the Balck Belt, and the broad mass movement for democratic rights in the South as a whole, is an indispensable prerequisite for insuring the victory of the working class and the American people over the menacing challenge of the ruling class forces of fascism and war presently, and for working class victory over capitalism ultimately...This is a basic fundamental in the strategy for working class victory, and a special feature of the path to the triumph of Socialism in our country.'

Placing before the Party the challenge of 'the too poorly appreciated fact that the South is that region of the U. S. where the most powerful revolutionary pressures may develop,' Jackson has graphically described and analyzed the three main components of the people's struggles in the South, namely: '(1) the special struggles of the workers, Negro and white; ~~and~~ (2) the special struggles of the poor farmers, Negro and white; and (3) the struggle of the Negro nation for liberation and of the Negro people everywhere for equal rights.'

And he points out that, 'Above all, up from the backward South, there is growing in consciousness a potentially powerful democratic and revolutionary force, the oppressed and imprisoned Negro nation, which is fighting and will fight, on a scale as yet unimagined for its liberation from the imperialist bondage of Wall Street-Dixiecrat slavemasters.'

In applying the tools of Marxism-Leninism to that force (the struggle for freedom of the imprisoned Negro nation)--in outlining its present status and perspectives for the future, its relations with the labor movement, the agrarian masses and the Negro national minorities South and North, the relation- (Continued on Page 8) ships and struggles of the classes within it, its alliance with the liberatory (sic) struggles in colonial lands and with the world peace movement headed by the socialist USSR--it is in this field of investigation that we find Jackson's second major area of contribution to our theoretical work.

Clearly the need and the possibility of returning Jim Jackson and other imprisoned and missing working class leaders to the front line of struggle is greater than ever before.

The Negro liberation movement is at a new height and, as the object of the increasingly ferocious attacks of the Dixiecrats and their bourgeois masters, it faces a rapidly sharpening crisis. Which road to take toward extended reformist collaboration with the Big Business would-be enslavers of the colonial world and the consequent short circuiting of the mass currents which led to the Supreme Court decision of last May 17. Or toward more determined and effective collaboration with an awakening labor movement and with the anti-imperialist, pro-peace forces of the world--the only sure road to 'Freedom by '63' and to complete liberation in our time.

Jim Jackson's experience, wisdom and energy are needed at the center of the Negro people's movement as this fateful decision takes shape before us.

Ben Davis' great political leadership is needed, the organizing genius of Henry Winston, the full, unhampered contributions of Pettis Perry, Claudia Jones and all the Negro victims of Smith Act persecution are needed as never before in the maturing, centuries-old struggle for freedom.

And at their side in this great battle, as in the battle for true working class policies in the labor movement, and for a powerful people's coalition for peace and democracy, must stand their comrades and colleagues in leadership of the Communist Party--Wm. Z. Foster, Gene Dennis, Gus Hall, John Gates, Bob Thompson, and all the others.

The rich ties of Jim Jackson with the popular and labor movements of our land are shaped in one degree or another by all the leaders of the Communist Party. It is precisely these ties, developed over years of participation in the American class struggle which is the warrant of their leadership of our Party. And precisely these ties, however they manifest themselves, are our warrant to go to the American people with unprecedented vigor with the deman for amnesty for political prisoners.

The possibilities for success in this struggle are growing. The repugnance of the masses for McCarthyism deepens from day to day. It must embrace the fascist menace in all its manifestations, and primarily its anti-Communist core.

We must use the occasion of Jim Jackson's 40th birthday to remind ourselves and the democratic masses that the popular movement will not achieve its goals in the fight for peace, the battle for constitutional liberty, working class advance or Negro freedom unless Communists--and in the first instance the leaders of the Communist Party--exercise the full rights of citizenship in that movement and in the nation. //

Regional Council Recommendations

Members from all points of the south attended last week in Atlanta a meeting of the Southern Regional Council, which sponsors better race relations.

Enemies of better race relations consistently seek to present such meetings as secret, mysterious gatherings in which social equality is advocated. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The meetings are serious ones, always finding an aggressive, yet common-sense basis for discussion and agreement.

As illustrating that fact, the meeting of last week may be presented. A program basis of seven main points was adopted. No fair-minded, thoughtful person can quarrel with them. Indeed, only one of them conceivably would be opposed by a person with ultra-conservative views. Briefly, the points covered employment on the basis of ability, of Negro policemen and firemen, a practice already in effect in many southern cities where they work only in Negro areas and patrol only Negro districts; equalization of educational opportunities; increased publicly-financed medical and dental care to both races and enforcement of the law calling for equal accomodations on all public transportation facilities. Another called for an abolition of the white primary, where it exists. Arkansas already has done so, and in Texas the supreme court has ruled out such a primary. Other states are planning abandonment.

None of these "points" calls for, or intimates, any step toward so-called "social equality." Indeed, the "points" recognize legal segregation and ask only for what the law requires—equal facilities.

Positive aggressive, yet conservative and non-radical, the program merits the attention of every southerner interested in the future of the south and its bi-racial problem.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

the conscience of the South

GUY B. JOHNSON
Executive Director, Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Ga.

THE Southern Regional Council, which began its existence as a formally organized body in February 1944, is the product of many factors but primarily it is the outgrowth of two parent movements. One of these was the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The other was the Durham - Atlanta - Richmond series of conferences.

In 1919, during the dark days of racial conflict and Ku-Kluxism which followed World War I, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation was born. It represented a new idea in race relations, the idea that white people and Negroes should come together and strive to reach "a meeting of minds" on their mutual problems. This idea spread until there were scores of interracial committees operating in the South and elsewhere.

Idea of Council Is Born

In 1939 the commission leaders, feeling that the educational program which it started had become thoroughly established and recognizing the need for new blood and new ideas, began to explore the possibility of broadening the scope of the organization and improving its technics. In October 1940 the commission instructed its executive committee to "take whatever steps are necessary to carry out the plans for the formation of a council on southern regional development," which would include in its program "the work of the commission and other activities connected with the economic, educational and social development of the South."

Accordingly, an evaluative study of the commission was made and a plan for expansion was drawn up. In the meantime, the Durham-Atlanta-Richmond conferences matured to a similar purpose.

On Oct. 20, 1942, a group of Southern Negro leaders met at Durham, N. C., and participated in what has become known as the Durham Conference. This conference was an outstanding event in the history of the South. It was a product of the rising tide of racial friction and it was also in a sense a product of both the successes and the failures of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. These Negro leaders expressed their purpose as follows:

"We are proposing to set forth in certain Articles of Cooperation just what the Negro wants and is expecting of the postwar South and nation. Instead of letting the demagogues guess what we want, we are proposing to make our wants and aspirations a matter of record, so clear that he who runs may read. We are hoping in this way to challenge the constructive cooperation of that element of the white South who express themselves as desirous of a new deal for the Negroes of the South."

On April 8, 1943, a group of southern white leaders met in Atlanta to consider the statement which had been issued by the Durham Conference. They agreed that ". . . the need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation and mutual respect."

Resolution Is Passed

The third conference was held June 16, 1943, in Richmond when a collaboration committee, composed of representatives from the Durham and Atlanta conferences, met to work out further details. A continuing committee of white and Negro delegates came together in Atlanta on Aug. 4, 1943, to draw up specific plans for implementing the Durham statement. They passed a resolution urging the South ". . . to pool its efforts and set up a strong, unified Southern Regional Council constituted of representatives of both races and of private and public groups . . . ."

The Southern Regional Council was chartered on Jan. 6, 1944, by the state of Georgia as a corporation "for the improvement of economic, civic and racial conditions in the South . . . to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region . . . ." It represents the forward-looking conscience and efforts of liberal Southerners to give democracy a chance in the South. It is bi-racial but is not exclusively a "race relations" organization.

The Southern Regional Council is a membership corporation. Membership is open to any person who endorses the purposes of the organization and pays dues of $1 a year. Voting members reside in the council's area which includes the states of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Persons living elsewhere may become associate members.

At the annual meetings, the members determine program and policy and elect new members and directors. The board of directors, composed of 60 members plus officers, holds two regular meetings each year. The board has an executive committee which meets bimonthly and five standing committees. The executive staff is elected by the board and is directly responsible to it.

The council believes that sound information, honest discussion and cooperation, rather than agitation, are the best methods for promoting social progress.

Functions of the Council

Its functions are: (1) research and survey to find the facts and to determine the possibilities of constructive action; (2) educational work through its own publications and through the press, radio, exhibits, conferences and personal contacts; (3) cooperation with other agencies which have liberal and humanitarian aims; (4) consultative services to private or public agencies, and (5) formulation of constructive plans and proposals for "the South that could be."

"Federal-State Relations in Education"

A critical evaluation by 11 educators of the views contained in the report of two educational commissions on the matter of federal aid to education

C. L. CRAWFORD
Superintendent, Council Bluffs, Iowa

Some of the assumptions put forth in "Federal-State Relations in Education," a report issued jointly by the Educational Policies Commission of the National Education Association and the American Association of School Administrators and the Problems and Policies Committee of the American Council on Education, are open to serious question.

To grant federal aid without restrictions as to its use would tend only to entrench and nourish the thousands of small uneconomical and poorly taught and administered school districts now in existence in many states.

The release of federal funds to the various states without restrictions or guidance as to expenditure would also tend to strengthen politically those state departments of public instruction which in too many cases still are on a politically elective basis. Department heads in those states might be inclined to distribute nonregulated federal grants in such manner as would pay off most satisfactorily at the polls.

Even where state departments and state boards are nonpolitical and intellectually honest, is it fair to put them on the spot by making the funds "available for use in schools which the state itself recognizes as eligible to be supported from public funds"? To do so immediately opens them to pressures and prejudices which would not follow if federal funds were earmarked for public school programs only. To earmark funds, however, would be the first probable step in federal control.

If federal aid is to come, let it be for capital outlay costs. Here, federal control would be less dangerous and far-reaching. Let our local and state governments continue to support all operating costs and thus retain their inviolable right to self-determination in public education.

Our states can support their own programs. As a prominent business man recently said: "We have to expect to pay more local taxes. If we don't pay more in local taxes, the federal government taxes it away from us anyway, so it will cost us little to contribute more for the support of our local schools and keep them from becoming involved in federal control."

W. F. CREDLE
Director of Schoolhouse Planning
State Department of Public Instruction
Raleigh, N. C.

"Federal-State Relations in Education" is a well-written pamphlet but is wholly unconvincing if it is an attempt to maintain the thesis that we can have federal aid without federal control.

While one must admit that the principles of organization and administration advocated by the authors of this bulletin "are now clearly established" in the opinions of most school administrators, there may be a minority of school officials that would not wholly agree with the seven listed essentials in this respect. Indeed, while federal control is decried throughout the statement of the Educational Policies Commission and the policies committee, the decrial is conditioned upon the states' conforming to a rather uniform pattern. The Federal Education Commission would be charged with the responsibility for setting up these uniform policies. This board of laymen, in addition to including members who have had experience on state and local boards of education, would almost certainly include members who would be sympathetic to the policies and procedures followed by the Federal Works Agency.

This noneducational agency has disavowed any need of advice or recommendations with regard to school facilities from the Federal Security Agency in which the U. S. Office of Education is located. There is undoubtedly a growing feeling in America that persons other than those trained in educational administration are the ones best prepared to determine the quality and quantity of education.

It is admittedly the states of the South that are in the greatest need of federal aid. It is unreasonable to believe that federal aid will be granted to these states unless there is full assurance that there would be no discrimination against minority groups. Sectarian schools would constitute another problem which would affect all of the states.

I frankly admit that federal aid to education may be necessary in the South; however, it is a cruel necessity and we do not fool ourselves by saying that there will not be federal control. It is ridiculous to think that the federal government will give away $300,000,000 a year without some kinds of control; and once we have some kinds we are almost certain to have all kinds. The lamp of experience casts not a single ray in any other direction.

The Ledger on an 'Empty Honor'

We are pleased to note that more than a few Georgians share our opinion that Gov. Arnall should decline the "Jefferson Award" which the Southern Conference of Human Welfare has announced, with considerable fanfare, will be bestowed upon him Saturday in New Orleans.

We are not surprised, of course, that long-time critics of the Governor, as the Savannah Mornings News, have seized upon it as the basis for their own editorial expressions of distrust of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare. But we are gratified at the number of papers, like the temperate Valdosta Daily Times, which have reprinted it, without comment, in their own editorial columns.

One of the best evaluations of the "Jefferson Award" was carried, under the title "Empty Honor," by the Columbus Ledger, which has been, like The Constitution, a friend and supporter of Gov. Arnall.

Said the Ledger:

"We would not go quite so far as The Atlanta Constitution which urges Gov. Ellis Arnall to decline the so-called 'Jefferson Award' of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, but we do wonder if such an 'honor' has any very real meaning.

"The Constitution says the Southern conference isn't a 'trustworthy organization,' and goes on to suggest that it is merely trying to 'cash in' on Gov. Arnall's national reputation by tendering this award.

"To a considerable extent we share this feeling. At one time we were dues-paying members of the Southern Conference; perhaps we are still carried on its rosters. Some of its moving spirits are close personal friends who won't like this piece at all, but the fact remains that in the last year or two it has espoused some extremist views, particularly with respect of racial relationships, which are simply too radical for our taste.

"In some respects it has performed magnificently. It has been a powerful force in bringing about poll-tax repeal and other electoral reforms. It is a dependable foe of the Ku Kluxers, but—in the same breath it is a dependable friend of such organizations as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which we have lately come to regard as almost as outrageous on one extreme as the Kluxers are on the other.

"In short, we rather think that the developing policy of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare has itself become warped to the point where a vaunted concept of 'tolerance' itself connotes intolerance of any moderate, middle-of-the-road viewpoint, and it does tend to attack and despise those who are unwilling to go all the way to the left.

"We are not willing to go all the way left, and we do not believe Ellis Arnall is willing.

"Perhaps it would do no real damage to Ellis Arnall's stature for him to accept this 'Jefferson Award'—whatever that term means—but we don't think it would help him any, and we definitely don't think he needs it!

"History, in due time, will evaluate Ellis Arnall in true perspective, and certainly we hope that the end of his tenure as Governor does not mean the end of his usefulness in the public life of a State which needs him sorely.

"He has made a secure reputation, not only among Georgians, but among Americans as a whole, and for the moment it seems to us that he might very well rest upon his laurels, without embellishment by extremists who just might be wanting to ride his coat-tails."

Needn't Worry About South, Odum Intimates

If you're one of those who ponder worriedly about Southern progress, here's a cheering statement on the subject from a man who has become an authority on things Southern—Dr. Howard W. Odum, author and professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina.

DR. H. W. ODUM

"People frequently ask me whether the South has shown any progress in the last ten years," Dr. Odum said here Tuesday. "My answer to that is very definitely 'Yes.' This progress is revealed in our improved conservation of resources, in the wiser use of resources, in the balancing of agriculture, in our new industrial development and in our better race relations."

Dr. Odum is in Atlanta to preside over a two-day meeting of the Southern Regional Council, of which he is president. The council was organized in February, 1944, and has as its objectives the economic development of the South and the improvement of race relations.

"Another question often asked of me," the sociologist said, "is this: 'Is the South really on its way to new enrichment of its culture and economy?" Again my answer is yes. The South is now, as never before, a richer, more integrated part of the nation."

The Southern Regional Council believes that the equality and balance of regions is the most important problem in America today, Dr. Odum explained.

For a Greater South

ELECTION of PAUL D. WILLIAMS, Richmond businessman, to the presidency of the Southern Regional Council, with headquarters in Atlanta, will be hailed by all who know MR. WILLIAMS as a forward step for that important agency.

The Southern Regional Council has been headed since its inception by DR. HOWARD W. ODUM, the nationally known member of the University of North Carolina faculty. It was organized during the war as a permanent agency designed to evoke and develop the full potentialities of the Southern region. DR. ODUM has given liberally of his time and his ability to the upbuilding of the council, which now has a staff in Atlanta.

MR. WILLIAMS, who is vice-president of a textbook publishing concern, will bring to the council's affairs the business approach, but, as all who know him are aware, he will likewise infuse the organization with his own particular brand of high idealism. As the first secretary of the Catholic Committee of the South, he has organized a series of annual South-wide meetings under the sponsorship of that body, which have been planned on a broad basis to promote understanding between all races and faiths. The committee has tendered an award each year to the Southerner, whether Catholic, Protestant or Jewish, who, in its opinion, has made a distinguished contribution to Southern advancement. Only a few weeks ago MR. WILLIAMS was the recipient in New York of one of the two 1945 JAMES J. HOEY awards for the promotion of interracial justice.

The South should be grateful to DR. ODUM for his untiring and effective work in putting the Southern Regional Council on a stable basis, and to PAUL WILLIAMS for his willingness to succeed DR. ODUM in this vitally important enterprise.

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

Jefferson Memorial Award Awaits Arnall

By PETER EDSON, NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—At a conference in New Orleans sometime this winter, a new Thomas Jefferson Memorial Award to the South's most distinguished citizen of the year will be presented to 39-year-old retiring Governor Ellis Gibbs Arnall of Georgia.

The plan is to have the award presented by Alabama's newly elected governor, Big Jim Folsom. Participating in the ceremony will be Dr. Clark Foreman's Southern Conference for Human Welfare and similar organizations heading up the liberal reform movement in the South.

GOVERNOR ELLIS ARNALL
Center of Interest

There will be some old professional Southerners inclined to sneer at this whole business, not liking the donors, their motives or their fitnes to say that Ellis Arnall is cast in the image of Thomas Jefferson. Be that as it may, the center of interest here is on the man Arnall—his ideas, his program, and what makes him tick.

The election of rabble-rousing Eugene Talmadge as the next Governor of Georgia has been taken by some to mean the end of Arnall reforms in Georgia. Arnall's accomplishments include a new State Constitution, repeal of the poll tax, lowering of the voting-age limit to 18 years, setting up of commissions to run the state's business free from political interference. But since Arnall's appointees fill all these state commissions and can't be removed by Talmadge, the Arnall influence isn't exactly dead.

First of Three Books

A Georgia governor cannot be re-elected to succeed himself, so long before the recent election Arnall mapped out for his own immediate future a program to make a lot of speeches and spread his ideas all over the country. Also, he wrote a book just published. It's called "The Shore Dimly Seen." The title comes from the little-known second stanza of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and this book is to be the first of three with titles from the same source.

"The Shore Dimly Seen" gives the big idea of what it's all about. What the author hopes he sees is a land of the free and a home for the brave—South and West as well as North and East. But it's of the South that Arnall principally writes. And when a Southerner lets go about what's wrong with the South, Northerners have only to listen:

Arnall sees the South as a great paradox. Grinding poverty in the midst of great natural wealth. There are, he says, many Souths.

He sees the industralization of the South in the next 20 years as a certainty. But he doesn't want it to become a mechanized slum, like so many manufacturing towns of the North.

To achieve this Southern manufacture of its own raw materials, Arnall says over and over again that freight-rate discriminations against the South—and the West—must be given up by the dominant railroads of the North and East. That's his blind spot.

He wants more federal funds for Southern highways, education and health, because he says the South can't meet its own bills for these things till it becomes more prosperous. Georgia alone, he says, needs $15 million a year with which to build schools and pay teachers.

Cotton and corn are declared to be the greatest robbers of the Southeast, half the nation's 150 million eroded acres being in that area. The only thing that can save the land is more diversified farming. Arnall thinks that can come only by more regional—not state—development in more Tennessee Valley Authorities.

See No Threat

Arnall isn't afraid of communism in the South. The thing that scares him is fascism—industrial dictation to the South by the North.

He admits the South has had its own share of demagogues. He divides them into three classes—charlatans, seekers-after-power, politicians who go wrong and sometimes end up stopping assassins' bullets.

Arnall says the South itself can't agree on what to do about the Negro, as witnessed by the varying opinions of John Rankin, Clark Foreman and Richmond editor Virginous Dabney. Arnall's own view is that the Negro's problem is largely an economic one. It's part of the general poverty of the section. But he believes the Negro in the South is in far less danger than in the North, where he lives in black ghettos.

The bill of rights which Arnall proposes for the Negro includes: (1) Equal protection under the law; (2) The rights of citizenship and the right to vote if he si literate; (3) Greater educational opportunity, not limited to vocational training but including higher education for doctors, lawyers, engineers, teachers; (4) Facilities equal to those of the whites for the Negro where segregation exists.

Finally, Arnall the liberal says that the Negro's fundamental economic problems cannot be solved by legislation such as that proposing a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Program plans, speakers, and other information will be sent as soon as plans are complete.

We greet, officially, our new presidents. Mrs. Stewart Colley, Grantville, of the North Georgia Conference, and Mrs. R. M. White, 5026 Sylvan Road, Richmond, of the Virginia Conference. We welcome you into this great sisterhood of service.

Many conferences followed the Jurisdictional plan of an offering at the Communion Service for the hungry children of Europe. Please send me the amounts sent- I want this record.

We are all looking forward to our School of Missions ar Junaluska July 15-23, 1947. Much time and thought have gone into the plans for these days we will spend together. We hope you will find this School a profitable one.

Bishop Arthur Moore and Mr. John Stiles have worked with us to make the arrangements for the Resource people at Junaluska. We hope to have two Orientals, Two Negroes, two Indians. As we work toward one world in Church and State we believe these Resource persons can help guide us toward a solution of some of our Jurisdictional problems.

Learning to live together, "with liberty and justice for all", has been one of the difficult lessons for all peoples since time began.

The Southern Regional Council is doing some very fine work in this field of meeting the changes of our day and age as we learn to live together. If possible, I would like for every Conference to make a contribution to the work they are doing. Twenty-five dollars from each Conference would be a tremendous help, and the material you would receive would keep your group informed about these problems. Address the Southern Regional Council, Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga.

TALMADGE SAYS:

The state administration's program of hypocrisy and lying is on full steam. We receive virtually all of the weekly newspapers from over the state in exchange for The Statesman. In a great many of them, letters are published from the Acting Governor, pledging roads in all sections of the county.

I have recently returned from Southeast Georgia. In one of the Acting Governor's many home counties, he has promised 107 miles of paved roads and has procured the registration of 1,100 negroes in an effort to carry this particular county.

Hollow Promises Last week, one of the members of the House of Representatives, who voted against the white primary bill and against the county unit system, announced for re-election with great fan fare. Included in his announcement for re-election was a letter from Acting Governor Thompson, pledging paved roads in various sections of the county, and some of them pledged were not even a part of the highway system.

All of us in Georgia want good roads. We who live on rural roads are particularly interested in them. We will never get good roads as long as the road program is conducted out of the governor's office and is handled in connection with a political campaign.

Native State

Georgians Welcome Jackie

ATLANTA, Ga. — Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson and Mayor William B. Hartsfield welcomed Jackie Robinson, star first baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers to his native State in a welcome program at City Auditorium last week.

Robinson left Cairo, Ga., more than twenty-five years ago to take up residence in California.

Thompson praised Robinson for his achievement in a brief address, saying: "We are proud of Jackie Robinson here in Georgia, not only as a baseball player, but as a gentleman."

Hartsfield told Robinson "We are proud of the brilliant record you

M. every Sunday. These programs are made possible by the contributions of those interested.*

Today is observed as "Race Relations Sunday" by some of the leading religious denominations. The purpose of this is twofold: First, to preach on this question, and second, to give white Church members an opportunity to make a financial contribution to the Cause of the Negro Christian Education.

Anyone who lives in these critical days is well aware that the question of Race Relations is one that is most acute. This situation is further aggravated because of the restlessness among the Negro race and their impatience to abide their time before they can reach their goal, the agitation and interference by outside influences, the prejudices of the so-called Negro hater and the blind fanaticism of the so-called Negro lover, and these being inflamed by the willingness of a few Southern politicians to sell the birthright of the Southern people for the sake of a little bowl of political pottage.

While the situation is delicate, one must meet it honestly and courageously, I hasten to discuss with you briefly two things:

I. The Attitude:

1. Christ did not come to live and to die upon Calvary, to destroy anything that God ordered in the program and processes of the creation of man. He came to do the will of His father. God made some of His people black and others white. He knew what He was doing, and what He did was well done. What His purposes were, we do not know and cannot question. I am convinced that since He made the Negro black, it is His will that he remain black; and since He made others white, He intended for them to remain white. This is strongly indicated in the words of the prophet Jeremiah in the long ago when he asked, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?"

crisy and lying is on full steam. We receive virtually all of the weekly newspapers from over the state in exchange for The Statesman. In a great many of them, letters are published from the Acting Governor, pledging roads in all sections of the county.

I have recently returned from Southeast Georgia. In one of the Acting Governor's many home counties, he has promised 107 miles of paved roads and has procured the registration of 1,100 negroes in an effort to carry this particular county.

Hollow Promises Last week, one of the members of the House of Representatives, who voted against the white primary bill and against the county unit system, announced for re-election with great fan fare. Included in his announcement for re-election was a letter from Acting Governor Thompson, pledging paved roads in various sections of the county, and some of them pledged were not even a part of the highway system.

All of us in Georgia want good roads. We who live on rural roads are particularly interested in them. We will never get good roads as long as the road program is conducted out of the governor's office and is handled in connection with a political campaign.

Thompson has already pledged more roads than could be built in ten years. These road building pledges remind me of a rotten apple on a tree. You will note that before the apple gets ripe it falls to the earth of its own weight. Thus, it will be with Thompson's road building pledges. The people over the state are already laughing about it. It is falling to the earth of its own accord. Never in the history of any state administration have we seen roads in such a condition that schools in all sections of the state have had to be closed. The man who is responsible for scrapping the rural road program is seeking election on the basis of building roads.

I wonder what he must think of the people of Georgia. Does he think the people are so docile, so easy to practice fraud upon and deceive, that he can take their tax money and lure them with promises he never hopes to keep? Is Mr. Thompson so vain that he thinks even his closest associates would accept his word on anything? Has there ever been a man in the history of Georgia politics, who in the course of 18 months, has been on both sides of every major issue?

New Day Dawns Thompson may not know it, but after the next election, a highway department will be set up in Georgia that will construct roads on the basis of need rather than political expediency. The people of this state will no longer tolerate the expenditure of highway money as though it came out of the governor's personal pocketbook, who with a great gesture, will promise a road and say: "See what I am giving you."

No governor ever gives the people of Georgia anything. It is the people who do the giving. They sweat to pay the taxes. They are the ones who suffer hardships. The chief executive is a servant of the people, not their benefactor. He is the one who draws the taxpayer's money, works in an air-conditioned office, drives a state-owned automobile, and lives in a luxurious mansion.

Pork Barrel In addition to the road promises, you see more and more state job holders. A campaign is beginning. These state job holders do little or no work and in many instances their sole labor for their check is making their endorsement on the back thereof. You see them in the lobby of the best hotels spreading rumors, looking wise, and smoking big cigars.

Thompson hopes to gain his election by three ways:

1. By the negro block vote.

2. By the expenditure of thirty-odd million dollars, over and above the appropriation bill, in any way that he sees fit.

3. By road promises that he never intends to keep.

The people of Georgia will not thus be deceived. The issues are clear and the die is cast. Thompson will be defeated by the most overwhelming majority of any man who ever occupied the governor's office.

Native State

Georgians Welcome Jackie

ATLANTA, Ga. — Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson and Mayor William B. Hartsfield welcomed Jackie Robinson, star first baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers to his native State in a welcome program at City Auditorium last week.

Robinson left Cairo, Ga., more than twenty-five years ago to take up residence in California.

Thompson praised Robinson for his achievement in a brief address, saying: "We are proud of Jackie Robinson here in Georgia, not only as a baseball player, but as a gentleman."

Hartsfield told Robinson "We are proud of the brilliant record you are making in baseball and as an example for young people."

Robinson was elated over the homecoming. Numerous adults and children sought his autograph during the fete.

While the situation is delicate, one must meet it honestly and courageously, I hasten to discuss with you briefly two things:

(1) First, what is the Christian and right attitude toward the relation of the white and black races? ; and,

(2) What is the responsibility of the white people who call themselves Christian toward the Negro race?

I. The Attitude:

Dignitaries Welcome Jackie Robinson

In the center column just above you will see a photographic reproduction of a clipping from "The Pittsburgh Courier," a negro newspaper printed in Pennsylvania and circulated throughout the entire United States.

This clipping tells of a meeting held in the Atlanta City Auditorium Sunday evening, February 1, 1948. The first we had heard of the meeting was when a friend at the newstand called attention of a Statesman' reporter to the article in the Pittsburg paper.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE!

It is certainly strange that both the Atlanta papers with their wide news gathering facilities did not know of it or chose to "ignore" it because of possible political implications.

According to eyewitnesses interviewed by a representative of this newspaper, the meeting was packed with political and social significance.

Two negro basketball games were scheduled to take place in the main auditorium. As an added drawing card, Jackie Robinson, negro ball player for the Brooklyn Dodgers, was chosen to serve as referee.

Robinson, you recall, was the first negro to play in major league baseball on an "integrated" basis, and for that reason is quite famous among the negro population.

"Integrated" ball for the uninitiated is where you have a negro player on first base, a white man on second and so on.

DODGERS SUCCUMB

For a long time negro political leaders in the North had sought to force big league teams to adopt a system of "integration." The Brooklyn Dodgers finally succumbed to these demands and chose as their first negro player Jackie Robinson, who was born in Cairo, Ga.

The negro press has built Jackie up into somewhat of a hero and studiously report his every movement.

So for Jackie Robinson, the meeting in the City Auditorium was quite a home coming. Hundreds of negroes and a sprinkling of whites packed Atlanta's giant civic building to do him honor and watch him referee the basketball games.

ACTING GOVERNOR ARRIVES

Eyewitnesses tell us that Acting Governor Thompson arrived backstage at approximately 8:20 p. m. in company with his executive secretary, Phil Landrum, of Gainesville, Ga.

Thompson, it is said, spied Austin T. Walden, negro political leader and attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and made his way over to where Walden was standing backstage and grasped the negro's hand firmly in his right and stroked the back of his hand with his left, all the time pumping quite vigorously, and exclaiming:

"Colonel, I'm glad to see you. It's been some time since we've had a good chat. Come over here, Phil," said the acting governor, motioning to his chief lieutenant, "I want you to meet Mr. Walden. He's an Atlanta attorney and an old friend of mine."

The acquaintance duly made and preliminary introductions over with, Acting Governor Thompson, Executive Secretary Phil Landrum, Mayor William B. Hartsfield, of Atlanta; Austin T. Walden, Jackie Robinson and other negro leaders made their way to seats on the Atlanta City Auditorium stage amid cheers of the practically all-negro audience assembled there.

PRAISED AS "GENTLEMAN"

Several speakers praised Robinson. Georgia's Acting Governor Thompson spoke of his achievement in a short talk, saying, among other things, "We are proud of Jackie Robinson here in Georgia, not only as a baseball player, but as a gentleman."

Executive Secretary Phil Landrum pulled perhaps the greatest boner of the evening, according to the Atlanta Daily World, which reported the meeting. Phil asked Jackie:

"Jackie, are you going to play second base for the Dodgers next year?"

"I don't see how I can," retorted Jackie, "with Ed Stanky on it."

You see, Jackie Robinson plays first base for the Dodgers.

Congressman Gives Views On Truman Plans

President Should Know By Now How Southerners Feel About 10-Point Legislative Proposal.

"The South must counsel among themselves upon a future course of action," Congressman Stephen Pace told members of the House of Representatives and a packed gallery last week, when the Third District Representative requested and received unanimous consent to speak "out of order."

Following is a partial text of Mr. Pace's address, as recorded in the Congressional Record of last week:

"We have all seen it coming, but we have been hesitant to act because there remained the hope that party ties and established practices would restrain our leaders to stay within the bounds of reason and be guided by the ordi-

Loyalty Investigation Materials

In Defense of American Activities

Walter Gellhorn

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE on Un-American Activities is the direct descendant and inheritor of the tradition of the similarly named committee first formed ten years ago under the chairmanship of Martin Dies. Its creator, the House of Representatives, has authorized it to investigate "un-American propaganda activities," "subversive" and "un-American" propaganda, and propaganda which "attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution."

The Committee itself has never undertaken to define these terms or to catalogue activities which it might deem to be un-American. In one of its recent reports, however, the Committee asserted power "to explore and expose activities by un-American individuals and organizations which, while sometimes being legal, are nonetheless inimical to our American concepts and our American future. . . ." Obviously, this says little more than that the Committee regards as "un-American" any activities or opinions with which it violently disagrees. It is not altogether surprising, therefore, that men who have dared object to the Committee or its methods have on that account been characterized by it as suspect, that opposition to the Spanish government of Generalissimo Franco has been investigated as though it were an un-American activity, and that recognition of "the existence of a God and the all-important fact that the rights of man are derived from God" has been advanced as a test of "Americanism."

The Committee's more ambitious exposés, such as its recent disclosure that Hollywood is a hotbed of Communism, have been well publicized. Persons who are interested in the matter will have been able to form an opinion as to whether the Committee's exertions in these instances have significantly advanced the cause of democracy. Somewhat unfortunately, the newspaper interest in the Hollywood inquiry has obscured other aspects of the Committee's work. Public attention has been largely focused on a single issue, whether a person should be compelled to answer an inquiry into his Communist partisanship. That issue is one concerning which reasonable men of good will sharply disagree. It will not be discussed here. The present article does not deal with the recent exclamatory expeditions against the motion picture literati. It is chiefly concerned, rather, with the Committee's perhaps more subtly manifested interest in the country's intellectual processes. One of its most influential members, Representative Rankin of Mississippi, has promised that the Committee will soon turn its energies to rooting out "subversive" activities in American universities. It may be useful, therefore, to consider the Committee's methods and attitudes in connection with educators and scholars.

One of the Committee's latest publications may be taken as generally illustrative. Recently the Committee reported its conclusions concerning the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, formed as an organization to improve cultural and economic conditions in the South. The Conference, the Committee maintained, is in fact "perhaps the most deviously camouflaged Communist-front organization" despite its "professions, in generalities, of love for America." Characteristically enough, the Committee gave no hearing to the Conference or to any of the individuals (many of whom are eminent in their communities) who are responsible for its affairs. Instead, the Committee penetrated the organization's "disguise" by processes of which the following are examples:

1. In 1934 the now president of the Southern Conference wrote a book on international commerce. In this book, the Committee advises us, the author ventured "certain mild criticisms of Soviet policy," but "he has not recently expressed any such strictures toward either the Soviet Government or the American Communists." Moreover, in his book he quoted several Communist writers and, after recounting some of the radical economic theorizings of the 1840's, stated that out of this welter of ideas "Karl Marx arose as the great philosopher for the laboring man." Those who read the book (rather than the Committee's description of it) will find that the author quoted Marx and the other Communist dogmatists merely to demonstrate that their predictions about an international socialist economy had not come to pass and were not likely to do so. But quote them he did.

From the Committee's reactions to the book in question we may deduce that, to be among the saved,

a) It is highly desirable not to write a book at all; or

b) If one does write a book venturing "criticisms of Soviet policy," one should write a succession of books containing similar criticisms, lest it be thought that failure to repeat one's criticisms implies a change of heart; and

c) Even when it is pertinent to describe a Communist thesis in order to refute it, one should carefully avoid quoting an authoritative Communist spokesman lest one be deemed himself a Communist propagandist; and

d) One should carefully avoid acknowledging that Karl Marx has had a somewhat significant influence upon proletarian thought; and

e) Perhaps, especially, one should not write a book and subsequently become interested in social reform.

2. The secretary of the Southern Conference, who had studied at Union Theological Seminary, in 1936 wrote a book on "aspects of social Christianity in the last three decades of the nineteenth century." Among the Christian social reformers of that period was the late George Herron, and he was accordingly discussed along with many others in the same general category. Herron passed through several stages of conflict with the prevailing attitudes of his co-religionists and contemporaries. Toward the close of his life he became a Marxist and a philosophical revolutionist. This development in Professor Herron's thinking was duly described by the author. The Committee report blandly asserted that the author had defended Herron's "views on violence." Nothing in the book supports the assertion. The author was scrupulously expository.

From this we learn that, to be immune against attack as a Communist sympathizer,

a) It is best not to write a scholarly book about persons whose opinions have not been endorsed by the Committee;

b) If, notwithstanding this advice, one does write such a book, it must be written as a positive attack rather than as an objective description.

3. A former secretary of the Southern Conference, a well-known university professor, had in 1938 written a book about the debased sharecropper and tenant farmer economy of certain portions of the South. The Committee noted that in the year following its publication the volume had been favorably reviewed by a Communist functionary. This of course rendered it unnecessary for the Committee to examine the content of the book. It may be said in passing that the book was most warmly praised by all the reviewers whose opinions appeared in the respectably capitalist press. This circumstance was overlooked by the Committee.

From this we learn that, to avoid being cast into the outer darkness,

a) One should not write books calling attention to certain shortcomings of the South; or

b) One's publisher should not let one's book fall into the hands of a Communist book reviewer unless the Communist has first promised to denounce it.

4. The former chairman and now honorary president of the Southern Conference is President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina. Dr. Graham is of course not a Communist; even the Committee admits as much. But, according to the Committee, he is "one of those liberals who show a predilection for affiliation to various Communist-inspired front organizations." Dr. Graham's achievements as university administrator and public servant, including his recent work as the American representative on the United Nation's committee to conciliate the Dutch and Indonesians, are so well-known that refutation of the Committee's attack is superfluous. Consider, however, the implications of the Committee's comment upon Dr. Graham. He has, in times past, allegedly associated with groups or been active in causes for which the Committee has distaste. Through this association he has acquired, derivatively, a taint. His energetic interest in another organization therefore gives rise in the Committee's mind to the belief that it, too, is tainted. This conclusion rests on the hypothesis that the tainted individual (in this instance Dr. Graham) would not be interested in an untainted group or, alternatively, that the previously pure group has become tainted by virtue of being exposed to the unpure persons (like Dr. Graham) who have joined it. By a parity of reasoning we must, of course, count as "Communist-fronts" the North Carolina Historical and Literary Society, which Dr. Graham has faithfully served as president, and also, no doubt, Phi Beta Kappa and the President's Committee on Civil Rights, since he has been an active member of both.

The absurdity of thus establishing "guilt by association" does not diminish its danger to the intellectual life of America. For example, American scientists are already fearful that possible denunciation on political grounds may prevent the normal internationalism of scientific inquiry. Their concern is not without cause, for one of the Committee's investigators has let it be known that membership in international organizations and correspondence with foreign scientists have aroused the Committee's suspicions.

If American intellectuals in general are to be adjudged guilty of un-Americanism because in the Committee's eyes they have associated with the wrong people, the safe course to pursue in a perilous world is to associate with people of whom the Committee approves. If American scholarly writers are to be politically categorized on the basis of the Committee's un-scholarly reading of their books, they must be careful to write as the Committee pleases, to choose their subjects cautiously, to affirm their personal "Americanism" and to declare their anti-communism no matter how irrelevant it may be to the topic under discussion. Above all, they must repress ideas and attitudes not in conformity with prevailing opinions, which might on that account be deemed by the Committee to be "inimical to our American concepts and our American future." For American scholars and educators must be mindful that if the Committee denounces them, no matter how mistakenly and no matter how disastrous the personal consequences, there is no redress. There is no action for damages against the Committee members; they enjoy and rely upon Congressional immunity from suit. Even if the denunciation be based on erroneous information calculatingly furnished by one of the Committee's witnesses, an injured person would be remediless as against the Committee's informant. Nor can one demand that the Committee grant a hearing, in which one can refute slanders and exhibit the truth. The resolution which created the Committee gave it discretion to devise its own procedures; and, exercising that discretion, the Committee has not customarily conducted its inquiries with nice regard for fairness or regularity.

The Committee is now solidly entrenched as one of the standing committees of the House of Representatives. Its discontinuance by resolution of that body is, at least for the time being, beyond the range of political probability. Are there then no ways to diminish this Committee's threat to freedom of the mind? Can the courts do what Congress will not do, abolish the Committee? Or, if the Committee is not ended, can judges effectively control its procedure, in order to protect witnesses and others against abusive treatment?

The courts themselves will soon pass on these questions. The authority of the Committee has been challenged in suitable proceedings by persons who are convinced of the illegality of the Committee's actions and of the impropriety of a legislative inquisition into political attitudes. Speculation concerning the outcome of the now pending litigation is probably fruitless. Yet, one or two general observations may appropriately be made.

We Americans are committed, as the prime article of our political faith, to the institution of the elected legislature. The legislature is the basic mechanism of popular government where large numbers of citizens must express their will concerning many and varied issues. They can do so most feasibly through representatives rather than directly. Democracy becomes a mere slogan, rather than a working principle, if the legislature does not possess real authority to choose among policies or to emphasize one above another, to stimulate or criticize executive activity or method, to focus public attention upon and to debate the merits of current issues.

If a legislature is to do these things, if it is to cope wisely with governmental problems, it must be adequately informed. Its power to investigate is one of the main elements of a legislature's effectiveness, one of the chief barriers against an impotence which would quickly discredit democratic processes. In the history of our national legislature literally hundreds of investigating committees have ably performed their function of informing Congress and the country about matters of public moment. The energetic explorations of these committees have vitalized the legislative process. The freedom with which they have pursued their inquiries has often conflicted with the desire of individuals to be let alone. But the clash between public necessity and private preference has become an increasingly familiar one in our complex society. It has generally been resolved in favor of permitting democratic government to function forcefully.

There is sound ground to believe that the House Committee on Un-American Activities obstructs rather than advances the people's welfare. Its reports are calculated to confuse rather than enlighten, distort as well as reveal facts. The device of the investigating committee, like other instruments of democracy, is susceptible of being abused. Even so, it is doubtful that the courts should intervene. In the long run it is probably best that Congress itself be the judge of what inquiries are necessary, and that it determine the general methods by which they should be pursued. It is difficult to forecast what information of legislative value will be developed through a Congressional investigation. If courts undertake to make the forecast, they may unwittingly prevent another branch of the government from discharging its functions.

There is danger, moreover, in relying on the courts as the sole guardians of our liberties. The protection of the courts, if it is available at all, can be invoked only by those who, having challenged a legislative committee's powers, subject themselves to contempt proceedings. One can scarcely anticipate that every abused witness will seek refuge in the sheltering arms of the judiciary. To do so he must be willing to bear the financial burdens of litigation and, possibly even more important in some cases, the humiliation of being a defendant in a criminal proceeding. Before resisting an improperly inquisitive committee, a witness will also be given pause by realization that unless a court agrees with his appraisal of the committee, he may find himself in jail, a convicted criminal. All in all, it is improbable that courts can effectively police legislative committees: first, because a committee's abuses would have to be extreme before a court would take cognizance of them; and, second, because the present methods of challenging a committee's behavior subject the challenger to grave risks which will deter litigation by all but the most courageous. It is likely, too, that sporadic judicial control over the conduct of legislative committees might collaterally have a highly undesirable consequence. The public might be led to suppose that whatever behavior the courts had not interdicted was behavior of which the courts affirmatively approved.

If more honorable methods are to be imposed on the House Committee on Un-American Activities, they should be imposed by the House itself. Here there is no question of power. The House can direct its agent to conduct itself in a way which befits the dignity of the national legislature of the world's greatest democracy. It can do so by adopting a resolution, such as the one offered by Congresswoman Douglas, which will permit a witness to have the assistance of counsel; to make an oral or written statement which is relevant to matters about which he has been interrogated; to cross-examine a person (whether a Committee member or another witness) who has used the Committee's proceedings to attack his character or reputation; and to offer a reasonably limited denial, defense or explanation.

These proposed requirements are not technical; they are not calculated to change a legislative investigation into the counterpart of a judicial trial. Indeed, most legislative committees (unlike the House Committee on Un-American Activities) regularly permit witnesses to make prepared statements before they are questioned. For if witnesses in an inquiry can do no more than respond to specific questions, they may be prevented from testifying in a fully rounded fashion. One of the values of public hearings in legislative investigations is the resulting airing of information and opinions, including those of persons who are under investigation; this value has of course been largely lost by the House Committee, because of its insistent refusal in many cases to hear at all from persons it desires to attack, or its disinclination, when it does summon those persons as witnesses, to allow them the privilege of making a statement. Justice Frankfurter, before becoming a member of the Supreme Court, expressed belief that opportunity to cross-examine was an "essential decency" when a person was under investigation. And Judge Ferdinand Pecora, who was counsel to the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency when in the early thirties it so fruitfully exposed irresponsible banking practices and the methods of securities manipulation, recently remarked that

> . . . the Investigating Committee should not indulge in hearsay or opinion evidence—for then anybody in the world can be smeared through the worst kind of character assassination from which no one could be immune, without an opportunity to face his accuser. I exposed . . . not by smear or through the opinions of others, but by force of their own testimony and activities. Unlike the present Committee, I did not call A. first to ask him if B. was an ethical banker. I called B. and questioned him. . . .

There is, in sum, nothing impractical about a fair procedure in legislative investigations. The House ought to impose one upon a committee which, after a decade of irresponsible behavior, earned the judgment of the American Civil Liberties Union that "Nothing in recent years has been as un-American as the conduct of the hearings of the Congressional Committees on un-Americanism."

More important than any procedural reform, however, is conscious opposition to the Committee's bullying. The dominant pressures in the country today are toward an uncritical conformity, and toward a fearful unwillingness to preserve the civil rights of unpopular groups. The Committee implies that those who oppose it are Communists or tools of the Communists. And thus it intimidates many who ought to be most eager in their defense of the realm of ideas. It is more comfortable, and certainly safer, to worry about attacks on democracy in foreign countries than to be sensitive about non-democratic trends in our own. But if our American democracy is to continue in a state of health, dissident opinion must not be stifled here.

It bears repeating that many of the institutions we regard as basic, and many of the concepts we view as unassailably American, were in the beginning advocated by "radicals." Our greatest presidents were without exception non-conformists—Washington, who overthrew the existing government by force and violence; Jefferson, a sodden subverter of national institutions, and a foreign agent (of the French), to boot; Jackson, the rouser of the rabble; Lincoln, who destroyed the vested property rights of the South; Wilson, the wild-eyed college professor; and Roosevelt, the traitor to his class.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, workmen's compensation legislation, the income tax, the Social Security Act, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and meat rationing have one element in common. Each one of them was opposed at the outset on the ground that it was "communistic." Twenty-eight years ago, five members of the Socialist Party, elected to the New York State Legislature, were denied the seats to which the voters had sent them because the Socialist Party's "doctrines are un-American and opposed to organized government." Today the Socialist leader, Norman Thomas, has acquired almost the status of an Elder Statesman of the Republic. At the turn of the century, Governor John Peter Altgeld of Illinois was execrated as an anarchist. Just the other day, the one hundredth anniversary of his birth was marked by a memorial meeting in which Altgeld was eulogized by a Supreme Court justice, a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church, the Republican governor of Illinois, and the Democratic mayor of Chicago.

American history is a history of men who refused to be cowed; who, though at first widely viewed as sinners, came in time to be regarded as saints; who, moved by idealism, declined to accept prevailing patterns as unchangeable, but insisted instead that eagerness to correct imperfections was consistent with devotion to American institutions. It would be ridiculous to suggest that the "radicalism" of today always becomes the orthodoxy of tomorrow. Many "fool ideas" are fool ideas; and time proves many "crackpots" to be everything they are cracked up to be. But certainly our history makes plain the lesson that the throttling of new ideas at birth is not the way to assure national progress.

Thanks in good part to the Committee, it has today become overly easy to confuse reform with subversion, to ascribe Americanism only to those who are vocally identified with majority opinions. By facilely labeling as Communist whatever may be merely unconventional, the Committee and the groups from which it draws its chief support have moved with increasing boldness toward thought control. Those who believe that attempted restrictions on freedom of the mind and spirit are the most striking un-Americanisms must have the courage to say so now, before the attempts are wholly successful. With Emerson they must ask, > the plough or sail, > or land or life,

> For what avail
> if freedom fail?

New REBEL YELL in Dixie

By HODDING CARTER

The good fight for effective democracy grows in the sweet magnolia country. This is the roll of those who battle the South's determined opponents of progress

A STRONG flame, brighter and infinitely more cleansing than the fiery cross of the Klan, is burning throughout the South today. Increasingly there are hands to feed it, and voices to proclaim its meaning. The hands are not clenched in hate as are the demagogue's, nor are the voices as shrill and blatant; but the flame of purposeful liberalism is lighting up dark and tragic corners of a harried region.

Liberalism, progressiveness, vision. These are abused words, too loosely used, often too narrowly defined. The Southern liberal fits into no mold. He is rarely a theorist. He is not bound to an ideology that excludes the dissenter, nor does he recite a manifesto as if it were a prayer. He is as often condemned by the distant left as by the near-by right. He has a deep-rooted, provincial love for his homeland. His objectives are usually what are termed limited ones, and he may differ even from his fellows in his proposals for attaining them. But he shares a common determination to make democracy work and thrive through individual and concerted effort on the battle line itself and not from a distant ivory tower.

You don't hear too much about him. He is an educator, an editor, a churchman, a representative of organized labor, a writer, a political leader, a business or professional man, a farmer. Usually he would be embarrassed if you praised him for his courage, or labeled him a liberal. Even when he organizes, his organization is loosely knit, and he may be unaware that his neighbor shares his own convictions.

As Harry Ashmore, the brilliant young editor of the Arkansas Gazette, puts it: "I figure there are thousands in the region, men of good will who are really getting the job done where it counts, and the hell of it is that us so-called experts on the South don't even know who they are." But there are multiple thousands who know who Harry Ashmore is, and of the conscientious, day-in-day-out job he and many others do on the editorial page and from the platform to put the South's problems, achievements and unreached goals in perspective.

And certainly this much is true. No other region in the nation is producing today so many and such effective spokesmen for social and economic progress and for a new evaluation of human relationships as is the South. And nowhere else do such men of good will work against as difficult and complex a background.

It is a mistake to assume that liberalism is a new force in the South. Jeffersonian democracy stemmed from Virginia; the blunt fighting spirit of Andrew Jackson found its great support among the yeoman farmers and frontiersmen of the South and the Southwest. Populism raged like a forest fire across the post-Reconstruction South before it died beneath the counterblast of an evil, deliberately kindled racism.

The Southern Bourbon held largely an uneasy sway before Reconstruction; and if hopeless men turned to other men of relative substance during and after that bitter period, it was in great part because the leaders were articulate and determined, possessed of so recent a background of military command, and above all were exemplars of a vanished stability. Nor was the later rule of the ultraconservative and reactionary unchallenged. Most of the Southern demagogues emerged from the turbulence and unrest of men yearning for political and material change and a warmer place in the sun; and it was as tragic as it was shameful that they and their adversaries alike capitalized upon racial animosities and fears to hold or to wrest away power.

Demagogues Backed Reforms

Of all the great Southern demagogues, only Huey Long did not resort to the theme of white supremacy, the easy, incendiary theme; but what is lost sight of is that the majority of the notorious race-baiters also advocated and sometimes accomplished sweeping benefits for the Southern masses. By far the greater number of Southerners in the New Deal Congresses supported the vast social programs that were their hallmarks; a Bilbo sought agrarian reform, a Long met, though at fearful cost, the road and school and hospital needs of his state; a Rankin bulldozed the TVA through the House of Representatives.

But they wrongly capitalized upon or ignored, almost without exception, the South's ancient, portentous problem in human relationships: the contradictory, enforced status of inferiority of the Negro in a professed democracy. This problem still haunts the South; but today, men of good will and courage are making headway against the forces of neglect, incitement and fear.

I have said that their objectives may be described as limited ones. But they are living and working with realities and not with abstractions. Man's antipathy for the dissimilar, for reason of race, religion, culture or even nationality, is not Southern in origin. It has dogged every civilization and every century of recorded history, and is present today in every part of the world.

In the South, the expressions of antipathies are more acute than elsewhere for a number of somber reasons that are generally overlooked by the advocates of sudden, federally imposed change. The Negro came as a savage chattel in chains. Representing two thirds of the wealth of the South at the time of the Civil War, he was freed through war's violence and destruction, without recompense. Almost immediately afterward, he achieved, without experience or education, a political codominance over his masters; and that dominance was ended only by devious and sometimes bloody means.

Because of the pressure of his numbers—diminishing relatively now but still one fourth of the South's total population and in some areas a majority of the population—he was considered a political, social and economic threat to the dominant group. And because of the darkly illogical north European and Anglo-Saxon aversion to interracial commingling, except on one-sided and prescribed terms, he has been set apart by law, by custom and by environment. As a result of this shared, unhappy past, he has endured a discrimination almost as long-lasting and cruel as that which the resisting American Indian has known.

The Southern liberal is aware of this past. He works within its receding restrictions, if for no other reason than that there is as yet no other way for him to work effectively. A suspect among the defiant reactionaries at home, who brand him a Communist, a "Nigger lover" and a Yankee tool, he is no less a target for the militant, all-or-nothing crusaders who wage their war at a distance.

If I may be personal about so personal a matter as mail, I can be sure that if I advocate or praise the local attainment of such objectives as equal hospital facilities, equal pay and facilities in the separate school systems or the inclusion of a Negro juror on a trial jury, I will get equally condemnatory letters from opposed correspondents whose only common ground is a dislike for what I have said. The proponent of immediate ending of segregation—a favorite phrase is "at the point of the bayonet"—will denounce me for endorsing the status quo. The yearner for the good old days will whiplash me for endangering it.

This continuous experience is shared by the scores of fellow Southern rebels with whom I have swapped stories. Yet the concrete objectives we espouse are those which are most desired—according to so eminent a student as Gunnar Myrdal—by the Southern Negro, and the least objected to by the resisting white and therefore the most readily obtainable.

Putting first things first, we work for equality in the courts, school facilities, job opportunity and the right to vote. Northern critics of both races attack us for leaving the issue of mass segregation alone, for being unconcerned about that nebulous thing called social equality, for questioning the over-all wisdom of the present civil-rights program or for discouraging the idea that assimilation is the only way out.

So much for the background. What is being done against its reality and who is doing it?

I would say that the greatest common contribution the Southern liberals are making is their unending public and outspoken effort to change the climate of traditional Southern opinion. This business of speaking out against social injustices and in favor of orderly change is not as easy as it might seem.

Many Listeners Are Hostile

The forum may be a university classroom—and since almost all higher education in the South is provided by state universities, academic freedom is something less than absolute. The spokesman may be a union organizer—and the South is not yet adjusted to organized labor and uniform pay scales. A minister may bespeak applied Christianity—and much of the South still makes mental reservations about the brotherhood of man. An office seeker may advocate economic and political justice—but the race-baiter's voice is vindictive and effective still. A newspaper editor reveals shamefully unfair dealings—and the community which supports him may take violent, even personal exception.

Yet in every town and city in the South, there are men and women who are swimming against an old and less turbulent tide, and making headway. But because they are rarely dramatic, and even more rarely seek distant applause, the faraway zealot is unimpressed.

I received a letter recently from a Pennsylvanian, whom I do not know and who had subscribed to my newspaper about a year ago probably out of curiosity. He wrote that he had been reading the newspaper closely every day and regretted that he had not discovered one editorial denouncing intolerance.

During this period of such unexpectedly close scrutiny, my newspaper had set forth goals or recorded achievements not entirely alien to tolerance. We had campaigned for the inclusion of Negroes on the police force. We had published a series of illustrated articles on the woeful state of Negro school facilities in the county and the principally Negro slums in the town. We had vigorously endorsed the construction of two swimming pools, equal in size and cost, and had seen the proposal approved (with the help of some 400 Negro votes) and construction begun. We had chronicled the county's approval of a low-cost hospital, with identical white and Negro wings, the construction of one new Negro grammar school in our town and the authorization for another.

Among other things, we had editorialized against the States' Righters

To many kids, homes are just places to sleep every night, and I've seen some pretty poor excuses for "homes" too. I never believed that 12 people could live in one small unheated room until I saw, with my own eyes, twelve Chinese living that way. It was then that I realized why many children in China were sent away by their parents to join either the Communist or the Nationalist armies (it doesn't really make any difference to them) just for the daily rice rations and warm-padded khaki uniforms.

In Siam I saw large families living aboard filthy broken-down river barges. Near Haifa, on the road to Israel, the more fortunate Arab refugees I passed carried moldy home-sewn tents with them, while the less fortunate slept out in the open.

On the desert near Cairo, I saw a family of eight huddling together inside their home, made of two rusty oil drums with a worn-out canvas tarpaulin thrown across the top. In a badly bombed-out section of Berlin a little girl took me to her home—an old German tank which had red geraniums growing out of the broken gun turret! And thousands of kids in Germany feel fortunate to live in the dark, cold cells of old air-raid bunkers!

Now I understand why these young people are not able to learn to think straight—they are never given the opportunity to learn to do so. And it's no wonder they are so easily led astray by high-pressure military and political groups who give them rosy pictures of their idea of a "peaceful world."

To most of you it might have been discouraging continually to meet children who are surrounded by poor living conditions, illiteracy, prejudice and hatreds, and by grownups who have neither the time nor the inclination to teach them right from wrong. But in traveling through five war zones, the bombed-out countries of Europe and the Far East, and even behind the Iron Curtain, I found young people who might well be embittered and dissatisfied but who seldom complain and truly have hopes for a better world when they grow up.

In Greece, where civil wars have been going on ever since the kids can remember, I met a sixteen-year-old boy at Athens College who said to me, "We young people in Greece are quite used to fights, riots and shootings, but if there is another world war, we do hope that no bombs are ever dropped on America." I admired his protective attitude in wanting to shield our Americans from the horrors of war which are so familiar to the Greeks, and asked him why he felt this way.

"Because," he said, "my classmates and I would like to visit New York City someday, and we don't want it blown to pieces before we get there!"

After five months of traveling I finally landed at La Guardia Field, and was glad to be back. On my trip I had had two cameras stolen, which I had to smile about and say, "Well, someone got enough money for a few meals." A crate containing several thousand dollars' worth of toys meant for French orphans had been looted right in the customs house at Le Havre . . . again I had to keep my patience and maintain a "good will" attitude.

In spite of these difficulties, I bear no ill feelings toward any of the grownups who were responsible for the more discouraging incidents of my trip. Also I can only feel sorry for the selfish adults who are responsible for much of the disorganized and confusing lives of the less fortunate kids in the world. I'm sure that when these "sad characters" were young, they were—as all kids are—kind, generous, trusting and able to laugh once in a while.

But as the years go by, it seems that bad breaks and disillusionment often change people and make them selfish and embittered. It is too bad that there is no way of stopping the birthdays of everyone in the world after they reach the age of twenty-one. If this miracle were only possible, today and forever after, you may be sure the kids in Manila would be playing with dolls and blocks instead of Daddy's revolver. THE END fantastic proposal to strip the federal government of virtually all its powers and economic programs, against the racial discrepancy in teachers' pay, and against the beating by a deputy of a Negro prisoner who had killed a white man. We had applauded the inclusion of a Negro on a jury panel for the first time since Reconstruction, the slum clearance and aid to education legislation in Congress, and the increase in Negro farm ownership in Mississippi. We had awarded identical cash scholarships to the outstanding seniors in the white and the Negro high schools.

But since I didn't get around to an editorial denouncing intolerance, I herewith denounce it; and I would like to send carbon copies not only to those home folks who did not like some of my opinions but also to those Northern liberals who continue to write long and castigating letters about "you cowardly Southern pseudo democrats."

I don't think that many other Southern editors get around to denouncing intolerance. They're too busy. Take Virginius Dabney, of Richmond, who won last year's Pulitzer prize for editorials; and Jonathan Daniels, of Raleigh, who speaks in North Carolina and in Washington for enlightened democracy; and Wright Bryan of the Atlanta Journal and Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution who day in and day out battle the Klan, the low estate of Georgia politics, the vestiges of the lynch spirit, and the disintegration of the state's public school system.

There are Ed Meeman of the Memphis Press-Scimitar, who took on the Crump machine and saw it licked last summer; Colonel Harry Ayers, the old war horse of Anniston, Alabama, who doesn't like Winner of the Pulitzer prize in 1946 for writing, liberal Hodding Carter is well known for his oft-expressed, straight-from-the-shoulder views on the sociological-economic troubles that plague the South. He began newspapering in 1929 on the New Orleans Item-Tribune, and in 1939 became the editor and publisher of the Delta Democrat-Times, in Greenville, Mississippi.

Dixiecrats or discrimination; the Reverend Sylvester Green, minister turned editor of the Durham, North Carolina, Herald, who alone among Southern daily newspaper editors plumped for the civil rights program.

The list could be lengthened to fill a page: George McLean, of Tupelo, Mississippi, concentrating on the economic development of his TVA-transformed region, as a vital preliminary to social progress; Mark Ethridge, the internationally noted publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Mississippi-born and bred and the first director of the wartime FEPC; the two young Alabama weekly editors, Neil Davis, of Auburn, and Charles Dobbins, of Montgomery; Edgar W. Ray of the Tampa Times, Alfred Mynders of the Chattanooga Times, and in South Carolina, George Buchanan of the Columbia Record and Wilton Hall of the Anderson Independent. And the controversial veteran, Aubrey Williams, with his Southern Farmer in Montgomery, and Nat Caldwell, of the Nashville Tennessean, and the Tennessean's publisher, Silliman Evans.

I could name many more, and I doubt that any other section could match this editorial roster.

The newspapers have the largest audience. But their effectiveness is probably matched by the work of Southern educators. The first person who generally comes to mind when North Carolina is mentioned is Senator Frank Graham, who for 19 years was president of the famed University of North Carolina until another Tarheel progressive, Governor Kerr Scott, appointed him last spring to a United States senatorial vacancy.

Fine Record as an Educator

What Frank Graham's magic formula is, no one knows. But the influence of this man extends through his students and his own activities throughout the South and beyond. Around him he gathered the ablest faculty in the South and fearless students, who have taken their place by the hundreds as younger leaders in every Southern state. He has defied every Southern taboo (he served as one of the two Southern members on the President's Committee on Civil Rights) and he has identified himself—with militant liberal organizations everywhere.

His was not the only light at the university. Among the nation's sociologists, Dr. Howard W. Odum ranks high; and he stands higher yet among men of good will, for his scholarly, factual, hopeful interpretations of the new South. The effect of the teachings of Dr. Odum and his able colleagues, Dr. Guy B. Johnson and Dr. Rupert B. Vance, is incalculable.

Here again it is difficult to single out. Educators in a different and more difficult category are President A. D. Beittel of Talladega College, Alabama, white director of a Negro institution, and a trio of patient miracle workers in the field of public education for Negroes: P. H. Easom, of Mississippi, N. C. Newbold, of North Carolina, and Ed McCuistion, of Alabama, directors of Negro education in their respective states.

The campuses of every college and university in the South contribute to the roster of teachers who are breaking down old misconceptions and fears and inertia where it will do the most good: teachers like Miss Florence Sytz, director of field work instruction of the Tulane University school of social work, James Silver of the University of Mississippi, and Bell Irwin Wiley and David Calvin Kytle of Emory University, to name four at random. Most of them survive the ridiculous charge of radicalism—a charge less often heard now—but some, like former President Homer Rainey of the University of Texas, pay a bitter penalty for academic courage.

It may be argued that editors and teachers are not representative, and that the venturing spirit cannot survive the test of political approval. Certainly the records prove that in general the successful Southern politician either shuts his eyes to the South's racial dilemma, or, what is worse, capitalizes upon it.

But demagoguery is no longer a certain Sesame. A year ago the old-line Tennessee politicians threw the book at Estes Kefauver, branding him a Negro lover, a labor tool and a Red; but Kefauver toppled the Crump machine and won a seat in the United States Senate. In Arkansas, at about the same time, Sidney McMath, a young Marine veteran, withstood similar mudslinging and captured the governorship. It is significant that after their victories, Tennessee in effect abolished the poll tax, and McMath put poll-tax elimination high on his legislative calendar.

Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama, likewise continues to triumph over his state's race-baiters and reactionaries; and in Mississippi, two years ago, John Stennis, a quiet conservative who endorsed the then controversial federal aid to education program and refused to deny his opponents' allegations that he was too sympathetic toward the Negro, won in a five-man contest that included John Rankin; and Senator Claude "Red" Pepper is a hardy Florida perennial despite his departures from the Southern norm.

COLLIER'S — "His last stroke of genius plunged five city blocks into total darkness" — NED HILTON Such men may be exceptions still, but their numbers are growing. A Kerr Scott is elected in North Carolina, a Lyndon Johnson goes to Congress from Texas, an Ashton Williams, of Lake City, South Carolina, organizes a Truman ticket in Governor Thurmond's face. And conscientious office seekers throughout the South are discovering that a candidate who reasonably discusses societal obligations, economic stresses and the need for moral and political reorientations is no longer doomed to defeat.

One factor in the changing scene, still minimized as a force and not yet full grown in the South, is organized labor. Obviously, the unions are special pleaders and not disinterested in their own advancement. But union leadership in the South, particularly that of the C.I.O., has worked effectively to make plain the identity of economic interests of all Southern workers of both races, the stupidity of frictional contact, and the importance of the ballot.

The C.I.O. has put Southern leaders on the job, and these include intelligent and perceptive men, whose outlook is broader than their organizational activity itself. As a somewhat bewildered industrialist described them, "They're actually respectable people." And the definition fits such field directors as gentle Lucy Randolph Mason, of Virginia, Southeastern field representative of the C.I.O., and state C.I.O. directors Paul Christopher, of Tennessee, R. W. Starnes, of Louisiana, Franz Daniels, of South Carolina, William Smith, of North Carolina and C. H. Gillman, of Georgia.

Labor leadership is immature in many areas of the nation; but it is avoiding some of the old mistakes in this homogenous region where economic imbalances lie at the root of nearly every evil.

There exists another force for good which is potentially more powerful than any other. The South is a region of churchgoers, and the influence of religious leaders is strong. Today there is a profound emphasis, by Protestant and Catholic clergy and lay leaders, upon the ethical implications of Christianity in the field of human relations.

One of the noblest stories I know is the labor of the Reverend Harold Purcell, a Catholic priest who came to Alabama from New York in the thirties. Four years ago, Father Purcell decided that the Negroes of Montgomery needed better schools, and almost singlehanded he raised $400,000 from contributors throughout the South and the nation. His school opened 18 months ago.

But the school was neither Father Purcell's first achievement nor his last. When he first came to Montgomery he opened the tiny mission and clinic of St. Jude, for religious and welfare work among Negroes. A few years later he had begged and borrowed enough money to buy a 40-acre site for his City of St. Jude; and there he has built a social center, a clinic and a beautiful bell-towered church. Now he has asked for bids on a 158-bed $500,000 hospital for Negroes. Two thirds of the money has come from contributors. The other third will be given by the government under the Hill-Burton hospital building act. The Hill in the act's title, incidentally, is Lister Hill of Alabama.

Though not all church effort can be as spectacular, there are scores of Negro schools and colleges entirely or in part supported by Southern churches throughout the South. But the religious impact is more far-reaching than that. What the ministers are saying from their pulpits, what the organized lay groups of the churches are recognizing, what the college Y.M.C.A.s and Y.W.C.A.s are inculcating is that Christianity's basic strength lies in its concepts of man's brotherhood, man's dignity and man's responsibility for his brother. The inclusive significance of those concepts is not universally accepted, but there are hundreds of Southern church people who can tell you that they are increasingly effective.

Men Inspired by Christianity

Mrs. M. E. Tilley, of Atlanta, the other Southern member of the President's Civil Rights Committee, identifies herself simply as a churchwoman. It is applied Christianity that animates such clergymen as Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, Episcopalian Bishop William R. Moody, of Lexington, the Reverend Monsignor T. James McNamara, of Savannah, and the Reverend H. Brent Schaeffer, of Jackson, Mississippi, Lutheran minister and uncompromising advocate of equal rights.

For such men as these—and their hundreds of fellow workers—Christian social relations signify implemented brotherhood. And unless we believe that religion has no force whatsoever, it is undeniable that liberalism within the churches has been an inestimably strong factor in creating new attitudes of fair dealing in the South.

To some extent there is co-ordination within the various religious denominations, and the labor movement is, of course, organized. But Southern liberalism otherwise lacks a unified base except for one six-year-old organization, the Southern Regional Council, with headquarters in Atlanta.

The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is biracial, nondenominational and nonpolitical. It does not indulge in tom-tom beating, parades, or lengthy pronunciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's—or from the nation's concern. And its board of directors and membership cut across both racial and occupational lines to include outstanding white and Negro leaders in every field, with state divisions in 11 Southern states.

George S. Mitchell, the SRC's executive director and a wise and forthright man, explains its principles this way:

"SRC believes that the South can be prosperous and healthy, freed of poverty, prejudice and fear. It believes, in the name of democracy, Christianity and common decency, that the Negro must have equal opportunity in the schoolroom, on the job and at the polls.

"Our objectives are equal justice; a square deal for all our people in hospitals and medical care, schools, jobs, farming opportunities, veterans' services and housing; and full citizenship for everyone in voting, jury service and representation on official bodies."

That's an ambitious, long-range program. It won't be attained this year or next, and the SRC membership knows it. Meanwhile, the SRC hacks away. It has supplied basic facts for successful campaigns to secure Negro policemen in Atlanta, Memphis, Nashville, Conway, South Carolina, and other towns and cities. (Some 65 Southern communities now have Negro policemen.) It has at various times urged upon each Southern governor a positive program to assure civil rights for all Southerners, and has been amazingly successful in getting salutary facts about health, housing, education, voting and law enforcement into the Southern press.

It has been influential in having local ordinances passed curbing the activities of the Klan; has persuaded a number of white churches to be hosts to interracial meetings, and served as technical consultant for the Jacksonville, Florida, Self-Survey, which achieved some 70 specific improvements in the Negro community. It helped form the Negro community centers in such cities as Macon and Savannah, and was instrumental in having Kentucky's Day law amended to allow Negroes to receive medical and nursing education in institutions formerly open only to white students.

The SRC is widely respected in the South. And, in the opinion of the New York Times, "Progress can surely be made if liberals, North and South, will sit down and reason together along the lines this group suggests."

So there they are—Southern newspapermen, church people, educators and business, professional and labor leaders—who are credited so little for what is actually a great deal. They are animated by a love of the region in which they live, and a conviction of its worth and essential decency and promise. In this they differ from many liberals elsewhere whose approach to the South and its problems is a mixture of contempt, mockery, punitive threat and unrealistic demands. In less complex areas, their purposes and achievements may seem elementary and small. But they know better. They may not agree with the rest of the country, or even among themselves, about every proposal for greater social justice. But justice is their common goal.

I am reminded by what the late William Alexander Percy, the Southern poet, philanthropist and man of gentle and courageous spirit, once told me:

"You can't do anything on the grand scale. But you can work for your fellow citizens in your own town. It isn't national leaders we need so much as men of good will in each of the little towns of America. Try to keep Greenville a decent place by being a correct citizen yourself; for it's the total of all the Greenvilles that can make the kind of country we want or don't want." THE END a little, afraid that she might remember about the date and be embarrassed.

"But, Mac," she would say, "why didn't you say something, remind me, or something?" And she would stand there with a hurt frown on her face, with a shadow of sorrow in her fine eyes. "I feel awful about it, Mac. Forgetting all about the date, I mean, and then this thing this afternoon, and I can't—"

He cramped the jeep out of its parking space, straightened it with one mighty hand, while his huge foot bore down hard on the accelerator. Well, maybe she would not remember at all, and that would be best.

IT WAS about half past two, and already three or four people were gathering in the shop, when Adam Bent arrived. With him was a publisher's man named Smith, whom Ernestine knew. But she had eyes only for Adam.

He was middle-sized, slender and tanned deeply from the sun of foreign lands. He wore a linen coat, a yellow shirt and flannel trousers and, knotted about his strong bare throat, a foulard scarf of great splendor. He smiled into Ernestine's eyes, and his hand was strong and steady in her own. "Miss Moore," he said, "I am delighted." His eyes said that he was more than delighted.

The three of them stood aside from the customers. Smith said, "Ernestine has done a magnificent job of pushing your books. Terrific."

Adam's eyes swept slowly and appreciatively up to Ernestine's face. "And you have read them yourself, Miss Moore?"

"Ernestine," she said. "Nobody calls me anything else."

"A pleasure," said Adam Bent.

Ernestine said, "I've read them all. Every one. I think I like this last one best." She paused there, savoring the title, recalling the stirring events packaged between its covers. "South to the Sun," she said. "I think I like that one best of all."

"Maybe we'd better have at this business," Smith said. "The cash customers look restive."

"Of course," Ernestine said. She led the way to the table, watched Adam Bent seat himself and take out his own pen. She said, "And now, ladies . . ."

It went on throughout the afternoon, Adam Bent patient and tireless—smiling, nodding; finding, somehow, fresh phrases of deprecation to answer each new song of praise. Ernestine hovered near him, fetching fresh copies of the books, ringing up sales, herding the customers into position. Smith perched upon a corner of the counter, smoked endlessly, watched without expression.

"He's wonderful," Ernestine said. She moved past Smith, banged the cash register with her hand. The thing trembled upon its base and obediently shot out a drawer. "Wonderful," she said again.

Smith's face was blank. Smith's voice betrayed nothing. "He loves it," he said.

Ernestine paused, change in hand, frowning. And then the frown was swiftly gone. "Oh," she said. "I see. You're kidding me."

"Mmm," Smith said, which could have meant anything. He slid down from the counter. "Right back," he said. "You want a ginger ale, too?"

He was back in five minutes, carrying three paper cups with practiced ease. He set the cups on the counter and turned his back to shield them from the eyes of the customers. From an inside pocket he got out a silver flask and poured whisky into the drinks.

Adam Bent seemed grateful for the refresher. Ernestine noticed nothing. . . .

And then, at last, it was done and the customers were gone. Ernestine tallied the count. "Eighty-seven," she said. "That's pretty good, isn't it?"

"It is magnificent," said Adam Bent. He was flexing the fingers of his right hand.

"I told you," Smith said. "In an area the size of this one—"

"You didn't tell me all," said Adam Bent. He was looking at Ernestine and smiling a little. "Juno," he said.

His tone was plain, but the allusion sped past her without contact. "Juno?"

"It's a town," Smith said. "Juneau. It's in Alaska." He came down off the counter. "Well, children?"

Ernestine stood, irresolute. She picked up a library-size, unabridged dictionary and brushed the counter beneath it absently with her free hand. Then she set it down again. "I was hoping," she said. "I mean—"

Adam Bent said, "Yes, Ernestine?"

Ernestine said, "Well, I live just over on the next street, and I thought you would like to have a beer, or a drink, or something." She paused there. "That is," she said, "if you drink."

Smith looked at the floor. Adam Bent said, "Under the circumstances, Ernestine, after a long day—" He let the

OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN

February 9, 1950

The decision to manufacture the hydrogen bomb has thrown a shadow of horror across the homes and minds of all Americans.

After the revelation that the Soviet Union had produced an atomic explosion, the people expected our nation to move toward an international agreement through the United Nations renouncing the use of atomic weapons of warfare. This hope remained high even after the United Nations General Assembly last fall because the voices of so many of the smaller nations had been lifted in the General Assembly appealing for an international convention against atomic weapons. We have all been disappointed.

In the full belief that we speak for millions of ordinary men and women throughout our country and the world over whom this horror hangs, we insist that there can and must be an alternative path which leads to peace, rather than the path to certain global catastrophe imminent in an H-bomb race.

We urge, Mr. President, that you immediately instruct the American delegation to the United Nations to present positive proposals through appropriate channels for an agreement whereby the use of atomic weapons, whether A-bombs, H-bombs, or other machines of mass destruction will be banned.

In agreement with the Report of the American Friends Service Committee and the statements of other religious groups in our country, we believe that the United States and the Soviet Union can live in peace and that the threat of atomic war can be resolved through the settlement of differences between these two great powers.

In the light of your expressed anxiety for international atomic control, Mr. President, we further urge that you immediately take steps to initiate direct negotiations to this end between our country and the Soviet Union on the highest level so that the threat of atomic catastrophe can be lifted from the peoples of the world.

Dear Art: The attached statements from the anti-Communist newsletter "Counterattack" will give you an idea about the outfit. Originally formed to combat the (McCarran) Internal Security Act it is now busy also to combat the McCarran Immigration Act. While nobody has called it out-and-out Communistic and while some of its supporters are probably just very articulate liberals we have stayed away from them and declined cooperation.

As to the specific local problem involved I would say that affiliation with this group alone would not necessarily stigmatize a person as "subversive" if he or she joined innocently. It would depend on the total record of his or her affiliations whether such a characterization is justified

Kindest regards

SID STEIN, Assistant labor Sec'y of CP.
MARTHA STONE, Chairman of New Jersey CP.

These new members of the Politburo are workhorse figureheads just as the old, re-elected members are. When they function as leaders they will take orders from Stalin's secret Cominform agents in U S (who really run the party) just as all their predecessors have.

IS THIS ANOTHER COMMUNIST LOBBY? On Dec 7, 1950 the House Committee on Un-American Activities published a report entitled "The National Committee To Defeat the Mundt Bill, A Communist Lobby".

Formation of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act was announced three weeks later, on Dec 26. This was just two days before opening of CP convention which called for repeal of the McCarran Act.

Now that Mundt Bill has been passed as part of the Internal Security (McCarran) Act, it is logical that CP should form a new front to fight for its repeal. And makeup of the Nat'l Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act indicates strongly that it is a successor to the Nat'l Committee To Defeat the Mundt Bill. Many initiators and sponsors of the new committee have front records...though it has also succeeded in winning support of innocent clergymen, businessmen, professors, etc.

These are names of some leaders and sponsors which have frequently appeared on Communist front lists: THOMAS MANN and EMILY GREENE BALCH, Nobel Prize winners (both signed Stockholm Peace Appeal...MANN was elected honorary co-chairman of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born on Dec 3); Rev JOHN B THOMPSON of Rockefeller Memorial Chapel, Univ of Chicago; ROBT MORSS LOVETT, former Gov of Virgin Islands; Prof RALPH BARTON PERRY of Harvard; LINUS PAULING, atomic scientist of Calif Institute of Technology; UTA HAGEN, actress; SHIRLEY GRAHAM and DASHIELL HAMMETT, writers; ARTUR SCHNABEL, pianist; Mrs WELTHY HONSINGER FISHER, chairman, World Day of Prayer Committee; Profs ROBT S LYND of Columbia U, KIRTLEY F MATHER of Harvard and KERMIT EBY of Chicago; EDITH ABBOTT of Hull House, Chicago...and Methodist Bishop FRANCIS J McCONNELL.

Committee will give its full support to Internal Security Act repeal measure introduced into Congress on Dec 22 by Rep ADOPLH SABATH (D-Ill).

The report on the Nat'l Committee To Defeat the Mundt Bill, issued by Un-American Activities Committee on Dec 7, verified earlier statements about this organization that had been made by COUNTERATTACK.

Former Congressman JERRY O'CONNELL (Montana), as lobbyist and leader of the Committee on loan from the Progressive Party, used Wash DC hq of the Nat'l Lawyers Guild as office of the front, the report stated. The Guild also paid bills for his telegrams and phone calls as Committee wheelhorse.

O'CONNELL, in carrying out Committee's work, sought and obtained aid of CP Politburo member HENRY WINSTON, of convicted Communist HARRY BRIDGES, of Communist union leader BEN GOLD and others. He also received financial aid from other Communist fronts and individual Communists.

COUNTERATTACK said this organization was a CP front more than two years ago (July 23, 1948 p 2). Again on June 3, 1949 (p 1) COUNTERATTACK described it as a Communist lobby and said that joint Senate-House Committee investigating lobbying should look into it. On July 7, 1950 (p 3) COUNTERATTACK suggested investigation of this front by the Congressional (Buchanan) Committee investigating lobbies and use of Congressional franking privilege.

Counterattack, 4/20/57

When GUNTHER's book, "Behind the Curtain", was published in 1949 it was submitted by Plain Talk Magazine to a panel of experts on the Iron Curtain countries. They reported that it abounded in gross errors and was a whitewash of Stalin Russia and its satellite govts.

These exiled liberals from the lands GUNTHER described, pulled no punches. One of them wrote bluntly in summary of the book: "In general, Mr Gunther employs the usual technique of fellow-traveling reporters".

GOVT-CHARTERED THEATRE GROUP PUTS ON PLAY BY CLIFFORD ODETS. The American Nat'l Theatre and Academy (ANTA) was chartered by Congress in 1935 to bring to American people "the best of the theatre". ANTA is now conducting a fund drive and has collected well over $200,000 to carry on its work.

On April 8 ANTA opened its production of CLIFFORD ODETS' play, "Night Music", at the ANTA playhouse in NYCity. ODETS has been identified as a CP official by MANNING JOHNSON, former Communist trade union official. Highly touted in CP press, ODETS is now teaching at the Actors Studio of the Dramatic Workshop, an organization publicized in the Daily Worker and run by stage personalities with front records.

Most ANTA productions run for two weeks. But "Night Music" ran for only one. The ANTA office, when asked why, replied that it was because there was not much demand for tickets.

This might be explained by fact that before the ANTA production opened, and while it was running, the Theatre Workshop of the CP's Jefferson School was also presenting its own staging of ODETS' "Night Music".

ODETS' Communist admirers evidently preferred to see the Jefferson School production (it is still running)...and non-Communists just didn't go for the ANTA production of ODETS' play...even though ODETS' wife, BETTY GRAYSON (who has lectured at the Jefferson School) was starred in it.

CONGRESSMAN SABATH HELPS A COMMUNIST FRONT. Rep ADOLPH J SABATH (D-Ill), chrmn of House Rules Committee, this week plugged a Communist front as a "potent force" in fighting for the principles of American democracy.

The National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act recently wrote to Congressman SABATH and congratulated him for introducing H R 3118, which calls for repeal of the Internal Security (Mc Carran) Act of 1950. It was in his reply to this letter that SABATH praised the Committee and said that he hoped its efforts (joined with his) would be rewarded.

This is not the first time Rep SABATH has helped fronts. In 1946 he sponsored a conference of the Congress of American Women, which was then affiliated with Stalin's Women's Int'l Democratic Federation.

SABATH addressed the annual convention of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born in 1948. This front had been officially cited by the Attorney General at the time...yet SABATH spoke at its convention and defended the committee. The principal order of business at this convention was the registering of protests against deportation proceedings brought against Comintern agent GERHART EISLER and IRVING POTASH (one of the 11 convicted CP leaders), CHAS DOYLE and FERDINAND C SMITH on grounds that they were alien Communists. In 1949 he signed a letter sponsored by this committee which called on Pres TRUMAN to halt the deportation of alien Communists.

SABATH also sponsored the Nat'l Committee to Win the Peace.

The National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act is a new front and has not been cited as Communist by the Attorney General.

But can SABATH say that this committee is not a Communist front

But this clause meant nothing. The Communist line on the conviction of the 11 CP leaders and the constitutionality of the Smith Act was spread at the meeting in spite of it. This flimsy legalistic "barrier" will not stop a single Communist front from promulgating Moscow's line in Carnegie Hall.

What is needed is the courage to make a flat refusal to any Communist front that tries to rent Carnegie Hall's facilities.

THERE'S AN ANGLE IN PRES TRUMAN - SEN DOUGLAS FIGHT that Senators might look into. Sen PAUL DOUGLAS (D-Ill) is opposing two nominees for Federal judgeships in his State made by PRES TRUMAN because the PRES, ignoring DOUGLAS' traditional prerogative, has cold-shouldered his recommendations and nominated two men selected by other Illinois politicians.

One of President's nominees opposed by DOUGLAS is JOSEPH J DRUCKER. He is a judge in the Municipal Court of Chicago (lowest court in the city) whom the President wants to jump to the Federal court.

DRUCKER's nomination was urged by his uncle, Rep ADOLPH J SABATH (D-Ill), who has shown a very soft attitude toward Communism.

SABATH supported the American Council on Soviet Relations and Int'l Labor Defense, sent a message to annual dinner of the American Russian Institute, sponsored the party's Nat'l Committee to Win the Peace and spoke at a conference of the Congress of American Women. All of these organizations have been cited as subversive or Communist by Dept of Justice.

He spoke at 1948 convention of American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born (after it had been cited as subversive) and defended this front.

SABATH wrote an article for the CP-line Chicago Star in 1946 and denounced the House Committee on Un-American Activities for its "naive declaration" that Fascism (which he opposed) and Communism were similar. When he introduced a resolution to abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities a few years ago, the CP sent a directive to all its districts ordering them to collect half-a-million signatures in support of it.

SABATH, just a few months ago, congratulated a CP front, the Nat'l Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act, as being a "potent force" in fighting for American democratic principles. He has introduced in Congress a bill to repeal the Internal Security Act of 1950, which CP opposes and always refers to as the "McCarran Act".

NY Times reports that SABATH "is understood not only to have intervened personally for Mr DRUCKER, but to have had powerful intercessors working on his side".

It is quite possible that Judge DRUCKER does not share his uncle's views about the CP and its fronts. It would be completely wrong to bar him merely because of his relationship to Rep SABATH.

But there will soon be Federal court proceedings against Communist leaders in Illinois in Govt's crackdown on the party under the Smith Act.

Senate Judiciary Committee should consider this fact when it takes up question of confirming nominations for Federal judges in Illinois. DRUCKER may be sitting in motions affecting fronts, the bail fund, etc, if he is appointed. It would be wise to find out if Judge DRUCKER shares, or opposes, Rep SABATH's attitude toward CP and its fronts.

Yours faithfully,

COMMUNISTS ARE USING OPPOSITION TO THE "McCARRAN ACTS" TO AID THEIR UNITED FRONT TACTICS. There are two acts now in force, each one of which is loosely referred to by some newspapers as the "McCarran Act".

One is the Internal Security Act of 1950 which tightened up U S security regulations generally and set up the Subversive Activities Control Board, which has the power to find that certain organizations are Communist action or front groups and order them to register with the Dept of Justice.

The other act is the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act which was passed by Congress in 1952. This act primarily concerns immigration as such (quotas, etc), but also has important security elements.

Repeal of the Internal Security Act has been a top objective of the Communist Party since the Act was passed in Sept, 1950. A Communist front, The Nat'l Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act, was set up in Dec, 1950, to direct the campaign against this anti-Communist measure.

CP has also opposed the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act and, since its passage last year, has repeatedly called for its repeal. Fronts like the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born have played an important part in the party's campaign against the immigration act.

Opposition to the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act is a perfect united front set up for the CP. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations and various civic and nationality groups have expressed opposition to the "national origins" quota provisions of this act.

CP is capitalizing on this non-Communist opposition to the Immigration Act to promote its united front policy. It supports the positions of these groups in its literature and at its rallies. By doing so it hopes to win the goodwill and cooperation of the members of these organizations. This is in line with Moscow's present policy of having Communists unite with and infiltrate non-Communist groups to gain influence in them.

And now the Nat'l Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act (ie, Internal Security Act of 1950) is getting in on the anti-immigration act fight. Last month it announced that it was changing its name...adding an "s" to the last word in its title to indicate that it will now fight both "McCarran" acts. It also released an open letter to Congress and the Administration urging the repeal or a thorough revision of the immigration act.

This maneuver serves a double purpose. It not only broadens the CP's "united front" against the immigration act but it also gives the party the opportunity to transfer some of the sentiment against this act over to its campaign against the Internal Security Act. Anyone who joins this front to fight the immigration act is now automatically going on record as opposing the Internal Security Act, too.

Dr FRANK AYDELOTTE of the Institute for Advanced Studies; Dr JOHN A MACKAY, Pres of Princeton Theological Seminary; Prof ARTHUR L SMITH JR of Union Theological Seminary and Rev JOHN PAUL JONES, chairman of the NY Civil Liberties Union, were some of the signers of this committee's open letter.

When will these clergymen and educators wake up to the manner in which they are being used? They have a perfect right to express opposition to both acts if they are opposed to them. But there is no excuse for their helping the Communist Party and its united front tactics by doing so through a Communist front.

Faithfully yours,

May 22, 1953

Note from the "Harvard Law Review" December 1952, entitled

"State Control of Subversion: A Problem in Federalism."

As a result of several years of increasing international tension, state and municipal governments, as well as Congress, have sought to erect a legislative bulwark to guard the security of this country against subversion. The impact of these measures on civil liberties has received wide attention.[1] Little consideration, however, has been given to the problems of federalism which arise from the tendency of much of the recently enacted local legislation to overlap or be more stringent than the federal program for internal security. It is the purpose of this Note to examine the extent of state power to enact anti-subversive legislation, and to explore the possibility that some of the recent state enactments may conflict with the congressional program.

The Extent of State Power to Regulate Subversive Activity. - It is clear that certain methods of controlling subversive activity are available only to the Federal Government, the states being powerless to act in such matterr. In this category are statutes barring the immigration and naturalization of subversive aliens,[2] denying passports to members of Communist organizations,[3] and regulating the use of the mails by suspected groups.[4] Loyalty and security clearance procedures applicable to Federal Government personnel[5] are also beyond the scope of state legislation. On the other hand, it is equally clear that the states have the power to act in those areas traditionally regarded as primarily of local concern, at least in the absence of overriding congressional legislation. For example, many states now require loyalty oaths by teachers and other state employees,[6] exclude subversive groups from recognition as political parties,[7] and withhold various state benefits from persons engaging in subversive activity.[8]

A substantial part of the state attack on subversion, however, is not so narrowly confined. Since the outbreak of war in Korea, some states have enacted legislation proscribing membership in the Communist Party or "other subversive organizations;"[9] others have required the registration of all Communists.[10] The justification for these statutes, as recited in many legislative preambles, has been the threat to the individual state sovereignty resulting from the "world Communist movement."[11] As the threat of Communist aggression would appear to endanger the whole nation rather than any single state,[12] it might be thought that such local legislation encroaches upon a province exclusively entrusted to the Federal Government under its power to provide for the common defense.[13] However, the rejection of a similar contention in Gilbert v. Minnesota[14] indicates that the individual states also possess a legitimate interest in matters of national defense. In that case, the Supreme Court upheld a conviction under a Minnesota statute which prohibited "teaching or advocating .... that the citizens of this state should not aid or assist the United States in prosecuting or carrying on war with the public enemies of the United States." [15] Justice Brandeis, dissenting, argued that the state could act only under the express direction of Congress, since Congress was charged with the ultimate responsibility for the preservation of the states.[16] The majority, however, held that the statute was not unconstitutional even though the exercise of the state's police power resulted in the furtherance of a function vested in Congress.[17] Thus the concurrent power of the states to control subversive activity even in matters not peculiarly local in nature seems established.

A classification of state laws and citations for each state (as of Jan. 1, 1951) are included in Appendices A and B, pp. 393-440. For the federal program, see Emerson and Haber, Political and Civil Rights in the United States 428 et seq. (1952.

5. Materials relating to the federal loyalty program may be found in Emmerson and Haber, op. cit. supra note 1, at 528 et seq.

6. Gellhorn, op. cit. supra note 1, at 410 lists 27 states requiring loyalty oaths of teachers. Other states have since adopted such statutes. E.g., PA. STAT. ANN. tit. 65, sec. 214 (Supp. 1951). For statutes excluding subversive persons from state employment, see Gellhorn, op. cit. supra note 1, at 407.

7. Gellhorn, op. cit. supra note 1, at 404; Emerson and Haber, op. cit. supra note 1, at 516 - 18. See also Note, 25 Notre Dame Law. 319 (1950).

But the considerable body of present federal legislation dealing with subversive activity may raise a barrier to the methods which the states may employ in their anti-subversive programs, since judicial tolerance of concurrent authority ends when the state regulation interferes with the "accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress."[18] The problem of determining the existence of such interference has been before the courts in numerous cases involving the exercise of concurrent powers by federal and state governments, particularly in the field of interstate commerce.[19] In working out a practical allocation of authority within the federal scheme of dual sovereignty, the Supreme Court has employed several tests. The Court has, on occasion, stated the test as one of finding "conflict" between the federal and state statutes.[20] The clearest example of this is where the terms of the statutes are contradictory or where compliance with one constitutes violation of the other.[21] Obviously, most cases do not present such a simple situation, and "conflict" is more normally found in the legislative policies[22] or in the administration of the statutes.[23] Another test which has been used to ascertain congressional intent is that of "coincidence of regulation,"[24] the Court having stated that "where the federal government has taken the situation in hand, coincidence is as ineffective as opposition."[25] In a recent case,[26] however, a majority of the Court pointed out that coincidence was merely one factor in determining the existence of inconsistency between federal and state legislation.[27] A third test seems to be based on the completeness with which Congress has regulated a particular subject. The language of the Court when this test is applied becomes somewhat metaphysical, with terms such as "occupation of the field" used as though the legislation covered some spatial region. In this type of case there is no apparent conflict with congressional action and the question is whether it is desirable to have the additional state restriction in an area which the Federal Government has regulated with some degree of comprehensiveness.[28]

It is evident that these tests do not afford a ready formula for deciding what the Court has described as the fundamental inquiry in each case: "does the state action conflict with national policy?"[29] Nevertheless, they offer an approach in considering to what extent state power to regulate subversive activity has been limited by congressional action.

Statutes Proscribing Membership in the Communist Party. - Several states[30] and a number of municipalities[31] have recently passed legislation directly proscribing membership in the Communist Party;[32] others have made the same result possible by establishing a judicial proceeding for declaring membership in any suspected group to be unlawful if the group is found to be a "subversive organization."[33] It may be argued that statutes of this type are invalid because they directly contravene certain language of the Internal Security Act of 1950.[34] Section 4(f) of that Act provides that "Neither the holding of office nor membership in any Communist organization by any person shall constitute per se a violation of...this section or of any other criminal statute."[35] Whether this language refers only to other federal statutes or was intended to include state legislation is left unclear.[36] The phrase is one of several modifications made in the conference bill, and no explanation was given by the conference committee for its addition.[37] It was apparently inserted in response to charges that the provisions requiring registration of "Communist-action" organizations and their membership violated the privilege against self-incrimination.[38] If the purpose was merely to avoid this constitutional objection, it would not seem necessary to construe the language to include state statutes since the federal privilege does not ordinarily extent to prosecutions by state governments.[39]

But even if the Internal Security Act does not explicitly preclude the states from making membership in the Communist Party unlawful, such statutes are still subject to the objection that they conflict with the purposes sought to be effectuated by Congress.[40] In enacting the Internal Security Act, Congress rejected proposals to outlaw the Communist Party,[41] choosing instead a policy of exposure by requiring the registration of "Communist-action" and "Communist-front" organizations.[42] By refraining from outlawing the Party, Congress may have hoped to avoid driving it underground, lest it avoid police surveillance and public scrutiny.[43] While such a hope may be futile,[44] state legislation proscribing arty membership is not calculated to further this objective. Furthermore, if it is important for this country to maintain a reputation for freedom, stringent restrictions on political beliefs going beyond those which Congress thought necessary might serve to embarrass the Federal Government in its conduct of foreign affairs. However, it is in any case difficult to ascribe a given intent to Congress, and it may be improper to presume that Congress would not welcome severe state sanctions against Communist organizations.[45]

A further consideration in determining whether concurrent federal and state legislation may coexist is the possibility that the enforcement of the state statute may hinder the effective operation of the federal law.[46] Although there is little prospect of significant voluntary compliance with the federal registration requirements,[47] the reluctance of Communist organizations to register may be increased if their members are thereby made subject to prosecution under state law.

Statutes Requiring Registration of Communists. - Some states[48] and municipalities, rather than outlaw Communist organizations, have followed the lead of Congress and have required the registration with local officials of all members of the Communist Party or of other organizations advocating the overthrow of any government of the United States by force and violence. The fact that these statutes would appear to duplicate rather than conflict outright with the Internal Security Act may not prevent them from being declared invalid. In Hines v. Davidowitz,[50] an attack on a state statute requiring the registration of aliens was defended on the ground that it was a necessary police regulation designed to protect its citizens from what was thought to be a potentially dangerous group. The Supreme Court, however, held the statute precluded by a subsequently enacted federal registration law. The Court's emphasis on the necessity of preventing state interference in what was essentially a national affair may be equally applicable here.[51] But in Albertson v. Millard,[52] a three-judge federal district court upheld the Michigan statute requiring the registration of all members of "communist" or "communist-front" organizations as a proper method by the state to protect itself against sabotage and revolution. The court found no congressional intent to preclude such legislation; rather the federal and the state legislation were viewed as "complementary to each other, one on the national and the other upon the local level."[54] The dissenting judge, however, noting the act's broad definition of "communist party,"[55] argued that enforcement of such legislation required a knowledge of foreign affairs not possessed by state enforcement officials and that uninformed application of the act might seriously embarrass the Federal Government in a peculiarly sensitive international area."[56] While this argument is not without force, such embarrassment does not seem so likely as in the Davidowitz case. There many of the aliens required to register were citizens of friendly nations, and to avoid friction with these nations the federal statute took special care to prevent any indignities in the registration procedure.[57] Although these considerations seem less applicable in the case of the Michigan legislation, ill-considered labelling of organizations as "Communist" by state officials might have as adverse an effect on our international reputation as declaring such groups unlawful.

A second ground relied upon by the dissent was that the registration provisions of the Internal Security Act revealed a congressional concern with the constitutional rights of individuals which was not reflected in the state legislation. The federal procedure provides for an administrative hearing for both individuals and organizations, a decision in accordance with congressionally prescribed standards, and judical review of the findings.[59] The state statute, on the other hand, offers no protection other than the right to defend a criminal prosecution for failing to register.[60] While this may be relevant in determining whether the state registration statutes stand as "an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress,"[61] here, too, the congressional policy of protecting the individual is not so apparent as in the Davidowitz case.

The state registration requirements are also open to the objection that they impose a double burden of registration on those subject to the federal law. While coincidence of regulation has not proved fatal where the federal and state statutes are merely prohibitory in nature,[62] there may be greater reluctance to sustain legislation which requires some affirmative action, particularly where the legislation deals with the personal freedom of the individuals regulated.[63] Moreover, this double burden seems unnecessary. The state registration statutes serve no independent purpose since any information yielded by the federal registration program is readily available to state officials.[64]

Conclusion. -- In the absence of a well-defined "constitutional yardstick,"[65] it is hard to predict what disposition the Supreme Court will make of claims that recent state legislation dealing with subversive activity is in conflict with federal law. The resolution of problems of federal supremacy appears to have been made largely on an ad hoc basis. In recent years, however, the Court has been tolerant of local anti-subversive legislation under attack on other constitutional grounds,[66] and it is possible that it will likewise hesitate to find an irreconcilable conflict with federal law.

Since the conditions giving rise to the present attack on subversion show little sign of abating, continued pressure for legislative action at all levels of government is likely. Regardless of the constitutional validity of state laws which attempt to supplement the federal program, some consideration should be given to the practical consequences of the proposed legislation. For example, many states have enacted "little Smith Acts,"[67] corresponding to the Smith Act[68] adopted by Congress in 1940, which prohibits advocating the overthrow of the Government by force or violence.[69] While prosecutions under these statutes are probably not precluded by federal law, indiscriminate enforcement may hinder rather than aid federal counter-espionage work.[70] Such potential interference may make the wisdom of state action in certain areas questionable; but even where legislation by the states is found desirable, a concern for harmonious and efficient control of subversion would seem to require cooperation, particularly in the exchange of information, between state and federal enforcement officials.[71]

The Massachusetts statute apparently is intended to accomplish this result. The statute prohibits membership in a subversive organization and provides a judicial proceeding for determining which organizations come within that defined group. To that extent it is similar to the statutes grouped in note 33 infra. However, the Communist Party is declared "subversive", perhaps indicating that no judicial proceeding is necessary for the Communist Party. Since the property of "subversive organizations" is to be escheated to the state, this may be unconstitutional as a bill of attainder. In other words, we have followed the practice of counterespionage, namely spying on the spies." LOWENTHAL, THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION 439 (1950).

On Freedom to Teach, to Learn and to Think

Text of an address by Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, at the fifth Conference on Civil Liberties held here Thursday by the National Civil Liberties Clearing House.

EVERY KIND of freedom is important because freedom is the currency in which justice is meted out to men. And what is justice? We say that is the respect which is paid by the conscience of mankind to those rights without which a human being would cease to be human. Or we may declare that justice is the area of social, economic, intellectual and religious independence which government concedes to the individual because it is the government of a civilized people.

European democracies tend to stress the second affirmation. Anglo-Saxon democracies are committed to a bill of rights. But a modern dictator is not a devotee of either principle. He denies that John Doe has any rights, and he is persuaded that the independence of the individual must be curbed, if not abrogated, in the interest of collectivist ambitions.

And when, as in our time, he has so large a part of the world in his thrall, grave doubts will arise as to whether the independence traditionally conceded to the individual in freedom-loving states is not a luxury difficult to justify in a harsh world. For do not the dictators forge mass battering rams of such tremendous impact that a free society, which unavoidably moves in several ideological directions at the same time, loses its ability to resist and to prevail in the struggle?

WHENEVER and wherever such moods are prevalent, academic freedom is likely to be endangered.

For it is, first of all, the ultimate source from which differences of allegiance and committment arise. If those who give instruction were to teach the same things, no doubt most people would tend to agree about the vast majority of things; and so, in moments when concurrence seems desirable, groups will appear which are indignant at scholarly dissent.

Why, they will say for example, should any professor question the value of free enterprise?

Nor will the right to intellectual inquiry be widely respected or well understood, if those who profess to exercise it stand on the lowest rung of the social scale.

Amongst us in the United States at the present time, teachers and scholars would surely be middle-class poor relations—if, of course, there were a middle class. And so why should they be kicking up fusses instead of sticking to the three Rs, which were good enough for great-grandfather Silas?

Finally, academic freedom is the crowning glory of a conscious culture. It takes for granted that mankind will regard with awe and esteem the brooding by the spirit over the eternal ground in which the roots of each separate soul are embedded. In times of stress, many lost sympathy with this kind of reflection.

Dr. George N. Shuster, the prominent Catholic layman who delivered this address, is a distinguished educator and crusader against intolerance. President of New York's Hunter College, largest public college for women in the world, since 1940, he also has been editor of the Catholic magazine Commonweal and has written several books on Germany and on Catholic theology. He has accepted a number of missions for the Government, the last one as Land Commissioner for Bavaria in 1950.

ALL THE MEMORABLE texts in the history of intellectual freedom reveal these things clearly. It will do no harm to cite once more the words which, according to Plato, Socrates used before he died:

"No evil can happen to a good man either in life or after death. Wherefore Socrates will not be angry with his condemners, although they meant him anything but good. He will only ask all of them to do to the sons of Socrates what Socrates has done to them."

Nothing one could now say about intellectual freedom could have the luminous pertinence of those words. Why can no harm come to a good man? Because concordance has been established between the conscience and the Good. The only wrong one could do the conscience would be to cause it to assent to evil. It is from this faith, held sacrificially and resolutely, that the greater part of what is significant and abiding in the tradition of Western thought takes its origin.

A second text slices through the ages like a knife: "Give to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." However secular one's awareness of this dichotomy may have become, it is expressed nakedly, elementally and permanently in this great command. The state has claims upon us all, and they are valid claims. But when it crosses the threshold of the conscience, it does wrong.

THEREFORE the first thing to say about academic freedom is that it will endure only as long as those who profess to have a right to it stand ready to pay any price for it which may be exacted. The teacher is one in whom this freedom is incarnate; and as soon as he indicates that he wishes it were not so, or that he should like to hide under some convenient bushel, there will no longer be any good reason why others should defend the heritage for him.

To be sure, silence and a measure of feigned conformity will be necessary under tyranny. Honest men may have to eat the bitter bread of exile. But compromise with evil they dare not.

If, in a nation like ours, there should exist widespread fear of criticism, and much supine acceptance of gags, it might well indicate that many had so fallen in love with security, and were so deeply entrenched behind the walls of tenure, that their sovereign interest no longer was conscience but conformity.

Let us hope that this will never by the case. I am not ready to say, as Carl Friedrich does, that the freedom to seek intellectual truth is akin to the freedom to profess a religious faith. But certainly they have both grown up in the same neighborhood. When one is imperiled, the other likewise is.

AND SO IT IS necessary to find out to precisely what academic freedom commits us in the circumstances now obtaining; and this is not at all easy.

First of all, it is not true that academic institutions place no resrictions on what may be said inside or outside the classroom. Every such institution has its code of manners and ethics, and its own way of enforcing this code. No reputable college or university employs irresponsible crackpots or purveyors of venom; and if it unwittingly does so, it finds ways and means of disposing of the nuisance quietly and effectively. That there are some exceptions to this rule, as usual proves the rule.

It is when faculty members emerge from their studies and address public opinions as a whole that the situation changes. And at present our difficulties are partly the result of the fact that during recent years many scholars, particularly in the field of the social sciences, have led dual lives. They have been members of the academic community and thereby pledged to the search for truth and its dissemination, but they have also gone into public life, have helped to form national policy, and have thereby accepted responsibilities wholly different from those incumbent upon members of a university faculty.

It is surely obvious that a public servant is accountable to the public. One cannot urge that he be immune to inquiry because he happens to be a scholar. To be sure, I think that the kind of criticism to which many who endeavor to serve the United States are now often subjected, and the barbs of which I have myself felt, will gradually dampen the ardor of men of integrity to assist their government, unless something is speedily done to insure that the discussion of such factors as loyalty will be conducted in a spirit of temperateness and fairness.

This is, however, a problem which does not concern us here and now.

WHEN GOVERNMENT takes a fateful step farther, crosses into the domain of the university in any of its branches, whether collegiate or graduate, and proceeds to look into and adjudge what is thought and taught there, a totally different situation has been created.

Note that such an inquisition has nothing to do with examinging into whether wise and acceptable social regulations are being enforced — for example, whether an institution is maintaining the standards which its charter requires, or whether admissions practices confirm with statutes designed to prevent discrimination on the basis of race or creed. These derive from the legitimate police power of the state; and though a university may not relish them, it can launch no complaint against them in justice.

But the sovereign independence of academic scholarship, in all its ramifications, in every matter affecting freedom of thought, speech and assembly within the university is so well established in sound tradition that any abrogation of that independence by government may well be as grave a violation of liberty as any with which the public can be concerned.

Certainly the great universities of the West have been immune to such invasions save during times of tyranny, even when the countries in which they are established possess no constitutional bill of rights.

SOME OF THOSE who now profess to favor an inquiry into the American university concede these things but go on to say that the detection and exposure of agents of subversion is a proper function of the Government, and that, therefore, the academic professions should welcome investigations which will ferret out such agents.

This contention has validity, beyond doubt or cavil. Agents of subversion are wholly undesirable crows, seeking to get into robins' nests on evil missions. The question merely is whether one ought to chop down the tree in order to find the crow. It seems to me personally, despite a satisfactory measure of antipathy to communism, that certain current arguments in favor of dismissing adherents of that pernicious doctrine from their posts are open to serious question.

To hold, for example, that a Communist is so strongly committed to a view of life that he has lost freedom to think freely may well be to invite the retort that a philosopher who finds all wisdom in Spinoza, or John Dewey or St. Thomas, is also committed and therefore not free.

And if one follows this reasoning far enough one will come to the conclusion, which some unfortunately already indorse, that the only free person is one who, like the nobleman in Chesterton's "Magic," believes in nothing and everything at the same time.

No, it is only if the Communist, by reason of his readiness to conspire against the Government and the people of the United States, constitutes a clear and present danger that one can safely proceed against him in the spirit of our traditions.

THEREWITH one enters the realm of the law, which is one of the primary concerns of the university, and which is both jurisprudence in the technical sense and a code of social ethics made explicit through the study of history, political science and philosophy.

And it often sorely troubles the responsible educator that, as matters now stand, the law about Communists is nebulous and inchoate. How shall he solve puzzles such as this: A teacher can be dismissed from his post for refusing to say whether he has ever been a Communist, even though it is entirely legal for him to be a Communist.

Or again, while a duly established board of inquiry cannot deprive an individual of the right to seek refuge in the Fifth Amendment, the university, as that individual's employer, is expected to do so by ousting him.

To many on the campus, regardless of their hostility to Stalin, such procedures seem indefensible. Students in particular are sorely puzzled. And it may well be that, as a result, Communists receive a greater measure of sympathy than most of us realize.

All these difficulties can be disposed of quickly if the Communist Party is declared illegal. For then the university, presented with evidence that a faculty member is guilty, can act promptly and unhesitatingly.

It has been argued that, if banned, the party would go underground. We may properly ask, "Where is it now?" At best, such a contention is based on expediency, and the answer to it is that the end never justifies the means.

Banning any political party is, however, not an action to be taken lightly. We might well follow the example of the West German Federal Republic and write into our basic law a constitutional amendment conferring on the Supreme Court authority to decide whether any political organization, normally entitled to freedom of speech and assembly, constitutes a clear and present danger and is therefore to be outlawed.

IT MAY BE that what has been said will appear too cautious and considerate. Perhaps you will permit me to say in defense of my position that as a citizen who had an almost unprecedented opportunity to observe, with horror and loathing, the rise to power in Europe of brutal totalitarian movements, I have become at once so deeply attached to American traditions of justice and liberty and so persuaded that free social institutions crumble because of erosive concessions made in the name of expediency, that there may be perhaps some slight value of experience in my conviction that the best way to safeguard the American future is to conserve with rigorous care the American past.

If the Communist problem were disposed of, difficulties would remain but they would not be of central importance. Yet it may be useful to consider two correlary situations.

First, there is the present muggy intellectual climate. During nearly two decades, from the crash of 1929 to the blockade of Berlin in 1948, the Communist "popular front" mustered a great deal of sympathy and support in this country. It was aided by developments abroad as well as at home, ranging from the Spanish Civil War to the treatment accorded minorities.

On many campuses, as in numerous other walks of life, anyone who opposed, not the good causes which the "front" allegedly supported but any political objective of world communism, speedily became a pariah. The "front" respected no one's good name, and shied away from no device of dragooning public opinion.

As a result, those who were, in one manner or other, taken in by it are now on the defensive. It is difficult and often perilous for them to admit publicly that they unwittingly contributed, in however slight a measure, to the present debacle of civilization.

On the other hand, those who were targets during the heyday of amity for the Soviet Union now sometimes take a human, all too human, delight in taunting or exposing their erstwhile tormentors. Some defend Communists out of a probably subconscious desire to rid themselves of blame. Others devote the silence of the night to thanking Heaven for Senator McCarthy.

The saddening result is that we are not learning in amity what so badly needs to be learned—that emotions, however reputable, are not substitutes for reason and knowledge in the conduct of human affairs.

SECOND, there are the lower schools with problems of their own, growing out of quite natural restrictions on the freedom of teaching which result from the fact that young children do not to any significant extent, participate in discussion and therewith in the process of inquiry.

They are, inevitably, "indoctrinated;" and because the teaching supplied by the school supplements that imparted in the home, there is always a great deal of anxious watching by parents to discern whether the public school in particular is undermining cherished family mores.

Thus, although the majority of parents desire some religious instruction for their children, they insist that it be of the variety to which they themselves subscribe. Consequently, the public school, avoiding the teaching of religion as it would the plague, nevertheless finds itself urged to sing a stanza of "America" or to read selected passages from the Bible.

Such limitations and compromises are no doubt prudent. But a totally different situation arises when the training of children for intelligent citizenship is hampered by pressure-groups anxious to suppress points of view, topics, and books which do not reflect their prejudices.

THE SORRY spectacles we are witnessing in this or that part of the land are waves moving out of the center of the great shock which is the central phenomenon of our time.

One can scarce believe that actions reported from Pasadena and elsewhere are not mere pranks executed by an imaginative jester. But they are in all truth, real, startling, and deplorable.

Nevertheless, I am sure that the American people is, insofar as the great issues of academic freedom are concerned, far better than is often thought.

I think we as a Nation have learned, in the aftermath of many turbulent tides of immigration, that Providence intended ours should be a society having many divergent and conflicting commitments, unified by a strong belief in justice for all.

That, for example, so many of us are earnestly and devotedly concerned that the Negro should at last have a chance to walk upward toward the light is surely a fair sample of the real intent of the people.

AND SO I AM CERTAIN that we have only to offer a workable program for the maintenance of academic freedom in order to secure adequate support. Such a program might perhaps be:

First, a clear recognition in the Nation's law of the fact that the Communist Party is an aggregation of conspirators and their abettors, and therefore a clear and present danger, will make it possible to deal with academic members of that party on the basis of well defined principle, rather than of popular sentiment or of legal expediency.

Second, the aberrations of "Communist Popular Front" days should be forgotten, in the confident assumption that by doing so we shall win time for more important tasks as well as for the reconciliation of Americans.

Third, I believe that Senator McCarthy is, as a public servant, entitled to do anything he can to expose what he assumes to be subversive influences. No useful purpose is served by throwing back at him the epithets he bestows on others. But I would remind you that the university has always been a forum in the presence of which the lords of the passing hour are subjected to scrutiny.

No doubt, the time has come to ask on what meat this our Caesar has fed, and to review his activities with the utmost objectivity, calm and chilly resolution, so that an authoritative report can be made to the people. I fancy that the day on which the Senator is summoned before the bar of American history and social science will be not the least revealing of his career.

FOURTH, we shall hope that the sentiment of the Nation will indicate to the Congress what a grave departure from tradition is implied in an investigation by it of what is taught and by whom, so long as legislation adequate to deal with subversives is not ignored by the university.

Fifth, that we muster every energy to repel incursions by pressure-groups into the domain of schools and colleges, and insist that only duly constituted school boards and faculties have jurisdiction.

Sixth, that we reaffirm the growing conviction that teachers cannot distance themselves with impunity from the courtesy which demands that the classroom is not a place to which young people repair in order to be subjected to narrowly prejudiced attacks on the races and creeds to which they belong.

Seventh, that we study painstakingly and disseminate as widely as possible the great texts in which the tradition of academic freedom is enshrined, so that the people may know and understand.

For my part, I have no doubt that if such a program were adopted and vigorously defended, this Nation would have a new birth of freedom and therewith an added reason for believing that, in these perilous and bitter days, it can defend the bastions of its national spirit as successfully as it is at present safeguarding the fringes of the world which God has so far spared from servility and intellectual death.

A Velde Committee 'File' Dissected

WHEN Chairman Harold H. Velde (R.-Ill.) recently indicated the possibility that his House Committee on Un-American Activities might investigate alleged subversion among America's churches and churchmen, one of the first to denounce the idea was G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of Washington.

Soon thereafter, Rep. Donald L. Jackson, a member of the committee, came to Velde's defense in a House speech on March 17. In the course of his address, he assailed Bishop Oxnam in one of the most violent attacks on a clergyman ever made in Congress.

"Bishop Oxnam has been to the Communist front what Man O' War was to thoroughbred racing," Jackson said. He went on to describe Bishop Oxnam as a man who "served God on Sunday and the Communist front for the balance of the week."

Jackson then added: "If reprinting Bishop Oxnam's record of aid and comfort to the Communist front would serve any useful purpose, I would ask permission to insert it here, but suffice it to say that the record is available to any member who cares to request it from the (House Un-American Activities) Committee."

Two days later, Rep. Jackson declined to make public this information that he said was available. In response to a request for it, he wrote: "The detailed documentation is very voluminous and would be much too lengthy to include in a letter of this kind. However, in general, Bishop Oxnam is alleged to have been associated in the past with the following groups and organizations which have been cited as subversive and Communist." He then listed 12 agencies which were mentioned in Bishop Oxnam's file.

The Washington Post believed that reprinting the committee record would in fact serve a useful purpose, to see if it was one "of aid and comfort to the Communist front," to determine just what the "detailed documentation" and "very voluminous" record was, how accurate it was, and whether Bishop Oxnam did have associations with the cited organizations.

The newspaper obtained the committee file and submitted it to Bishop Oxnam for

Comment on Item No. 1

I did deliver an address at the Indiana State Reformatory, entitled, "International Understanding as a Basis for World Peace." It was delivered at a time, if I recall correctly, when the oil issue in Mexico was current and the question of using military force was being discussed.

The important thing in this connection is that this paragraph should not be in the files of the committee; there is no reference here to any subversive organization. Nor is there any subversive idea expressed. My statement will stand moral scrutiny and is in keeping with the best traditions of this land.

Item No. 2

A LETTERHEAD of the League for the Organization of Progress dated February 2, 1931, reflects the name of G. Bromley Oxman, president of De Pauw University, as a member of the board. The League for the Organization of Progress has never been cited as a front organization. It was an international organization founded in Paris in 1912, with headquarters in Bern, Switzerland. The American office was located at Yellow Springs, Ohio. The league has long been out of existence.

Comment on Item No. 2

The paragraph itself states that the organization was never cited as a front group. Why, then, does it appear here? Actually, the league was founded in 1912 by such men as Thomas Masaryk, later President of Czechoslovakia; Ramsay MacDonald, later British Prime Minister, and Edouard Herriot, later French Prime Minister. It was composed of scholars and political leaders, and dedicated to deepening international understanding, strengthening international cooperation and maintaining the free way of life. Its publications had a distinguished list of contributors, including Sir Gilbert Murray of Oxford, F. W. Taussig of Harvard, Quincy Wright of Chicago and Irving Fisher of Yale.

Item No. 3

A LETTERHEAD of the National Re-

was organized in 1915 and is the American section of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation. Organized under the alleged motive to reconcile people, it maintains that class war is necessary and that all must work for the reorganization of society, and replace the present system of individual capitalism by collective ownership. The public records and files of this committee contain no further reference to any affiliation of Bishop Oxnam with the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Comment on Item No. 4

The organization is, I believe, an absolute pacifist group. I have never held the absolute pacifist view and therefore could not have belonged to such a group. I was never a member and never signed any statement put out by it. In any case, the two paragraphs are quite irrelevant, since the Fellowship is not listed as subversive and as far as I know has never been cited as such by any Government agency.

Item No. 5

A LETTERHEAD of the Committee on Militarism in Education, dated October 1, 1935, reflects the name of Bromley Oxnam as a member of its national council. Kirby Page, a member of the national council, testified before the Special Committee on Un-American Activities on June 15, 1943. He stated that the Committee on Militarism in Education was opposed to military education in civilian schools. The following is quoted from a letter of the Committee on Militarism in Education dated September 22, 1930.

". . . Militarism in education goes on, accumulating power and tradition, aided by War Department money and resources . . . by propaganda, glorified by every device of military romance in literally hundreds of American colleges, universities and high schools, building that blind, unreasoning, emotional response of military symbols which has so often swayed and deceived men in a crisis. Against this glorification of the military method and machine, the peace movement has accomplished little as yet. The spearhead of the struggle against militarism in schools and colleges has been this committee. It has waged peace with intelligence and courage, showing not only the zeal of the peace advocate but the sound methods of the social scientist. Specializing on this one issue, it occupies a unique

In November, 1942, when Bishop Oxnam spoke at a Boston meeting sponsored by the Congress of American-Soviet Friendship, he "thought he was in good company." A letterhead of the organization at that time shows why.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam as a national sponsor.

Comment on Item No. 7

It is quite true that my sympathies were with the Republicans in Spain. I abhor the Franco regime just as I abhor the Stalin regime in Russia and opposed wherever I could the Hitler regime and the Mussolini regime.

I did authorize my name to be included in what I think was called the Inter-Faith Division of the American Committee for Spanish Freedom. If it was originally Communist-sponsored I did not know it, but I did subsequently resign when it bename of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam as chairman of the executive board.

The Washington Daily News of April 7, 1947, contains a news item concerning the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. In the article, the name of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam is listed as one who had withdrawn from the organization. The date of Bishop Oxnam's withdrawal is not mentioned.

Comment on Item No. 10

On November 8, 1942, I addressed a Boston meeting known as "Salute to Our Russian Ally." Among the

Item No. 12

The Citizens Victory Committee for Harry Bridges issued an undated press release in regard to an open letter addressed to President Roosevelt by more than 300 clergymen throughout the country, urging that the deportation order against Harry Bridges be set aside. The letter, dated April 22, 1943, and signed by the Right Rev. Edward L. Parsons, states, in part: "Clearly, Mr. Bridges has aroused the animosity of an influential minority because of his successful union activities and his soto the Communist front would serve any useful purpose, I would ask permission to insert it here, but suffice it to say that the record is available to any member who cares to request it from the (House Un-American Activities) Committee."

Two days later, Rep. Jackson declined to make public this information that he said was available. In response to a request for it, he wrote: "The detailed documentation is very voluminous and would be much too lengthy to include in a letter of this kind. However, in general, Bishop Oxnam is alleged to have been associated in the past with the following groups and organizations which have been cited as subversive and Communist." He then listed 12 agencies which were mentioned in Bishop Oxnam's file.

The Washington Post believed that reprinting the committee record would in fact serve a useful purpose, to see if it was one "of aid and comfort to the Communist front," to determine just what the "detailed documentation" and "very voluminous" record was, how accurate it was, and whether Bishop Oxnam did have associations with the cited organizations.

The newspaper obtained the committee file and submitted it to Bishop Oxnam for his comment. His reply, printed below, reproduces the committee file in full (except for a summary condensation of one newspaper article).

In 40 years of work in the Methodist Church, Bishop Oxnam has been Bishop of Omaha, Boston, New York and now Washington. He has held, among other high clerical positions, that of president of the Federal Council of Churches. He is now one of the presidents of the World Council of Churches.

By G. Bromley Oxnam

Methodist Bishop of Washington

IN referring to my file in the House Committee on Un-American Activities, but in not disclosing it, Rep. Jackson deftly invited his colleagues and Americans in general to draw the most sinister conclusions about me. Yet at the same time he provided no evidence or data for them to examine objectively or for me to comment upon, explain or refute if I could.

Fortunately, The Washington Post has secured the dossier on me in the House Un-American Activities Committee and has given it to me for comment. What follows is the committee file, which I have divided into numbered items, and my response in setting forth the facts.

Item No. 1

THE Washington Star of February 10, 1930, carries a news item datelined Indiana State Reformatory, February 9. The article refers to a speech made by Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of De Pauw University, to the inmates of the reformatory. Dr. Oxnam is reported as decrying the practice of nations in entering into secret treaties, and declaring that the slogan of "America First" must be interpreted as meaning America first in world service, and not "to be the first to go into Mexico to steal oil lands."

Comment on Item No. 1

I do not recall the exact phrasing of my remarks at the Indiana State Reformatory, but I do recall that I was there at the invitation of the inmates and that I was received with the greatest courtesy and kindness. I do recall that I did say that we must be the first in world service if we are to be worthy of our heritage, and that we must be the first to outlaw the secret diplomacy which has plunged the world into war. I recall that I said that we must be the first to outlaw the traffic in munitions and the first to cancel the debts which our boys were paying with their blood, and that we must be the first to feed the hungry and heal the sick of the world if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to do justice to our Negro citizens if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to abolish the poll tax if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every child in America has the right to an education if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every man has the right to a job if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every farmer has the right to a market for his produce if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every child in America has the right to a fair chance if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every man has the right to a fair trial if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every man has the right to a fair wage if we are to be worthy of our heritage. I recall that I said that we must be the first to see that every man

The Citizen 'Can Be Damaged Without Redress'

there was not any evidence that the American Civil Liberties Union was a Communist organization . . . So far as the chair is concerned . . . here is an organization that the committee has already said is not a Communist organization."

Again, on February 17, 1952, in a document issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee, the statement is made: "The American Civil Liberties Committee has never been cited as Red-dominated, or as Communist, by any official organization charged with the duty of investigating subversive activity."

Thus we have the fantastic situation of the House Un-American Activities Committee using material from another committee (the Fish Committee), apparently for purposes of discrediting me, when its official record has come to precisely the opposite conclusion about the organization in question. For purposes of denouncing me, the American Civil Liberties Committee is characterized as a Red-front organization in the files of the very committee which has twice declared that the organization is no such thing.

Item No. 14

THE letterhead of the American Committee for Spanish Freedom dated January 21, 1946, reflects the name of Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam as a sponsor.

Comment on Item No. 14

See comment under Item 7 above.

Item No. 15

A LETTERHEAD of the Methodist Federation for Social Service dated October 4, 1928, reflects the name of G. Bromley Oxnam as executive secretary, while another letterhead of the same organization dated April 12, 1946, reflects the name of G. Bromley Oxnam as a member of the executive committee.

The Bureau County Republican (otherwise unidentified) of May 18, 1939, carries a front-page story concerning the Methodist Federation for Social Services.

[The article is then quoted in full. Too long for reproduction here, its pertinent points are:

[At a meeting of the Federation in Kansas City in May, 1939, Oxnam was one of the five bishops who "endorsed the Federation's platform for the overthrow of the present capitalistic system in the United States and favored its replacement with a social planning order." Pamphlets of the Federation circulated at the meeting "declare that under the new social order, private ownership of property is to come to an end. Under their system, there are to be no capitalists. Private property . . . is to be taken over without compensation to the owners."

[Oxnam said he thoroughly endorses the Federation and the thing it stands for. He read from the masthead of the Federation's literature a statement of the Federation's purposes, declaring:

["(The Federation) rejects the method of the struggle for profit as the economic basis for society; (and) seeks to replace it with social-economic planning in order to profit as the economic base for society and seeks to replace it with social-economic planning to develop a society without class or group discriminations and privileges."

I personally objected to this in writing to Dr. Ward. I stated that this was pledging the Federation to a particular economic program, and that I did not think it became a religious organization to be so pledged. I do not believe in identifying the Gospel with a particular economic, political or social system.

This marked the beginning of a fundamental difference of opinion, as far as I was concerned, within the organization. I opposed Dr. Ward's proposed statement at the 1932 General Conference of the Methodist Church. There was a debate and floor fight, and Dr. Ward's position failed to carry.

Later, however, it was the turn of the group with which I was associated to fail. With the comnig of Rev. Jack McMichael to the executive secretaryship of the Federation, its publications became less factual and more propagandistic. When I took up my work in the New York area in 1944, I found myself in growing disagreement with the Federation's activities. I believed that the only answer to the problem was to create an official Commission on Social Service. At a New York meeting of a chapter of the Federation, I took its bulletins and showed how irresponsible they had become. I particularly objected to the continual misrepresentation in them of John Foster Dulles, Toyohito Kagawa and Martin Niemoller. Jack McMichael and others who were present were incensed by my address.

The necessary corrections were not made, despite my arguments with McMichael about their need, and the attacks on Dulles continued. I therefore resigned from the Federation and have had no relationship with it since. I do not have the date, but I should judge it was 1947 or 1948.

The House Un-American Activities Committee file on me in this connection, it should be noted, is comprised almost entirely in the reprint of the article in the Bureau County Republican, which the committee does not identify. Actually, it is a small paper published in Princeton, Ill. Why this little paper should give its front-page story to a meeting of the Federation in Kansas City no one knows. Whether a reporter was present at the meeting or not, the reporting is so inaccurate as to reveal journalism at its lowest level. This is not reporting; it is deliberate falsification.

The statement that I "endorsed the Federation's platform for the overthrow of the present capitalistic system in the United States" is absolutely false.

Also, I categorically deny the statement that I read aloud and endorsed the masthead of the Federation's literature denouncing the profit motive. I was not in favor of this part of the Federation's program, and had opposed it, as stated above.

As for being trained by Dr. Ward and taking dictation from him, the facts are that I had done secretarial work for Dr. Ward and took the dictation of his little book, "Poverty and Wealth," which was a Sunday School textbook and not a sol-

Bishop Flayed 'United Front'

IN 1935, WHEN Bishop Oxnam was writing a newspaper column, he had occasion to comment on the all-too-popular movement of the day known as "The United Front." His column may conceivably be a more accurate representation of his views than the material gathered in his House Un-American Activities Committee file. It is reprinted below.

The United Front—A Menace

AMERICANS MUST NOT accept Communist leadership in order to avoid Fascist leadership.

Communists tell us that a Fascist dictatorship is inevitable in the United States. Hence, they urge "The United Front" to combat war and fascism. By that they mean the union of socialists, liberals, pacifists, churchmen and progressives of evry stripe, for the purpose of insuring peace and resisting fascism. Heretofore, these groups have never united. In fact, they have been convinced enemies of communism. Unfortunately, many liberals who fear fascism have been duped by the idea of the United Front. Its fundamental purpose is NOT to fight fascism.

Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, has revealed its menacing objective. He writes, "The United Front is not a peace pact with the reformists. The United Front is a method of struggle against the reformists, against the social-fascists, for the possession of the masses."

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN of the Communist Party of the United States, The Communist, in its January, 1935, issue stated, "The United Front is at the present time the main road along which the masses will be prepared for the struggle for Soviet power under the leadership of the Communist Party."

Intelligent Americans will denounce the proposal and seek to reveal its essential purpose. The Communist has no other purpose in the United Front program than to disrupt the American Federation of Labor and to insinuate himself into progressive movements in order to control them. Americans who are interested in maintaining the liberties of political democracy will repudiate the United Front.

Its real purpose is Divided Ranks. It is "the main road along which the masses will be prepared for the struggle." And the struggle, to use the Communist's own words, is "the violent overthrow of the whole existing capitalistic order, for the establishment of the proletariat."

The United Front is a dangerous Gift Horse.

Comment on Item No. 18

Does anyone object to the statement that we must not flirt with Franco in order to stop Stalin? Why is this recorded? Franco was an ally of Hitler. He is a Fascist dictator. I do not care to deal with him. If we need bases in Spain, we will consider that upon its military merits; but to deal with this man is to say to the peoples of the world that our objection to dictatorship and violence is not based upon a moral principle but upon expediency.

Item No. 19

THE DAILY Worker of June 22, 1949, carries a news item datelined Boston, June 21, to the effect that Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam assailed congressional witch-hunts and said:

"Free men may well be alarmed at the action of the House Un-American Activities Committee in asking for a list of textbooks used by schools and colleges. At the very moment calm and critical minds are essential, leaders in the grip of fear become hysterical and adopt procedures destructive of democracy. More time given to constructive legislation designed to demonstrate the effectiveness of dynamic democracy, and less time to character assassination, would produce greater benefits."

Comment on Item No. 19

May I ask, again, what is the objection to this statement? Does the committee believe it is beyond criticism? Does it think itself competent to pass upon textbooks in the Nation? The paragraph quoted stands on its own feet.

Item No. 20

THE WASHINGTON Evening Star of May 26, 1950, carries a news item datelined Boston, May 26. Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam is reported as calling for joint action between Protestants and Catholics to meet the onslaught of communism.

Comment on Item No. 20

Why is this included—as criticism or commendation? Is this an attempt, after first recording hearsay and false testimony in my file, to appear balanced by presenting a commendatory item?

Item No. 21

BISHOP Oxnam addressed a letter to the Committee on Un-American Activities on May 11, 1950. In it, he stated that he never belonged to the American League Against War and Fascism. He further stated he thought it would be fundamentally unfair to say he belonged to the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship wtihout saying that his affiliation with this organization was during the war, when Russia was one of our allies.

Conclusions

THE DISCLOSURE above of the committee file on me invites a few conclusions on the nature of the Un-American Activities Committee's files in general.

First of all, what is a Committee file? It is obvious that it is nothing more than a collection of newspaper clippings, letterheads, letters and excerpts of speeches, etc. Clearly it can and does include any statements, true or false, that a personal enemy or crackpot may submit.

One might naively suppose that the purpose of the file was to give a Committee member some sort of indication of the true nature of the individual in question—his leanings, activities, point of view and associations in a balanced way so some informed judgment could be reached. If my file is typical, it is certain that nothing of the sort was intended; the effort was devoted almost exclusively to present me in the worst possible light, to collect all invidious references to me without any attempt to check their accuracy, and made no reference to the essential nature of my work over years, which has been public, open and easily available.

The next question is what use is made of the file. The answer is that a "research staff" selects from the file and prepares a report which, I have discovered from personal experience, is released in full or in part to citizens who request it.

It would appear that the "research staff" would be under obligation to find out whether the material selected and broadcast is true or false. But nothing of the sort takes place. When pinned down and asked explicitly, and only then, Committee members piously assert to an inquirer that the report "carries no conclusion of this Committee" and that the Committee never vouches for the correctness of any newspaper item.

This is deceit at its most vicious. What usually happens is demonstrated by the

Comment on Item No. 15

I was never executive secretary of the Federation although I was a member and served on its executive committee for many years.

The Federation was founded in 1907, but history on it in the files of the House Un-American Committee begins only in 1928. The best answer to any criticism of the Federation up to that period, or up to 1932, for that matter, is in the work of an official commission of the General Conference of the Methodist Church, which surveyed the whole field of social service and filed a unanimous report in 1932. It gave complete endorsement to the Federation and its work.

At that time, the Federation's constitution declared that its object "shall be to deepen within the Church the sense of social obligation and opportunity, to study social problems from the Christian point of view and to promote social service in the spirit of Jesus Christ."

To be referred to in the House Committee files as an officer of the Federation in 1928 in such a way as to indicate subversive interests on my part is hardly worthy of any investigating committee.

I do not recall the exact date when the purpose of the Federation referred to in the quotation just above was changed. I believe its revision was drafted by Dr. Ward. The proposed revision included a statement declaring: "The Federation rejects the method of the struggle for tion in them of John Foster Dulles, Toyohito Kagawa and Martin Niemoller—Jack McMichael and others who were present were incensed by my address.

Whether a reporter was present at the meeting or not, the reporting is so inaccurate as to reveal journalism at its lowest level. This is not reporting; it is deliberate falsification.

The statement that I "endorsed the Federation's platform for the overthrow of the present capitalistic system in the United States" is absolutely false.

Also, I categorically deny the statement that I read aloud and endorsed the masthead of the Federation's literature denouncing the profit motive. I was not in favor of this part of the Federation's program, and had opposed it, as stated above.

As for being trained by Dr. Ward and taking dictation from him, the facts are that I had done secretarial work for Dr. Ward and took the dictation of his little book, "Poverty and Wealth," which was a Sunday School textbook and not a volume "known to all radical leaders."

As for the story declaring that I favored confiscation of property, the truth is I believe in private property and find the whole idea of confiscation abhorrent.

Item No. 16

THE WASHINGTON Post of November 24, 1948, page 1, carries a news item datelined Newark, N. J., regarding a speech made by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam before the Newark Conference of the Methodist Church. Bishop Oxnam is reported to have denounced the Committee on Un-American Activities. He is quoted as saying:

"Protestants believe that the conspirators who would destroy our freedom can be ferreted out and properly punished better by the painstaking and patriotic procedures of the Federal Bureau of Investigation than by the hearsay and un-American procedures of this committee."

Bishop Oxnam was evidently referring to a pamphlet issued by the Committee on Un-American Activities entitled "100 Things You Should Know About Communism and Religion," wherein it was reported that the Methodist Federation for Social Action, while not an official church unit, is trying to use the prestige of the Methodist Church to promote the line of the Communist Party.

Comment on Item No. 16

Is it to be assumed that an American who criticizes the Committee on Un-American Activities has become subversive? Surely the committee does not think itself sacrosanct. At that time the chairman of the committee was under indictment for criminal activities, and was later convicted of them.

The paragraph of my speech that was quoted will stand scrutiny.

I was not, as it happens, referring to

Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, has revealed its menacing objective. He writes, "The United Front is not a peace pact with the reformists. The United Front is a method of struggle against the reformists, against the social-fascists, for the possession of the masses."

THE OFFICIAL ORGAN of the Communist Party of the United States, The Communist, in its January, 1935, issue stated, "The United Front is at the present time the main road along which the masses will be prepared for the struggle for Soviet power under the leadership of the Communist Party."

Intelligent Americans will denounce the proposal and seek to reveal its essential purpose. The Communist has no other purpose in the United Front program than to disrupt the American Federation of Labor and to insinuate himself into progressive movements in order to control them. Americans who are interested in maintaining the liberties of political democracy will repudiate the United Front.

Its real purpose is Divided Ranks. It is "the main road along which the masses will be prepared for the struggle." And the struggle, to use the Communist's own words, is "the violent overthrow of the whole existing capitalistic order, for the establishment of the proletariat."

The United Front is a dangerous Gift Horse.

the pamphlet issued by the committee, "100 Things You Should Know About Communism." The full text of my speech makes it clear that I was referring to the un-American activities of the Un-American Activities Committee, which was aping totalitarian practices in a current campaign to identify Protestant churches with communism.

Item No. 17

THE WASHINGTON Star of December 8, 1948, at page 7, carries a news item datelined Buck Hills Falls, Pa., December 8, in which Bishop Oxnam is reported as having said that the House Committee on Un-American Activities is un-American itself for attempting to pin the Communist label on some churchmen and church groups. Also, Bishop Oxnam is reported as saying that such "absurd charges" are "disguised efforts to silence men on the pulpit by threatening to call them Communist."

Comment on Item No. 17

I do not have a summary of this address before me, but whether I did or did not criticize the committee has nothing to do with subversion.

Item No. 18

THE NEW York Times of February 24, 1949, pages 1 and 3, contains a news item regarding the presentation of the annual award of The Churchman to Bishop Oxnam. It was reported that Bishop Oxnam said that the United States must not flirt with Franco to stop Stalin. Bishop Oxnam is quoted as saying: "We cannot expect the common man to believe in democratic pronouncements if we make deals with dictators, or ally ourselves with political, economic or ecclesiastical reaction."

Comment on Item No. 18

May I ask, again, what is the objection to this statement? Does the committee believe it is beyond criticism? Does it think itself competent to pass upon textbooks in the Nation? The paragraph quoted stands on its own feet.

Item No. 20

THE WASHINGTON Evening Star of May 26, 1950, carries a news item datelined Boston, May 26. Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam is reported as calling for joint action between Protestants and Catholics to meet the onslaught of communism.

Comment on Item No. 20

Why is this included—as criticism or commendation? Is this an attempt, after first recording hearsay and false testimony in my file, to appear balanced by presenting a commendatory item?

Item No. 21

BISHOP Oxnam addressed a letter to the Committee on Un-American Activities on May 11, 1950. In it, he stated that he never belonged to the American League Against War and Fascism. He further stated he thought it would be fundamentally unfair to say he belonged to the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship wtihout saying that his affiliation with this organization was during the war, when Russia was one of our allies.

Comment on Item No. 21

If the House committee now knows that I do not now belong to the organization, and understands the circumstances under which I did belong, why was the material quoted in Item 10 above in my file?

Item No. 22

IN ANOTHER letter dated May 16, 1950, Bishop Oxnam states that the American Civil Liberties Union is not, and has never been, a Communist organization; that the Committee on Militarism in Education was never a Communist organization; that the Fellowship of Reconciliation is an absolute pacifist organization and he never belonged to it; that he did belong to the Methodist Federation for Social Action but no longer is a member; that he did serve on the advisory committee of the Protestant Digest but resigned.

Comment on Item No. 22

No comment is necessary here.

Item No. 23

IN THE third letter he wrote to the committee, dated February 12, 1951, Bishop Oxnam stated that he was never a member of the American Friends of the Chinese People; that he was never a member of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties and never signed any statement of that organization; that he did authorize the use of his name by the American Friends for Spanish Freedom, and that he resigned from the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship following the war.

Comment on Item No. 23

These matters have been dealt with above.

Comment on Item No. 24

This is the most inexcusable and vicious section of the entire report. This list would lead a reader to believe that I have been related to the organizations listed.

From the material presented above, I think it is clear to anyone that I had no relation with the American Friends of the Chinese People, the American League Against War and Fascism, the American League for Peace and Democracy, Citizens Victory Committee for Harry Bridges or the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. Of the 12 organizations listed, five I never belonged to.

Why were the Daily Worker and the New Masses listed in this compilation about me? Does the committee cite a man as subversive because the Daily Worker reports a speech he has given, or falsely includes his name in a list of petitioners? Similarly with the New Masses. I have never had any relationship with these journals, direct or indirect.

My relationship with the other organizations listed has been explained in detail above.

The Statistics

A BRIEF statistical recapitulation may be in order:

The committee report on me consists of 305 typewritten lines. Of these:

Two are introduction;

Sixteen are a summary of the organizations mentioned in the report;

One hundred twenty-eight concern organizations never listed as subversive, or quotations from journals that are not related to subversive organizations or activities;

Seventy-two are from an obscure newspaper in Princeton, Ill., the utter falsity of which might have been disclosed in half an hour's conversation had a committee investigator bothered to walk the 300 yards from the Capitol to my office;

Sixty-four are devoted to organizations which I never belonged to;

Twenty-three refer to organizations listed as Communist fronts to which I once belonged but from which I had resigned prior to the publication of the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations and concerning which I have made full explanation above.

First of all, what is a Committee file? It is obvious that it is nothing more than a collection of newspaper clippings, letterheads, letters and excerpts of speeches, etc. Clearly it can and does include any statements, true or false, that a personal enemy or crackpot may submit.

One might naively suppose that the purpose of the file was to give a Committee member some sort of indication of the true nature of the individual in question—his leanings, activities, point of view and associations in a balanced way so some informed judgment could be reached. If my file is typical, it is certain that nothing of the sort was intended; the effort was devoted almost exclusively to present me in the worst possible light, to collect all invidious references to me without any attempt to check their accuracy, and made no reference to the essential nature of my work over years, which has been public, open and easily available.

The next question is what use is made of the file. The answer is that a "research staff" selects from the file and prepares a report which, I have discovered from personal experience, is released in full or in part to citizens who request it.

It would appear that the "research staff" would be under obligation to find out whether the material selected and broadcast is true or false. But nothing of the sort takes place. When pinned down and asked explicitly, and only then, Committee members piously assert to an inquirer that the report "carries no conclusion of this Committee" and that the Committee never vouches for the correctness of any newspaper item.

This is deceit at its most vicious. What usually happens is demonstrated by the letter written last month by Rep. Jackson in response to a request for the information which he said was available about me.

He did not make the file available, but only hinted darkly at its detail and volume. He then went on to list the 12 agencies that appear in the summary of my report, including those with which I never had any relationship. He included, of course, the Daily Worker and the New Masses, where my alleged relationship was the fact that my name appeared in some news item carried by them.

The letter clearly conveys to the reader that "detailed documentation," which is "very voluminous," lies back of these reports. This letter, on the stationery of the Congress of the United States, House of Representatives, signed by a Congressman who is a member of the Committee, is patently designed to convey the conclusion that the material is an opinion of the Committee.

What does this mean, then, for the American citizen on whom the Committee has made a file? It means that he can be damaged without redress. It means that instead of the community knowing the positions he has held, the service he has rendered, the views he holds and the estimates of the people who know him, he is judged by a document that appears to be deliberately designed to discredit.

A citizen receiving such a report from the Committee understandably assumes that the material does in fact represent the judgment and conclusion of the Committee. It does not carry any statement to the contrary, or any disclaimer by the Committee on the accuracy of the newspaper reports included in the file, or any warning that some of the material may be allegation and not fact. These reports have been reprinted by private agencies and circulated as the judgment of the Committee, as I have had occasion to know in my own case.

The Committee, I suggest, is using methods that in ordinary parlance would be called blackmail.

Malicious Gossip

The Washington Post publishes today a calm, factual, detailed analysis by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of a dossier on himself in the files of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Bishop Oxnam's point-by-point refutation of the accusations, innuendoes and insinuations contained in the dossier, his exposure of its slovenliness and downright fraudulence, reveal a dangerous sort of evil which the House of Representatives ought not to countenance. What is a committee of Congress doing with a compilation of this sort of groundless gossip about a distinguished minister of religion?

Read Bishop Oxnam's full statement. The committee dossier on him records entirely innocent activities as though they had some sinister implication; for example, it contains a news clipping from 1930 to the effect that he made a speech to the inmates of the Indiana State Reformatory and wrests what he said on that ancient occasion entirely out of context. It reports that he was a member of the National Committee of the American Civil Liberties Union, an honorable, respected and extremely useful organization, and then quotes a statement smearing the ACLU put out by the long-discredited Fish Commission in 1931—and this, despite a statement issued as recently as February 17, 1952, by the Un-American Activities Committee itself that the ACLU "has never been cited as Red-dominated, or as Communist by any official organization charged with the duty of investigating subversive activity."

The dossier reports public statements by Bishop Oxnam assailing "witch hunts" and criticizing the Un-American Activities Committee, as though these statements were in themselves evidence against him. It reports that the bishop expressed the view in 1949 that the United States must not "flirt with Franco to stop Stalin" or "ally ourselves with political, economic or ecclesiastical reaction." What in the world is wrong with the expression of such an opinion in a free country?

The committee apparently regards as "subversive" any opinion of which it disapproves. The dossier compiled on Bishop Oxnam is the kind of dossier compiled by the political police behind the Iron Curtain. It does not represent investigation; it represents a naked and ugly attempt at intimidation.

Dr. George S. Mitchell Receives Catholic Award

Bishop John J. Russell Gives Scroll to Ex-Richmonder

Catholic Bishops' Group Urges Christ Be Brought to the South

RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH 4-25-53

Bishops of the Catholic Committee of the South (CCS) urged last night that action be taken now to bring Christ to the South and the South to Christ.

The bishops made the statement in their message at the closing session of the biannual meeting which was attended by about 500 clergy and lay leaders from 10 Southern States and the District of Columbia.

"We sincerely hope," the bishops' statement said, "that the day will come when the ideal of Christian brotherhood will displace from our Southern scene all traces of the blight of racism."

The clergymen also expressed the hope that "management and labor continue to regard the committee as an impartial spokesman for justice, lending to both groups its advice and support, by conciliation in industrial disputes and by conducting a constant program of education in the Christian principles which affect their relationship."

The Most Rev. John J. Russell, bishop of Charleston, S. C., was named episcopal chairman of the committee at last night's session at the Knights of Columbus auditorium. He succeeds the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, archbishop-bishop of Savannah-Atlanta, Ga.

Elected assistant to the episcopal chairman was the Most Rev. Vincent S. Waters, bishop of Raleigh, N. C. Re-elected were the Most Rev. L. Abel Caillouet, auxiliary bishop of New Orleans, episcopal secretary, and the Most Rev. William T. Mulloy, bishop of Covington, Ky., episcopal treasurer.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, director of the Southern Regional Council at Atlanta, told the meeting that "the economic and material basis for success of the South have been laid."

Dr. Mitchell, a former resident of Richmond, received the committee's biannual award for the person who has most "contributed to the welfare and progress of the South."

"It is tradition, inertia, timidity and often merely nostalgic recollection of rules made before the industrial age which hold us back," Dr. Mitchell said.

Told to Be Example

Pastors were told yesterday to give the example of showing others the proper attitude toward all races.

It was suggested at a race relations workshop at the Knights of Columbus Home that this could be partly accomplished by pastors welcoming members of other races to meetings or interviews, properly addressing them with titles of respect and refraining from "obnoxious nomenclature."

During a discussion on "Equal Opportunity, an Essential for Christian Family Life," it was suggested that teachers encourage trained Negro leaders to remain in the South and to break down their own prejudices, both to whites and among themselves.

The April 1953 issue of "One Methodist Voice," published by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton, Ga., charges that the Board of the Southern Regional Council is "honeycombed with Communist fronters." The paper then undertakes to support this charge by a series of misstatements, innuendos, and a record of alleged associations of past and present board members. The conclusion which Craft wishes to leave with the reader is stated in an editorial on page 2: "The Southern Regional Council with its Board of Directors top heavy with fellow travelers and Communist fronters is unknowingly to some of its members aiding the Russian Cause to stir up the Negro question in the South. That is what pleases the Kremlin. The Red hand of Russia reaches into Georgia."

This charge is wholly false, as are most of the "facts" offered in support of it. The object of the author clearly is to ~~harrass~~ discredit and embarrass the leadership of the North Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church, particularly, the Methodist board which administers the Wesley Mem. Bldg. where the SRC ~~has~~ rents ofc space. A full understanding of his motives and methods can be gained from his ~~background~~ personal background, the history of his relationships within the church, and his previous utterances, through "One Methodist Voice" and otherwise. However, since the sole purpose of this memorandum ~~statement~~ is ~~merely~~ to demonstrate the false and libelous nature of the publication, these personal & denominational aspects ~~matters~~ will not be discussed here.

Postal Violation

It is our belief that the publication in question was distributed ~~through the mail~~ in violation of laws governing the use of the mails. To our knowledge, it was mailed to a number of persons as second-class matter, without envelope or wrapper of any kind, the 1st page thus constituting the outside cover. The name and address of the recipient ~~being shown~~ appeared on ~~a~~ sticker attached to the first page of the paper. ~~Thus~~ Therefore, the printed matter on the first page, parts of which we believe to be demonstrably libelous, was ~~exposed to the unaided eye.~~ plainly visible + could be read easily by anyone who chanced to see it.

We contend that this is a clear violation of Sec. 18, Sub-sections 17-18, Fed. Code annotated, which reads as follows:
"All matter otherwise mailable by law, upon the envelope or outside cover or wrapper of which, or any postal card upon which is written or printed or otherwise impressed or apparent any delineation, epithet, term or language of libelous, scurrilous, defamatory, or threatening character or calculated by the terms or manner of style or display and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct of another, is non-mailable matter, and shall not be conveyed in the mails nor delivered from any post office nor by any letter carrier, and shall be withdrawn from the mails under such regulations as the Postmaster General shall prescribe.

Whoever knowlingly deposits for mailing or delivery anything declared by this section to be non-mailable matter, or knowingly takes the same from the mails for the purpose of circulating or disposing of or aiding in the circulation or disposing of the same, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

Libelous Matter on First Page

In the right-hand column of the first page, the following passage appears: "GEORGE S. MITCHELL a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter is the Executive Secretary who directs the work of SRC from his office in Wesley Memorial Methodist Church. At a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952 under the sponsorship of the Friends Service Committee, a young Negro man when speaking to the group said to the effect that it was a shame that one could not present an effective program on peace in his community without being called a Communist. The person presiding according to a reliable source said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that." The leader then said, "Dr. Mitchell, will you answer that"? George S. Mitchell, arose and said, "I am not talking today, but I will say that we will never get anywhere by moral force alone". According to my source of information, Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party."

This entire passage is patently a malicious falsehood. Attached are signed statements by three respected community leaders who were present at the meeting referred to. Each of these persons states, and is prepared to do so under oath, that neither Dr. Mitchell nor the chairman of the meeting made any such statements as those attributed to them in the passage from "One Methodist Voice." The testimony of these three persons can be substantiated by more than a dozen other reputable individuals who were present at the meeting in question. It is hardly ~~significant~~ surprising that ~~Mr.~~ Craft does not identify what he calls the "reliable source" of this account.

S-R-C- : General

Since ~~the~~ it is not pertinent for this purpose, we will not present here a detailed analysis of the other contents of this publication. However, the following brief account of the Southern Regional Council's history ~~, leadership, and activities~~ and make-up will give some idea of the ~~irresponsible~~ far-fetched nature of Craft's attack.

The organizing meeting of the Council was held in response to a ~~[illegible]~~ "call" issued by some of the South's finest leadership, including:

Following the deliberations of this group, + a subsequent conf. w/ So. Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered, the incorporators being Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, ~~and~~ Dr. Rufus E. Clement. Dr. C. S. Johnson, and Dr. Howard W. Odum.

Attached is a complete list of SRC's board members, past and present, showing the dates served. It is obvious that the board, from the beginning, has been composed overwhelmingly of Southerners whose record of patriotism and public service is above reproach.

Recognizing that most of these persons are unassailable even by his standards, Craft attempts to suggest that they have been deceived about the nature of the SRC and have lent their names to it unwittingly. This is untrue on ~~the~~ its face, since the members of the board receive full reports on the activities of the SRC and review them in detail at an annual session. ~~However,~~ The claim is even more conclusively refuted by the fact that the executive committee, elected by the board, meets quarterly, ~~and formulates the intimate policy~~ intimately reviews the SRC's activities, ~~in intimate detail,~~ and formulates the ~~basic policy~~ ~~controlling~~ detailed policies of the organization. (The full minutes of these meetings are ~~xx~~ on file in the SRC's offices.) A list of The members of the executive committee, past and present, are shown below, with their terms of service indicated: is also attached. No informed person could imagine this group directing or condoning a Communist-influenced program.

~~It is of some interest to note that the SRC has had, from its inception~~

From its inception, the SRC has had substantial contributions from ~~and the active participation of Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish groups~~ many ~~most~~ of the major religious groups (Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Society of Friends, Catholic, ~~and~~ Jewish). Representatives of these and other religious groups have also participated actively in the SRC's affairs.

In view of the nature of the charges here considered, it is perhaps particularly pertinent ~~of particular interest~~ to note ~~observe~~ the extent of Catholic participation in the SRC. One of the founders and a charter member of the SRC is the Most Rev. ~~Archbishop~~ Gerald P. O'Hara, ~~formerly~~ Archbishop of ~~the Catholic Church~~ Savannah. The Executive Committee has always included a Catholic ~~had a active representative.~~ clergyman Mr. Paul D. Williams, was president of the SRC from 1945 to 1951, ~~is~~ a distinguished Catholic layman, a founder of the Catholic Committee of the South, and more recently a Knight of St. Gregory. In April of this year, Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of SRC, received the award of the Catholic Committee of the South for his "significant contribution to the welfare of the South." The same award was conferred in previous years on Dr. Howard W. Odum, the first president of SRC, and Dr. Guy B. Johnson, executive director of SRC from 1944 to 1947.

For those who are aware of the Catholic Church's militant anti-communism, these facts need no amplification.

The publications and public utterances of the SRC speak for themselves. They have been read, ~~quoted~~ used, and acclaimed by hundreds of persons whose intelligence and loyalty are unquestioned. Far from "fomenting racial strife and hatred," as Craft would have it, the SRC has a wide reputation for temperateness and constructiveness. Two noted Southern journalists who are closely familiar with the SRC's work have given these public estimates of it:

Ralph McGill: "The Southern Regional Council is an able and worthwhile organization working in the field of racial relations. It has no radical tinge, but is, nevertheless, an aggressively energetic coordinating agency."

Hodding Carter: The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is bi-racial, non-denominational and non-political. It does not indulge in tom-tom beating, parades or lengthy pronunciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's -- or from the nation's concern."

General

The method which Craft has used in assembling and presenting his allegations against the SRC is by now a familiar one. The following points should be noted:

(1) He does not give any sources for his statements about the individuals attacked, except for two instances in which he cites the Daily Worker and another in which he mentions a former member of the Communist Party.

(2) Some of his "dossiers" on past and present board members bear a close resemblance to the assortment of unverified reports, rumor, miscellaneous clippings, and old letterheads which comprise the "raw files" of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Although the Committee itself has stated that it cannot vouch for this unchecked and unevaluated material, unscrupulous individuals have been able to secure copies of it and use it for their irresponsible purposes.

(3) Although the past and present board members of the SRC number 130, he comments on only 11 current board members and 6 ex-board members,

(4) He weaves irrelevant passages about communist activities and individuals that are in no way related to the SRC. This sort of purely verbal association is evidently designed to lend the appearance of substance to his insubstantial charges.

(5) He cites perfectly innocent and respectable associations in such a way as to convey the impression that they are improper or subversive.

(6) As evidence of the irresponsibility of Craft's material, he lists as a board member of the SRC one "Harry Stanley Brav." No such person has ever served on the board, though Rabbi Stanley R. Brav, of Vicksburg,

"Whoever knowingly deposits for mailing or delivery anything declared by this section to be non-mailable matter, or knowingly takes the same from the mails for the purpose of circulating or disposing of or aiding in the circulation or disposing of the same, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisioned not more than one year, or both."

~~Since it is not pertinent for this purpose, we will not present here a detailed analysis of the other contents of this publication.~~ However, the following brief account of the Southern Regional Council's history and make-up will give some idea of the far-fetched nature of Craft's attack.

The organizing meeting of the Council was held in response to a "call" issued by some of the South's finest leadership, including:

C. H. Gillman, Georgia director, C. I. O.
George L. Googe, Southern Director, A. F. of L.
M. Ashby Jones, Baptist minister
Ryland Knight, Baptist minister
Rabbi David Marx, The Temple, Atlanta
Bishop Arthur J. Moore, The Methodist Church
Ralph McGill, Editor, The Atlanta Constitution
Stuart R. Oglesby, Presbyterian minister
Rt. Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Catholic Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta
Dean S. Paden, President, King Hardware Company
J. McDowell Richards, President, Columbia Theological Seminary
Bishop John Moore Walker, The Protestant Episcopal Church
Goodrich C. White, President, Emory University

Following the deliberations of this group and a subsequent conference with Southern Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered, the incorporators being Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, and Dr. Howard W. Odum.

Attached is a complete list of SRC's board members, past and present, showing the dates served. It is obvious that the board, from the beginning, has been composed overwhelmingly of Southerners whose record of patriotism and public service is above reproach.

Recognizing that most of these persons are unassailable even by his standards, Craft attempts to suggest that they have been deceived about the nature of the SRC and have lent their names to it unwittingly. This is untrue on its face, since the members of the board receive full reports on the activities of the SRC and review them in detail at an annual session.

The claim is even more conclusively refuted by the fact that the Executive Committee, which is elected by the board, meets quarterly, intimately reviews the SRC's activities, and formulates the detailed policies of the organization. (The full minutes of these meetings are on file in the SRC's offices.) A list of the members of the Executive Committee, past and present, with their terms of service indicated, is also attached. No informed person could imagine that this group would direct or condone a Communist-influenced program.

From its inception, the SRC has had substantial contributions from many of the major religious groups (Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Society of Friends, Catholic, Jewish). Representatives of these and other religious groups have also participated actively in the SRC's affairs.

In view of the nature of the charges here considered, it is perhaps particularly pertinent to note the extent of Catholic participation in the SRC. One of the founders and a charter member of the SRC is the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Archbishop of Savannah-Atlanta. The Executive Committee has always included a Catholic clergyman. Mr. Paul D. Williams, a distinguished Catholic layman, a founder of the Catholic Committee of the South, and more recently a Knight of St. Gregory, was president of the SRC from 1945 through 1951. In April of this year, Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the SRC, received the award of the Catholic Committee of the South for his "significant contribution to the welfare of the South." The same award was conferred in previous years on Dr. Howard W. Odum, the first president of the SRC, and Dr. Guy B. Johnson, executive director from 1944 to 1947. For those who are aware of the Catholic Church's militant anti-Communism, these facts need no amplification.

The publications and public utterances of the SRC speak for themselves. They have been read, used, and acclaimed by hundreds of persons whose intelligence and loyalty are unquestioned. Far from "fomenting racial strife and hatred," as Craft would have it, the SRC has a wide reputation for temperateness and constructiveness. Two noted Southern journalists who are closely familiar with the SRC's work have given the following public estimates of it:

Ralph McGill, in the Atlanta Constitution: "The Southern Regional Council is an able and worthwhile organization working in the field of racial relations. It has no radical tinge, but is, nevertheless, an aggressively energetic coordinating agency."

Hodding Carter, in Collier's: "The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is bi-racial, non-denominational and non-political. It does not indulge in tom-tom beating, parades or lengthy pronunciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's -- or from the nation's concern."

Virginius Dabney in Sat. Evening Post (
"the Southern Regional Council, the sanest and best-informed Southwide organization dealing with race relations.

GENERAL

The method which Craft has used in assembling and presenting his allegations against the SRC is by now a familiar one. The following points should be noted:

(1) He does not give any sources for his statements about the individuals attacked, except for two instances in which he cites the Daily Worker and another in which he mentions a former member of the Communist Party.

(2) Some of his "dossiers" on past and present board members bear a close resemblance to the assortment of unverified reports, rumors, miscellaneous clippings, and old letterheads which comprise the "raw files" of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Although the Committee itself has stated that it cannot vouch for this unchecked and unevaluated material, unscrupulous individuals have been able to secure copies of it and use it for their irresponsible purposes.

(3) Although the past and present board members of the SRC number 130, he comments on only 11 current board members and 6 ex-board members.

(4) He weaves in long, irrelevant passages about communist activities and individuals that are in no way related to the SRC. This sort of purely verbal association is evidently designed to lend the appearance of substance to his insubstantial charges.

(5) He cites perfectly innocent and respectable associations in such a way as to convey the impression that they are improper or subversive.

(6) As evidence of the irresponsibility of Craft's material, he lists as a board member of the SRC one "Harry Stanley Brav". No such person has ever served on the board, though Rabbi Stanley R. Brav, of Vicksburg, Miss., was a highly valued board member until he moved out of the South in 1948.

Miss., was a highly valued board member until he moved out of the South in 1948.

(7) Craft makes no distinction as to the time, the nature, or the termination of the various affiliations of which he accuses directors and staff members of the SRC. It is no secret that Communist-front organizations have frequently made use of names without the permission or approval of the persons so named. It is also well known that many organizations which were entirely sound at the beginning were later infiltrated by Communists and Communist sympathizers; therefore, the time of joining and the time of withdrawal are of great importance to any real understanding of the association. It is obvious that any such understanding is alien to Craft's purpose.

Lead Article ~~(George S. Mitchell)~~ beginning on page 1, OMV

CAPS unchanged

1. The first paragraph consists of a general indictment of the SRC unsupported by facts. The SRC is alleged to be carrying on an obnoxious program from a "point of advantage and influence" -- i.e., the Wesley Memorial Building. It may be noted, in passing, that ~~the letterhead~~ all stationery, ~~and~~ publications, and news releases of the SRC bear the address 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.; the SRC has never sought in any way to capitalize on ~~its~~ the location of its offices.

2. Dr. Mitchell is described as "a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter." He is neither. He was an instructor in economics at Columbia from 1929 to 1935, though ~~the fact~~ ~~indicates~~ it is hard to see what relevance this is supposed to have. ~~Anyone familiar with the examination of his background and reputation knows that his loyalty is not a matter of dispute.~~ [illegible]

3. The next paragraph attributes to an anonymous "reliable source" ~~which~~ an account of a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952, under the sponsorship of the Friends Service Committee. According to this account, the chairman ~~declared~~ is supposed to have said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that," after which Dr. Mitchell was called upon. The paragraph concludes with the statement that "Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party."

This entire paragraph is as false in ~~its~~ fact~~s~~ as it is vicious in implication. Attached are copies of signed statements by three persons who were present at the meeting, + who declare unequivocally ~~to the effect~~ that no such incident took place. More than a dozen other reputable persons who were present can testify to the same point.

4. It is stated that SRC's publication New South was "consciously or unconsciously borrowed from the old official organ, 'New South' of the now defunct Communist originated and Communist inspired organization known as, 'The ~~South~~ Conference for Human Welfare.'" This can only be described as hate-inspired nonsense. The SRC's publication was named ~~by the Executive Committee~~ "New South" in 1946 ~~(more than a year before Dr. Mitchell became executive director)~~ by the Executive Committee, after lengthy consideration of many ~~scores of~~ possible titles. Neither the Committee nor the staff had ever heard of another publication of that name; ~~nor does the staff know of any organization called "The Conference for Human Welfare"~~ if the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (if that is the organization meant) never published anything by that title, to the best of our knowledge. The phrase "New South", as most schoolboys know, ~~comes from~~ is taken from an the historic address by Henry Grady. ~~It is strange that~~ Apparently Mr. Craft ~~would~~ would attribute the origin of this famous phrase to the Communists!

5. In this paragraph and elsewhere in the paper, Craft makes much of the fact that several SRC board members were at one time affiliated with the ~~now defunct~~ late Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This is one of the most shopworn methods used to discredit liberal-minded Southerners. Commenting on an attack upon Dr. Rufus E. Clement (almost identical with that in "One Methodist Voice"), the Atlanta Constitution editorialized on May 12, 1953:

"A member of the board has charged that Dr. Clement is a Communist sympathizer because he once belonged to the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This newspaper is proud of the fact that it contributed largely to the demise of that organization. We were twice threatened with lawsuits because of our exposure of it; therefore, we believe we have some authority to speak.

"The Southern ~~X~~ Conference for Human Welfare was organized by honest, loyal Americans, with a viewpont to organizing all constructive forces in the South to improve the South's economic and social status. It later was infiltrated by Communists, but for a good many years it was composed of and led by persons of unquestioned loyalty, during which time its membership was about 99.95 per cent loyal. It offers the typical example of a few rotten Communists spoiling a good barrel of apples.

"Even so, it was not until a good many years had passed, and after most of the membership had withdrawn, including Dr. Clement, that persons of suspected communistic tendencies took over what remained of the organization. They did not long endure, largely because this newspaper exposed them and kept upon them the full light of publicity."

Ralph McGill, editor of the Constitution, who led the exposure of the Southern Conference in its latter years was an incorporator of the SRC, and has been a close friend of its work ever since. During the few years of their co-existence, the two organizations were widely considered rival agencies, markedly different in ideology and approach to Southern problems. To suggest, as Craft does, that the SRC was related to or sympathetic with the left-wing element in the Southern Conference is to fly in the face of incontrovertible facts.

6. Craft declares, "Mitchell was an endorser and sponsor of Brookwood College at Katonah, N. Y., which the American Federation of Labor put a ban on it because of the school's Communistic affiliations." Dr. Mitchell recalls that he taught a class at Brookwood College on one or two occasions in 1930 or 1931. Brookwood was then a widely respected workers' education center. Craft does not give the date when the AFL allegedly "put a ban" on the institution.

7. Craft charges that Dr. Mitchell "is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, Civil Rights Congress." Dr. Mitchell's comments follows: "Untrue, though I in 1946 permitted my name to be used in a newspaper ad as one of the sponsors of the first meeting of what became the Civil Rights Congress. This was the time when a movement was under way to repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Act which forbade the use of injunctions in most labor disputes. I was asked to be a sponsor of an emergency meeting to form an organization to combat the movement to make these injunctions legal again. The great majority of those whose names were put to the invitation sent me were sound Americans with the good interests of the country at heart. I was, and am still, opposed to the use of injunctions in labor disputes. On the assumption that the proposed organization would work effectively against this practice, I permitted my name to be used as a sponsor for the emergency meeting. Within a few months, it became apparent that the resulting Civil Rights Congress was strongly influenced by Communists, and a year or so later, when the organization asked me again to be a sponsor of some meeting it was having, I refused. I never joined the Civil Rights Congress, am not and have never been a member of it, and have never attended any of its meetings."

8. The last paragraph makes no point at all, apparently having been added for suggestive effect. Dr. Mitchell was from February 1944 until about May 1945 regional director for the CIO Political Action Committee, covering the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Missippi, and for part of the time Louisiana. No responsible person supposes that the Political Action Committee was Communist-dominated; the charge was certainly never made against Dr. Mitchell's office. Craft does not identify the mysterious "Mr. Morgan" or explain what a telephone call to him is supposed to have meant.

~~Dem. 5~~

1. The first paragraph states Mrs. Tilly was "a sponsor of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in Chicago, May, 1950" and proceeds to discuss in detail the leftist record of persons described as her "fellow sponsors." Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or attend the so-called "Mid-Century Conference For Peace" and has never even heard of the individuals described as her "fellow sponsors."

2. Paragraph two states: "According to the letterhead of the Communist front known as THE COMMITTEE FOR PEACEFUL ALTERNATIVES TO THE ATLANTIC PACT, Mrs. M. E. Tilly is listed as a member of the Executive Board." Mrs. Tilly is not and has never been affiliated with this organization. In June 1951, when it came to her attention that her name had been used on its letterhead, she promptly sent the Dept a registered ltr demanding that it be removed ~~If her name has it appeared on its letterhead, it has been without her knowledge or consent.~~

the comment on this is in preparation

3. Paragraph 3: "Mrs. M. E. Tilly was also a sponsor of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax which is cited as a Communist Front by the California Committee on Un-American Activities." Mrs. Tilly, along with a great many other leading Americans who oppose any tax on the right to vote, was affiliated with this organization. It is interesting that the California Committee, which is notorious for its loose allegations, should be the authority for the charge that this organization was a communist front. So far as is known, no responsible Federal agency ever has so declared it, to be so during the period of Mrs. Tilly's membership.

4. Paragraph 4: "She was a sponsor of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties, according to the Daily Worker, April 16, 1948." ~~Unlike Mr. Craft and his associates, Mrs. Tilly and the SRC staff neither read the Daily Worker nor regard it as a competent authority.~~ This doubtful source to the contrary, Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or participate in anything called the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties.

Paragraph 5: "Mrs. Tilly was one of the initiators of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act and appears as Mrs. M. E. Tilly on the letter head while her signature appears with other signers of an open letter to all Congressmen as Dorothy Tilly." What is the point? Is the fact that Mrs. Tilly signed her name in two different ways supposed to be subversive? No allegation is made against the Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act.

6. Paragraph 6: "Mrs. M. E. Tilly's name appears on the official roll of the Methodist Federation for Social Action several years as an executive member." That is true. Mrs. Tilly withdrew from the MFSA ~~in~~ ~~about~~ in 1949.

7. Paragraph 7: "Mrs. M. E. (Dorothy) Tilly, of Atlanta, Ga., is listed as a member of 'The National Citizens' Political Action Committee'." When the organization was founded in 1944, it commanded ~~had~~ the respect + participation of a host of reputable citizens. There was no suggestion that it was anything but a sincere and honest movement. Only in its latter days — well after Mrs. Tilly and other influential citizens had ceased to be active in ~~it~~ ~~Paragraph~~ — did the NCPAC fall under Communist influence, and shortly thereafter it was merged into a left wing organ with which Mrs. Tilly had no connection whatever. Since the NCPAC has been out of existence for years, Crapt's use of the present tense to suggest a current affiliation is either inexcusable ignorance or downright deceit.

~~Mrs. T.~~

Paragraph 8: "Mrs. Tilly's name appears on the letterhead of the 'American Civil Liberties Union' as a member of the National Committee that was used in October, 1951, which the California Committee on Un-American Activities says it may be definitely classed as a Communist front or 'transmission belt' organization." Mrs. Tilly's affiliation with the American Civil Liberties Union requires neither defense or apology. It is a well established fact that the ACLU is a non-communist organization. One can only wonder at the reliability of Craft's source in view of the following statement which appears in a document issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee on February 17, 1952 (quoted by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam in the Washington Post): "The American Civil Liberties Committee has never been cited as Red-dominated, or as Communist, by any official organization charged with the duty of investigating subversive activity."

Same Paragraph: "She has been a member of the National Board, 'Americans for Democratic Action.'" Craft does not explain what this is supposed to mean. The Americans for Democratic Action is a militantly anti-Communist organization.

Same Paragraph: "She was listed as one of the signers of a statement on Korea, released by the Communist inspired 'Committee for Peaceful Alternatives--' as shown in the Daily Worker of July 28, 1950, the official organ of the Communist Party in the U. S." This is untrue, as the source cited might indicate to any rational person. As has already been pointed out, Mrs. Tilly has never been associated with the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives and signed no statement bearing its name.

The comment on this is in preparation

Paragraph 9: "Mrs. Tilly, according to the Daily World, April 6, 1952 addressed a three days' Women's Conference on World Peace at Daytona Beach, Florida called by the notorious Communist fronter Dr. Mary McCleod Bethune founder of the National Council of Negro Women." This characterization of Mrs. Bethune is an unwarranted smear of a great American woman who has won national and international honor for her many constructive activities. Mrs. Tilly was present at the meeting in question, along with leading representatives of Protestant, Jewish, and Catholic church women; the vice-chairman of the World Council of Churches; and the National Committeewomen of both the Democratic and the Republican Parties.

14-13

~~Mrs. T.~~

Board Members

Eleven current board members of the SRC are accused of Communist-front affiliations. ~~Each~~ of These persons was elected to the board in consideration of ~~his~~ their recognized worth and service to the South and the Nation. The high positions of public esteem which they occupy are enough ~~in themselves~~ alone to ~~refute the~~ discredit ~~the~~ this ~~x~~ implied attack on their loyalty. In any case, men of the statute of Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Dr. F. D. Patterson, ~~and~~ Dr. Will Alexander, and the rest, require no defense by us.

The same may be said of the two persons who hold no position in the SRC but are attacked as having taken part in SRC activities -- i.e., Dr. Channing Tobias and Mr. Frank McCallister.

It may be noted that at least two of these persons have had occasion to repudiate ~~similar charges the~~ these same charges in more important connections. In the Senate hearings on his appointment as delegate to the United Nations, Dr. Tobias was confronted by the same kind of irreponsible attack as appears in "One Methodist Voice." ~~Following~~ After hearing his testimony, the Senate committee unanimously confirmed his appointment, as did the full Senate in a ~~later~~ subsequent session. Dr. Rufus E. Clement was similarly attacked by certain members of the Atlanta City Executive Committee who sought to have him disqualified as a candidate for the Board of Education. Following a hearing at which Dr. Clement testified, the Committee dropped the charges and Dr. Clement was overwhelmingly elected by the people.

Six ex-board members are mentioned in "One Methodist Voice." Two of these, to our knowledge, have been identified with ~~leftwing and pro~~ leftist or Communist infiltrated movements.-- largely, however, in the last four years, ~~since they were dropped from the SRC board as~~ when they were members of the Board of SRC. no longer ~~residing in the region~~. In any case, these two former board members -- out of a total of 130 -- ~~played no~~ participated only in the early years of the SRC and played no significant part in the policy-making activities of the Board.

"A SOLEMN STATEMENT"

We send out this issue of OMV with the consciousness of the gravity of its contents. It is filled with awful facts. It carries terrible truths. We are not unmindful of the possible varied reactions on the part of our readers.

This issue has been prepared prayerfully, intelligently and patiently. It has been edited without fear or favor of any man, but with the sincere desire to tell the truth at a time when Americans need to know the truth.

The general public is not aware of Russia's design and pattern to take over the control of America. Her techniques and methods are insidious to fool us trusting Americans. We who have made a study of the Kremlin's Plan shudder and stagger at its treasonable effectiveness.

I, as a Minister, a Methodist Minister am gravely concerned over the Soviet Union's scheme to enlist the aid, names, and influence of gullible Church folk into Communist fronts. I am disturbed over the undisputable fact that there are outright Communists parading under the banner of religion to hide their affiliation while they have the voice of Jacob, but the hand of Esau.

When the security of our nation is at stake. When our American boys are spilling their blood and dying in a war planned, originated and continued by the godless forces of Russia. When that godless and ruthless bunch has a thousand fronting organizations in this Country dedicated to destroy our freedom. When an organization is in one of my churches which has on its Board of Control people who belong to Russia's fronts— I can't remain silent. I MUST speak out. I HAVE SPOKEN OUT IN THIS ISSUE. I HAVE PUT IT IN PRINT. I AM SENDING IT THROUGH THE MAILS. IF IT IS NOT THE TRUTH, SILENCE ME. IF IT IS THE TRUTH, EVERY METHODIST IN GEORGIA SHOULD RISE UP AND DEMAND TO PURGE WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH FROM EVERY VESTIGE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL.

REMOVE THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL FROM WESLEY MEMORIAL

The Southern Regional Council's occupancy of rooms within the sacred and hallowed walls of beloved Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga., is embarrassing to every Georgia Methodist who is properly informed of the true situation. Certainly, the Church should encourage every organization which is endeavoring to improve human relations that travels the roadway of Americanism. It certainly would be permissible for an orgaization whose record is clean to be permitted to have its headquarters in that part of Old Wesley Memorial which is designated for lease. But there is no rhyme or reason why SRC should be tolerated any longer. It doesn't deserve the privilege of hiding behind the sanctity of a building dedicated to the preaching of the gospel whose denomination has in its Constitution the allegiance to one Country.

Those in authority are not playing fair with Georgia Methodists by permitting the occupancy in OUR building of an organization which has on its policy forming councils communist fronters who fraternize and associate with such Negro Communists as Langston Hughes, Paul Robeson and Dr. DuBois and then assemble themselves in a meeting in Dixie to tell us how

The main offices for the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC., are in the Historic Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, Atlanta on the fourth floor which also houses the offices of many activities of the North Georgia Methodist Conferences. From this point of advantage and influence the Southern Regional Council, whose Board of Directors for years has been honeycombed with leftists, radicals, Communist fronters is able to carry on its stubborn program for racial mixture which is obnoxious to Southern Methodists and which foments racial strife and hatred in an area where sympathetic citizens have been doing much to develop the descendents of our grandparents' slaves. Unfortunately, some good and intelligent people who have not taken the time to personally investigate SRC's connections have lent their names to the organization.

GEORGE S. MITCHELL a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter is the Executive Secretary who directs the work of SRC from his office in Wesley Memorial Methodist Church.

At a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952 under the sponsorship of the Friends Service Committee, a young Negro man when speaking to the group said to the effect that it was a shame that one could not present an effective program on peace in his community without being called a Communist. The person presiding according to a reliable source said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that". The leader then said, "Dr. Mitchell, will you answer that"? George S. Mitchell, arose and said, "I am not talking today, but I will say that we will never get anywhere bv moral force alone". According to my source of information. Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party.

The official organ of the Southern Regional Council is the "NEW SOUTH" which was consciously or unconsciously borrowed from the old official organ, "NEW SOUTH" of the now defunct Communist originated and Communist

we ought to treat the Negro. Atlanta Methodists resent the fact that a member of the Board of Directors of SRC writes a column in a Northern Daily, uncomplimentary things about Georgia then enters Old Wesley Memorial to lay plans to reconstruct us. Georgia Methodists are insulted that a leading official of SRC sits in Moscow inspired meetings with the fat, flabby, former pin-up girl of American Communists and then comes down to Georgia to sit somewhere in Wesley Memorial Church with a Georgia Methodist woman to make plans for their program.

NO ORGANIZATION OUGHT TO BE PERMITTED TO HAVE ITS HEADQUARTERS IN A METHODIST CHURCH OR ANYBODY'S CHURCH WHICH HAS JUST ONE MEMBER WHO BELONGS TO JUST ONE COMMUNIST FRONT. But the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL has more than twenty Directors within the past few years who belong to numerous Communist fronts. The Southern Regional Council has on its Board of Directors people who are fraternally known to notorious Communist fronters in every section of our nation. The Southern Regional Council has leading members whose names are listed in the files of patriotic investigators in every large city of America. The Southern Regional Council is largely directed by persons whose names are commonly known to state legislative and national congressional investigating committees. THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL HEADQUARTERS OUGHT TO BE MOVED FROM THE CHURCH BUILDING IN ATLANTA.

Not all members of the Board of Directors come within this regrettable catagory. There are those who would not be unpatriotic to identify themselves with just one subversive front. It is our opinion that they are unaware of what is going on in the organization to which they have lent their name and influence. We believe that they, not because of expediency but of conviction will withdraw their names and demand that the SRC move immediately from our Church. This responsibility does not rest in the hands of the Pastor. It is the responsibility of the Board of Trustees of Wesley Memorial Church which is elected by the North Georgia annual conference. Dr. E. G. Mackay is chairman of this Board. We brought to his attention in the October, 1952 issue of O. M. V., a little of what was going on. We had expected then that some action would be taken. He knew how to say, "NO" to the Warren A. Candler Chapter of Circuit Riders, Inc., an organization composed of true, tried and loyal Methodists. We would like to remind Dr. Mackay that for every Georgia Methodist who is in sympathy with the program of SRC, there is twenty-five Methodists in Georgia who believe what the Circuit Riders, Inc., stand for. If the Board fails to do its duty—then, the only other course is for the annual conference meeting in June to take appropriate action.

The continued presence of SRC in Wesley Memorial is a reflection upon our loyalty to Americanism. It would be most embarrassing to have leading dailies across this country carrying screaming headlines of a Congressional investigation of an off color organization in a Methodist Church in the heart of Dixie where patriotism to country is a passion and Old Glory is an adored sacred symbol.

Come on Dr. Mackay, you have a great opportunity to do a patriotic duty.

One of Russia's most effective plans to sell Communism to America is to cause discontent and strife among so-called minority groups. Their prize weapon to destroy freedom and our American way of life is to stir up racial strife and discord among the Negro, the Southern Negro. The Soviet Union has no love for the Negro. It seeks to bring about a revolution by pitting one race against another race. Communists seek to capitalize on every racial incident so as to turn it into effective propaganda for the gospel of the Soviets. All persons acquainted with Russia's diabolical pattern know of her program to create racial discord. This design includes the forcing of a changed social pattern which will bring confusion. In this they hope to start a Revolution.

Nowell a Georgia born Negro and former Communist told Judge Medina, on the witness stand in the dazed and hushed Federal Court room at the trial of the top eleven American Communists, that he was trained at Moscow in the technique for the overthrow of the government of the United States. He told under oath that it was the plan of the Soviet Union to foment a revolution among the Negroes of the South and to set up a Communistic regime with Negroes in complete and absolute control in the 'Black belt'. He said it was the Reds' further plan to capture the industrial worker of the North by constantly condemning private capitalism, and then to tie together the 'red-black' man of the South with the labor revolutionists of the North for the establishment of complete Communistic control in America.

In Russia's iniquitious pattern she has very effectively set up such Communist fronts as: the "National Negro Congress"; the "National Negro Women's Council"; the "Negro Cultural Committee"; the "Negro Labor Victory Committee"; the "Negro People's Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy"; the "African Blood Brotherhood"; "All Harlem Youth Conferences"; the "Southern Negro Youth Congress"; the "Southern Conference for Human Welfare" and many other such fronts which have drawn into their propaganda nets American liberals, radicals and some gullible, innocent 'pretty good folk' with American and foreign born Communists to foment a revolution. One church member in a place of authority and in a position of influence working in a Communist front can do Communism's Cause more good than a dozen card toting members of the Communist Party.

The Southern Regional Council with its Board of Directors top heavy with fellow travelers and Communist fronters is unknowingly to some of its members aiding the Russian Cause to stir up the Negro question in the South. That is what pleases the Kremlin. The Red hand of Russia reaches into Georgia.

inspired organization known as, "The Conference For Human Welfare". Earl Browder, well known Communist leader in this Country according to the Daily Worker praised this organization for its fine work. Paul Crouch, before his conversion from Communism, James Ford, Negro Communist candidate for vice president of the United States and Ben Davis, Jr., convicted for his conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States were associated with the old "NEW SOUTH".

A dozen or more of the leftist leaders in the now deceased Communist front, The Southern Conference for Human Welfare are either now or have been on the policy making board of the Southern Regional Council. This organization was incorporaated under the laws of the State of Georgia in January, 1944 with general objectives which on the face seem to be commendable. But its program, conduct and much of its personnel have removed it worthiness to be permitted quarters in a Church much beloved and respected by the rank and file of loyal Georgia Methodists.

MITCHELL'S shameful record of affiliations with polices, idelogices and organizations which are Communist inspired is certainly unknown to many good American Methodists who ride the same elevator to the fourth floor of Old Wesley Memorial which is dear to the heart of every Methodist within the bounds of the North Georgia Conference. MITCHELL was an endorser and sponsor of Brookwood College at Katonah, N. Y., which the American Federation of Labor put a ban on it because of the school's Communistic affiliations. He is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS which the House Committee On Un-American Activities says, "it was dedicated to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party and controlled by individuals who are either members of the Community Party or openly loyal to it". Mitchell was a sponsor

Mrs. M. E. (Dorothy) Tilly, Director of Women's Work, Southern Regional Council has quite a record of affiliations with Communist fronts. Her connection with the WSCS of the Methodist Church has placed her in an advantage position to preach the doctrines of SRC to many Church Women Groups. Here is a partial listing of her affiliations:

She was a sponsor of the Mid-Century Conference For Peace held in Chicago, May, 1950. A Congressional Committee says the purpose of this so-called Peace Rally was the aim of assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding board for Communist propaganda. Some of her fellow sponsors were James Durkin, recently expelled from the CIO because of his Communist activity; Haloise Moorehead, member several Communist front Negro organizations, sponsor of Communist Party in the city of New York and defender of indicted Communists. On her return as a delegate to the world conference, WIDF, "Haloise" attended a dinner held in honor of the delegates where America was ridiculed and the Soviet Union was praised, and testified that, "Hungary had provided her with her first real taste of human freedom: Other fellow sponsors of Mrs. Tilly were Sylvain Schnaittacker, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Rabbi Jack J. Cohen; Leo Krzycki; and a host of other radical labor leaders, liberal churchmen and Communist fronters.

According to the letterhead of the Communist front known as THE COMMITTEE FOR PEACEFUL ALTERNATIVES TO THE ATLANTIC PACT, Mrs. M. E. Tilly is listed as a member of the Executive Board. The House Committee says that "Communists in the United States did their part in the Moscow campaign by instigating a Conference for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, allegedly held in July, 1949 in Washington, D. C. This resulted in the formation of a front organization known as "the above mentioned of which Mrs. Tilly is listed as an executive member. The House Committee on Un-American Activities says, "Preparatory to the formal establishment of this 'peace' front, various preliminary conferences were called and statements issued which were featured and supported by the Daily Worker".

Mrs. M. E .Tilly was also a sponsor of the NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO ABOLISH THE POLL TAX which is cited as a Communist Front by the California Committee On Un-American Activities. It says in its citation that it is, "Among the Communist-front organizations for racial agitation which also serves as a 'money-collecting media' and 'as special political organizing centers' for the racial minority they pretend to champion."

She was a sponsor of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties according to the Daily Worker, April 16, 1948. The National Conference on Civil Liberties has been cited as a Communist front by the California Committee.

Mrs. Tilly was one of the initiators of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act and appears as Mrs. M. E. Tilly on the letter head while her signature appears with other signers of an open letter to all Congressmen as Dorothy Tilly.

Mrs. M. E. Tilly's name appears on the official roll of The Methodist Federation For Social Action several years as an executive member.

MRS. M. E. (DOROTHY) TILLY, of Atlanta, Ga., is listed as a member of "THE NATIONAL CITIZENS' POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE" on page 10300 of the Special Committee On Un-American Activities House of Representatives Bulletin entitled, "Investigation of Un-American Propaganda Activities in the United States". Here is a small part of the vast documentary evidences of this organization being an outright, powerful Communist front organization. On page 10303 of the above mentioned bulletin this question and answer is given. A member of the Committee asks Mr. J. B. Matthews, Research Director, Special Commitee To Investigate Un-American Activities, this question, "Would you call the 'National Citizens Political Action Committee' the most active Communist front organization in the United States today"? Mr. Matthews answer, "It seems to me that that is the unavoidable conclusion, that this is the Communist Party's major front organization. Furthermore, it represents the Communist Party's supreme bid for power throughout its 25 years of history in the United States. Never before has it set up a front organization with so ambitious an objective as that of the National Citizens Political Action Committee. It is the Party's supreme bid for power—and I use the word 'party' instead of the Communist Political Association, on the ground that the Communist Party has simply gone underground and has come up under the name of the Communist Political Association in order to advance the purposes which are INVOLVED in the National Citizens Political Action Committee". Mr. Costello, Congressman from California said, "The only purpose (of the Communist Party) in organizing the Communist Political Association is to lead the public into believing that that is the Communist activity, while this other, the National Citizens Political Action Committee, is put forward as not a Communist organization".

Mr. Matthew said, "If the list of membership of the National Citizens Political Action Committee had been drawn up by Earl Browder personally in Communist Party headquarters, it would be difficult to see how that list would have varied in any important respect".

The names of a few of the 82 Communist fronters, fellow travelers and outright Communists who are fellow members of Mrs. M. E. Tilly in this un-American and Communist honey-combed organization are: James Dombrowski; Bruce Bliven, Langston Hughes, the Communist Negro poet and author of the blasphemous poem, entitled "Good-Bye Christ"; Paul Robeson, the infamous Negro Communist Singer; Leo Krzycki, President, American Slav Congress, a subversive organization which there is nothing about it American but in every way Russian; Adam Kulikowski, publisher of OPPORTUNITY; James Loeb, secretary, Union for Democratic Action; Carey McWilliams, an affiliate of some fifty Communist fronts; W. T. Osowski, president, American Slav Congress, Michigan; Julian D. Steele, president, Boston Branch National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and George Soule, associate editor of New Republic an off color and wrong color magazine.

NO PERSON OUGHT TO BE PERMITTED AN OFFICE WITHIN THE SACRED WALLS OF WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH WHO HAS BEEN A MEMBER OF THIS GANG—UNLESS SUCH MEMBERSHIP HAS BEEN PUBLICLY REPUDIATED.

Mrs .Tilly's name appears on the letterhead of the "American Civil Liberties Union" as a member of the National Committee that was used in October, 1951, which the California Committee On Un-American Actiivties says it may be definitely classed as a Communist front or 'transmission belt' organization. She has been a member of the National Board, "Americans for Democratic Action". She was listed as one of the signers of a statement on Korea, released by the Communist inspired "Committee for Peaceful Alternatives—," as shown in the Daily Worker of July 28, 1950, the official organ of the Communist Party in the U. S.

Mrs. Tilly, according to the Daily World, April 6, 1952 addressed a three days' Women's Conference on World Peace at Daytona Beach, Florida called by the notorious Communist fronter Dr. Mary McCleod BETHUNE founder of the National Council of Negro Women. MARY McCLEOD BETHUNE'S affiliation with Communist and Communist front organizations are too numerous to mention. A House Committee Report includes her name among a group it des-cribes as they "were such fronters. if not ACTUAL COMMUNISTS".

McCallister Big Wheel At Southern Regional Conference Meeting, Atlanta

Frank McCallister, Director of the "Georgia Workers Education Service took part in all the functions of the Southern Regional Conference of SRC, which was held in Atlanta, Ga., March 4, 1948. McCallister was in charge of the Hall on Courtland Street, Atlanta which was used in 1948 for mixed dances until the Atlanta Police broke them up. According to an Atlanta daily, the apparent sponsors of these mixed dances were directors of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen organization.

Four Negroes and 17 white persons, among whom were ministerial students, were arrested by the Atlanta police on Friday night, July 16th, 1948.

One of the persons arrested was the Reverend A. J. Ritchie who said that his organization had no intention of causing trouble. He said he was a "Southern minister" but would not reveal his church affiliation to the police. Ritchie stated that he and his wife were staying at the Bethlehem Center a Home Missionary project supported by the WSCS of the Methodist Church. While he was living there, he was directing an interracial and interdenominational group on the campus of the Gammon Theological Seminary (Negro). This group was interested in making a study of the economic conditions in the (poor) South. The Southern Regional Council never condemn such mixed dances.

HERE IS A PARTIAL LIST OF PERSONS WHO EITHER ARE NOW OR HAVE BEEN MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WHOSE HEADQUARTERS ARE IN WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH, WHICH SHOW AN INCOMPLETE LISTING OF THEIR SPONSORSHIP, SUPPORT AND AFFILIATION WITH COMMUNIST FRONTS. GEORGIA METHODISTS, WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT

Dr. Clement is president of the Atlanta University, one of the organizers, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council. He is NOW in the race for election to the Board of Education in the city of Atlanta, Ga. We are not interested in the political campaign going on in Atlanta to the extent that we would claim the right to suggest as to whom should be elected in that great city. But, we must say that Clement's record of affiliation with Communist fronts disqualifies him to be on the Board of Education in any American city. HERE IS A PART OF HIS RECORD AS A COMMUNIST FRONTER:

"National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions: cited as a Communist front by the House Committee On Un-American Activities. The California Committee on Un-American Activities says it "is the most potent Communist-controlled cultural front in California—." Some of CLEMENT'S associates in this Communist front are Charlotte Bass, the vice presidential nominee on the Communist controlled Progressive Party in the last election; Paul Robeson, the infamous Negro Communist singer; John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker and one of the eleven convicted Communist AND Alexander Trachtenberg who was recently convicted in New York but preferred to go to jail in capitalist America than to go to the "good old USSR" he has been writing for. CLEMENT was associated with the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born which has been cited as subversive and communist by the Attorney General of the United States. The California Committee On Un-American Activities says it is, "Among the Communist front organizations for racial agitation which also serves as 'money-collecting- media' and as special organizing centers for the racial minority they pretend to champion. Works closely with the International Labor Defense, legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East ,a Communist organization says the Attorney General of the U. S., This 'Stalin Club' propagandized for the Reds in China who are killing American boys in Korea. Progressive Citizens of America which was cited as subversive by the California Committee. Some of RUFUS CLEMENT'S progressive associates are Dr. W. E. U. DeBois, Negro communist; The Reverend Jack McMichael, Methodist minister and a member of the Communist Party; the late Louis Adamic who affiliated with forty Communist fronts before he got so progressive and died in his burning farm house in New Jersey, September, 1951. The Southern Negro Conference which was cited by the U.S. Attorney General as subversive. The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, says the House Committee, "There can be no reasonable doubt about the fact that the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties - regardless of its high-sounding name is one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party". Sponser of the so-called World Peace Conference whose aims were to disrupt America's defense and to discredit American culture and extol the virtues of Soviet Culture. Among Clement's fellow sponsors which includes long haired, Russian named, fellow travelers is the Negro Communist poet, LANGSTON HUGHES, who is author of the blasphemous poem, entitled, "GOOD-BYE CHRIST".

DR. BENJAMIN E. MAYS

He is president of the Negro Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga. He is associated with "The American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born which the U. S. Attorney General says, is, "One of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States". The California Committee says it, "Works closely with the International Labor Defense, the legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". The crowd Dr. Mays associates with in this organization is quite different from Georgia Methodists he associates with when he appears on the programs in white Methodist Church and institutions in Atlanta. He was sponsor of the "DEMAND NEGRO RIGHTS NOW" delegation sent to Washington. He was one of the initiating sponsors of the Communist inspired Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in New York, 1950.

MAYS was initator and honorary chairman of the notorious Communist front known as "THE CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS". This organization condemned the indictment and conviction of the 12 COMMUNISTS. On page 2517, of the House Committee's Bulletin entitled, EXPOSE OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, a reprint of Dr. Mays' organization's explosive and lying circular appears which says, "MORE NEGROES WILL BE SHOT IN THE SOUTH FOR DARING TO VOTE—MORE LYNCHINGS—MORE JIM CROW—UNLESS YOU STAND UP FOR THE TWELVE".

MAYS has a daily column in the Pittsburg (Negro) Courier where he writes says the heading of one of his columns, "Uncomplimentary Things About Georgia" and calls for the abolition of segregation in the South. Speaking before the American Baptist Convention in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1951 he said, "Protestant churches throughout the country should take a daring step and throw their doors wide open to Negro worshippers".

Williams is a friend of the Communist Party said David Whitaker Chambers under oath before the House Committee On Un-American Activities.

He was national chairman in 1948 of the Communist front known as the "Civil Rights Congress". His name appears on the letterhead of Civil Rights Congress which bears letters condemning the indictment of the 12 Communists in Ohio and commends Eisler and Paul Robeson.

LOUIS E. BURNHAM

Member of Board of Director of SRC.

Mrs. Tilly's magazine called the "New South" lists him as Organizational Secretary, Southern Negro Youth Congress which was cited as subversive by the Attorney General of the U. S. Former Attorney General Tom Clark said it is "among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means". The House Committee says it is "surreptiously controlled by the Young Communist League".

Burnham before coming South to recruit members for this Communist front and to help direct the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL whose headquarters are in the Wesley Memorial Building in Atlanta, participated in young Communist strikes in New York. His name appeared frequently in young Communist publications.

BURNHAM was one of the three speakers at a home coming for the Negro Communist Paul Robeson in New York City, June, 1949, which was attended by five thousand. In his speech he deplored the lack of a rebellious spirit among the Negroes of the United States. Paul Robeson said in his speech, "It is unthinkable that American Negroes or Negroes anywhere would go to war on behalf of those who have oppressed us for generations, against a country (Russia) which in one generation has raised our people to the full dignity of mankind". Robeson had just returned from the Paris Conference where the theme song was "Rebellion against constituted government in the event of war with a Communist nation". It was designed to deceive us in America. The song is still heard on the battlefields in Korea and will be heard as long as an American veteran will slowly die in a V. A. Hospital.

He was the vice chairman of the AMERICAN YOUTH FOR DEMOCRACY which was cited as Communist by the Attorney General of the U. S., The House Committee On Un-American Activities says it was "a front formed in 1943 to succeed the Young Communist League and for the purpose of exploiting to the advantage of a foreign power the idealism, inexperience and craving to join which is characteristic of American college youth. Its high-sounding slogans cover a determined effort to disaffect our youth and to turn them against religion, the American home, against college authorities, and against the American Government itself."

BURNHAM was a sponsor and member of the notorious and powerful Communist front known as the Civil Rights Congress. He was sponsor of the Communist inspired National Youth Assembly against Universal Military Training.

BURNHAM sponsored supported and joined other such communist fronts and subversive organization as: "American Peace Mobilization"; "International Labor Defense"; "The Southern Conference For Human Welfare"; "the American Committee For Indonesian Independence" which endorsed and supported the Indonesian Revolution.

He is a prominent affiliate of the communist front known as the American League for Peace and Democracy. It has been the largest communist front in this country. Earl Browder was its vice president. The House Committee says that "it was nothing more nor less than a bold advocate of treason."

He was affiliated with the Conference On Constitutional Liberties In America which established the National Federation For Constitutional Liberties, "part of what Lennin called the Solar system of organizations, ostensibly having connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program" says former Attorney General Biddle. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, a high ranking member of the national committee of the Communist Party and recently convicted in a federal court for her attempt to overthrow the government of the United States worked with Tobias at this conference. Tobias has varied experiences from scheming with fat, flabby, former pin-up girl of American Communists at a Moscow inspired session to sitting in a room in the hallowed building of old beloved Wesley Memorial Methodist Church in Atlanta with a Georgia Methodist woman to lay plans for the raising of funds for and for the increasing of the membership of the Southern Regional Council.

MITCHELL according to records of the Political Action Committee which were subpoened by the House Committee On Un-American Activities was head of Region 8, of PAC which embraced the State of Alabama. Telephone call slips of the Atlanta office of PAC show that Mitchell was in communication with Mr. Morgan prior to the primary campaign in that state. There is much documentary evidence to support the fact the PAC in many places was manned by Communists. The voice of Harry Bridges the notorious Communist was familiar to some people in the PAC offices.

Hartsfield Offers The Best Choice

On the morrow Atlantans will make their decision in regard to their city government for the next four years. The lines are clearly drawn. The choice is between an experienced mayor with a record of consistent and continuous achievement and a candidate untried in city office. The challenger's major promise is that he will "do it better." His main premise is that the incumbent has been too long in office.

We submit that a change in public office can be desirable but only when the man or men in power are inefficient, dragging their heels and/or corrupt.

We submit that the present mayor of Atlanta, William B. Hartsfield, is not guilty on all three counts. His record is all the evidence we need to give him our full support.

The future of Atlanta, including that of its progressive public school system, depends on the decision of the voters Wednesday. Although Mr. Hartsfield's opponent, Charlie Brown, is in himself not responsible for it, the fact remains that many who would sabotage the city school system and the city itself are aligned in the Brown camp.

Atlanta is developing and progressing at a rate unprecedented in her history. We sincerely believe that to be true in a large measure because of the efforts of Mayor William B. Hartsfield. We want the assurance that our city will continue on that favorable course. We will find that assurance in the renomination of Bill Hartsfield.

The thoughtful Atlantan will consider these things in marking the ballot tomorrow. Above all, the good citizen interested in the continued progress of his city will go to the polls and vote. He will not assume that the victory is already won or that it can be won without his active support.

The "stay-at-home" citizen votes for no one. In effect, he casts a vote "against" progress and "against" a free many years had passed, and after most of the membership had withdrawn, including Dr. Clement, that persons of suspected communistic tendencies took over what remained of the organization. They did not long endure, largely because this newspaper exposed them and kept upon them the full light of publicity.

Therefore, we feel free to say that this smear attack on Dr. Clement was false and unworthy, and those conducting it reflect no credit on themselves, our city, state and region. They waited almost until the eve of the election, apparently hoping that the accused would have no time to answer. Most of the committee members are not running for another term. Their latest action makes it all the more understandable why they were not willing to face the people.

Dr. Clement is a conservative man, but a progressive educator. He is no slight part of a radical or leftist. We cannot condemn too strongly this sort of tactic in a political campaign. In fact, we believe that if Dr. Clement were not a Negro he would not now be undergoing this ordeal. Twice within recent months he has been cleared by the FBI for important government posts.

The timing of this smear reveals it for what it is.

Editor's Quiz Not Press Violation

WASHINGTON—May 11—Because Senator McCarthy, as chairman of a Senate committee, ventured to ask a newspaper editor to explain his onetime membership in a Communist group and to explain also his present-day views on communism, a hue and cry has gone up from certain quarters that this infringes upon the freedom of the press.

The cry comes mostly from "left wingers" who were strangely silent and indeed ridiculed the complaint of the newspaper publishers back in 1935 when the latter asked the courts to exempt them from the provisions of the Wagner Labor Relations Law on the ground that it violated freedom of the press.

Likewise, when some newspaper publishers had to open their files to investigators who sought to determine the pattern of the relationships between the newspapers and their customers, no "left winger" got up to defend the newspapers as immune from investigation under the antitrust laws.

Likewise, a few years ago, when a New York labor union of newspaper reporters was found to be dominated by Communists, Congress had the right to investigate that subject but didn't. Anti-Communist newspapermen in New York cleaned house.

Also, when a senator supporting Governor Stevenson in the 1952 campaign publicly threatened to investigate and then ask for laws punishing certain periodicals which were supporting President Eisenhower and did urge that their postal rates be increased because of their views, no "left winger" rose to ask that the senator be repudiated.

The fact is these senators had a right to say what they pleased about the press, just as the press has a right to say what it pleases about them.

The courts have said that the power of congressional committees to ask questions is unlimited, but the power to compel the furnishings of books and records is protected in personal instances.

It has been reported that the American Society of Newspaper Editors has been asked to examine the transcript of Senator McCarthy's interrogation of a newspaper editor and to pass judgment on it and say if it is an infringement of freedom of the press. Maybe if such a study is made, it should include the government's suits under the antitrust laws and the present law that says labor unions of newspaper writers must be recognized by publishers. It could delve into the phases of the present law whereby newspaper writers and reporters in certain cities are compelled to join a union at the end of 30 days or lose their jobs. These questions touch "thought control" and the freedom of the press much more vitally than the problem of whether an editor who was once engaged in Communist adventures has or has not thrown off his earlier Communist sympathies.

Boll Weevil Destroys One-Seventh Of Georgia's Cotton Crop Annually

Atlanta—I commend your editorial entitled "Boll Weevil Poised for His 1953 Attack," and the unique cartoon, "Basic Training," by Baldy. Such publicity will have a great deal of influence in stimulating interest among Georgia farmers to make a determined fight against this most destructive cotton insect pest.

It is said that on the average the boll weevil claims about one-seventh of our cotton crop. When the boll weevil robs the cotton grower of a bale of cotton, the entire community and state are poorer. This tremendous loss need not occur. There is sufficient information available which, if applied according to recommendations of the entomologists, will enable the farmer to produce maximum yields in spite of the boll weevil.

I trust you will continue to drive home the importance of eternal vigilance and a continuous fight against the archenemy of the Southland. J. E. MOSES,

Discontentment Is Crippling Disease

"I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Philippians 4:11). The meaning of these familiar words are sharpened, I think in the more recent translations. Goodspeed reads: "I have learned how to be contented with the condition I am in." Moffatt says: "I have learned how to be content wherever I am."

Whatever the translation, these are bold, confident, daring words. Could you in sincerity say them? Do you know anyone who with candor could make these words his own? Most of us, I dare say, are far from content with our lives, however fortunate our circumstances or unfortunate our situation.

Some folks are discontented with their work, others with their place of residence, others by the money they make, some by the man or woman they married. Every parish priest, I suppose, aspires to be pope and every ward heeler to be president. The poor want to be rich and the rich want to be happy.

Children want to be "grown up" and older people struggle to retain their youth. The employee envies the compensations and authority of his boss and the employer wants the government to assume more of his responsibility. Country people want the bright lights and city folks live 50 long weeks for two weeks in the open air.

Discontentment is sometimes a sign of growth and aspiration. There are some things we should never become contented with. Yet discontentment is often a crippling and dangerous disease of the personality, for it frustrates endeavor and breeds despair. The man who is forever questing for greener pastures too frequently misses the opportunity of the present hour.

Against the all too common feeling of discontent, we read the confident words, "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Who spoke in this manner? The Apostle Paul, writing to friends in the church at Philippi who had just sent financial assistance to relieve his poverty.

He was a man of poor health who had long suffered from what he called a "thorn in his flesh." His age was somewhat beyond 60 and the passing years had taxed his strength and energy excessively. Furthermore, he was writing from within the walls of a prison!

Why did he write in what seems to be exuberant confidence and spiritual health? Because in whatever condition he found himself, he enjoyed the companionship of God and he accepted without question the will of God for his life. In the 13th verse of the same chapter he reveals his secret: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

ord is all the evidence we need to give him our full support.

The future of Atlanta, including that of its progressive public school system, depends on the decision of the voters Wednesday. Although Mr. Hartsfield's opponent, Charlie Brown, is in himself not responsible for it, the fact remains that many who would sabotage the city school system and the city itself are aligned in the Brown camp.

Attack on Clement Is Dirty Politics

Since it was from the beginning "dirty politics" of the worst sort, we can only rejoice with all fair-minded persons everywhere that the City executive committee backed down and failed to carry out the purpose announced by one of its members—to disqualify Dr. Rufus W. Clement, president of Atlanta University, candidate for the Board of Education, on a "leftist" complaint. Public decency owes a debt to those who stood fast for the principles of fair play and Americanism at its best.

A committee already largely discredited in the eyes of many by its procedures had called a meeting, almost on the eve of the Wednesday primary, to bring charges against Dr. Clement.

A few days ago it could not scrape up a quorum for a meeting to decide whether it would appeal from or obey a Fulton County Superior Court order concerning the election.

There is some question as to whether the order of the court now is being fully met with the election as they propose to hold it—on future rather than present ward lines. There is serious legal question as to whether election to membership on the new board will be valid. There is a further legal question as to whether this board will be conducting a legal election when it leaves the names of uncontested candidates off the ballot, as reportedly is planned.

Having left undone the things it ought to have done, the committee then proposed to do something which ought not to have been done.

A member of the board has charged that Dr. Clement is a Communist sympathizer because he once belonged to the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

This newspaper is proud of the fact that it contributed largely to the demise of that organization. We were twice threatened with lawsuits because of our exposure of it; therefore, we believe we have some authority to speak.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was organized by honest, loyal Americans, with a viewpoint to organizing all constructive forces in the South to improve the South's economic and social status. It later was infiltrated by Communists, but for a good many years it was composed of and led by persons of unquestioned loyalty, during which time its membership was about 99.95 per cent loyal. It offers the typical example of a few rotten Communists spoiling a good barrel of apples.

Even so, it was not until a good cannot condemn too strongly this sort of tactic in a political campaign. In fact, we believe that if Dr. Clement were not a Negro he would not now be undergoing this ordeal. Twice within recent months he has been cleared by the FBI for important government posts.

The number may seem small when compared to the total number of families engaged in farming in the state. However, they are no less important. Former tenants, most of them are already well on the way to owning their own homes. Some of them have paid off their loans in only a fraction of the time allotted them.

There were those who called this program "socialistic." They still do so. However, it is stretching a point to call a program socialistic that enables a man to own his own home, to become a taxpayer and free producer. He has become a better citizen and his community, state and nation are stronger for having them.

Then, too, he has received instruction in agricultural and home economics and has learned to make the most of his opportunities. He has learned to use the soil and to conserve it.

We congratulate these 50 farmers for their achievements. We are grateful, too, for a system that makes it possible for a man to become a homeowner and producer within the framework of democracy and free enterprise.

WACs Congratulated On 11th Anniversary

Today is the 11th anniversary of the Women's Army Corps. And an illustrous occasion it is, too. Along with all other units of the armed forces that have served the nation so well during its times of need, the WACs have earned the respect and affection of the entire country.

On its 11th birthday, the WAC is an established and necessary part of the national defense program. It offers career opportunities for capable young women, as well as the chance for training in specialized fields. Its standards have been raised progressively and today only high school graduates of proved capability are accepted.

As we salute the Women's Army Corps on its 11 years of valuable service to the nation, we recommend its many opportunities for careers and training to the young women of the South.

Taxpayers Can Look To Time of No Returns

In a copyrighted interview with U. S. News & World Report, T. Coleman Andrews, the new commissioner of Internal Revenue, reveals a tentative plan under which 30 to 40 millions of Americans would have to make no tax returns at all. The group would include those whose income is solely in salary or wages.

If the deal works out, the Revenue bureau will calculate a man's tax from a study of his employer's report on his income, then either mail him a refund or a bill, as the case might be.

Complaints Grow On GOP Budget

WASHINGTON—What we have come to call "social gains" are not just something that happened—and can then be taken for granted.

Certain principles had to be established by law, it is true. Getting that done was quite a battle that went on through the last 20 years. But these principles have to be implemented from time to time if they are to mean anything.

For example, Congress established back in 1937 the policy of government financial assistance to help communities to eliminate slums and put up decent housing in such blighted areas. That didn't solve the problem. It is a continuing job, for there are still sizable slum areas in our bigger cities, including the national capital. Congress has to provide money from time to time to continue this work.

So likewise does it have to provide funds for loans to rural electrification co-operatives to serve farm regions with electric power and, in recent years, with telephones. These are self-liquidating projects that pay out in time. They are operated by the people in the community and represent one of the finest examples of grass-roots democracy.

Congress now is going about its economy motions, cutting appropriations for various purposes included under "social gains" along with other items. As it does so, it is getting kickbacks from voters here and there who remembered what General Eisenhower said about preserving the social gains, and took him on faith, and forgot about what he and his party said about economy.

For instance, the Eisenhower administration recommended appropriations in the independent offices bill for 35,000 public housing units, which compares with 75,000 suggested in the final Truman budget. But the House didn't approve a nickel for public housing units.

The House also sharply reduced loan funds for the Rural Electrification administration for power lines and telephones.

One of their leaders, F. V. Heinkel, president of the Missouri Farmers Association, the largest state-wide farm organization in the country, spoke up right brusquely in a signed editorial in the May issue of Missouri Farmer. He said, among other things:

"At a time when the 'farm problem' is casting its ugly shadow across the whole of agriculture, why does Benson urge a 10 per cent cut in appropriations for the U. S. Department of Agriculture? Right at a time when farmers need help the worst, PMA, SCS, FHA, REA and other governmental agencies which have been rendering good service to farmers are to be sharply reduced! I don't understand it."

And so it goes with "economy" and "social gains."

Auto Driver, Bus Rider Submits Traffic Suggestions

Atlanta—In the interest of suffering humanity, and improved traffic conditions, I would like to offer the following suggestions:

First: That three lines of traffic be established on Peachtree Rd. southbound from Andrews Dr. to Brookwood Station between 7:30 and 9:30 a. m. and northbound from Brookwood Station to Andrews Dr. from 4:30 'til 6:30 p. m. Southbound lines are jammed bumper to bumper in the morning while traffic in the northbound lane is nil, and the reverse is true in the afternoon.

I don't believe our people are so dumb that this plan would confuse them.

Second: Give the pedestrians and auto traffic a chance in downtown Atlanta. Stop all auto traffic four ways at a corner while pedestrians cross the street and stop pedestrians while auto traffic moves. This is suggested at certain corners determined from observation, not studies; studies take too long.

Third: In case of highway accidents, if no legal involvements would result, have the State Patrolmen first reaching the scene reconstruct the situation and report, in addition to those killed or hurt, the estimated speed of the cars, condition of the road, whether or not it was on a curve, hill or straightaway and, if possible to determine, state whether or not either driver had been drinking. Such data should make us all more careful.

Sec. Humphrey Gives Real Reason Why Budget Cannot Be Balanced

WASHINGTON—Any remaining hope of balancing the federal budget in the next fiscal year was thrown out the window by the testimony of Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day. Some of the Republican diehards in Congress—those who made profuse campaign pledges for reduced taxes and wholesale slashes in government spending—are still reluctant to admit it, but the facts of the matter have been honestly stated by the Treasury department head.

Mr. Humphrey, a levelheaded businessman and a hard realist, told the Senate committee that Congress might as well forget about any immediate goal of balancing the budget. Instead, he said, it will have to increase the debt limit from the present $275,000,000,000 to take care of further deficit financing. The public debt as of today stands at around $265,500,000,000, which means that there is not sufficient leeway between that figure and the legal limit to absorb anticipated expenditure in the period that lies ahead.

"Although I am distressed that we cannot balance the budget this year," Secretary Humphrey is quoted as saying, "I do not believe it should be balanced. The risks that would involve our security would simply be too great."

An effort is being made to blame the former Truman administration for the difficulties in bringing the budget into balance. This derives from the fact that Congress authorizes funds in one year which are to be spent in an ensuing year or years. Such a policy is necessary in many things, of course, since a weapon like a battleship cannot be constructed in a single year. As a part of our defense program, the Eisenhower administration inherited some $81,000,000,000 in such carryover appropriations. It is a headache to the budget balancers, discouraging prospects for balanced federal expenditures not only in fiscal 1954 but for 1955 as well.

Administration apologists are saying it is just as though Mr. Truman had gone to the store and ordered $81,000,000,000 worth of goods which the Republican administration must now pay for as they are delivered. But the weakness in this sort of alibi is that it enables the Democrats to point out that President Eisenhower, after moving into the White House, could easily have sent his messengers back to the store and cancelled the orders before the merchandise was delivered.

The Republicans will have to get a better alibi than this. It would be better for them to adopt the cold realism of Secretary Humphrey and state with complete frankness that the risks to our national security are simply too great to undertake any meat-axe slashing of government expenditures immediately. This is the overriding reason which prompted him to make the bold assertion that he did not believe the budget should be balanced at this time.

It's an ill wind that so blows until a man must file an affidavit that he had a house. Such may be the experience of F. M. Houser of Warner Robins. According to a story in The Houston Home Journal, the insurance company may require of Mr. Houser a sworn statement that a house actually stood on his lot there at the scene of the frightful tornado. Two water pipes and a set of steps are all the physical proof left. And the steps are not at the place they were before the storm struck.

Bishop John Wesley Lord announced last week the appointment of Dr. James R. Uhlinger to Wesley Methodist Church, Worcester, Mass., effective May 31.

Dr. Uhlinger succeeds Rev. George A. Fallon who became pastor of Lakewood Methodist Church in Cleveland, Ohio, on March 2.

Educated at Taylor University, Garrett Biblical Institute, the University of Chicago, and Northwestern University, Dr. Uhlinger held pastorates at Bannister and Decatur, Michigan; at Seneca and Rock Falls, Illinois; at Shenandoah, Iowa; and for the last eight years at St. John's church in Davenport, Iowa.

Active in community affairs, Dr. Uhlinger has been president of the Rock Falls Rotary Club, and of the Community Chest in Davenport.

His family consists of his wife Gladys, and three daughters, Mrs. Robert Guenther, Carolyn, who is a High School senior, and Susan, age 10.

Mrs. Jane Waterfield Stringer, who worked for many years at the Cokesbury Book Store, Boston, gave birth to a baby boy, Charles Reginald, on April 26, at Stoughton, Mass.

Rev. Charles Parkin of Portland, Maine, superintendent of the Portland District since 1950, has been elected an associate secretary of the Division of National Missions of the denominational Board of Missions.

Methodists in Melrose, Mass., are making preparations for the entertainment of the New England Annual Conference, to be held May 20-24 at First Methodist Church.

Already many members of the church and others in the Melrose area have offered the hospitality of their homes. Circles of the WSCS are planning the luncheon menus, and different groups in the church will serve coffee in the lounge each afternoon.

A campaign to spread the custom of saying grace before meals is gathering momentum in the eastern Iowa and Illinois area.

Launched recently by the Davenport Chamber of Commerce, the drive is aimed primarily at restaurant patrons.

The Davenport plan calls for each cafeteria and restaurant to be supplied with a simple, small white card bearing the legend, "Thanksgiving Before Meals." Below it in engraved script are three suggested "grace" prayers—for Protestants, Roman Catholics, and Jews.

Every public eating place in the city, from the smallest diner to the biggest cafeteria, has been enlisted in the drive.

Wesley London Chapel Restored After Fire

Visitors to Wesley's Chapel in London, England, this summer will be able to see the Chapel much as it looked when it was first opened by John Wesley in 1778.

Most of the damage caused by fire this past winter has been repaired, and the whole of the interior has been redecorated.

The beautiful 18th-century ceiling design, one of the chapel's many noteworthy features, has been restored.

At the back of the chapel, the little graveyard in which the body of John Wesley was laid to rest is being surrounded by gardens of lavender and roses.

Oxnam Sends Velde Suggestions on Methods Of House Committee

Four recommendations for revising the practices of the House Un-American Activities Committee with reference to the use of their files were made by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam in a letter to Chairman Harold A. Velde, released on May 11.

"The Committee always welcomes criticism," Rep Velde told reporters following a friendly meeting with Bishop Oxnam, in which they agreed that the Bishop would submit proposals in writing for the improvement of Committee methods of which he had been critical. "The Committee is always attempting to improve our methods in this delicate job of combating communism and subversive elements in the U. S."

He also agreed to submit the Bishop's recommendations to the full Committee in executive session.

Specifically, Bishop Oxnam recommended that references to organizations not declared subversive by the Federal government be eliminated from the files; that evidence of membership in subversive organizations be clearly established (beyond newspaper quotations and listings on letterheads); that such membership be listed only if the individual was a member after the date when the subversive character of the organization was declared; that an individual be allowed to review his own file and to submit his own evidence; and that the files be open only to members of Congress unless the information has been properly substantiated, and then released only upon a majority vote of the Committee.

The church's Social Action Committee provided information about polling places, absentee voting regulations in various states, and registration procedures. Non-partisan material was furnished from the League of Women Voters. A panel discussion including speakers from both major parties, stickers with the slogan, "Vote as you please — but VOTE!" on the monthly church paper, posters, and a non-partisan sermon crystallizing major issues and reminding listeners of their civic responsibility were all a part of the committee's efforts.

Members of the Social Action Committee included Miss Allena Luce, chairman, Miss Esther M. Clement, and Evertson Rogers.

Workshop Urges Congressmen To Support UN

A group of clergy and lay leaders from Eastern Massachusetts Protestant churches last week sent messages to Massachusetts Senators and Congressmen, urging support of the United Nations and admission of representatives of all nations.

The special committee which framed the resolution was appointed by the Workshop on World Order, sponsored by the Dept. of International Relations of the Massachusetts Council of Churches, held in Attleboro, Mass.

The official statement reads as follows: "Believing that the United Nations organization is the logical outgrowth of the Christian concept of the brotherhood of man, and that next to the Church is the world's best instrument for peace, we urge —

"1. Universality of membership;

"2. More adequate appropriation for the United Nations and its services, and support of the Disarmament Commission, that the resources now utilized in disproportionate military expenditures be released to serve the needs of the world;

"3. Opposition to the Bricker Amendment, which would seriously handicap our participation in the United Nations."

Church Offers Employment To Young People

Dear Family

You are no more surprised than I am that I am writing you from 581 Boylston Street. It was only on January 7 that I tossed my first Cobblestone at the Editor of Zions Herald. If you had told me then that on May 1 I would be picking them up from the other side of the desk, well—I think I would have kept right on tossing them. Frankly, I asked for this job. I am delighted and honored to get it. Zions Herald is an indispensable function of our entire Yankee Methodist Family. I could not resist the challenge of it. I know it is a tough job, but that's what I like. Some of the cobblestones may come my way now. I'll catch all I can, but if any of them land hard, my angle is that a bruise is something to avoid if you can but learn from if you must. What makes Zions Herald essential to us all is its century-old policy of giving our family a free voice for the convictions nurtured by our Methodist faith. I profoundly believe in the destiny of The Methodist Church as a liberal church. Where can a man find a better chance to help keep that destiny clear and fresh than right here in these columns? Nobody has ever wondered who was speaking when the Editor of Zions Herald was seen moving his lips. Nobody will ever need to. On the Thursday morning when this old paper drops through your mail slot carrying a dictated article or a muted editorial, you had better look out the window to see if the sun has dropped out of the sky. The Wesleyan Association is a group of men responsibly dedicated to free Methodism. I am here because I share their dedication. And I am confident of support from all branches of the family. I know you all believe in this great tradition as thoroughly as the Editor and his partners do. So here we go! Of course, I was brought up mostly by the New Hampshire branch of the family, God bless them, and have been working down here for more than five years with the Massachusetts branch. The rest of you do not know me too well. So I'll have to polish up my family connections in Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. Hope to see you all before long. Until then, don't forget to write. Send me all the family news you can. That's what page four is for.

We Are Proud to Follow

New England Methodists would not be too happy to learn that their bishop was a bald denominationalist. We believe in church unity, and we want leaders who can help us to accomplish it.

Unfortunately, a report went all over New Hampshire last week that bluntly cast Bishop John Wesley Lord in the role of an apparently undiscriminating advocate of denominationalism good or bad. "Bishop Lord Defends Denominationalism," read the Manchester Union Leader's headline over the first-page story that presented his address before the Convocation sponsored by the New Hampshire State Council of Churches in Manchester on May 11. The newspaper's interpretation of Bishop Lord's statement was a distortion of his intent and his spirit.

To view what the bishop said in clear perspective, we should remember that he was speaking at an ecumenical convocation to which he had given his full support. The Union Leader's failure to catch his emphasis is suggested by the title of Bishop Lord's address, "The Church's Cooperative Task on a State and Area Basis." The paper did not print that title, which was on the release issued to the press. Neither did the paper include the following sentence from the release: "When any denomination fails to express the mind of Christ and becomes exclusive, living unto itself, then it is a liability to the Christian cause and will eventually cease to exist."

Perhaps Bishop Lord's positive commitment to the movement towards church unity failed to register with the New Hampshire journal because it was interested in whipping up a synthetic conflict between the bishop and Dr. Arthur D. Churches Do Speak At State House

To the Editor — Zions Herald made reference for the past two weeks to the need of having members of the clergy present at legislative committee hearings, and with that I concur.

May it be said, however, that when matters of concern were before the Public Welfare Committee (House Bill 1233) and the Legal Affairs Committee (House Bills 1050, 1511, 671, 344), the clergy was present.

I personally represented the Massachusetts Council of Churches on House Bill 1233, which related to the care and protection of juvenile offenders.

When three petitions were before the Legal Affairs Committee on February 25th in which we were interested, there were many clergymen from several denominations, and representatives of church and community organizations, numbering more than sixty, present.

When House Bill 671 was heard, which would forbid the issuance of an original alcoholic beverage license to an establishment within 500 feet of a church, school or library, not only was there a large representation of clergy, laymen and legislators, but a petition signed by over 1800 registered voters was filed.

The interest taken by our legislators is greatly appreciated, and their expression has our hearty approval. However, in this particular matter, the Christian forces were well represented in both clergy and lay folk.

Executive Named to New Board of Social and Economic Relations

Rev. A. Dudley Ward of New York, presently on the staff of the National Council of Churches, was named executive secretary of The Methodist Church's new Board of Social and Economic Relations at the board's two-day meeting on May 5 and 6.

DR. A. DUDLEY WARD

New England Conference members will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Ward this Friday, May 22, when he comes to Melrose, Mass. to speak before the Conference Board of Social and Economic Relations.

Mr. Ward comes to his new post from a unique background of technical training and practical experience in the field of social and economic relations.

Born in Canada, he worked in the business world as a Chartered Accountant and as an officer and director of a business firm. After deciding to prepare for the ministry, he came to the United States where he received his A.B. degree in philosophy and psychology and an M.A. in industrial sociology and economics at the University of Delaware. He received his B.D. at Union Theological Seminary.

After serving pastorates in the New York East Annual Conference and the Ebenezer Church, Newark, Delaware, Mr. Ward was invited to direct the first major Protestant study of the church and economic life under a $100,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. In this work, he has co-ordinated the efforts of outstanding scholars, laymen from all walks of life, and technical research experts.

Their results are now being published in a series of six volumes. Mr. Ward is co-author of "The American Economy and the Lives of People."

In accepting his new post as executive secretary of the Board of Social and Economic Relations of The Methodist Church, Mr. Ward said that "the significant tradition in Methodism in the area of social concern, action, and service must be carried forward . . . the church is looking to this board for guidance."

We Are Proud to Follow

New England Methodists would not be too happy to learn that their bishop was a bald denominationalist. We believe in church unity, and we want leaders who can help us to accomplish it.

Unfortunately, a report went all over New Hampshire last week that bluntly cast Bishop John Wesley Lord in the role of an apparently undiscriminating advocate of denominationalism good or bad. "Bishop Lord Defends Denominationalism," read the Manchester Union Leader's headline over the first-page story that presented his address before the Convocation sponsored by the New Hampshire State Council of Churches in Manchester on May 11. The newspaper's interpretation of Bishop Lord's statement was a distortion of his intent and his spirit.

To view what the bishop said in clear perspective, we should remember that he was speaking at an ecumenical convocation to which he had given his full support. The Union Leader's failure to catch his emphasis is suggested by the title of Bishop Lord's address, "The Church's Cooperative Task on a State and Area Basis." The paper did not print that title, which was on the release issued to the press. Neither did the paper include the following sentence from the release: "When any denomination fails to express the mind of Christ and becomes exclusive, living unto itself, then it is a liability to the Christian cause and will eventually cease to exist."

Perhaps Bishop Lord's positive commitment to the movement towards church unity failed to register with the New Hampshire journal because it was interested in whipping up a synthetic conflict between the bishop and Dr. Arthur D. Gray, president of Talladega College, Alabama, who the night before had attacked Protestant denominationalism as wasteful, confusing on the foreign missionary field, frustrating in social action, and competitive in program. We call it a synthetic conflict because, while Bishop Lord possibly might not agree with the emphasis of Dr. Gray's address, he is undoubtedly as well aware as anybody of the destructive elements in denominational activity.

There is plenty of room for severe critics of our fragmented church life. But once we have mastered the criticisms and are ready to do something to cope with our glaring faults, we need leadership that can guide us step by step towards the healing unity we all long for. That is where Bishop Lord comes in.

He is evidently convinced that whether we ever achieve organic unity of the churches or not, any real unity must be built upon the initial comradeship of our existing denominations in their common and cooperative dedication to the Christian world mission. He criticized not the movement towards unity but the attempt to build the foundation of the united church on the discovery of the least common denominator of theological belief. He said, furthermore, "We need to remember that unity of organization would provide no guarantee of unity in faith, or unity in charity, or even unity in devotion to Christ."

To implement the ecumenical purpose, Bishop Lord suggested five ways in which the churches may begin working together now on a state or area basis in the Christian mission: "(1) through cooperation in the overall planning of state councils of churches; (2) through comity agreements whereby the witness becomes more effective with smaller expenditures of financial and human resources; (3) through the facing of social ills on a statewide basis; (4) through the redeeming influence of the churches in state-wide gatherings and councils; (5) through the interchange of consecrated personalities across denominational lines."

It is too bad that the Manchester newspaper did not take its cue from the fact that early that same morning Bishop Lord had attended an ecumenical communion service in Grace Episcopal Church and had given a communion meditation. The service was conducted by Bishop Charles F. Hall of the Episcopal Diocese of New Hampshire and other Episcopal clergy according to the Episcopal ritual. Bishop Lord, devoted to the growing unity of the churches, had the grace and humility to attend a communion service in the administration of which he could have no part. He did not stand on prerogative. He went to the Lord's Table with no ecclesiastical chip on his shoulder. He demonstrated the patience and delicacy of appreciation with which, at this stage, men of different communions must deal with one another, while some New Hampshire Methodists were quibbling, however conscientiously, about whether they could even attend a service at which participation might involve receiving a wafer dipped in fermented wine.

We often bewail our lack of strong leadership. Bishop Lord's leadership of our people towards church unity is far-sighted, sensitive, and bold. We are proud to follow it.

Melrose Ministers Back UNICEF

To the Editor — I am enclosing a copy of a resolution passed by the Ministers Association of Melrose, Mass., which deals with an urgent humanitarian project with which your readers will undoubtedly be most concerned:

"We deplore the fact that the vital work of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund around the world has been hampered this year because the last session of the U. S. Congress failed to provide our full share of the cost for the fiscal that our Government continue its full support of this important program.

"We urge especially (1) that provision be made in the next supplementary appropriation bill for at least the appropriation of the balance, $9,814,000, of the $16,841,000 which was authorized by the last Congress, but of which amount only part, $6,666,000, was covered in the appropriations.

"(2) that this session of Congress make adequate and generous appropriation for the support of UNICEF during the coming fiscal year beginning July 1, 1953.

"Passed by unanimous vote of the Ministers Association of Melrose, Mass., April 29, 1953."

Mark R. Shaw
Melrose, Mass.

There are 9,180,428 members in 39,906 Methodist churches in the U. S., according to the 1953 American Peoples Encyclopedia. This figure represents a gain of 114,701 for 1952.

Statistics at the end of 1952 showed also that there were 25,491 Methodist ministers and a total enrollment in church schools of more than 6 million children.

Rev. A. Dudley Ward of New York, presently on the staff of the National Council of Churches, was named executive secretary of The Methodist Church's new Board of Social and Economic Relations at the board's two-day meeting on May 5 and 6.

DR. A. DUDLEY WARD

New England Conference members will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Ward this Friday, May 22, when he comes to Melrose, Mass. to speak before the Conference Board of Social and Economic Relations.

Mr. Ward comes to his new post from a unique background of technical training and practical experience in the field of social and economic relations.

Born in Canada, he worked in the business world as a Chartered Accountant and as an officer and director of a business firm. After deciding to prepare for the ministry, he came to the United States where he received his A.B. degree in philosophy and psychology and an M.A. in industrial sociology and economics at the University of Delaware. He received his B.D. at Union Theological Seminary.

After serving pastorates in the New York East Annual Conference and the Ebenezer Church, Newark, Delaware, Mr. Ward was invited to direct the first major Protestant study of the church and economic life under a $100,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. In this work, he has co-ordinated the efforts of outstanding scholars, laymen from all walks of life, and technical research experts.

Their results are now being published in a series of six volumes. Mr. Ward is co-author of "The American Economy and the Lives of People."

In accepting his new post as executive secretary of the Board of Social and Economic Relations of The Methodist Church, Mr. Ward said that "the significant tradition in Methodism in the area of social concern, action, and service must be carried forward . . . the church is looking to this board for guidance."

What is the Basis of Christian Liberty?

June 14 — Galatians 2: 1-10, 19-21

Paul's letter to the Galatians has been called the Magna Carta of the Christian religion.

There are many Christian scholars who believe that the great ideas set forth in this letter made Christianity a world religion instead of a narrow Jewish sect. Jesus was a Jew. Paul called himself "a Hebrew of the Hebrews." But the early non-Jewish converts to Christianity, especially outside Jerusalem, were not accepted as valid Christians.

Liberated from Judaism

Jews before the birth of Jesus had come to think of God as being concerned chiefly with them. They were "the chosen people" and salvation was to be found in "the law and the prophets."

The issue was whether or not the Gentiles had to observe the Jewish religious customs before they could become Christians. Paul broke this tradition and liberated the Gentiles from the bondage to Judaism. They no longer had to come under and obey all the requirements of the law of Moses.

Here is the real issue at stake in finding the basis of Christian liberty. The saving power of Christ is available to anyone under the invitation, "Whosoever will may come." We are saved when we can say and prove by actual living, "I live; yet not I but Christ liveth in me."

"Christ Liveth in Me"

It is possible to reach this point in our living. This is the basis of any Christian liberty worth having.

This means that the spirit of Christ replaces the natural, human, imperfect, tainted evil spirits which "frustrate the grace of God," as Paul stated it.

Many Christians and churches are now in a state of frustration and hysteria. To meet this, we are trying the old process of appeasement and adjustment.

The Pauline procedure of conversion is a better way to meet the sin and subversive forces which threaten our survival and salvation.

The experience which Paul had on the way to Damascus to persecute Christians would go far toward restoring the vigor and progressive spirit which we once had as a Christian church.

The "Pink Fringe"

There is a "Committee for the Preservation of Methodism" worried about what has been called the "pink fringe." The question raised by this jittery and well-meaning group is this: "What shall we do about it?"

It is a very good question to ask about the kind of Methodists who have made The Methodist Church the spear-head of a mighty social reform movement in the world for a half century. If we do the right thing about the men and women who have borne the burden in the heat of the dangerous days at great cost to themselves and have fought social evils with superb courage, we shall honor them and heed their call to meet the challenge of evil.

It might turn out that it is social progress instead of a "pink fringe" that this self-appointed committee is now trying to stop.

The forty-five page pamphlet published by this committee bearing the title, "Is There A Methodist Pink Fringe?" lists the names of hundreds of Methodists who have stood in the forefront of the church's long fight for social justice and real Christian liberty for a generation.

It is very clear to me that the real fringe the committee calls "pink" is not Communism at all, but social progress.

Looking For What?

A clergyman was recently asked by some members of his congregation about the investigation of subversive activities in his church. His timely reply was this: "I can answer the question only when I know just what the investigators are looking for."

This goes for the questions raised about the Methodists named in the pamphlet about the pink fringe. If it is Communism which is being investigated, we are willing and eager to join and become a publishing member.

If it is the exercise of Christian liberty to oppose and root out social injustice and a worship of the dead past, I for one am very definitely against all such committees of "preservation."

NOTES DICTATED BY GSM 5-23-53 RE ONE METHODIST VOICE

"Former professor of Columbia University." Mr. Craft dignifies me. I was instructor in economics at Columbia College in Columbia University from 1929 to 1935. Instructors are dust beneath the feet of professors.

American Friends Service Committee meeting, September 9, 1952. This was a meeting arranged by the Quakers, through their Greensboro, N. C., office, to discuss and plan ways of preventing war. Perhaps 25 or thirty people came. A couple of the ladies called "Minute Women" made their way in also, though quite uninvited. They were courteously received, despite everyone's knowledge that they were "plants." We can only suppose that the description of the alleged incident comes from our friends the Minute Women.

What is described touches no recollection in me, but my wife, who was present, remembers that toward the end of the meeting someone did ask a question generally along the lines: "How are we to advocate peace when, for the slightest word, one is called a Communist?" Mrs. Mitchell thinks that the chairman turned to me for advice on the question. I was a natural choice, because, as an economist and advocate of some things not universally popular, I am naturally confronted with the problem that the questioner had raised. I haven't been able to reconstruct what my answer was, but I know that next day I was of the opinion that the thing most needed and most likely to do good was more information about foreign affairs, and in all probability, I talked about that as a suitable force to bring to bear. Nobody accused me of being a member of the Communist Party, and it is ingenious dishonesty to twist out of the alleged and grossly misrepresented bit of the meeting the statement , "Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party."

Perhaps the best thing ~~would~~ to be said about the matter is that nothing, reported as this was reported, is to be believed at all.

Charge that NEW SOUTH, the Council's small monthly publication "was, consciously or unconsciously, borrowed from the old official organ NEW SOUTH of the now defunct Communist-originated and Communist-inspired organization, known as the Conference for Human Welfare." NEW SOUTH has been the title of the Council's publication since 1946. Mitchell became executive director of the Council in 1947. Nobody in the Southern Regional Council staff ever heard before that the Communists or the organization correctly known as the Southern Conference for Human Welfare ever put out a magazine called NEW SOUTH, "consciously or unconsciously"—Poppycock!

Charge that a dozen or more of the leaders in the former Southern Conference for Human Welfare "are either now or have been on the policy board of the SRC." We do not know with any accuracy whom this charge is supposed to reach. But anent the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, (see McGill's editorial).

Charge that Mitchell was endorser and sponsor of the Brookwood College at Katonah, N. Y. Maybe so. I certainly went there once or twice to teach a class. That would have been about 1930 or 31. Brookwood was then a widely respected workers' education center.

Charge that Mtichell "is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, Civil Rights Congress." Untrue, though Mitchell was one of the sponsors of the first meeting of what became the Civil Rights Congress in 1946. This was the time when a movement was under way to repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Act which forbade the use of injunctions in most labor disputes. I was asked to be a sponsor of an emergency meeting to form an organization to combat the movement to make these injunctions legal again. The great majority of those whose names were put to the invitations sent me were sound Americans with the good interests of the country at heart. I was, and am still, opposed to the use of injunctions in labor disputes. On the assumption that the proposed organization would work effectively against the use of injunctions, I [redacted] permitted my name to be used as a sponsor for the emergency meeting. Within a few months it became apparent that the resulting Civil Rights Congress was strongly influenced by Communists, and a year or so later, when the organization asked me again to be a sponsor of some meeting it was having, I refused. I never joined the Civil Rights Congress, am not and have never been a member of it.

Charge that Mitchell was head of Region 8 of the PAC, which embraced the State of Alabama. Mitchell was from February 1944 until about May 1945 regional director for the CIO Political Action Committee. The region embraced--Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, and for part of the time Louisiana.

No responsible person supposes that the Political Action Committee was Communist-dominated. I certainly ran my region as a straight trade union program. The mysterious Mr. Morgan in Brother Craft's paper is not identified.

Hutchins Announces Retirement

Superintendent A. J. Hutchins of the Canton city administrative unit has announced his retirement effective June 30, this year.

Mr. Hutchins went to Canton as superintendent in 1924 after he had served five years as principal of Asheville High School.

In commenting on the announcement of his retirement, the Canton Enterprise says:

"Coming here when there was only one building for the entire city school system, he has seen the schools expand and new buildings spring up, not only in Canton, but throughout the township when small rural schools became consolidated units with grade school buildings in various communities, and a central high school for all students.

"He has led in a number of moves for better educational advantages, including the special election for consolidation, and later elections for expansions and improvements throughout the system."

The Asheville Citizen adds:

"Mr. Hutchins deserves to be called 'educator' with all the dignity, competence and devotion to duty which the term should imply. He has earned his retirement in what is perhaps the most worthwhile of all professions."

Ryukyuan Educators Study State's Schools

Three prominent Ryukyuan educators spent three weeks in North Carolina, March 9-27, studying the State's public school system.

Eiko Kinjo, Chief of the Social Education Section, Education Department, Government of the Ryukyu Islands; Ryoken Tohara, Principal of Okinawa Technical High School; and Eikichi Oyafuso, Principal of the Oyama Primary and Junior High School, Ginowanson, Okinawa, were in this country for 90 days as guests of the United States Army. They were accompanied to North Carolina by the Rev. Daniel T. Kim, Minister of the Korean Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., as interpreter.

During their stay in the State, the visiting educators interviewed various members of the State Department of Public Instruction and made trips to a number of Tar Heel public schools and institutions of higher learning. They also visited meetings of the General Assembly which was in session.

Board Members Hear New Aid Concept

"The time has come," according to Frank E. Bass, Vice-Chairman of the Legislative Commission of NEA, who addressed the National School Boards Association 1953 Convention, "to change our whole conception of the purpose of federal aid to education."

He showed how, formerly, educators sought federal aid in order to meet a series of national emergencies, including first the depression, then the defense effort, and in more recent years the World War II emergencies, postwar shortages of materials and teachers, and finally the wave of war babies that is now upon us.

But these bases, as a means for securing federal aid, according to Mr. Bass, have been too shortsighted for all of their necessity. "Federal aid as a handout to the schools is a dead issue," he said. "Let's stop going to the Congress and to the public as if schools were the recipients of public relief. Rather, let us look beyond the immediate necessity for school buildings and increased teachers' salaries to the place of American public education in a nation whose government is a shared responsibility of federal, state and local authorities."

From this new perspective, Mr. Bass proposed that all concerned should work toward a national policy which will reaffirm the right and obligation of the states and communities to provide an adequate public education for every American child.

On the subject of subversive activities in schools, he recommended that local and state boards be allowed to take care of it. "Otherwise we will surrender what we have guarded so jealously for more than 160 years—the right to State and local control of education."

Freedom of Dissent

"I believe that the community is already in the process of dissolution where each man begins to eye his neighbor as a possible enemy, where nonconformity with the accepted creed, political as well as religious, is a mark of disaffection; where denunciation, without specification or backing, takes the place of evidence, where orthodoxy chokes freedom of dissent; where faith in the eventual supremacy of reason has become so timid that we dare not enter our convictions in the open lists to win or lose."

—Judge Learned Hand.

Yount Becomes NCEA President

Superintendent M. E. Yount of the Alamance County administrative unit was elevated to the presidency of the North Carolina Education Association at its annual meeting held in Asheville, March 26-28. He had been vice-president during the current year.

Mrs. E. N. Meekins, teacher in the Garner, Wake County, schools was named vice-president; and Superintendent Earl Funderburk of the Elizabeth City schools was named State director for the National Education Association.

Superintendent Yount served as principal of schools in Wake County, Hickory and Statesville before becoming superintendent of Graham city schools. In 1927 he was elected to the position which he now holds.

Editorial for Board Members

Nationwide enrollment in public and private schools and colleges during 1952-53 is estimated at 34,693,000, more than one-fifth of the total population.

Public and private elementary schools alone will enroll approximately 1,600,000 more pupils than in 1951-52.

Sixty-one per cent of the nation's classrooms are now overcrowded.

One hundred fifty-eight thousand, six hundred new teachers are needed this year, and it is estimated that there will be a shortage of 52,600. Teacher-training institutions are not graduating enough people to fill the need.

Fifty-three thousand new classrooms are needed this year to take care of the enrollment increase.

One of every five pupils attends school in a building that does not meet minimum fire safety conditions. There has been an average of more than 2,100 school fires per year over a 15-year period.

These statistics are taken from the U. S. Office of Education's report, made public late last year.

How can you, in your local school district, in your capacity as a member of the Board of Education, lend your own personal weight toward meeting the crisis in education which these figures so graphically present? The national picture is, after all, but an expanded panorama of local situations, and locally the challenge must be met. It is not "they", but we who must act!

Two 12-year old girls, Wanona Rash and Fern Templeton, from Union Grove High School, Iredell County, won the State-wide debating championship recently held at Chapel Hill.

Tribute to Teachers

I think most of you know of my admiration for the teacher, for the person who believes something and tries to impart it to young minds. In my all too short association with scholarly people I have found them to be intellectual leaders of Americanism. They have been able to explain Americanism, the values of the heart, of freedom, and what the mind must do to support those values.

In short, I have found teachers, I have found universities in general engaged in this one thing: how to bring up, how to teach, how to develop fine citizens to serve in a free democracy.

That I conceive to be their basic purpose and as long as they do it this Nation shall remain free and I, for one, will always be a witness that the great and vast body of these teachers, these administrators, these people living in universities, are the very foundation, the real refuge and bulwark of democracy and freedom in our country—the thing to which I at least attempt to devote my life.

—Dwight D. Eisenhower.

California and New Jersey Begin Educational TV

On February 1 the New Jersey Department of Education began experimental telecasting of guidance, English, social studies, and science programs on a closed circuit to two high schools in New Brunswick and Highland Park. Additional programs were launched for elementary pupils and parents.

One day later, Los Angeles' Channel 28 began daily programs (also closed circuit) as rehearsal for full scale telecasting, expected to begin in late March or April. Three types of programs are planned: in-school, adult education, and community service.

Educational TV in New York ran into opposition from N. Y. State Society of Newspaper Editors, meeting February 9 in Syracuse. Garth A. Shoemaker of Elmira, N. Y., claimed the state had no more justification for operating TV stations that it would to run a chain of newspapers.

In Atlantic City February 14, the National School Boards Association adopted a resolution calling on FCC to give educators an additional year to apply for 242 TV channels now reserved until June 2. —Scholastic Teacher.

Mitchell's Record of Affiliation With Communist Fronts Necessitates Removal of SRC from Wesley Memorial Now

George S. Mitchell accord- to Page 1, of the House Committee's Report on Southern Conference For Human Welfare dated June 16th, 1947, is listed as a member of the Board of Representatives in the roster of officials. Despite the assertion of recent editorials in the "siamese-journalistic-twins" of Jim Cox's monopolized Atlanta press and some liberal ecclesiastical apologists for the continued presence of SRC in a Methodist Church in the heart of Dixie that the Southern Conference of Human Welfare was originally Simon pure in its Americanism, IT was Communist originated.

Paul Crouch who was a member of the Communist Party for some 17 years but renounced his every affiliation and sympathy with the Party in 1942 testified under oath that the SOUTHERN CONFERENCE FOR HUMAN WELFARE was a Communist organization from its conception and birth. On page 189, "Testimony of Paul Crouch" on May 6, 1949 before the House Committee On Un-American Activities, to Mr. Louis J. Russell Senior Investigator's question, "Was the Southern Conference For Human Welfare conceived as a Communist organization by the Communist Party itself"? Mr. Crouch said under oath, "It was, very definitely so".

To the question, "Can you describe the background of the conception of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare"? Mr. Crouch under oath said as recorded on page 189 of the above mentioned Bulletin, "Yes. The PREPARTORY steps which led up to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare began with a Conference in Chattanooga, Tenn.; I believe the date was about December of 1937, but I am not sure of the exact month. It was attended by Earl Browder, national secretary of the party" (Communist). He continued under oath, "According to the information I received, Browder had emphasized that the PARTY shold get on the band wagon, as the phrase was used, and should look around for some large mass organization to build in the South".

Mr. Crouch under oath confirms the following in regard to the organization of which George S. Mitchell, now Executive Secretary of the Southern Region Council, was an executive member:

METHODIST PREACHERS SET PROGRAM TO SOCIALIZE AMERICA THROUGH CHURCH PROGRAMS AND PULPITS

The so-called "Christian Social Action Movement" which is an out-growth of the "Chicago Call To Action Conference" held in Chicago, 1932, appears to be neither Christian or Methodist. The Executive Committee is filled with Methodist preachers the Chairman being the Reverend Gilbert S. Cox, pastor now of the Grandview Methodist Church, Dubuque, Iowa, who is an avowed Socialist and a constant contributor to the ADULT STUDENT.

In his introduction of the Marxian "Leaders' Handbook" he says, "—Capitalism, Fascism, and Bolshevism there is neither motive nor method in harmony with OUR interpretation of the Christian Gospel—".

The "Chicago Call To Action Conference" was Karl Marx to the core. It was a meeting planned to spawn the egg of Marxism which was to hatch out in the Methodist Church socialism pure and simple. This of course took place before we "poor, dumb" Southern Methodists put our necks into the ecclesiastical yoke of a dacadent Methodism which is now forcing us to pull the cart which is overloaded with un-American ideologies. Unification perfected a legal and organizational unity but the rank and file of Southern Methodists are not in harmony with the left-wing economic teaching of a great host of Northern leadership who long ago repudiated the 24th Article of our Holy Articles of Religion.

These Methodist preachers attending the Conference who claim to be both disciples of Jesus and Karl Marx set a pattern to change the existing American economic order by using the pulpit and literature of the Methodist Church. They said:

(1) "PASTORS must definitely challenge the existing capitalistic order. This must be done frankly, positively and courageously".

(2) One preacher exposed his technique to deceive American Methodists when he said, "I have been PREACHING a straight social gospel, but I have not used the term 'socialism'. If you do not", he con-

THE NORTH GEORGIA CONFERENCE

I don't get the thrill out of going to annual conference that I use to get. I shall never forget my first one. It met at the First Methodist Church in Atlanta. I was admitted into full connection. Dr. John S. Jenkins, great pulpiteer was my presiding elder in the processes of joining the conference and assisting the Bishop in the making of my first appointment. I l felt like I was in the hands of my friend. Brothers DeBardeleben, Felton Williams and Henry Jones made talks on the conference floor for me. It made me feel good. Uncle Nath Thompson came to me and informed me that he wanted me at Alpharetta to build a new Church. Bishop Beauchamp said to me, "You are coming from a Church that puts great emphasis upon the work of the Holy Spirit, and I hope you will bring His presence with you. I heard dear old Brother Sherman England sing, "Savior, More Than Life To Me" while he stood on the Conference floor and shook hands with brethren just a few hours before he slipped away to that "Good Land". Each pastor made his report from the floor of the Conference. I went away from that conference actually believing that the Bishop and the Presiding Elders listened to the Lord in the making of my appointment. That was twenty-four years ago. That was when we were in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and when we in the North Georgia Conference practiced the intenerant episcopacy.

THE 64 DOLLAR QUESTION

Georgia Methodists are asking, "Why don't those in charge remove the Southern Regional Council from the fourth floor of Wesley Memorial Church Building"? The door was shut in the face of the Warren A. Candler Chapter of the Circuit Riders,Inc., an organization composed of loyal Georgia Methodists. None of its members have ever belonged to a Communist front. Why slam the door in the face of them, and then protect the SRC whose Board of Directors has been honeycombed with wobblying, fellow traveling Communist fronters? Georgia Methodists want to know why.

There are some members on the Board of Directors of SRC whose patriotism has never been questioned. They were not aware of the official company they were keeping. Their names were used because they, as we, believe in right racial relations. They were just too busy to know what was going on. They, we believe, would like to clean house but to do so would be most embarrassing.

The Board of Trustees of Wesley Memorial Church which is elected by the North Georgia Conference has the authority and responsibility. The pastor is not to be blamed for no action. The Chairman of the Board of Trustees is in position to take immediate action. He is the powerful Ed Mackay who has acquired lots of power in the few years he has been a member of the North Georgia Conference. Many in the North Georgia Conference have marveled at what manner of man he is, who came to us when the "appointmental pickings" looked a little greener to him in our Conference. It is our considered opinion that the majority of the Board members are not satisfied with SRC's occupancy in old Wesley Memorial. We sincerely believe that Georgia Methodists would be spared from further embarrassment if Dr. Mackay were to turn loose the influence of his unique powers to sweep Wesley Memorial clean of every vestige of the Southern Regional Council.

Why doesn't he do it? We do not know. It may be because of his endorsement of the un-American FEPC. The Southern Regional Council has been a sort of headquarters for the propagandizing of that iniquitious legislation. It could be because of Mackay's ideologies on the racial question. At the annual North Georgia Conference in 1948 he opposed a resolution which requested the Editor of our Church School literature to cease the publication of literature which was obnoxious to Southern Methodists and which violated the spirit of our agreement in unification. This resolution was introduced by Professor Jack Lance, the associate Conference lay leader and was signed by a host of prominent ministers. It may be because of his opinion that it is better to let such a condition exist than to stir it up. At the Atlanta Methodist Preachers' Conference in the early weeks of 1950 he did oppose our Resolution which condemned the Methodist Federation For Social Action partly on the grounds that it was better not to admit that something was wrong in our Methodism.

We trust that the good Doctor of Religion does not refuse to act, as entirely too many churchmen today, on the theory that it is perfectly all right for Methodists to be affiliated with as many Communist fronts as they desire so to be.

We reiterate what we said so strongly in the April issue of OMV—There is no place in a Methodist Church for the offices of any organization which has Communist fronters on its Board of Control. The Southern Regional Council should be put out of Wesley Memorial without further delay. If the Board is derelict in its duty to vacate the offices of SRC, the coming session of the North Georgia Conference can. We believe that it will.

SOCIALISM SPAWNED

tinued, "call it socialism you can say what you will and win approval'.

(3) In order to change our economic order they further suggest the necessity of feeding Socialism to our children and youth. They say, "The ENTIRE program of the Church SHOULD be so planned that as an outcome of the regular program there will be developed in CHILDREN, YOUNG PEOPLE -- those attitudes and practices of cooperation, which constitute citizenship in the Christian social order".

(4) "We shall cooperate" they say "in EVERY way with the Methodist Federation For Social Action and with all "OTHER" agencies of the Church which by their nature can be of service in the propagation of the social Gospel". The "SOCIAL GOSPEL" to them always means the abolition of our free enterpise.

They deplore the fact that our system of education has supported the "system of capitalistic-nationalistic individualism". These Marxian Methodists with ministers of other denominations say, "Our task is to get underneath the victims of our present order and lift up and get above and press down". They boldly proclaim that, "Natural resources, water power, the major means of communication and TRANSPORTATION, and progressively, the major means of production MUST be transferred from private to public CONTROL." They declare that, "While socialism and Christianity are not identical, SOCIALISM builds upon the basic principles of the Christian religion".

They pledge themselves to "challenge the basic assumptions of the capitalistic system". They asserted that the declarations of principles and the economic aims of the Socialist Party most nearly coincided with their economic views.

There are many familiar Methodist preachers whose names are found on the Executive Committee and list of delegates. Among them are district superintendents, a Church Editor, members and a Secretary of a General Board It is almost trite to say that the Methodist Federation was well represented at this Chicago conference. And, of course, no one it seems now, will be shocked to know that there were some Communist fronting Methodist preachers in the group.

Among the Bibliography of the LEADERS HANDBOOK such left wing and Communist publications are proudly listed: "The Soviet Challenge To America"; "Soviet Russia"; "The Challenge of Russia"; "Decay of Capitalist Civilization"; "Little Blue Book on Socialism"; "Why I Am A Socialist"; "Is Capitalism Doomed"? and many others.

GEO. SINCLAIR MITCHELL—

Paul Crouch was a member of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare while he was a member in good standing with the Communist Party. Howard Lee of Alabama was a member of the Communist Party while he participated in the FIRST and second conferences of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare. John P. Davis was, and had been a member of the Communist party several years before he attended the founding of the new organization. Such Communists as Jack Stachel, Earl Browder, Rob Hall, Ted Wellman and Paul Crouch made visits to New York to confer with Party big wigs as to the plans and strategy to be followed in the Southern Conference For Human Welfare.

In April, 1938 a few months after the inception of this Communist organization, Paul Crouch went to Birmingham to take over the duties of the editor of the NEW SOUTH. The first two issues were published in the name of the Communist Party, but is was quickly seen that to continue that, the Communists Party would not be able to fool gullible and so-called liberal Southerners in to the fold of the Communist front known as the Southern Conference For Human Welfare. It was then published by the New South Publishing Company. The contributing editors for the New South which was the official organ of the INFANT organization known as the Southern Conference For Human Welfare who were members of the Communist Party were Donald Burke; Jack Strong, whose real name was Jack Sapphire (Don't have any evidence as to whether he is a brother-in-law to Kingfish); Ben Davis, Jr., R. F. Hall; Ted Williams; James W. Ford; Bart Logan and Henry Winston. The New South in the early stages was subsidized by William Weiner, the head of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. The Alabama district of the Communist Party was given grants by the Central Committee in its organizational work to build the Southern Conference For Human Welfare. Joseph S. Gelders, Communist Party leader in Birmingham, Ala., was a prominent member of a little committee in that city which helped work out the details of the organization that Stalin's crowd was preparing to launch to "improve" the South.

After the decision was made to organize the "CONFERENCE" within the PARTY by the district bureau in consultation with Earl Browder and the Central Committee, Gelders carried on the negotiations. He visited Washington, D. C., He succeded in meeting President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and succeeding in getting an invitation to Hyde Park, where he posed as a New Dealer, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt had no knowledge he was acting for the Communist Party. He then visited Mrs. Virginia Durr in Alexandria, Va., who was very enthusiastic for it, though she know it was started by the Communist Party. The initial funds for the organizational work for the Southern Conference For Human Welfare were furnished by the Communist Party. In later stages monies were raised from "liberal" groups and persons.

It seems that the foregoing is ample proof that the Communists not only designed and built the Southern Conference For Human Welfare but sat in the driver's seat.

Index IX of the House Committee On Un-American Activities lists members of the "Southern Council" of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare (1938-39) by states and includes under North Carolina "George Mitchell, FSA Raleigh". From the record GEORGE S. MITCHELL was affiliated with the SCFHW at least ten years. It is with good reasoning that he could not be a member of that Communist front for ten years and be so naive to not know that Stalin's crowd was running the show. No person who was in the planning circles of it for ten years ought to be permitted office space in a Methodist Church unless he has repented of the sins of his fellow traveling.

More Of Mitchell's Record of Affiliation With Notorious Communist Fronts

GEORGE S. MITCHELL was a Signer of the Scottsboro (Ala.) Protest which was played up by the Communist Party, for propagandizing their iniquitous cause. One Communist in speaking of this case said, "Hell, we don't care anything about those black boys—we are only interested in keeping it stirred up so we can send speakers down there to further our cause—". The "Scottsboro Defense Committee" which instigated protests to the trial of the Negroes is a communist front says the House Committee On Un-American Activities. The California Committee cited it "as a Communist created and controlled front organization". The Massachusetts House Committee on Un-American Activities said it is a "United front under the guidance of the Communist Party",

MITCHELL was sponsor of Committee of 1000 and signer of petition to Congress to abolish the House Committee On Un-American Activities according to the September 27, 1948 issue of the New Republic. He was on the Board of Representatives of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare the now deceased communist front organization. Mitchell in 1931 was a lecturer for the left wing and off color RAND SCHOOL. He opposed

A "SCENE" AT AN ATLANTA CONFERENCE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL WITH HEADQUARTERS IN BELOVED WESLEY MEMORIAL

The speaker in the above picture is W. L. Prattis, editor of the COURIER, Negro National Weekly published in Pittsburgh, Pa., who is lashing out his tirade against the South. In his speech he referred to our historic cultural and cherished traditional patterns as "the crumbling bastions of Anglo-Saxon racism". As he reached the heights of Negro oratory which every true southerner has appreciated, he shouted out, "We smell victory in the air and we are looking for the WHITES of their eyes". In an Atlanta Church and under the sponsorship of SRC standing between Mrs. M. E. Tilly, prophetess of racial mixture in her Southland and Col. A. Abbott Rosens, now on the staff of the Anti-Defamation League, sort of a Jewish Ku Klux which has out "kukluxed" the Ku Klux Klan, goes to town in his speech which is to stir up strife and trouble in Georgia. As he gained momentum in his speech against the South he asked them to move their chairs to one side so he could have enough room to easily gesticulate. Despite his inflamatory remarks the thunderous ovation was almost deafening. He sat down but the wild acclaim given him by the mixed crowd in a church in the heart of Dixie brought him to his feet. From his expression in this picture, the able editor of The Atlanta Constitution is apparently embarrassed.

Atlanta Meeting of the Southern Regional Council Set Program to Destroy Our Necessary Cherished Traditions Of The South

Some 300 white and Negro persons met in the annex of the Lutheran Church on Peachtree, Atlanta in 1948 to discuss ways to break down our segregation laws and for the forcing of the adoption of a national FEPC. While there were a few well meaning colored and white persons who were interested in the promotion of right racial relations, the majority of the leaders was composed of the same crowd who take part in other off color meetings in Atlanta.

As the meeting got underway, a photographer leveled his camera and took a shot at the mixed crowd. At the unexpected flash of the bulb there was some commotion as several of the white women were heading for the door but they made their exit too late. Their picture had been taken. As the photographer started to take another shot, George S. MITCHELL one of the leading lights of the Southern Regional Council grabbed the photographer and shouted, "Did you make that picture"? When the photographer replied "Yes", Mitchell grabbed him by the arm and started shoving him toward the door. "You will have to leave the building now", Mitchell said excitedly, "because some white ladies are leaving because of pictures being made of the mixed audience."

On the outside a reporter asked MITCHELL, "Just what kind of a meeting is this"? Mitchell replied, "This is just a little political meeting and we deliberately chose this building to hold it in to give it an air of religious sanctity and we don't want any pictures made of it".

the use of injunctions in labor disputes according to the New York Times April 1, 1946. The advertisement appearing in the paper was prepared and instigated by the "National Federation for Constitutional Liberties" which the House Committee says that, "the Federation was among a maze of organizations which were spawned for the alleged purpose of defending civil liberties in general but actually intended to protect Communist subversion from any penalties under the law".

METHODIST FEDERATION TO HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION IN CHICAGO

The forty-fifth Anniversary Convention of the Methodist Federation For Social Action will begin Monday, June 1, at Palos Park Community Center, Chicago according to a call sent out by the Executive Secretary, the Reverend Jack R. McMichael, member of California-Nevada Methodist Annual Conference and a member of the Communist Party in the United States.

In his letter the Federation's fanatical interests in the repeal of the McCarran-Walter Act and for Presidential Clemency for the traitorious Rosenbergs are expressed. "Among outstanding leaders", says McMichael, "who will be with us there are: Prof. Kermit Eby, Dr. Lucious Porter, Dean John B. Thompson, Dr. Harry F. Ward, Mrs. Earl Willmott." Ward and Thompson are "outstanding" in their Communist associations. Prof. Ebby is also a Communist fronter.

A Texas Steward—"What can the future hold for a Church, whose leaders faithfully follow the Communist line, use the Church to propagate their socialistic drival, and teach the youth that it is wrong and sinful to love their native land enough to defend it and their own freedom from tyrants who would enslave us".

SRC SPEAKER DEFENDS COMMUNIST AFFILIATIONS

PRATTIS in his column in the Courier, May 23, 1953 captioned "THE HORIZON" defends the notorious Communist fronter Mary McLoed BETHUNE for her many affiliations with subversive and Communist front organizations. Prattis says, "She is said to have belonged to more than twenty—. So what? Maybe she did. But what did that mean? Did that mean that Mary Mcleod Bethune was disloyal to her country, or is subversive? INDEED IT DID NOT."

Editor PRATTIS who was a sort of keynoter for an Atlanta Conference held by the Southern Regional Conference evidently thinks that no one should be criticised for having fellowship with fellow travelers and card-toting Communists in more than a score of Moscow inspired and originated and controlled subversive organizations. Prattis then "borrows" one of the Commies' tactics to dodge the real issue by saying, "We hope no one will be frightened --- because we are all so busy these days looking for Communists under our beds".

A Georgia Preacher—"There is a definite need for your publication. Our Church is becoming such a conglomerated regimentation that someone needs to make protest loud and long. There are many of us who would like to do so but we are helpless".

FACSIMILE OF LETTER SIGNIFICANT OF THE PRO-SOVIET ATTITUDE OF THE "NATIONAL RELIGION AND LABOR FOUNDATION." LETTERHEAD CONTAINS NAMES OF OFFICERS, NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS.

The National Religion and Labor Foundation which follows the Socialist pro-labor, anti-private enterprise line called a Pittsburgh convention in 1948 of radical labor leaders and "liberal" preachers to create interest in what they called "A socialism --- which strives to combine individual freedom and common economic security" which "is more in keeping with the Judeo - Christians of a good human community than is Capitalism". The economic theorists of the cloth declared, "that our economic life, and particularly our 'free enterprise' system, which we have defined as 'relatively unregulated privately-owned enterprise' is subject to God's judgement". It is heartening to learn that these modernists believe in the judgment of God.

In the official letter appearing on this page notice their revolutionary thinking. Some will say this was the way they thought before the recent war. But this leftist organization hasn't changed since the Soviet Union's threat to the free world, and not one preaher including Bishop Oxnam or Dr. Luther A. Weigle has gone to the mourners' bench of Americanism and professed faith in our free economy.

My dear Mr. Waters:

I regret that the Foundation is unable to help you carry forward the work you outline in your letter. We believe that the primary job today is one of achieving economic justice. We believe that this will require revolutionary changes in our social and economic order. Therefore, instead of attacking Soviet Russia, we are anxious to appreciate the contributions which it has made and, at the same time build here in this section of the world an order that has all of the values of the one that is being created in the Soviet Union, without the sacrifice of other important values.

Very sincerely yours,
Francis A. Henson

GENERAL

The method which Craft has used in assembling and presenting his allegations against the SRC is by now a familiar one. The following points should be noted:

(1) He does not give any sources for his statements about the individuals attacked, except for two instances in which he cites the Daily Worker and another in which he mentions a former member of the Communist Party.

(2) Some of his "dossiers" on past and present Board members bear a close resemblance to the assortment of unverified reports, rumors, miscellaneous clippings, and old letterheads which comprise the "raw files" of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Although the Committee itself has stated that it cannot vouch for this unchecked and unevaluated material, unscrupulous individuals have been able to secure copies of it and use it for their irresponsible purposes.

(3) Although the past and present Board members of the SRC number 130, he comments on only 11 current Board members and 6 ex-Board members.

(4) He weaves in long, irrelevant passages about Communist activities and individuals that are in no way related to the SRC. This sort of purely verbal association is evidently designed to lend the appearance of substance to his unsubstantial charges.

(5) He cites perfectly innocent and respectable associations in such a way as to convey the impression that they are improper or subversive.

(6) As evidence of the irresponsibility of Craft's material, he lists as a Board member of the SRC one "Harry Stanley Brav." No such person has ever served on the Board, though Rabbi Stanley R. Brav, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, was a highly valued Board member until he moved out of the South in 1948.

(7) Craft makes no distinction as to the time, the nature, or the termination of the various affiliations of which he accuses directors and staff members of the SRC. It is no secret that Communist-front organizations have frequently made use of names without the permission or approval of the persons so named. It is also well known that many organizations which were entirely sound at the beginning were later infiltrated by Communists and Communist sympathizers; therefore, the time of joining and the time of withdrawal are of great importance to any real understanding of the association. It is obvious that any such understanding is alien to Craft's purpose.

MEMORANDUM

The April issue of One Methodist Voice, published by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton, Georgia, charges that the Board of the Southern Regional Council is "honeycombed with Communist fronters." The paper then undertakes to support this charge by a series of misstatements, innuendoes, and a record of alleged associations of past and present Board members. The conclusion which Craft wishes to leave with the reader is stated in an editorial on page 2: "The Southern Regional Council with its Board of Directors top heavy with fellow travelers and Communist fronters is unknowingly to some of its members aiding the Russian Cause to stir up the Negro question in the South. That is what pleases the Kremlin. The Red hand of Russia reaches into Georgia."

This charge is wholly false, as are most of the "facts" offered in support of it. The object of the author clearly is to discredit and embarrass the leadership of the North Georgia Conference of The Methodist Church--particularly, the Methodist board which administers the Wesley Memorial Building, where the SRC rents office space. A full understanding of his motives and methods can be gained from his personal background, the history of his relationships within the Church, and his previous utterances, through One Methodist Voice and otherwise. However, since the sole purpose of this memorandum is to demonstrate the false and libelous nature of the publication, these personal and denominational aspects will not be discussed here.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

The following brief account of the Southern Regional Council's history and make-up will give some idea of the far-fetched nature of Craft's attack.

LEAD ARTICLE, BEGINNING ON PAGE 1, ONE METHODIST VOICE

1. The first paragraph consists of a general indictment of the SRC unsupported by facts. The SRC is alleged to be carrying on an obnoxious program from a "point of advantage and influence"--i.e., the Wesley Memorial Building. It may be noted, in passing, that all stationery, publications, and news releases of the SRC bear the address 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.; the SRC has never sought in any way to capitalize on the location of its offices.

2. Dr. Mitchell is described as "a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter." He is neither. He was an instructor in economics at Columbia from 1929 to 1935, though it is hard to see what relevance this is supposed to have.

3. The next paragraph attributes to an anonymous "reliable source" an account of a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952, under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee. According to this account, the chairman is supposed to have said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that," after which Dr. Mitchell was called upon. The paragraph concludes with the statement that,"Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party."

This entire paragraph is as false in fact as it is vicious in implication. Attached are copies of signed statements by three persons who were present at the meeting and who declare unequivocally that no such incident took place. More than a dozen other reputable persons who were present can testify to the same point.

4. It is stated the SRC's publication New South was "consciously or unconsciously borrowed from the old official organ, New South, of the now defunct Communist originated and Communist inspired organization known as, 'The Conference for Human Welfare.'" This can only be described as hate-inspired nonsense. The SRC's publication was named New South in 1946 by the Executive Committee, after lengthy consideration of many possible titles. Neither the Committee nor the staff had ever heard of another publication of that name; the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (if that is the organization meant) never published anything by that title, to the best of our knowledge. The phrase "New South," as most schoolboys know, is taken from an historic address by Henry Grady. Apparently, Mr. Craft would attribute the origin of this famous phrase to the Communists!

5. In this paragraph and elsewhere in the paper, Craft makes much of the fact that several SRC Board members were at one time affiliated with the late Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This is one of the most shopworn methods used to discredit liberal-minded Southerners. Commenting on an attack upon Dr. Rufus E. Clement (almost identical with that in One Methodist Voice), The Atlanta Constitution editorialized on May 12, 1953:

Ralph McGill, editor of The Constitution, who led the exposure of the Southern Conference in its latter years, was an incorporator of the SRC, and has been a close friend of its work ever since. During the few years of their co-existence, the two organizations were widely considered rival agencies, markedly different in ideology and approach to Southern problems. To suggest, as Craft does, that the SRC was related to, or sympathetic with the left-wing element in the Southern Conference is to fly in the face of incontrovertible facts.

6. Craft declares, "Mitchell was an endorser and sponsor of Brookwood College at Katonah, New York, which the American Federation of Labor put a ban on it because of the school's Communistic affiliations." Dr. Mitchell recalls that he taught a class at Brookwood College on one or two occasions in 1930 or 1931. Brookwood was then a widely respected workers' education center. Craft does not give the date when the AFL allegedly "put a ban" on the institution.

7. Craft charges that Dr. Mitchell "is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, Civil Rights Congress." Dr. Mitchell's comment follows:

> "Untrue, though in 1946 I permitted my name to be used in a newspaper ad as one of the sponsors of the first meeting of what became the Civil Rights Congress. This was the time when a movement was under way to repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Act, which forbade the use of injunctions in most labor disputes. I was asked to be a sponsor of an emergency meeting to form an organization to combat the movement to make these injunctions legal again. The great majority of those whose names were put to the invitation sent me were sound Americans with the good interests of the country at heart. I was, and am still, opposed to the use of injunctions in labor disputes. On the assumption that the proposed organization would work effectively against this practice, I permitted my name to be used as a sponsor for the emergency meeting. Within a few months, it became apparent that the resulting Civil Rights Congress was strongly influenced by Communists, and a year or so later, when the organization asked me again to be a sponsor of some meeting it was having, I refused. I never joined the Civil Rights Congress, am not and have never been a member of it, and have never attended any of its meetings."

8. The last paragraph makes no point at all, apparently having been added for suggestive effect. Dr. Mitchell was from February 1944 until about May 1945 regional director for the CIO political Action Committee, covering the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, and for part of the time, Louisiana. No responsible person supposes that the Political Action Committee was Communist-dominated; the charge was certainly never made against Dr. Mitchell's office. Craft does not identify the mysterious "Mr. Morgan" or explain what a telephone call to him is supposed to have meant.

1. The first paragraph states Mrs. Tilly was "a sponsor of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in Chicago, May, 1950" and proceeds to discuss in detail the leftist record of persons described as her "fellow sponsors." Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or attend the so-called "Mid-Century Conference for Peace and has never even heard of the individuals described as her "fellow sponsors."

2. Paragraph 2 states: "According to the letterhead of the Communist front known as THE COMMITTEE FOR PEACEFUL ALTERNATIVES TO THE ATLANTIC PACT, Mrs. M. E. Tilly is listed as a member of the Executive Board." The first time Mrs. Tilly heard of this charge was in June 1951. She promptly sent a registered letter to the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives, demanding that her name be removed from its letterhead, if it was being so used.

3. Paragraph 3: "Mrs. Tilly was also asponsor of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax which is cited as a Communist Front by the California Committee on Un-American Activities." Mrs. Tilly, along with a great many other leading Americans who oppose any tax on the right to vote, was at one time affiliated with this organization. It is interesting that the California Committee, which is notorious for its loose allegations, should be the authority for the charge that this organization was a Communist front. So far as is known, no responsible Federal agency ever declared it to be so during the period of Mrs. Tilly's membership.

4. Paragraph 4: "She was a sponsor of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties, according to the Daily Worker, April 16, 1948." This doubtful source to the contrary, Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or participate in anything called the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties.

5. Paragraph 5: "Mrs. Tilly was one of the initiators of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act and appears as Mrs. M. E. Tilly on the letterhead while her signature appears with other signers of an open letter to all Congressmen as Dorothy Tilly." What is the point? Is the fact that Mrs. Tilly signed her name in two different ways supposed to be subversive? No allegation is made against the Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act. In any case, Mrs. Tilly resigned from the Committee--for quite other reasons--more than a year ago.

6. Paragraph 6: "Mrs. M. E. Tilly's name appears on the official roll of the Methodist Federation for Social Action several years as an executive member." That is true. Mrs. Tilly withdrew from the MFSA in 1949.

7. Paragraph 7: "Mrs. M. E. (Dorothy) Tilly of Atlanta, Ga., is listed as a member of 'The National Citizens' Political Action Committee.'" When this organization was founded in 1944, it commanded the respect and participation of a host of reputable citizens. There was no suggestion that it was anything but a sincere and honest movement. Only in its latter days--well after Mrs. Tilly and other influential citizens had ceased to be active in it--did the NCPAC fall under Communist influence, and shortly thereafter it was merged into a left-wing organization with which Mrs. Tilly had no connection whatever. Since the NCPAC has been out of existence for years, Craft's use of the present tense to suggest a current affiliation is either inexcusable ignorance or downright deceit.

8. Paragraph 8: "Mrs. Tilly's name appears on the letterhead of the 'American Civil Liberties Union' as a member of the national Committee that was used in October, 1951, which the California Committee on Un-American Activities says it may be definitely classed as a Communist front or 'transmission belt' organization." Mrs. Tilly's affiliation with the American Civil Liberties Union requires neither defense nor apology. It is a well established fact that the ACLU is a non-Communist organization. One can only wonder at the reliability of Craft's source in view of the following statement which appears in a document issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee on February 17, 1952 (quoted by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam in the Washington Post): "The American Civil Liberties Committee has never been cited as Red-dominated, or as Communist, by any official organization charged with the duty of investigating subversive activity."

Same paragraph: "She has been a member of the National Board, 'Americans for Democratic Action.'" Craft does not explain what this is supposed to mean. The Americans for Democratic Action is a militantly anti-Communist organization.

Same paragraph: "She was listed as one of the signers of a statement on Korea, released by the Communist inspired 'Committee for Peaceful Alternatives--' as shown in the Daily Worker of July 28, 1950, the official organ of the Communist Party in the U. S." Mrs. Tilly has never signed any statement on Korea. The half-truth behind this charge may be the fact that in February 1950 Mrs. Tilly joined a number of religious leaders in signing an open letter to the President. This letter urged the President to work for a practical agreement on international control of atomic energy--an objective which has been an official part of U. S. policy since 1945. The Korean war had not begun--or even been foreseen--in February 1950.

9. Paragraph 9: "Mrs. Tilly, according to the Daily World, April 6, 1952 addressed a three days' Women's Conference on World Peace at Daytona Beach, Florida called by the notorious Communist fronter Dr. Mary McCleod Bethune founder of the National Council of Negro Women." This characterization of Mrs. Bethune is an unwarranted smear of a great American woman who has won national and international honor for her many constructive activities. Mrs. Tilly was present at the meeting in question, along with leading representatives of Protestant, Jewish and Catholic church women; the vice-chairman of the World Council of Churches; and the National Committeewomen of both the Democratic and the Republican Parties.

BOARD MEMBERS

Eleven current Board members of the SRC are accused of Communist-front affiliations. These persons were elected to the Board in consideration of their recognized worth and service to the South and the Nation. The high positions of public esteem which they occupy are enough alone to discredit this implied attack on their loyalty. In any case, men of the stature of Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Dr. F. D. Patterson, Dr. Will Alexander, and the rest, require no defense by us.

The same may be said of the two persons who hold no position in the SRC but are attacked as having taken part in SRC activities--i.e., Dr. Channing Tobias and Mr. Frank McCallister.

It may be noted that at least two of these persons have had occasion to repudiate these same charges in more important connections. In the Senate hearing on his appointment as delegate to the United Nations, Dr. Tobias was confronted by the same kind of irresponsible attack as appears in One Methodist Voice. After hearing his testimony, the Senate committee unanimously confirmed his appointment, as did the full Senate in a subsequent session. Dr. Rufus E. Clement was similarly attacked by certain members of the Stlanta City Executive Committee who sought to have him disqualified as a candidate for the Board of Education. Following a hearing at which Dr. Clement testified, the Committee dropped the charges and Dr. Clement was overwhelmingly elected by the people.

Six ex-Board members are mentioned in One Methodist Voice. Two of these, to our knowledge, have been identified with leftish or Communist infiltrated movements--largely, however, in the last four years, when they were no longer members of the Board of SRC. In any case, these two former Board members--out of a total of 130--participated only in the early years of the SRC and played no significant part in the policy-making activities of the Board.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

My attention has been called to the April, 1953 issue of the publication, "One Methodist Voice". To say that I found the material in this publication shocking, is to indulge in understatement. I have known the work of the Southern Regional Council intimately for the last several years, and I have been well informed about the activities of Dr. George Mitchell, the director of the Council.

I have always regarded the Southern Regional Council and Dr. Mitchell as being in the forefront of the enemies of communism, not only in this country but even more importantly in the international arena. By attempting to extend the horizons of democracy, you have been contributing materially to the constant battle which the American way of life must consistently wage against the totalitarianism of the Soviets.

It so happens that I was present at the meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA on September 9th, 1952 under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee, and which is described in "One Methodist Voice". The purpose of this meeting was a highly admirable one, one which any person with religious convictions must admire -- and that is the attainment and advancement of peace. During the course of the discussion, attention was directed to the fact that an important enemy of peace is communist Russia and that the intransigence of the Soviet leaders is a tremendous obstacle to the achieving of international understanding.

The description of this meeting as contained in "One Methodist Voice" leaves me completely bewildered. Dr. Mitchell was never by direct statement nor by implication identified as a communist or as a spokesman for communism. Dr. Mitchell never indicated by statement or by implication that he is a communist or a spokesman for the communists. I was present during the entire session and I have a good and retentive memory. I never heard the words uttered ascribed either to Dr. Mitchell or to the Chairman.

Sincerely yours,

Alexander F. Miller

Dear Sir:

I have recently seen a printed sheet which charged that at a meeting at the Atlanta YWCA, sponsored by the American Friends Service Commission, the presiding officer made the statement, "We have a member of the Communist Party here." The printed sheet stated that this information was furnished by a "reliable source."

I wish to state that I was present at the meeting and at no time during the meeting did the presiding officer or any other person in the room make the statement or any statement that could have been construed to mean the same thing. In fact, it seemed to me that the members of the group showed real concern for the values of democracy and Christianity, as applied to human relationships.

Yours very truly,

Julia White

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

The ONE METHODIST VOICE, April 1953, reports that you are singled out as a Communist at a meeting in the Y.W.C.A., September 9, 1952. I attended this meeting and remember that Mr. Roosa, from Greensboro, was presiding most of the time. I am sure that Mr. Roosa never made the statement "we have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that." I feel very definitely that some one is putting words into the mouth of Mr. Roosa as well as misquoting you. I hope some protest will be made.

Sincerely yours,

Ernest J. Arnold

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

June 12, 1953

Mrs. M. E. Tilly:
Southern Regional Conference Room 432. 63 Auburn Ave., NE.,
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mrs. Tilly:

I am shocked that anybody should make these attacks on you. I have just been through the same experience, due to the article by J. B. McGuire in the American Mercury. I am glad to report that I have won out all along the line, due primarily to the support given to me by the national officers of the Presbyterian Churc h USA. I hope you will use the same strategy, telegraph your national officers who have known you throughout the years, who know the Christian motive behind all your endeavors, and who will be happy to come to your defense. Do not give in a single inch.

I am sending you my file on the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives, which was originally the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact. My own membership was confined, I think, to the Mid Century Conference on Peace, I am sending you my file on this Mid-Century Conference, because it contains the list of members of the Conference who initiated the Call. It does not seem to contain your name, but there may be two reasons for this (1) The list may be incomplete; and (2) Your membership may have been in the Committee on Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, which preceded the Conference. In either event, however, I am sure that most of the people listed in what I have sent you were also interested in the movement to which you refer in your letter.

The most important thing to note about the Mid Century Conference on Peace and the Committee on Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact is that both preceded the invasion of Korea by the North Korean forces. The Mid Century Conference was held in Chicago on May 29-30-31, 1950, and the Korean invasion took place on June 26, 1950, and it was totally unexpected. In other words, persons like you and me who are interested in peace were making certain moves aimed at peace when the nation itself was at peace. Other considerations may be involved when the nation is at war, although so far as I know Senator McCarthy and Mr. Velde have not yet succeeded in making it a crime to speak and plan for peace even when the nation is at war.

Please return my file when you are finished with it. If there is anything further that I can do, please let me know.

Sincerely your friend,

Chas. J. Turck

Dear Dr. Turck:

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your gracious endorsement of the "MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE" by indicating your willingness to become an initiating sponsor.

I am enclosing for your information the complete list of those whose signature will appear on the covering letter. The letter will then be sent to some 500 distinguished persons throughout the country for sponsorship.

You will note in the enclosed final draft Call many changes from the original copy. These changes were made on the recommendation and advice of many of the initiating sponsors. I do hope the final draft meets with your approval.

The consensus points to Chicago for the place where the conference will be held and May 29th, 30th and 31st for the time. I will most certainly keep you informed of our progress.

Please note dates!

We hope soon to call a meeting of all initiating sponsors, at which time Conference plans, program, speakers, etc. will be discussed.

MISS JULE T. BOUCHARD

March 15, 1950.

You have no doubt been shaken as we were by the sudden decision to produce the Hydrogen Bomb.

Protests against the production and use of the Bomb are flooding Washington. Yet the decision to produce the Bomb still stands. It has become a weapon of fear. It demonstrates our utter reliance upon military force as the corner-stone of our country's political policy. It promises total annihilation for the world and its peoples.

Appalling as the situation is, we assert with the deepest conviction that war is not inevitable. The need for survival dictates the need for peaceful alternatives.

It is our belief that Americans as well as all people throughout the world desperately want peace. We can and must prevent the cataclysm of another world war through the pressure of our opinion.

In the Senate, Senator Brien McMahon stated: "This is a time for soul-searching, for nation-wide and world-wide debate, and for the launching and maintaining of that moral crusade for peace which alone can save us and lead mankind along the righteous paths of security, abundance and liberty."

We are prepared to enter this crusade for peace. The enclosed Call indicates our thinking. Will you join with us in initiating this MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE to which all people of all religious creeds, of all political opinions, regardless of race or color, may come to express their opinions and offer their solutions and plan for further peace action?

We are men and women of hope. By working together we believe our country and the world can be turned to peace and that mankind can enter an era of abundance and liberty.

Sincerely yours,

Emily Greene Balch

Dear Dr. Turck:

Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter which is going to other Minnesota sponsors of the Mid*Century Peace Conference.

Because of the leadership which you have so generously given to the national peace movement it will be most helpful if you could give some assistance to those who will try to organize a large and representative delegation from Minnesota to the Mid-Century Peace Conference.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Turck:

Please accept our thanks for becoming one of the sponsors of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace in Chicago, May 29 and 30th. You will be glad to know that we have received a tremendously favorable response indicating the deep desire for peace throughout our country.

The success of the Conference, however, depends on the presence of a large and representative delegation from your State. The Conference is only two months away and we are deeply concerned with its preparation. Therefore, the Program Committee set up by the Initiating Sponsors has suggested that I write to several of the leading sponsors in each State to take up this matter.

The following procedure suggests itself as a means of moving rapidly.

1. Would it be possible for you and several other of the leading Sponsors in your State(whose names are included herein and to whom we are also writing a similar letter) to convene a meeting to set up a State planning Committee? To such a meeting, which could be informal in character, and which should take place within the next two or three weeks, could be invited other Sponsors from your State as well as any other community leaders you may deem advisable.

NO

2. This State Planning Committee, as a means of building support for the Mid-Century Conference, could call a public State Planning Conference to be held by the week-end of April 29th at the latest. Such a Planning Conference could be both a public demonstration for peace as well as accomplish the following objectives:

   (a) build support for the Mid-Century Peace Conference through endorsements resolutions, etc.,

(b) set to work to organize a large and representative State delegation to the Conference.

(c) consider the holding of a large State Mid-Century for Peace Conference on a broad scale a month or six weeks following the Chicago Conference.

I hope the above organizational plan does not seem unduly rigid or impractical. It is suggested simply as an over-all plan which we hope would be suitable for you. However, any modifications or revisions that you might want to make in it will be completely at the discretion of you and the other sponsors since you are best acquainted with the situation in your own State.

Will you let us know what you think of these proposals and whether you believe you can help realize them in your State.

Sincerely yours,

Jule T. Bouchard

Dear Dr. Turck:

I am writing to you because I know that you are deeply concerned with the outcome of this world in conflict, and agree with Senator Brien McMahon, who once again this week raised his voice in behalf of peaceful alternatives to the ever-tightening atmosphere towards war.

It is our belief that the people of the United States are behind Senator McMahon in his cry for an effective peac program.

Since its inception last May, our Committee has been responsible for voicing this sentiment through statements (which were widely endorsed throughout the country by church leaders, educators, scientists, artists, labor leaders, youth groups, and community groups) issued against the armaments program, the atom bomb and the recent instrument of mass murder, the Hydrogen Bomb.

After considerable discussion at our last Executive Board meeting, held on February 13th, it was agreed that our next step must be the gathering of representatives of the people in a National MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE.

We are fully aware of the many conferences already being planned on the use of the Hydrogen Bomb, as well as on broader proposals for peace. These are to the good. However, it is quite evident that most of these conferences are restricted within the limits of the church field, or are on a state or city level. The Conference we envisage would cut across lines of religion, profession, political creet, etc. We hope to have participating in this gathering leaders of the various peace and pacifist organizations, church leaders, rank and file clergy, together with representatives of labor, education, science, art, youth groups, and community organizations.

I am, therefore, enclosing a copy of a rough draft of the Call to this MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE. We have to date received endorsements for initiating sponsorship of the enclosed covering letter from Bishop Walls, Miss Emily Greene Balch (honorary Chairman, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom), Dr. Abraham Cronbach (of the Hebrew Union College),

P.S. May we express our appreciation to you for having joined in signing our Open Letter to President Truman protesting his decision to construct the Hydrogen Bomb. We were successful in securing the support of a large number of prominent Americans. I know you will be interested in the enclosed list of those who signed with you.

DRAFT CALL TO THE

MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE

Life or death - that is the issue today.

The fateful decision to build the Hydrogen bomb, despite the anxiety of America's millions, dwarfs all previous dangers. It opens the door to a war of total annihilation of all mankind.

This door must be shut.

War must be ruled out as the arbiter of the fate of humanity.

The conscience of America will not permit us to evade this ultimate responsibility to humanity, to our nation, our loved ones and ourselves. We cannot stand passive before the threat of the world's destruction.

The Hydrogen bomb brings home to all of us the menace that up to now may have seemed remote. Not only can other nations be laid waste, but America itself and we, its people, can be destroyed.

The Hydrogen bomb means an end to military defense.

OUR ONLY DEFENSE IS PEACE.

We reject the philosophy of those who say that war is inevitable.

WE AFFIRM THAT PEACE IS POSSIBLE.

We declare that there is a peaceful alternative to the cold war.

We insist that the peaceful co-existence of the American and Soviet social systems is possible. No difference between nations can be so great that mutual annihilation is the only answer.

Therefore, we call upon the President and the Congress of these United States to undertake negotiations with the Government of the Soviet Union to secure the banning of the Bomb as a first step toward disarmament and the peaceful settlement of all outstanding differences and the eventual resumption of trade.

At the same time, and on the basis of a new American - Soviet understanding, we call upon the United States delegation to the United Nations to be prepared to present positive proposals for peace through strengthening the United Nations as the greatest instrument for drawing all nations of the world into free cooperation.

Let us work together to attain these ends through meetings, conferences, sermons, resolutions, petitions - through all the traditional and historic means of expression whereby the people of America exercise their constitutional right "to petition the government for a redress of grievances".

Let us honor the Fifth Anniversary of the founding of the United Nations by rekindling the hope of peace for the world.

Let us transcend differences of faith, creed, race, political belief and occupation and unite in a great Crusade for Peace.

Let us assemble in a Mid-Century Conference for Peace on May 20 - 21 in our nation's capitol where in the American tradition of open discussion and the free examination of ideas, we who desire peace can plan a common course of action.

There is still time. Let us make the most of it!

LETTER TO INITIATING SPONSORS
MID-CENTURY CONFERENCE FOR PEACE

Dear

You have been shaken, as we were, by the sudden decision to produce the Hydrogen Bomb.

Protests against the production and use of the Bomb are flooding Washington. Yet the decision to produce the Bomb still stands. It has become a weapon of fear. It demonstrates our utter reliance upon military force as the corner-stone of our country's political policy. It promises total annihilation for the world and its peoples.

In the first half of this century we have suffered two world wars, with forty million dead, and millions more homeless and uprooted. Shall the second half of this century witness devastation and the unanswered pleas of millions for peace?

It is our belief that we in the United States and our brothers throughout the world desperately want peace.

With the deepest conviction we assert that war is not inevitable. Appalling as the situation is, the need for survival dictates the need for peaceful alternatives. We can and must prevent the cataclysm of another world war through the pressure of our opinion.

In the Senate, Senator Brien McMahon stated "This is a time for soul-searching, for nation-wide and world-wide debate, and for the launching and maintaining of that moral crusade for peace which alone can save us and lead mankind along the righteous paths of security, abundance and liberty."

We are prepared to enter this crusade for peace. The enclosed Call indicates our thinking. Will you join with us in initiating this Mid-Century Conference for Peace to which peoples of all religious creeds, of all political opinions, regardless of race or color, may come to express their opinions and offer their solutions and plan for further peace action?

We are men and women of hope. By working together we believe our country and the world can be turned to peace and that mankind can enter an era of abundance and liberty.

Sincerely yours,

the mother duck goes for a swim.

Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton Denies Slander, Says Press Freedom Censored

By SARAH MYRICK

A stern resolution condemning One Methodist Voice, a periodic publication edited by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton was passed overwhelmingly at the North Georgia Conference Thursday morning.

The resolution came after an attack by the Rev. Mr. Craft that he had been denied his freedom of the press and the right of a Methodist minister to express freely his opinion on matters relating to his church.

The Rev. Mr. Craft Wednesday was granted a requested sabbatical leave. On the conference floor Thursday morning, he contended the bishop had not given him an appointment.

In reply, Bishop Moore explained to the conference that he could not get a church to accept the Rev. Mr. Craft unless he would cease to "slander his brethren."

THE RESOLUTION declared "that One Methodist Voice does not speak for nor represent the spirit nor the mind of North Georgia Methodists."

It declared "complete confidence" in the Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty of our brethren who have been attacked by One Methodist Voice."

Bishop Moore called the publication a "disturbing influence." He said, "We do not want our church to be the center of the disturbance."

"We told Brother Craft that we might persuade a church to accept him if he would desist from slandering his brethren.

"BROTHER CRAFT," he said, "replied that he must follow his conscience. I said, 'Brother Craft, that is right, follow your conscience. But I did not see how that can be construed to mean continuing to criticize your brethren.'

"He believes he is being persecuted. I stand in your presence and his to say that is not true. We have tried to co-operate with him and to give him an appointment, but he has refused to co-operate."

As the bishop concluded the conference gave him a rising ovation.

Following the resolution and Bishop Moore's reply the Rev. Mr. Craft said:

"I will be glad to stop my paper any time if the bishop will appoint a committee to help me study the church."

The bishop made no reply.

The Rev. Mr. Craft is former pastor of East Lake Methodist Church and a church at Jonesboro. He was a chaplain in the Navy from 1941 to 1945.

THE CONFERENCE Thursday morning approved a $290,596 budget for world service and finance.

Of the amount, $152,722 will go to the general and jurisdictional budget. The conference budget was set at $127,874.

The Methodists, meanwhile, approved an Expansion Day budget of $195,000, and voted a $5 retirement pay raise to superannuated ministers.

Methodist Expansion Day, which combines nine causes into one budget and campaign, will again be observed Sunday March 7, 1954. The goal of $195,000 is the equivalent of $1 per member.

Largest appropriation—$55,000—will go for new churches and church sites. The budget provides $50,000 for schools and colleges; $16,000 for Wesley Foundations and student recognition day; $23,000 for Camp Glisson; $5,500 for Paine College; $20,000 for Golden Cross; $1,500 for Methodist Information; $17,000 for Day of Dedication, and $4,000 for Methodist Student Day.

THE INCREASE in retirement pay from $30 to $35 per service year will be met by churches paying 15 per cent into the pastor's fund instead of the present 13 per cent.

The Rev. W. Candler Budd, pastor of Glenn Memorial Methodist in Atlanta, pleaded for the increase. He said that other conferences in the Southeast pay from $31 to $48 per service year to retired ministers.

Arthur L. Gilmore of Atlanta, manager of Camp Glisson, reported that $25,000 is needed by the camp to provide added facilities and to complete projects underway.

Methodist Resolution Condemns Publication

By LAURA BARRE
Constitution Staff Writer

The North Georgia Methodist Conference passed a resolution Thursday condemning One Methodist Voice, a periodic publication edited by the Rev. Blake Craft, Clayton, and expressing confidence in the "Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty" of the ministers attacked in the publication.

The resolution followed a statement by the Rev. Mr. Craft that in order for him to receive an appointment, "to which I am justly entitled," Bishop Arthur J. Moore had required that he cease editing the controversial publication.

He charged that his right as a Methodist preacher to speak and to use his pen according to his conscience were on trial.

"POLITELY REFUSED"

Bishop Moore replied that he had suggested the Rev. Mr. Craft as a pastor for several churches and all the churches had "politely but firmly" refused to accept him. Finally, the bishop said, one church agreed to take him on condition that he cease publication of One Methodist Voice.

"I have been publishing the paper for three years," the Rev. Mr. Craft said, "exposing teachings of socialism, a world federalism and a treasonable pacifism within the Methodist church. I have pointed out how some of the leading officials have Communist front affiliations.

"Not one man has made any demand on me to ask me to retract anything I have said. I take that to mean they think what I say is true."

In their resolution, the ministers said "we have sought sincerely to practice Christian charity toward members of our fellowship. For more than two years, however, this spirit of charity has placed North Georgia Methodism in the position of seeming to approve, or, at least, to condone, the spirit and statements contained in One Methodist Voice. We now believe the time has passed when silence is Christian.

"We therefore declare that One Methodist Voice does not speak for, nor represent the spirit nor the mind of North Georgia Methodists.

"COMPLETE CONFIDENCE"

"We declare our complete confidence in the integrity of our brethren who have been attacked by One Methodist Voice, such as Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Bishop Bromley Oxman, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Dr. Lester Rumble, Dr. Nat G. Long, Dr. E. G. Mackay and Mrs. M. E. Tilley.

"We declare our opposition to the use of the name "Methodist" by such independent organizations and publications as the Methodist Federation for Social Action (unofficial) and One Methodist Voice (unofficial)."

Sid Williams, a layman from Austell, moved to table the resolution condemning the publication, but his motion failed for want of a second.

FAVORED RESOLUTION

M. G. Dunaway, a layman from Rockmart, said the laymen favored the resolution as strongly as did the ministers.

The Rev. W. J. Culpepper, Warrenton, moved that the conference re-affirm its love for the Rev. Mr. Craft and request him to re-consider his relationship to the conference and to his brethren. The motion was passed.

"I will stop publishing my paper," Craft replied, "when the bishop appoints a committee to work with me to study what is going on in the church."

The bishop made no reply.

Rev. Blake Craft Gets A Deserved Rebuke

The North Georgia Methodist Conference is to be congratulated for turning thumbs down on that package of prejudice published by the Rev. Blake Craft under the title "One Methodist Voice."

Mr. Craft's protest that his freedom of press is being violated has no foundation in fact. No one is trying to keep him from circulating his views. The Methodist denomination is within its rights in denying him the right to proclaim those views from the press or from the pulpit in the name of Methodism. The church must do something to prevent careless, selfish use of the fine word "Methodist" by those individuals or organizations with special axes to grind.

It is significant that when the Rev. Mr. Craft proffered his services on his own terms, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, head of the conference, reported that the churches to which the pastor had been offered "politely but firmly" had declined him.

North Georgia Conference Rebukes Publisher of 'One Methodist Voice'

ATLANTA, June 25 (AP)—The North Georgia Methodist Conference today overwhelmingly condemned a newspaper, "One Methodist Voice," published by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton.

Craft was given a year's sabbatical leave by the conference yesterday.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta said it had been impossible to find any Methodist church in Georgia which would accept Craft as its pastor.

The otherwise calm, orderly meeting was thrown into momentary confusion today when Craft asked for the floor.

He said that since he had been granted a leave some of his friends didn't understand the move and he wanted to explain.

Thereupon he read a copy of a telegram he had sent Moore in which he accused the bishop of refusing to give him an appointment.

Moore then rose to answer Craft's charges. He explained that the Methodist Conference cabinet, composed of bishops and district superintendents, had tried to work out an appointment for Craft.

He said the minister wrote to him early in June asking for a new assignment when appointments were announced at the current conference.

The bishop added that he had contacted chairmen of the board of stewards in several churches in Georgia asking that they receive Craft as minister but in each case was turned down.

Then the cabinet met with Craft and, in a "friendly discussion" asked him to name some churches which would receive him. Craft named one, but this church also refused to accept him. Moore continued, unless he would stop publishing "One Methodist Voice."

Craft told the cabinet he must follow his conscience and the members agreed but, said Moore, they didn't see how he could construe that to mean he should continue to criticize his brother ministers.

Moore said the cabinet had tried to work with Craft "but he has refused to co-operate."

When Moore finished, the convention gave him a standing ovation.

The Rev. J. C. Callaway of Athens, secretary of the cabinet, called on each member of the cabinet to stand and confirm the bishop's sentiment. They did.

The conference then adopted a resolution introduced by Dr. Dow Kirkpatrick, Athens pastor. It condemned "One Methodist Voice" and said:

"It does not speak for nor represent the spirit nor the mind of north Georgia Methodists" and declared "complete confidence in the Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty of our brethren who have been attacked by "One Methodist Voice."

The resolution said the paper had attacked such men as Bishop Moore; Bishop Bromley Oxnam of Washington; Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Methodist missionary; Dr. Lester Rumble, Augusta minister; Dr. Nat G. Long, Atlanta pastor; Dr. E. G. MacKay, district superintendent of the Decatur-Oxford district, and Mrs. M. E. Tilley, prominent Methodist worker of Atlanta.

The conference yesterday voted to raise retirement pay of ministers from $30 per service year to $35.

DID M'CARTHY APPROVE?

CHARL. TIMES 7/6/53

Methodists in this region can get an idea of the smear-content of an article entitled "Reds and Our Churches" in the July American Mercury when they are informed that one of the Protestant clergymen tarred with Communist taint is Paul B. Kern, highly respected and widely beloved Bishop, who has just retired.

The article was written by J. B. Matthews, staff director for Senator McCarthy's subcommittee. Three Democratic members of the subcommittee have termed Matthews' article "a shocking and unwarranted attack" against the American clergy, and asked that the subcommittee meet as soon as possible to take action.

Another member, Senator Potter, Republican of Michigan, says that he thinks Matthews should be fired. Other Republican members of the subcommittee are Senators Dirksen and Mundt.

Apparently on the committee a majority favor disciplinary action against Matthews. If fired, he will pop up somewhere else. He helped Allen Zoll prepare his attack on Yale, Harvard and the University of Chicago. And if Matthews is fired, McCarthy will probably replace him with someone else who will fit into the McCarthy campaign.

Most of the article seems to be a condemnation of Protestant clergymen who are supposed to have subscribed to the "World Peace Appeal" in 1950, and presumably that is why Bishop Kern is smeared as leftist. It might be pointed out that world peace does not become shameful merely because Russia, however insincerely, seemed to advocate it in the 1950 movement. Many Americans who detest Communism, as practically all Protestant clergymen do, refused to condemn a world peace proposal. Bishop Kern had good company, for eight Protestant Episcopal bishops are named along with him, including Bishop Lawrence.

Matthews says "the largest single group in supporting the Communist apparatus in the United States today is composed of Protestant clergymen." He thinks that 5,000 Protestant clergymen are leftists.

It is not enough to fire Matthews, whose background was such in fascist causes that he should never have been hired in the first place.

He should be asked if he can name a single Protestant clergyman who is an actual Communist. A man cannot be a Christian minister and subscribe to the Russian type of Communism, which denies the existence of a God, and we doubt if there are many American ministers who are so misguided.

The Matthews attack is a snide libel on the Protestant clergy and the subcommittee should ascertain if Senator McCarthy knew of its contents and sanctioned its publication.

'Of Whom Shall I Be Afraid?'

Mark Ethridge, native southerner and publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, let loose with both barrels in a commencement address to the graduates of Kentucky State College. There is room only to quote a part of this challenging address, on the subject "Of Whom Shall I Be Afraid?" And one must omit his conclusions which showed that we are copying the methods of the Ku Klux, of Hitler and of Communism.

BY MARK ETHRIDGE

(In an address to Kentucky State College graduates on June 2, 1953).

There are those who call it, superficially, I think, McCarthyism. That is flattering the evil genius of the senator from Wisconsin too much; he is only an arch-angel of darkness, not the devil himself. Our illness goes deeper than any one man. It is a malady of the soul that summons all the evil forces of the Inquisition, of the Cheka, of Hitlerism, of Stalinism, of the Ku Klux Klan, and all those nauseous forces which claim dominion over the conduct and the souls of other men. The danger is that in our hysteria to achieve what we regard as security, we tear out the real roots of security—man's confidence in himself and in other men; in our hunt for subversives, defined by those who have arrogated to themselves the right to judge what is subversive and what is 100 per cent American, we create real subversives: Those who would whittle away ancient and hard-won liberties; and we set in motion forces so dangerous that frequently they can be stopped only after they have left deep scars upon all of us, or as the French discovered in their revolution, only after a nation is sated with blood-letting and vengeance.

What are the attributes of that mood of the moment of which I am talking? Let me be more specific than I have been. It is that spirit in Congress which has expressed itself in the McCarran Internal Security Act of 1950 and the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1952—both of them, in their way, expressions of fear of fifth columns; both are narrowing the concept of the competition of these ideas so nobly expressed by Holmes. It is the spirit that gave rise to the recent revision of the Government's internal security program under which employes may be released for almost any reason, with their only real appeal to the head of the department in which they serve. That program is a violation of all the concepts of justice as far as the individual is concerned; it is the substitution of presumption of guilt for presumption of innocence. The Eisenhower Administration will not be glorified by future Toynbees if its achievement is to be written in terms of giving oil and other rights back to the states, but of depriving the individual of protection that has become a part of our instinct for, and our structure of, justice.

This evil spirit of which I speak is that which tends to elevate in esteem discovered in their revolution, only after a nation is sated with blood-letting and vengeance.

What are the attributes of that mood of the moment of which I am talking? Let me be more specific than I have been. It is that spirit in Congress which has expressed itself in the McCarran Internal Security Act of 1950 and the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1952—both of them, in their way, expressions of fear of fifth columns; both are narrowing the concept of the competition of these ideas so nobly expressed by Holmes. It is the spirit that gave rise to the recent revision of the Government's internal security program under which employes may be released for almost any reason, with their only real appeal to the head of the department in which they serve. That program is a violation of all the concepts of justice as far as the individual is concerned; it is the substitution of presumption of guilt for presumption of innocence. The Eisenhower Administration will not be glorified by future Toynbees if its achievement is to be written in terms of giving oil and other rights back to the states, but of depriving the individual of protection that has become a part of our instinct for, and our structure of, justice.

This evil spirit of which I speak is that which tends to elevate in esteem confessed traitors who turn informers on others; the spirit which makes congressmen and senators, drunk with power, bully and browbeat those who appear before them if they have held views in the past which do not meet the orthodoxy of the moment; it is the spirit of the Inquisition in which poor dupes of the past, mostly gullible artists or emotional reeds of one kind or another, parade before the altar of Congress to shrive their souls and try to save their jobs; it is the spirit which made our own Kentuckian, Mildred McAfee Horton, the leading figure, as someone said in a letter to The New York Times, of a new playing of Kafka's "The Trial," in which the accusers are unknown and who never enters the courtroom where his case is decided.

It is the spirit, in which groups, sitting in judgment upon what should be said, or thought, or read, or written, fire a librarian in Oklahoma for subscribing to the Nation; cancel a speech by Mary McLeod Bethune, a great and noble woman, because someone has whispered she is subversive; boycott Copland's music; arraign Sarah Lawrence and Vassar College as hotbeds of radicalism; drive Canada Lee, John Garfield and Larry Adler, to mention only a few, from the American stage; drum a man like John Carter Vincent, guilty at most of mistaken judgment, if indeed he was even that—guilty certainly, as I can testify, of a devout passion for the welfare of mankind—out of public life, and, on the anonymous reports of anonymous scandalmongers, almost drive out "Chip" Bohlen, the man who knows more about Russia than any man in the foreign service.

The catalogue is long, and could be longer. The danger is that such a spirit moves in ever-widening, concentric circles until at the end every man tends to regard himself as the only authority on what is 100 per cent Americanism. Minorities which stand to lose most by intolerance are inclined to join the pack. The Catholics want to prevent the showing of "The Miracle." Jewish groups don't like "Oliver Twist"; a Negro bishop protests "Green Pastures." The American Legion tries to prevent performances of "The Death of a Salesman" because its author was listed in Red channels. The mood to dictate to other peoples what their rights and their standards of culture shall be is a by-product of the spirit of which I have talked. It could be wished that all such gestures would have as ridiculous a denouement as the McCarthy-inspired ban on Russian works on the Voice of America. Edward Barrett, lately the able director of the International Information program, says that in late March of this year a Voice of America producer asked the librarian for a recording of the "Song of India," to be played upon the request of some Indians. The record was not available, the librarian explained, "because you see, it's by Rimsky-Korsakov, and we are supposed not to use anything by Russians." . . . .

Edward Crankshaw sounded an eloquent warning in his recent Cracks in the Kremlin Wall, when he said:

"I can think of only one way in which the Kremlin may still conquer us, that without war. It is by so frightening us (but it is we who allow ourselves to be frightened) that for fear of the enemy within we transform our own society imperceptibly into an apparatus of totalitarianism indistinguishable from the society of Soviet Russia—a system which may not be criticized, whether the British parliamentary system or the American

Bishop Scores Brochure By Grass Rooters

CHARLESTON - SOUTH CAROLINA - "NEWS AND COURIER" - SEPT 29

The following statement was issued by the Right Rev. Thomas N. Carruthers bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina, upon his return from the Episcopal general convention in Honolulu:

"If the Charleston Grass Roots League had been looking for a way to embarrass the Bishop of South Carolina and the thirteen fine clergymen, laymen, and women elected to represent the Diocese of South Carolina in General Convention at Honolulu they could not have chosen a better method than the one they used: preparing the brochure "Red Infiltration of the National Council (Episcopal Church)" and apparently mailing it to all members of the Convention throughout the United States. The brochure first came to my attention aboard the S.S. Lurline between Los Angeles and Honolulu and this is the first opportunity I have had to reply.

"The convention took no official notice of the pamphlet. Not one of the eight hundred bishops and deputies, clergymen and laymen, considered it of sufficient importance to bring it before either house of the Convention. They evidently followed the advice of a deputy in one of our national weeklies: "For the Deputies' Wastebasket." But it caused great embarrassment to the South Carolina people. Members of the Convention came to us for explanations: Who wrote this pamphlet? What is the Grass Roots League? What is its purpose? Is it an organization of the Church? Is it a subversive organization intent upon destroying the Church? How could the cultured City of Charleston bring forth a brochure like this? What kind of bishop are you to allow such a thing? A delegate facetiously asked me, 'When will you be available to autograph copies?'

"What the motive was in making this attack on our church—its National Council and its clergy—and smearing it in the community, is difficult to understand. Our church is national in extent, covering the entire United States. That it should contain varying views on the race question is to be taken for granted. Branding as "communist" those who disagree with the League on this matter certainly adds nothing to the solution of this problem. To undermine the confidence of people in their church leaders is to strike a blow at the very foundation of society. Still more amazing is the choice of some of the persons singled out in the brochure for attack: Cynthia Wedel, probably the most popular woman in the Episcopal Church, teacher at Kanuga Adult Conference last summer, presiding officer at the National Woman's Auxiliary Triennial Convention in Honolulu; Dr. Theodore Wedel, frequent visitor to Charleston, one of our ablest theologians, chosen by his fellow deputies, laymen and clergymen, at Honolulu to be president for the second time of the House of Deputies of General Convention.

"The brochure's picture of the National Council is a distortion of the worst kind. To brand the National Council as a communist front is ridiculous. The National Council is elected by the representatives of the people of the Church: the House of Bishops, the House of Deputies, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Provincial Synods. It is, therefore, fully representative of the whole church. Membership on it is considered a high honor. It has had among its members in recent years such bishops as Oliver J. Hart, Bishop of Pennsylvania, and Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York; such clergymen as George Alexander, rector of Trinity Church, Columbia, South Carolina; such laymen as Champion Davis, President of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and Dr. Edward McCrady, vice-chancellor of the University of the South, Sewanee; and such women as Mrs. Francis O. Clarkson of Charlotte.

"The attempt to classify the executive body of the Episcopal Church as a communist front to the intelligent Episcopalian is absurd. Among the uninformed and the gullible both in and out of the Church it can do great damage."

Talmadge Warns Schools Would Fall On Adverse Decision In Georgia Case

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has condemned the outspoken and uncompromising advocacy of segregated schools by Governors Herman Talmadge of Georgia, James F. Byrnes of South Carolina and Hugh White of Mississippi.

An all-out battle on segregation in the South was launched at a series of meetings attended by high officials of the NAACP in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

Walter White, executive secretary of the organization, and Thurgood Marshall, general counsel, sparked the gatherings to raise funds for more lawsuits and to secure additional members.

White, addressing a rally in his honor in Atlanta, frothed at the mouth because of Governor Talmadge's announcement that he will use whatever force is necessary to prevent a mixing of the races in Georgia schools.

The NAACP leader contended that "enlightened Southern opinion" will reject the leadership of Talmadge and Byrnes and that Southerners "will bow down and accept a decision outlawing segregation."

Regardless of the nature of the decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court, White said, the NAACP has just begun its fight to

Housing Next

If segregation is outlawed, he said, the NAACP will launch a fight against segregated housing to prevent continued segregation through gerrymandered school districts.

Discussing the possible outcome of the Supreme Court test of segregation, White classified Southern people into three groups.

"The first class is composed of those who are determined to keep segregation at all cost. Governor Talmadge of Georgia, Governor Byrnes of South Carolina and Governor Hugh White of Mississippi are foremost in this group. These people will resort to tactical delays to combat an anti-segregation ruling by the Supreme Court," he elaborated.

"The second class is composed of the people 'in between.' These are the people who would be mildly opposed to ending segregation or any form of change, but who would peacefully accept the dictates of the Court.

"The third group of people are those who are aware that segregation is close to its end. They feel that ethically and economically the doctrine of 'separate but equal' would be impractical."

White predicted the latter two groups will outweigh and overcome the former, forcing a mixing of the races throughout the South.

Gowen Hit

The NAACP chieftain scoffed at the proposal of Gubernatorial Candidate Charles Gowen to confer on county school superintendents the authority and responsibility of assigning pupils to separate schools.

"He should see a lawyer," White quipped.

I am gratified that efforts have been made to draw me into the governor's race on one side or another by friends of avowed candidates. It is a clear indication of the success of any administration for the support of an outgoing governor to be considered an asset, rather than a liability.

Three Points The Atlanta press last week has raised three points upon which I should like to make my position crystal clear:

1. That certain State officials are alleged to have solicited funds for the benefit of gubernatorial candidates; and,

2. That employees of the State have been sampling public opinion or conducting what is commonly termed "political polls;" and,

3. "Rumors" have it that I am "committed" to this candidate or that candidate for governor.

Let us take these up one by one and dispose of them in the order in which they are presented:

1. I condemn wholeheartedly the solicitation of funds or any other political activity by employees who are under State Merit System regulations which prohibit it. I think it is bad policy and also should not be indulged in by those who are not covered by the system.

2. The so-called "political polls" constitute an ancient art and always have been with us around campaign time. No one questions the fact that every American citizen under our Constitution has the unqualified right to speak his mind and ask questions about any public issue which he might desire. Whether the so-called "political polls" are honorable or dishonorable, depends upon whose interests are being served.

3. It is only natural that when several friends of a governor have ambition, that mutual friends try to draw the chief executive into the fray on one side or another. Such activities cause the operation of a constant "rumor mill."

Speak For Self No one is authorized to speak for me on any subject.

I do my own talking.

I make up my own mind.

When I get ready to issue a political statement, I shall be forthright about it so that, as has always been the case, there will be no doubt in anyone's mind exactly where I stand.

The Democratic Primary will be held on Wednesday, September 8.

This means that the election is more than six months away.

We will not know who the final candidates are and what their platforms will be until after the entries close, July 3rd.

It is folly to say that political commitments can be made

Thurgood Marshall, general counsel for the NAACP, also predicted acceptance of a ruling destroying segregation, saying "the people of Georgia will accept the decision—they are just as lawful as people in any other state." He contended Governor Talmadge isn't "speaking for anybody but himself."

"Within 10 years we can break down legal segregation in this country," the negro lawyer said. "Those who will stand up and be counted on the side of freedom can help make museum pieces of jim-crow signs by backing the NAACP with green money."

Expanding Industry Keeps Labor Force On Production Jobs

A bright ray of hope appeared on the Georgia economic horizon last week.

State Commissioner of Labor Ben T. Huiet reported that for the first time this year the number of jobless persons filing claims for job insurance in Georgia dropped. He said it "may be a straw in the wind."

This undoubtedly can be traced to Georgia's industrial growth and the establishment of new industries within the state.

Mr. Huiet states that a special effort is being put forth in all the 33 State Employment Service Offices to fill every available job opening. During the first week in this month employers hired 2638 persons through the local offices.

"Some employers who have been able to furnish only a little work to their employees and who were filing partial claims for them while working on short time have now resumed full time employment and are no longer filing claims," Huiet said.

"The usual seasonal up turn which occurs about this time of the year should further brighten employment prospects in Georgia," he added.

Some 270 new or expanded plants with $50,000 or more initial investment began operations in Georgia during the past 12 months. These plants have furnished employment to approximately 14,800 and brought 50 million additional dollars in payrolls with them.

While the population of Georgia has continued to increase at a normal rate, the non-farm employment in the State has risen more rapidly. Non-farm employment in Georgia averaged 786,600 in 1950 and this total rose to over 917,500 an increase of 17% in December of 1953.

"Total wages and salaries of Georgia workers last year amounted to 2.8 billion dollars. With the expanded and new industrial plants coming into the state and assuming that the normal seasonal pattern is followed, the 1954 figure would be expected to exceed the 3 billion mark," he concluded.

We've Only Begun To Fight For An Adequate Constitutional Amendment

By FRANK E. HOLMAN

(Former President, American Bar Association)

The fight for an adequate constitutional amendment to protect American rights and the American form of government against the dangers of treaties and other international agreements has only just begun. The first round is over, but only the first round. If necessary, it will be a twenty-round bout.

A motion for reconsideration of Senator George's text of Amendment has been duly made in the Senate. If successful (which only takes a majority vote) and the George substitute is thereafter finally passed, the matter then will go to the House of Representatives in that form, where efforts can be made to strengthen the George text.

If this procedure does not succeed, Senator Bricker has said that he will immediately introduce, after proper consultation with his supporters, a new resolution for a constitutional amendment on treaties and other international agreements, and in one or the other of the foregoing circumstances the second round of the great fight will begin. Often the greatest victory comes after the loss of one or more initial skirmishes.

The great constitutional debate in the Senate on the various proposed texts of a constitutional amendment has served to educate millions of Americans and alert them to the dangers of "treaty law". Except for the unconstitutional interference of the President in a purely legislative process of government, an adequate amendment could have been passed. It would have been passed anyhow except for such Republicans as Senators Wiley, Ferguson, Knowland, Saltonstall, Upton, and Flanders who chose to placate the State Department and follow the Dulles-Acheson school of internationalism—who were joined in their 350,000 negroes voted in primaries."

Savannah Conference

As a prelude to the Atlanta meeting, the Southeastern Regional Conference of the NAACP was held in Savannah.

One fact is clear from both the Savannah and Atlanta meetings. The same little, anti-white primary, anti-county unit, anti-segregation crowd, who are opposing Governor Herman Talmadge for his insistence upon maintaining separate schools in Georgia, are following the line laid down in a resolution adopted by the NAACP conference in Savannah.

According to the Pittsburgh COURIER, the 200 delegates attending from seven Southern states voted that:

"every utterance of Governors White, Talmadge and Byrnes be condemned for advocating the abolition of the public schools in their respective states if the Supreme Court rules against segregation because this type of thinking is un-Christian, uncivilized and undemocratic."

Socialistic Trend Seen

One of the speakers at the Savannah NAACP meeting foresaw and predicted the development of a socialistic society in the South in the event of a court ruling overthrowing educational segregation. Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, said such a decision would turn the South into "one of the most liberal and progressive areas of the world."

That thought was echoed and amplified by a negro educator and the associate director of the Ford Foundation.

Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College in Atlanta and a columnist for the Pittsburgh Courier, predicted that the negro race will be the winner even if the Supreme Court upholds the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities. He reasoned that such a decision "will be tantamount to saying to the nation that you must spend billions of dollars and spend it quickly to try to do the impossible—make two things equal in every area of life." He ventured that it would provoke "thousands of suits" over the nation demanding equality in swimming pools, golf courses, parks, travel, recreation, restaurants, waiting rooms and the like.

And if segregation should be declared unconstitutional, Mays said, the ruling will be "the first step toward integrated citizenship."

Mixed Society

Speaking in St. Louis, Robert M. Hutchins of the Ford Foundation said racial segregation in schools is "doomed for economic and legal as well as for moral reasons." He stated that "the burden of double facilities cannot be maintained." He predicted a ruling overturning separate facilities for the races will be accepted without violence.

Phillip Hammer, executive secretary of the Committee of the South and former director of the Atlanta Metropolitan Planning Commission, meanwhile foresaw doom for separate schools and observed that efforts to circumvent an adverse court decision "won't last as long as the white primaries."

"I believe an attempt will be made in at least three Southern states for a system of private schools," Mr. Hammer said.

"But the threat is primarily a politically motivated one. The legislatures will not go through with it should it be put before them."

Citing the "tremendous social feeling that separate schools are prohibitively costly and difficult to maintain."

Clement Eats

Atlanta's negro member of the Board of Education, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, later in the week had lunch with and spoke to members of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce. He predicted Southerners will take "a sober second thought" and become convinced that supporting separate but equal schools for negroes in "an economic impossibility."

"In spite of the law and decisions of the Supreme Court you and I know that schools for negroes and whites are not equal, by almost any yardstick you might want to use," he said.

"If the South should attempt to provide two equal school systems for whites and negroes it would become bankrupt. It simply would not be able to finance them."

As proof of his contention that an end to segregation would be accepted, the negro educator claimed negroes are being admitted to colleges and universities "in 12 of the 17 Southern states" without incident. He claimed the final answer to the issue of segregation revolves around two questions:

"Are we a law-abiding people? Are we willing to give a sober second thought to the problem or are we willing to be pushed pell mell into making decisions before we know all the facts?

"And do we have the wise leadership in the South that will help the people make that sober second thought? I am sure we do. I would rest my case on the leadership of thoughtful Southern citizens."

Mixed Society Seen

The same day a white educator, Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the University of North Carolina Department of Sociology, told the Southern Sociological Society of which he is president there will be a gradual mixing of the races in the South regardless of how the Supreme Court rules. He cited as his authority a survey made by the mean Georgia would be left without power to levy taxes for educational purposes.

He explained this as follows:

"Our State Constitution in Article VII, Section II, Paragraph I provides that the powers of taxation over the whole state shall be exercised by the General Assembly for certain named purposes only, among which is "for educational purposes."

"That same Article of our Constitution in Section IV provides that the General Assembly shall NOT have power to delegate to any county the right to levy taxes except for certain definite purposes among which is 'for educational purposes, as provided in Article VIII of the Constitution of Georgia.'

"ARTICLE VIII of our State Constitution is the foundation stone of our public school system. It provides:

" 'The provision of an adequate education for the citizens shall be a primary obligation of the State of Georgia the expenses of which shall be provided for by taxation. Separate schools shall be provided for the white and colored races.

"From a studied examination of the above cited provisions of our Georgia Constitution, it is perfectly clear without any doubt that the authority of counties to levy taxes for the support of mixed schools is specifically barred by Article VIII. While it is not as clear in reference to state taxation, the best legal opinion is that the power of the state to tax under such circumstances is similarly limited.

"IF THE SUPREME COURT of the United States should decide—contrary to a long line of established and heretofore unquestioned decisions — that such 'separate schools' are violative of the Constitution of the United States, then the State of Georgia, by the force and effect of that decision of the United States Supreme Court, and the counties of Georgia, would be left without any power under the terms of our State Constitution to levy taxes for educational purposes.

"This means that an adverse decision of the United States Supreme Court in a Georgia case would of itself destroy our public school system in this State and it would prohibit the General Assembly from levying taxes for support of mixed schools."

Talmadge then concluded:

"If the public school system of the State of Georgia is ever harmed, it will not be by my hands, which have fought for and nurtured it to the highest state of perfection ever known in history, but will be by the Supreme Court of the United States whose members might fail to regard the evil and unending harmful effects of a purely political decision."

impossible—make two things equal in every area of life." He ventured that it would provoke "thousands of suits" over the nation demanding equality in swimming pools, golf courses, parks, travel, recreation, restaurants, waiting rooms and the like.

And if segregation should be declared unconstitutional, Mays said, the ruling will be "the first step toward integrated citizenship."

Mixed Society

Speaking in St. Louis, Robert M. Hutchins of the Ford Foundation said racial segregation in schools is "doomed for economic and legal as well as for moral reasons." He stated that "the burden of double facilities cannot be maintained." He predicted a ruling overturning separate facilities for the races will be accepted without violence.

Phillip Hammer, executive secretary of the Committee of the South and former director of the Atlanta Metropolitan Planning Commission, meanwhile foresaw doom for separate schools and observed that efforts to circumvent an adverse court decision "won't last as long as the white primaries."

"I believe an attempt will be made in at least three Southern states for a system of private schools," Mr. Hammer said.

"But the threat is primarily a politically motivated one. The legislatures will not go through with it should it be put before them."

Citing the "tremendous social effect" of an adverse decision on segregation, Hammer urged quiet acceptance of the same, saying:

"This problem could be met by rational thinking on the part of all racial groups involved. It could be met without any violence and probably will be."

During the summer of 1953, Mr. Hammer took a three-months' leave from his duties as chief of the Committee of the South to direct an intensive study for the Ford Education Foundation Fund. This study was concerned with segregation in the schools of the South.

The group studied segregation as it exists in the various states, some 17 in number with 70% of the entire negro population within the United States.

Propaganda Pamphlet

The Southern Regional Council, an organization with the principal purpose of bringing about a mixing of the races, has issued a pamphlet for distribution to school and church groups entitled, "The Schools and the Courts." The publication has three main points:

"1. a court ruling against segregation in the public schools would simply mean that children must be admitted without regard to race to the schools serving their district.

"2. under the segregated housing arrangements found in most Southern cities, few schools would be effected . . . rather integration would grow in the schools along with increased integration in the community as a whole.

"3. in parts of the South where the negro population is small there appears to be a growing know that schools for negroes and whites are not equal, by almost any yardstick you might want to use," he said.

"If the South should attempt to provide two equal school systems for whites and negroes it would become bankrupt. It simply would not be able to finance them."

As proof of his contention that an end to segregation would be accepted, the negro educator claimed negroes are being admitted to colleges and universities "in 12 of the 17 Southern states" without incident. He claimed the final answer to the issue of segregation revolves around two questions:

"Are we a law-abiding people? Are we willing to give a sober second thought to the problem or are we willing to be pushed pell mell into making decisions before we know all the facts?

"And do we have the wise leadership in the South that will help the people make that sober second thought? I am sure we do. I would rest my case on the leadership of thoughtful Southern citizens."

Mixed Society Seen

The same day a white educator, Dr. Guy B. Johnson of the University of North Carolina Department of Sociology, told the Southern Sociological Society of which he is president there will be a gradual mixing of the races in the South regardless of how the Supreme Court rules. He cited as his authority a survey made by the Society.

Predicting the U. S. Supreme Court will "hold against segregation in the public schools," Johnson declared "there will be no mass mingling of the races in Southern city public schools."

The speaker said he based this on the fact that urban negroes have their own distinct communities and "have no consuming desire to go to school with white pupils . . .

"Mixing of the races will, however, come about sooner in the rural schools because the burden of trying to finance equalized country schools would be too great."

Governor Issues Warning

Meanwhile many prominent lawyers throughout the State have written expressing agreement with a statement made recently by Governor Talmadge pointing out that under the Georgia Constitution public schools will be abolished immediately upon the issuance of an adverse ruling by the Supreme Court in a Georgia case. Such a decision, he said, would among which is 'for educational purposes, as provided in Article VIII of the Constitution of Georgia.'

"ARTICLE VIII of our State Constitution is the foundation stone of our public school system. It provides:

" 'The provision of an adequate education for the citizens shall be a primary obligation of the State of Georgia the expenses of which shall be provided for by taxation. Separate schools shall be provided for the white and colored races.

"From a studied examination of the above cited provisions of our Georgia Constitution, it is perfectly clear without any doubt that the authority of counties to levy taxes for the support of mixed schools is specifically barred by Article VIII. While it is not as clear in reference to state taxation, the best legal opinion is that the power of the state to tax under such circumstances is similarly limited.

"IF THE SUPREME COURT of the United States should decide—bly from levying taxes for support of mixed schools."

Talmadge then concluded:

"If the public school system of the State of Georgia is ever harmed, it will not be by my hands, which have fought for and nurtured it to the highest state of perfection ever known in history, but will be by the Supreme Court of the United States whose members might fail to regard the evil and unending harmful effects of a purely political decision."

Senate Committee Hears Charges Of Communist Activity In South

SCEF Officials, Durrs Stoutly Deny Accusations

Former Communists Testify Under Oath; Two Miamians Invoke Fifth Amendment

NEW ORLEANS—Two officials of the Southern Conference Education Fund and a former member of the Federal Communications Commission stoutly denied sworn accusations of communism leveled at them by two former communists before a Congressional hearing here last week.

Two prominent Miamians invoked the fifth amendment in refusing to answer committee queries about red ties.

The charges were made at a hearing conducted by Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) for the U. S. Senate Internal Security Committee by Paul Crouch, a former high official and organizer for the American Communist Party and now an agent for the U. S. Immigration Service, and John Butler, a Dallas, Texas, nursery operator.

They made charges against Aubrey W. Williams, president of the SCEF and director of the National Youth Administration during the

Asked, "Have you ever accepted Communist discipline?" he answered:

"No, never knowingly."

He passed up the question—"Do you still think that it is all right for a Communist to be employed by the United States Government?"

Asked: "Do you state here and now, without equivocation, and to your certain knowledge that Mr. Dombrowski is a Communist and a member of the Communist party?"

Butler turned and, facing Dombrowski, stated flatly:

"I do."

When Dombrowski took the stand he refused to reveal the names of the contributors to the SCEF which he directs. He invoked the first, fifth, sixth and eighth constitutional amendments as grounds for his stand.

Asked if he were or ever had been a communist, Dombrowski replied, "I never have." He denied having ever seen Butler or that "anyone ever introduced me as a communist." He did admit being a Socialist while a student at Union Theological Seminary.

Dombrowski admitted signing a petition requesting clemency for the 12 top Communist leaders convicted in New York but refused to tell how he received the petition or whether he knew the identity of his co-signers. He gave a long defense of his action and concluded:

"I see no reason for imprisoning people for a long time for Committee Counsel Richard Arens interrupted his cross-examination of Crouch to ask:

"Is Mr. Durr a Communist?"

"I do not know whether he still is, " Crouch replied.

"Do you know that he was?"

"Yes."

Durr insisted upon being sworn as a witness and denied Crouch's accusation as "absolutely false."

"I am not a Communist, I have never been a Communist and I have no intentions of ever becoming a Communist."

The following questions and answers between committee lawyers and Durr then ensued:

Q—Were you not president of the National Lawyers Guild in 1948?

A—Yes and I'm proud of my association with the Guild.

Q—Did you know that it was cited by a special committee of the House Un-American Activities Committee as a communist-front organization?

"Present Federal-State-Local Tax Burden About All People Can Stand"—TALMADGE

Georgians are paying about all the taxes—federal, state and local—they can possibly stand, Governor Herman Talmadge told the annual convention of the Georgia Education Association meeting in Atlanta last Friday night.

The chief executive reminded the teachers that during his administration their salaries have been increased 125% and the budget for common school education from $37,000,000 to more than $100,000,000. He reiterated the fact that Georgia is spending 53% of its income for education, a greater percentage than any other state.

He added that the State government is providing 85% of the cost of operation of the common schools and advised the educators that they "must look to their local city and county governments for any future sizeable outlays of funds."

The governor reviewed the manifold educational progress which has been made during the course of his administration but warned that the five segregation cases now before the Supreme Court might place all of these gains in jeopardy in the event of an adverse decision by the Court.

Governor Talmadge frankly stated that "no amount of gerrymanme over there—it was at the time we joined hands, you and I, to pull Georgia educational standards up literally by our bootstraps.

At that time Georgia rested squarely on the bottom of the barrel in over-all educational performance. Now I am happy to join with you in justifiable pride over the fact that the Minimum Foundation Program, fully implemented, has brought us a common school and University System educational and building program which is the envy of the whole South and which has created na-

SCEF Officials, Durrs Stoutly Deny Accusations

Former Communists Testify Under Oath; Two Miamians Invoke Fifth Amendment

NEW ORLEANS—Two officials of the Southern Conference Education Fund and a former member of the Federal Communications Commission stoutly denied sworn accusations of communism leveled at them by two former communists before a Congressional hearing here last week.

Two prominent Miamians invoked the fifth amendment in refusing to answer committee queries about red ties.

The charges were made at a hearing conducted by Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) for the U. S. Senate Internal Security Committee by Paul Crouch, a former high official and organizer for the American Communist Party and now an agent for the U. S. Immigration Service, and John Butler, a Dallas, Texas, nursery operator.

They made charges against Aubrey W. Williams, president of the SCEF and director of the National Youth Administration during the early terms of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt; Dr. James A. Dombrowski, executive director of the SCEF; Clifford J. Durr, a Montgomery, Ala., attorney and former FCC member; Miami Attorney Leo Scheiner; Miami Contractor Max Schlafrock; and Mrs. Durr, sister-in-law of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

Williams, Dombrowski and the Durrs categorically denied any red affiliations under oath. Scheiner and Schlafrock invoked the self-incriminatory clauses of the Fifth Amendment as grounds for refusing to answer questions regarding their background and activities.

Citations Possible

Senator Eastland said contempt citations or perjury charges may be brought by the full committee to determine whether the accused or the accusers lied under oath and punish those who refused to answer questions. He said the hearings will be continued in Birmingham in June.

Williams, editor of the Southern Farm and Home Magazine published at Montgomery, Ala., objected to testifying on grounds that the subpoena against him was issued in violation of the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press. He was questioned regarding his affiliation with the Southern Negro Youth Congress, the Workers Alliance, the American Committee for the Foreign Born, the American Youth Congress, the Civil Rights Congress, the Civil Rights Committee, the Atlantic Pact, the Mid-Century Conference for Peace, the National Negro Congress, the American Crusade to End Lynching, the East Information Center, the Progressive Citizens of America, and the World Peace Appeal.

He replied that he was "a sponsor of many things." He said he could "not recall" any identification with most of them. He acknowledged affiliation with the Progressive Citizens of America, the Civil Rights Congress and the Civil Rights Committee but said he had asked his name be stricken from the membership of the latter.

Williams Denial

Asked, "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" Williams replied:

"No, never."

Asked, "Have you ever accepted Communist discipline?" he answered:

"No, never knowingly."

He passed up the question—"Do you still think that it is all right for a Communist to be employed by the United States Government?"

Crouch, when asked "During the time of your membership in the Communist Party, did you have an occasion to make the acquaintance of Williams?" answered:

"Yes, sir. I met him several times. The first meeting with Williams was in the Department of Commerce in Washington. There I met him in the rear of the platform at a meeting. I was introduced to Williams by Herman Benjamin, a charter member of the Communist Party and one of the chief national leaders.

"At that meeting I was introduced as the district organizer and vice president of the Unemployed League. I talked to him about the Unemployed Leagues. Mr. Williams said something to me about the merger giving a powerful organization.

"On the second occasion I met him it was in Birmingham in connection with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. That was at the city auditorium in 1938, I believe. At that time Williams was passing through.

"During the conversation I reported to Williams on the concentration of the Workers' Alliance and the Farmer's Union and the work being done. Williams asked the questions and commented but I don't remember what he said enough to quote him."

Crouch then was asked:

"Did Williams accept the discipline of the party?"

Crouch answered:

"Williams' record shows that it always coincided with the interest of the party. I would not have made statements to him unless I had been informed that he was a secret member."

Former Red Testifies

Butler testified he had been introduced to Williams by Alton Lawrence, communist labor union leader, while attending the Southern Negro Youth Conference with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in 1942. He quoted Lawrence as saying, "I want you to meet Comrade Williams."

Butler said he met Williams again at Bessemer, Ala.

"I heard his name mentioned time and time again as a Communist member," he testified.

Williams challenged Butler to make his statements outside the hearing room and subject himself to a libel suit. Butler said he would comply.

Butler further testified that he had met Dombrowski in Birmingham in July 1942.

"He was introduced to me as a party member. Alton Lawrence introduced him to me as a member of the party."

Asked: "Do you state here and now, without equivocation, and to your certain knowledge that Mr. Dombrowski is a Communist and a member of the Communist party?"

Butler turned and, facing Dombrowski, stated flatly:

"I do."

When Dombrowski took the stand he refused to reveal the names of the contributors to the SCEF which he directs. He invoked the first, fifth, sixth and eighth constitutional amendments as grounds for his stand.

Asked if he were or ever had been a communist, Dombrowski replied, "I never have." He denied having ever seen Butler or that "anyone ever introduced me as a communist." He did admit being a Socialist while a student at Union Theological Seminary.

Dombrowski admitted signing a petition requesting clemency for the 12 top Communist leaders convicted in New York but refused to tell how he received the petition or whether he knew the identity of his co-signers. He gave a long defense of his action and concluded:

"I see no reason for imprisoning people for a long time for teaching. I would have mercy for Communists. I would have mercy for all people. That is the way I feel."

Dombrowski Explains

Dombrowski admitted that "communists may have participated in meetings" of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare with which he also was affiliated, and that he was aware that "claims" had been made that the Conference "was the communist party's transmission belt."

He was asked about his affiliation with the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign-Born, the American Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the People's Institute of Applied Religion, the Southern Negro Youth Congress, the International Workers Order, the American Committee for Indonesian Independence, the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Continental Congress for Peace, the American Peace Crusade, the World Peace Appeal, and the Citizens Committee for the Preservation of Freedom.

To the question, "What's your policy? How do you take up with so many organizations?" he replied:

"If an organization has an objective and a program which seems to be a good one, I never hesitate to contribute."

Asked if he knew the organizations named had been identified as communist dominated or communist fronts by the U. S. House and California Un-American Activities committee, Dombrowski answered:

"It may seem strange to you, but there are still some people in the country who are not frightened by a label. I believe that America is losing what made it strong. People are beginning to be afraid to express an opinion that is different."

He said it would have made no difference in his attitude had he known the organizations had been cited.

Durr Questioned

Durr, who came to the hearing as attorney for Williams, was brought into the picture when Committee Counsel Richard Arens interrupted his cross-examination of Crouch to ask:

"Is Mr. Durr a Communist?"

"I do not know whether he still is, " Crouch replied.

"Do you know that he was?"

"Yes."

Durr insisted upon being sworn as a witness and denied Crouch's accusation as "absolutely false."

"I am not a Communist, I have never been a Communist and I have no intentions of ever becoming a Communist."

The following questions and answers between committee lawyers and Durr then ensued:

Q—Were you not president of the National Lawyers Guild in 1948?

A—Yes and I'm proud of my association with the Guild.

Q—Did you know that it was cited by a special committee of the House Un-American Activities Committee as a communist-front organization?

A—I know it had subsequently been attacked by the House Un-American Activities Committee. I had consistently attacked the activities of the House Committee since the days of Martin Dies as a threat to the country.

Q—Did you know it was cited by the California Committee in 1943?

A—I do not recall but it wouldn't have made the slightest difference."

Durr denied he had been active with the Progressive Party of Virginia but admitted that his wife had been a candidate for the U. S. Senate on the Henry Wallace Ticket. He admitted attending the World Conference of Intellectuals of Poland in 1948 and the Waldorf Conference the next year but refused to name those with whom he attended.

Durr Restrained

On the final day of hearings Durr had to be restrained from attacking Crouch when he testified Mrs. Durr had 'full knowledge of the Communist conspiracy."

He charged that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare could not have been organized had not Joseph S. Gelders, an undercover communist who was intimate with President Roosevelt, persuaded Mrs. Roosevelt to speak at the initial organization meeting and obtained a letter endorsing it from President Roosevelt while Mrs. Durr talked Justice Black into speaking at the same meeting.

"They all told me that the President and his wife in no way suspected them of being communists, and none of my testimony should be interpreted to reflect on Black, but his sister-in-law had full knowledge of the Communist conspiracy," Crouch said.

Mrs. Durr denied that she is or has been a Communist but refused to answer any other questions unless allowed to read a prepared statement. Her request was denied.

Scheiner was described by Crouch as the man designated "to be the secret head the Florida Communist Party should it elect to go underground." He refused to answer questions on grounds of self-incrimination as did Schlafrock. Scheiner was ejected from the hearing when he attempted to read a prepared statement.

Also ejected was Myles Horton, founder of the Hilander Folk School of Monteagle, Tenn., which was identified by Crouch "as a recruiting agency for the Communist Party." Both Williams and Dombrowski admitted connections with the school.

"Present Federal-State-Local Tax Burden About All People Can Stand"—TALMADGE

Georgians are paying about all the taxes—federal, state and local—they can possibly stand, Governor Herman Talmadge told the annual convention of the Georgia Education Association meeting in Atlanta last Friday night.

The chief executive reminded the teachers that during his administration their salaries have been increased 125% and the budget for common school education from $37,000,000 to more than $100,000,000. The governor reviewed the manifold educational progress which has been made during the course of his administration but warned that the five segregation cases now before the Supreme Court might place all of these gains in jeopardy in the event of an adverse decision by the Court.

Governor Talmadge frankly stated that "no amount of gerrymandering or legal fiction" can delay the enforcement of such a decision in a proper case involving Georgia.

He declared that he would be loathe to see Georgia's educational system shifted from a public to a private base, but he declared that he would recommend that step to the Georgia Education Commission "as a lesser evil than that of mixed schools."

The Commission, the governor said, was created at his request to evolve a definite and final plan of action to meet any adverse decision which might be handed down by the Court.

Foundation Program Continued

He pledged to continue the Minimum Foundation Program with its merit raises for improved qualifications and seniority "unabated insofar as the resources of the state will permit" and strive "with might and main" to make further increases and improvements in keeping with the ability of the state to do so.

However, he cautioned that his first consideration during the remainder of his term will be "to guard jealously Georgia's solvency and credit."

"Never again do I want to see Georgia's teachers hoodwinked by irresponsible political promises or paid in worthless scrip instead of dollars," he concluded.

Address Text

Following are excerpts from Gov. Talmadge's address to the GEA:

MISS BRADFORD, PRESIDENT CUTTS, PRESIDENT-ELECT SPRAYBERRY, DR. COLLINS, DR. CALDWELL, DISTINGUISHED EDUCATORS AND MY FRIENDS OF THE GEORGIA EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.

This is the fourth time during my term as Governor that you have extended me the courtesy of meeting here with you, sharing pride in the substantial gains that we have made working together and looking forward with confidence and hope to the future.

I recall that we met in 1949 at the Wesley Memorial Church here. You were kind enough to invite me over there—it was at the time we joined hands, you and I, to pull Georgia educational standards up literally by our bootstraps.

Talmadge Cites Marilyn Haar For Bravery

Governor Herman Talmadge announced Monday that he has recommended Miss Marilyn Haar of Savannah, 19-year-old daughter of the late State Representative Ernest J. Haar, to receive the 1953 Young American Medal for Bravery.

Miss Haar is credited with saving the lives of four persons besides herself when her father's yacht capsized in stormy seas off the Georgia Coast last July 3. She made repeated dives into the turbulent waters to find exits of escape for her mother, R. Maurice Seybold and Misses Virginia Davis and Lois McKeethan.

Her father and Mrs. Seybold perished in the disaster.

Two Young American Medals for Bravery are awarded each year by authorization of Congress to those American youths who have distinguished themselves by valiant deeds. The awards are presented by the President in ceremonies at the White House.

Governor Talmadge made his nomination to the U. S. Department of Justice where a selections committee will announce the winners sometime after April 30.

"The courage and decisive action of Miss Haar whose first thought in the face of death was the safety of her family and friends is in keeping with the highest ideals of the American tradition and Christian faith," Governor Talmadge's citation read.

"Her heroism is the epitome of the requirements set forth by the Congress for reward by receipt of the Young American Medal for Bravery. The people of Georgia are proud to call Miss Haar a native daughter and pray to the committee that her noble deeds be accorded the recognition they deserve."

Talmadge stated he had hoped also to recommend Polly Callenback, seven-year-old Tiger, Ga., schoolgirl, who saved her two younger brothers and a sister from their burning home. However, investigation disclosed that her brave deed was done in November 1952, thus eliminating her from consideration for the 1953 medal.

Morehouse Chief Denies He's V. P. Of Probed Group

AR CONST 3-10-64

Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, named as a vice president of an organization being investigated by the Jenner committee for possible Communist activities, Tuesday denied he was an officer of the organization and said he had not been asked to testify at the committee's New Orleans hearing.

Mrs. Clifford J. Durr of Montgomery, wife of a former attorney for the Federal Communications Commisison, said she had ben subpoenaed along with Aubrey Williams, formerly of Georgia and a former director of the National Youth Administration. The Senate Internal Security subcommittee hearings on the Southern Conference Educational Fund have been set for March 15, 16 and 17.

"I am not a vice president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund," Mays said. "I am not a member of the board. I have no comment at all to make at this time. If I am called to appear before the committee I will make a statement then."

A subcommittee spokesman said subpoenas have been issued for all the officers except Mays so far.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DIDN'T CITE GROUP

Aide to Subcommittee Issued Erroneous Statement on Welfare Conference

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—The Justice Department said today the attorney general never cited the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare as a Communist front.

The Senate Internal Security subcommittee is planning hearings at New Orleans next week on the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., and a subcommittee aide said yesterday it had information that this group now includes the "majority of the leadership" of the former Southern Conference Human Welfare.

This aide, Frank Schroeder, erroneously stated that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare had been cited by the attorney general.

However, the House Un-American Activities Committee said it twice cited the conference as Communist-front, in 1944 and again in 1947.

The candidacy of 33-year-old Mildred Eberhard Younger is part of a definite campaign in this state to perpetuate the political dynasty of former Governor Earl Warren and to thwart the program of the present Governor Goodwin J. Knight. Certain vested interests who profited greatly financially from the Warren regime are not expected, of course, to give up without a struggle. The political bedfellows they are willing to accept in order to put over their campaign to elect a state senator from Los Angeles county into office is, however, really amazing. They are willing to put out of office a man of long experience and demonstrated great ability, Senator Jack B. Tenney, merely because he isn't a part of the plan to preserve the vested interests of the former regime.

Warren's position in public office, of course, was never a party position. It was based on a personal political machine, based on funds supplied by certain powerful interests. Politically it was operated on the theory that where Earl Warren's support came from was not important so long as he got elected. Principle didn't mean anything at all.

AT LEAST CONSISTENT

It can at least be said for the Communists, the fellow travelers and their obvious sympathizers, who have always opposed Senator Tenney, that they are at least consistent. His new opponents, however, have merely shifted their position because it suits their own ends.

This county now has an estimated population of 4,806,633, according to the latest figures of the county regional planning commission. At the present rate of growth it will be over 5,000,000 shortly after the next term for state senator will begin. Twenty-nine states of the 48 have smaller populations.

ENORMOUS TASK

This state senator has the enormous task of looking after the interests of this entire county in the upper house of the state legislature. No one else can speak for Los Angeles county on the floor of the State Senate. All of the bills which directly concern Los Angeles county individually must be carried by this one senator. He has to clear the legislation sent up to him from the 31 members of the State Assembly who come from Los Angeles county.

Obviously this is no easy job. It requires the greatest physical and mental stamina while the legislature is in session and a continuous year around study of the county's problems. One of the main difficulties faced by the senator from Los Angeles county during a regular session is just getting enough sleep in order to keep going.

EXPERIENCE BENEFIT

Senator Tenney is only able to do a thoroughly satisfactory job because of long experience. He has been in the legislature since 1937. The first few years of this service were in the Assembly so that by the time he became a senator he already had the background and training necessary to assume the heavy duties of being senator from Los Angeles county.

The difficulty with Mrs. Younger is that she has had no experience first in a less difficult political office. And as a result she will be dependent upon other persons who will have the power to control her vote without assuming the responsibility of the office.

FATHER LOBBYIST

Actually if she is elected the real state senator will be her father, Attorney Ray Eberhard, lobbyist for powerful interests in the state legislature. There is no question of his experience and adroit ability to further legislation he wants. He has been at it for more than a quarter of a century.

But we doubt if the people of Los Angeles county want to elect a figurehead for state senator and have the real power and influence exercised by an adroit lobbyist for powerful vested interests. That he was part and parcel of the old Warren royal family is indicated clearly by the fact that he was able to wangle municipal judgeship appointments for a daughter and the husband of the other daughter he now wants to make into a state senator.

OWN PLATFORM PROOF

Mrs. Younger's own platform, of which she is clearly not the author, is the most direct proof that we know of that this job of being state senator from Los Angeles county is one which requires previous training in public office or equivalent experience.

The planks in this platform are "immediate action towards smog control, simplification of local government, a long range water program, improvement of our inadequate public transportation system, speed up of freeway construction and further attention to school needs in the face of rapid population growth."

HIGHLY TECHNICAL

We would be willing to wager that the candidate knows little or nothing about any of these subjects with the possible exception of the last one. They are all highly technical and highly involved.

Anyone who has watched legislation at Sacramento knows, of course, that Papa Eberhard knows a lot about all of these subjects. But the people are not being asked to vote for Mr. Eberhard or the powerful interests behind him—or are they?

The name of the man who has the necessary training and experience should at least be on the ballot. And it will be in the person of Senator Tenney.

UNPLEASANT TASK

We would be the last to say that Senator Tenney has never made a mistake. No man who has held public office long has proved perfect. And when a man as Senator Tenney did has chosen to spend some years rooting out and exposing the filthy elements who would subvert and tear down our American government he cannot possibly come out of it without some mud on him.

This is why the voters need to be particularly discerning in a case of this kind. Otherwise they can easily get into office someone who would cover up and protect these subversive elements instead of exposing them. The reelection of Senator Tenney in this instance is particularly important as he faces the combined opposition of subversive elements seeking revenge plus certain self seeking powerful interests who want to make state government pay off for their own personal benefit.

$240,000 GRANT TO SRC

Announcement is made today of a $240,000 grant by the Fund for the Republic to the Southern Regional Council to finance an eighteen months program.

The Southern Regional Council, like its predecessor, the Southern Interracial Commission, is devoted to the belief that Southern people are best qualified to work out Southern problems.

Most of the $240,000 will be spent in twelve states by state divisions of the SRC, composed of leaders in each state who seek to work out problems in an atmosphere of cooperation and goodwill. We understand that each state division will be given the responsibility of employing its own professional staff, preferably from within its own borders.

The headquarters of the Southern Regional Council remains in Atlanta, under the able executive directorship of Dr. George S. Mitchell, with Marion A. Wright of South Carolina as president. Dr. Harold Fleming, who for several years has been furnishing informative articles on various Southern problems, is assistant director. The staff includes such outstanding persons as Mrs. M. E. Tilley, in charge of women's work. No woman is better known to the churchwomen of the South than Mrs. Tilley.

The most pressing problem with which the Council is likely to deal under the new $240,000 grant will have to do with the repercussions, if any, which may follow the forthcoming U.S. Supreme Court decision on segregation in public schools. The Council will assist each state division in meeting this issue in a spirit of good order and sound thinking.

The Council itself has not sought to bring pressure favoring any sort of an opinion from the courts. Whatever the Supreme Court decision may be, the Council and its state divisions will seek to work out the problems with respect for law and order in a manner to prevent strife and hasty action. And whatever is done under the $240,000 grant from the Fund for the Republic will be done by Southern people themselves.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN APRIL 12, 1954

Enlivening a Strong Voice

For 10 years in its own name the Southern Regional Council, successor to the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation, has exercised a progressive yet moderating influence on human relations in the South. The Council's friends are delighted to learn that its good work not only will go on but will be extended through a $240,000 grant from the Fund for the Republic.

The Fund was established in 1952 by the Ford Foundation and is "concerned with preserving and extending those individual rights which are the essence of the American heritage." To the extent those rights have meaning in the remarkable development of the modern South, the Fund's confidence in the Council is well placed. Indeed, it has seemed to many persons that established and respected channels through which this Southern body works have long merited this precise encouragement.

The Southern Regional Council has no ax to grind and serves no master save the collective conscience of its members and directors. It uses fact-finding, conference and persuasion methods to open up areas of equal opportunity for Southerners. Its facts are reliable. Its approach is realistic. Its influence, for example, has been profound in the easing of racial tensions and for further and contributory example in the extension of the franchise, hiring of Negro policemen, dropping of racial barriers in professional associations, and in bringing equal educational facilities to more young Southerners.

The Council is headed by a Carolinian, Marion A. Wright of Linville Falls. His predecessor was the distinguished Richmond attorney and Catholic layman, Paul D. Williams. The executive director is George D. Mitchell. These men, with other men and women all over the South, have helped to make the Southern Regional Council a spokesman for the area's best traditions of tolerance, humanity, dignity and freedom. Thanks to this wise investment, that voice can speak with renewed assurance

NEW YORK—Governor Herman Talmadge made a good will visit to New York City this week to boost Georgia's advantages for industrial and business development and to present the South's viewpoint to the nation.

The Georgia Chief Executive addressed The Traffic Club of New York at noon Wednesday. The organization is composed of 1,600 industrial traffic managers and representatives of rail, air, truck and steamship lines. He was invited as principal speaker before the Club's forum luncheon by President J. P. Dennis of The Texas Company.

During his stay in New York he appeared on three nationwide television programs and was interviewed by the nation's top jour-

Ford Foundation Makes Grant For Destruction Of Segregation In South

The Ford Foundation this week made a grant of nearly a quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council, an organization which has as its principal purpose the elimination of segregation in the South.

Announcement of the grant came Sunday from the Fund for the Republic, a Foundation subsidiary.

Formerly, the Southern Regional Council was financed in the main by substantial grants from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation.

The Rosenwald Fund devoted its major activities, according to a statement made by Dr. Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia, Chairman of its Board of Trustees, "to creation of equality between whites and negroes and to the promotion of interracial relations in the South."

Activity of Rosenwald Fund workers in the South during the late 30's and 40's was the first large-scale frontal attack on segregation.

● The Rosenwald Fund also financed in part the Southern Con-rected toward the complete elimination of segregation in Georgia and the South. That policy has been stated repeatedly in literature issued by the organization. It looks forward to an amalgamated region with no color distinction.

Excerpts from the Council's avowed statement of policy follow:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Concil can play more than a modest

Advantages On New York Visit

Following is the complete text of Gov. Herman Talmadge's luncheon address delivered to the New York Traffic Club last Wednesday:

PRESIDENT DENNIS, MEMBERS OF THE TRAFFIC CLUB OF NEW YORK AND MY FRIENDS:

To you of the Empire State I bring the warm greetings of the three and one-half million citizens of Georgia—The Empire State of the South.

I am not here as an apologist like some of my predecessors on the rostrums of the North and East.

Neither have I come as a critic.

I rather am here as an ambassador of a great state and a sturdy people.

All of us in the South, of which Georgia is the keystone and an important part, have made great progress in the last 20 years. The transition has been one from what was once considered the nation's number one "economic problem" to what is today considered the country's foremost opportunity.

Through toil and sweat today and planning and training for tomorrow, we, of Georgia, are pulling ourselves up by our own bootstraps. We have refused to leave our future to chance. Neither are we content to leave our reputation to erstwhile Southern purveyors of literary filth who would rather make a dollar than tell the whole truth.

We are deriving our strength through renewed faith in ourselves, our labors, our heritage, our destiny and our God.

The Georgia of today has come a long way from the ruinous devastation left by the War Between the States.

Our people are united as never before and are working tirelessly at the task of promoting job opportunities and a better living for all. As a result, Georgia and her sister states of the South are advancing at a faster rate than those in any other region.

We are diversifying our agriculture and balancing it with sound industry. Our doors are open wide to capital and labor so long as they come to join in full partnership in our development. We are extending a cordial welcome to this new Southward march.

Better Farm Methods

Georgia has corrected the mistakes of a one-crop economy based on cotton. We have dropped to sixth among the states in cotton production, although it is still our chief money crop. However, we have made our chief gains and are leading the nation in our harvests of peanuts, watermelons, pecans and pimientoes and our output of broiler chickens. We are second only to California in the growing of peaches and have increased our income from beef cattle 466 per cent in the past 12 years.

Our State ranks third in size among the leading textile manufacturing states of the nation and produces 75 per cent of the country's tire fabric. Its plants, in addition, are manufacturing cotton seed oil and meal, steel, machinery, automobiles, chemicals, fertilizers, clay products, cement, furniture, leather goods, candy, wearing apparel, processed meats and food and refined sugar.

The value of our manufactured products is approximately four billion dollars annually.

Plants Lead South

● Georgia led the entire South in industrial development last year with 270 new or expanded plants each representing an initial investment of more than $50,000. These factories are affording new employment to 15,000 persons and are adding $50,000,000 a year in payrolls to the State's economy. A typical example of this excellent new industry is the Rayonier Corporation's $25,000,000 plant at Jesup which will manufacture synthetic fibers from wood cellulose made from South Georgia pine trees.

These plants, for the most part, are locating in the smaller cities and towns, many of which previously had no industry. There they are being welcomed as new citizens and a valuable addition to the economy. They furnished for the first time ample opportunities to women workers in the towns and help round out the income of farm families. This new purchasing power means added markets for all kinds of manufactured products.

The word has spread and more and more firms are coming to Georgia. There is scarcely a major company which does not have a branch plant, warehouse or sales office in the State. The big companies have discovered that it is profitable business to process their goods in Georgia rather than shipping in as they are ordered.

These strides have meant corresponding increases in bank deposits and clearings and in the take-home pay and purchasing power of our citizens. They have been translated into new homes, a higher standard of living and the enjoyment of some of the better things of life.

State Leadership

There is no more accurate barometer of a state's progress than the accomplishments of its state government.

The old description used by some people when referring to Georgia of a Model-T Ford mired in the mud near a one-room schoolhouse overlooking eroded cotton fields does not apply today.

I am proud that I can report to you that during my term of office the State of Georgia has spent almost three-quarters of a billion dollars on permanent and lasting improvements.

The Georgia Legislature is appropriating 53 percent of our total annual revenue for educational purposes, a percentage unmatched by any other state in the Union. During my administration we have supplied more money for education than all preceding administrations combined since the public school system was founded in 1871.

We have added over one thou-

Governor Presents South's Viewpoint On National TV Programs

Speaks to Traffic Club of N. Y., Key Executives of Top Am. Business

NEW YORK—Governor Herman Talmadge made a good will visit to New York City this week to boost Georgia's advantages for industrial and business development and to present the South's viewpoint to the nation.

The Georgia Chief Executive addressed The Traffic Club of New York at noon Wednesday. The organization is composed of 1,600 industrial traffic managers and representatives of rail, air, truck and steamship lines. He was invited as principal speaker before the Club's forum luncheon by President J. P. Dennis of The Texas Company.

During his stay in New York he appeared on three nationwide television programs and was interviewed by the nation's top journalists at a press conference. Mrs. Talmadge was guest on two nationwide radio and television shows.

Talmadge's appearances were as guest for the Ted Collins "Cracker Barrel" interview on the Kate Smith Hour over the National Broadcasting Company Tuesday; on the Longine's Chronoscope of the Columbia Broadcasting System Wednesday, and the Dave Garroway Show, "Today" over the NBC-TV network, Thursday morning. Mrs. Talmadge was guest on the Maggie McNellis Show, a radio-television simulcast of the American Broadcasting Company, Tuesday, and Mutual Broadcasting System's Martha Deane Show Wednesday.

The Talmadge party included officials of the State Port Authority.

Transportation Cited

The Georgia Governor told the Traffic Club that the "most significant" factor in Georgia's tremendous current growth is its superior facilities for rail, air, highway and water transportation. He said the state is "the transportation and communications hub of the Southland" and as a result there is "scarcely a major company" which has not located a branch plant, warehouse or sales office within its boundaries.

Georgia, Talmadge said, is served by 37 railroads and 519 interstate motor carriers and the Atlanta airport is the "sixth busiest in the nation." The state is making "a comeback" as an ocean terminal, he stated, through the development of a state port at Savannah.

"Berth-for-berth it is the best-equipped ocean terminal in the South," the Georgia Chief Executive declared, "and is the nation's only state port standing on its own feet without a subsidy. . . .

"It is constructed and equipped to facilitate loading and unloading in minimum time. The wharf charges are lower than those charged in many states and are comparable to those charged in others. Our personnel is satisfied and willing to work and we have had no delays—and anticipate none. Neither is any time lost because of bad weather. . . . These are factors which add up to considerable savings to shipper and receiver alike."

Progress Detailed

Talmadge gave a detailed report of the progress made in Georgia during the past two decades and his six years in office. He told his hearers that he had come as "an ambassador of a great state and a sturdy people" rather than a critic or "an apologist like some of my predecessors on the rostrums of the North and East."

"Through toil and sweat today and planning and training for tomorrow, we, of Georgia, are pulling ourselves up by our own bootstraps. We have refused to leave our future to chance. Neither are we content to leave our reputation to erstwhile Southern purveyors of literary filth who would rather make a dollar than tell the whole truth.

"The Georgia of today has come a long way from the ruinous devastation left by the War Between the States. . . . The old description used by some people when referring to Georgia of a Model-T Ford mired in the mud near a one-room schoolhouse overlooking eroded cotton fields does not apply today."

Race relations in Georgia and the South, Talmadge explained, "are the best they have ever been in over half a century." He said Georgians believe that "unmolested and without outside dictation and interference, we can work out our problems to the best interests of all in Georgia."

Warns of Communism

He warned of the threat of communism and prescribed "certain positive steps" which must be taken to assure this country's future. He called for a bipartisan crusade to destroy communism in this country, the use of whatever force is necessary in the international struggle, the defining and limiting of federal taxation and giving of tax relief to individuals and business alike, the elimination of federal bureaucracy and return of government to the local level, the reaffirming of the doctrine of states' rights, the adoption of a sound, realistic federal budget, and a national resurgence of faith in God.

ANOTHER OIL WELL SLATED

W. E. Posey, LaFayette, Ga., has been granted a permit by the State Oil and Gas Commission to drill a test oil well on the property of Calvin Fowler in Walker County.

Ford Foundation Makes Grant For Destruction Of Segregation In South

The Ford Foundation this week made a grant of nearly a quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council, an organization which has as its principal purpose the elimination of segregation in the South.

Announcement of the grant came Sunday from the Fund for the Republic, a Foundation subsidiary.

Formerly, the Southern Regional Council was financed in the main by substantial grants from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation.

The Rosenwald Fund devoted its major activities, according to a statement made by Dr. Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia, Chairman of its Board of Trustees, "to creation of equality between whites and negroes and to the promotion of interracial relations in the South."

Activity of Rosenwald Fund workers in the South during the late 30's and 40's was the first large-scale frontal attack on segregation.

● The Rosenwald Fund also financed in part the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, an organization now defunct, but branded as a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

With the demise of the Rosenwald Fund, the Southern Regional Council lately has been existing on grants from individuals and certain out-of-state groups.

Since 1947, Dr. George S. Mitchell has headed up the Council as its Executive Director. Born in Richmond, Virginia, he came to Georgia in 1944 after lengthy federal government service in the Department of Interior, Department of Agriculture and Foreign Economic Administration during the New Deal years.

His first job after coming to Atlanta was Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee from which he became Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council.

Like the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the principal aim of the Southern Regional Council, since its formation, has been directed toward the complete elimination of segregation in Georgia and the South. That policy has been stated repeatedly in literature issued by the organization. It looks forward to an amalgamated region with no color distinction.

Excerpts from the Council's avowed statement of policy follow:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Concil can play more than a modest but creditable part towards its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we strive and, short of which, we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

A list of active officers of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was published in the SOUTHERN PATRIOT, official organ of that organization, in its issue of December 1948. The list included the name of Dr. George S. Mitchell on its top-level "Board of Representatives."

Branding the Southern Conference for Human Welfare a Communist-front, the House Committee on Un-American Activities, in its report on that organization dated June 12, 1947 concluded:

"In the light of the fact that a significant number of the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare are associated with organizations or campaigns for the defense of the

Conserving Soil Concerns Us All

"Soil conservation is everybody's business," declared Gov. Herman Talmadge in an address before a recent meeting of the board of supervisors of the Ocmulgee Soil Conservation District at Perry. Said the farmer-governor:

"It cannot be said with reason or truth that soil conservation is a matter for only the farmers. Soil conservation is everybody's business. It concerns every one of us and demands our interest and attention. Those who might think otherwise, I challenge to name even one necessity of life which does not have its origin in the soil.

"It is the soil which puts the meat and potatoes on our tables. It is the soil which produces the clothing we wear and the automobiles in which we ride. It is the soil which yields the materials of which our homes are made."

Although the actual work of soil conservation and the application of needed soil-saving practices must be done by the farmer and agricultural experts, Talmadge said, the citizens who live in urban areas and work in offices and factories nevertheless have a "vital role to play." It is they, he emphasized, who must give a part to the support of soil programs.

Ford Foundation Finances Fight On Segregation

Communist Party or individual Communists, or with organizations defending the Soviet Union, or its policies—issues which have nothing to do with the South—one is forced to the conclusion that, by and large, the common bond among its supporters is a certain degree of sympathy for the Soviet Union and/or the Communist Party, rather than any primary interest in human welfare in the South. One is further forced to conclude that the professed interest in Southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

From records and official reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, the name George S. Mitchell is identified with other Communist-front causes.

An announcement of the Civil Rights Congress, held in Detroit, Michigan, April 27 and 28, 1946, lists Dr. George S. Mitchell, Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council, as one of the sponsors of the congress.

According to citations by official government agencies of organizations found to be Communist-fronts, prepared and released by the Committee on Un-American Activities, the Civil Rights Congress of Michigan was cited as subversive by Attorney General Tom Clark in a letter to the Loyalty Review Board released on June 1, 1948.

In commenting on the Civil Rights Congress, the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities in its Report No. 1115, issued September 2, 1947, pp. 2 and 19, said that the group was "dedicated not to the broader issue of civil liberties, but specifically to a defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" and "controlled by individuals who are either members of the Communist Party or openly loyal to it."

An advertisement which appeared in the NEW YORK TIMES of April 1, 1946 contained a statement opposing the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

This advertisement was prepared by the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. One of the signers of this appeal was George S. Mitchell, economist, of Atlanta.

Citations by official government agencies of organizations found to be Communist or Communist-fronts, prepared and released by the Committe on Un-American Activities, brands the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party" and gives the following citations:

"1. Cited as subversive and Communist. (Attorney General Tom Clark, letters to Loyalty Review Board, released December 4, 1947, and September 21, 1948.)

"2. 'Part of what Lenin called the solar system of organizations, ostensibly having no connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program. It was established as a result of a conference on constitutional liberties held in Washington, D. C., June 7-9, 1940.  The defense of Communist leaders such as Sam Darcy and Robert Wood, party secretaries for Pennsylvania and Oklahoma, have been major efforts of the federation.' (Attorney General Francis Biddle, Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, p. 7687.)

"3. 'There can be no reasonable doubt about the fact that the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties—regardless of its high-sounding name—is one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party.' (Special Committee on Un-American Activities, Report March 29, 1944, p. 50; also cited in Reports, June 25, 1942, p. 20; and January 2, 1943, pp. 9 and 12.)

"4. Among a 'maze of organizations' which were 'spawned for the alleged purpose of defend of New York to form the Civil Rights Congress." (California Committee on Un-American Activities, Report, 1948, pp. 201 and 327.)

● It is interesting to note for the record that the names of some others who hold important posts in the Southern Regional Council have a consistent habit of cropping up in connection with groups which have been termed Communist-fronts by Congressional committees investigating Un-American activities.

While the Council itself has never been branded as a Communist-front, it and its members have been in the vanguard of the fight to destroy our cherished heritages and traditions in the South.

—o—

That is what the federal income tax-exempt Ford Foundation is subsidizing and encouraging with the $240,000 grant made by it.

The Ford Foundation, as a charitable fiction, is relieved of taxation, including federal income taxes.

This means that the money which we in the South pay in federal income taxes, in effect, goes to support this organization which is working night and day to destroy our way of life.

It means that money which was made under the free enterprise system by one of the most rugged individualists in the history of our nation is going to subsidize a quest to mix the races in the classrooms of our schools.

It means that this money will be used to foster a system of controlled enterprise under which there will be no individual freedom.

● The Ford Foundation had better be using its resources to save Constitutional government and free enterprise in this country, rather than trying to destroy them.

● For once our form of government is gone, there will not be any Ford Foundation.

"Having a telephone put in our farm home was my best buy last year. It saves valuable time in ordering groceries, or getting a doctor or help from a neighbor. Mrs. I. E. Bazzell of Mountain Creek, Alabama found her telephone so valuable she sent an unsolicited letter to The Progressive Farmer, through whose courtesy it is reprinted at the left.

A lot of people everywhere feel as Mrs. Bazzell does — that the telephone is their "best buy". On farms, in cities, day in and day out, the telephone serves in so many big and little ways. Yet its cost is small, less than a penny an hour for the average family.

STATEMENT BY MR. LEONARD HAAS

ATLANTA ATTORNEY AND MEMBER OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

April 16, 1954

The Southern Regional Council was incorporated under the laws of the State of Georgia in 1944. The incorporators ~~were~~ included Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, and Rufus E. Clement. Since that time its membership, board and executive committee have included Georgians, as well as other Southerners of standing and integrity. Attempts to link the Southern Regional Council with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare or other similar organizations are completely unfounded.

The Council in the past ten years has worked temperately and constructively for better race relations. It has represented an effort by Southerners themselves to build cooperation and mutual trust between the races.

The grant from the Fund for the Republic was given specifically in order to make possible state organizations, with their own independent boards, officers and staff. In Georgia, this means that Georgians themselves will establish and direct the activities made possible by this state's portion of the grant. The regional office in Atlanta will continue to perform fact-finding and coordinating functions that will assist the various state groups.

This is an opportunity for Southerners of both races to work together effectively on race relations programs of their own choosing. Anyone who is opposed to this course must be opposed to local initiative and progress in the field of human relations.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, the executive director of the Southern Regional Council, is able and respected, and his integrity is beyond question. His conscientious work has won him many honors. Only last year he received the annual award of the Catholic Committee of the South for his "signal contributions to thw welfare and progress of the South."

TALMADGE'S PAPER RAPS FORD GRANT

Gov. Talmadge's political weekly, The Statesman, Friday charged that Southern income tax money is, in effect, being spent to foster a fight on Southern segregation.

An unsigned article criticized a recent grant of approximately $25,000. by the Ford Foundation to the Southern Regional Council. It called the foundation "a charitable fiction."

The council was organized in 1944 to work for better race relations. Marion Wright of Linville Falls, N. C. is president; Dr. Rufus Clement of Atlanta is chairman of the executive committee, and Dr. George Mitchell of Atlanta is executive director. There are both white and Negro members.

The paper said the Ford Foundation is exempt from federal income taxes. Thus the money which Southerners pay in federal income taxes, in effect, goes to support an organization working "to destroy our way of life," the paper said.

Leonard Haas, Atlanta member of the council's executive committee, said the organization represents an effort by Southerners to build cooperation and mutual trust between the races. The foundation money was specifically marked for local organizations to work along these lines, he added.

A new drug from rhododendron leaves that may help control high blood pressure in man was described Friday by two Atlanta doctors before the National Society for Medical Research, meeting in Atlantic City.

Nine-year-old Teddy Odell, 63 Lafayette Dr., N. E., will have to have antirabies shots beginning Monday unless the dog that bit him in front of his house is found by then. City Health Department officials said.

The animal, which may be rabid, was described as medium-sized, white with black spots and a fully black head and short haired like a bird dog.

Health Department spokesmen asked anyone knowing the whereabouts of such a dog in the Lafayette drive area to call Teddy's mother at EMerson 6517.

Army Found Copying State Questionnaire

The United States Army is copying Georgia's "Security Questionnaire" to strengthen its guard against Communist infiltration, Lamar Sizemore, director of Georgia's security program, said Friday.

Sizemore addressed the Veterans Luncheon Club at the Belmont Steak House.

"While some critics said our questionnaire was too far reaching," Sizemore commented, "it is interesting to know that the Army is tightening up its security program. Judging from newspaper accounts of the Army's plan, it will follow the same pattern of the Georgia questionnaire."

Sizemore said the Army questionnaire likely would have to be filled in by members of the National Guard, Army Reserves and anyone who draws any pay from the Army, in addition to the soldiers themselves.

Dogs, Cats, Rats Can Be Pals, Society Told

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

Research at Tulane University shows that dogs, cats and rats can eat and play together and cooperate in various ways, indicating they are "not natural enemies," Dr. Loh Seng Tsai, professor of psychology at Tulane, said here Friday.

"Cats and rats have been called natural enemies," he said, "but we have proved they are friendly to one another if they are allowed intercommunication for a period of time."

Dr. Tsai, who is one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology at the Biltmore Hotel, believes his research shows that so-called natural enemies (animal or human) can become "good friends."

"HOPE FOR PEACE"

"People aren't born natural enemies," he said, "and that's the hope for world peace. If people are permitted intercommunication, they will get to know and understand one another."

Dr. W. T. James, professor of psychology at the University of Georgia, reported on his research study of puppies to determine the influence of "social eating" on food intake.

Dr. James said the studies showed the puppies ate more when they were eating together than when fed individually. He said competition was ruled out as a motive because each puppy could eat only from his own pan.

SOCIETY PRESIDENT

Dr. Karl M. Dallenbach, professor of psychology at the University of Texas and president of the society, spoke at the annual banquet on the thesis, "Phrenology and psychoanalysis are strikingly alike."

Dr. Dallenbach said Freud, the exponent of psychoanalysis, was "completely uninformed" about statistical methods.

The conference of psychologists and philosophers will continue at the Biltmore through Saturday.

Talmadge Paper Says South's Taxes Used in Effect Against Segregation

ATLANTA, April 16 (AP)—Gov. Herman Talmadge's political weekly, The Statesman, today charged that southern income tax money in effect, is being spent to foster a fight on southern segregation.

An unsigned article in the weekly pubblication criticized a recent grant of approximately $240,000 by the Ford Foundation to the Southern Regional Council. It called the foundation "a charitable fiction."

The council was organized in 1944 to work for better race relations. Marion A. Wright of Linville Falls, N.C., is president and Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta, is chairman of the executive committee. Its members number both whites and Negroes.

In announcing receipt of the grant a week ago, the council said the money would be used in an educational program extending into 12 Southern states and lasting 18 months.

Among other things, the council aided in securing the right of Negroes to vote and employment of Negro policemen. Its aims include dropping of racial barriers, curbing of racial tension and what it calls impartial law enforcement.

The Statesman said the Ford Foundation is exempt from federal income taxes.

"This means," the article said, "that the money which we in the South pay in federal income taxes, in effect, goes to support this organization which is working night and day to destroy our way of life."

Replying to the article, Leonard Haas, Atlanta attorney and member of the council's executive committee, said the organization represented an effort by Southerners to build cooperation and mutual trust between the races. He said the Ford Foundation money was specifically for local organizations to work along these lines.

"Anyone opposed to this course must be opposed to local initiative and progress in the field of human relations," Haas said.

Commissioners Rap Ford Grant To Southern Regional Council

Hutchins Sees End To Segregation; Berates "Rights" In United States

Some of the State's most influential citizens last week condemned the Ford Foundation for its recent $240,000 grant to the Southern Regional Council.

Meeting in Savannah at its regular annual convention, the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia lashed out at efforts by the Ford Foundation to destroy the color line in the South through donations to an organization with that avowed purpose.

According to a statement of policy issued by the Southern Regional Council, the main purpose of the organization is to overthrow segregation in the South. It looks toward "the South of the future free of stultifying inheritance of the past . . . where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit and will no longer be imposed."

The resolution, adopted unanimously by the Commissioners, read in part, as follows:

Georgia's powerful Association of County Commissioners, meeting in Savannah last week, gave all-out backing to Governor Talmadge in his fight to preserve separate schools in Georgia.

The group unanimously adopted resolutions supporting the proposed constitutional amendment to insure the right of the General Assembly to deal with the situation, should the Supreme Court outlaw segregation in the public schools of Georgia.

Wording of the resolution stripped away all legal niceties and got right to the crux of the issue—"A vote for this amendment is a vote for separate schools; a vote against the amendment is a vote for mixed schools."

Governor Herman Talmadge predicted in a television interview last Saturday night that any Republican candidates offering for office in Georgia this year will not poll "half as many votes" as President Eisenhower did in 1952.

"I would not think that the Republican Party is anything like as popular as President Eisenhower," the Chief Executive stated, "and if the elections for Congress were held at the present time, the Republican candidates in Georgia would not poll half as many votes as President Eisenhower polled in the last presidential election."

Talmadge was interviewed by Newsmen Larry LeSeur of the Columbia Broadcasting System and Kenneth Crawford of Newsweek Magazine on the Longine Chronoscope carried by Station WAGA-TV of Atlanta. The program was filmed in New York during the Governor's recent tour of the East.

● Regarding segregation of the races in public schools now under court attack, Talmadge said Georgians "intend to maintain separate schools one way or another, come what may." He maintained, however, that if the United States Supreme Court Justices "follow the law as all lawyers understand it, they will uphold the present method, which is separate but equal schools."

An adverse decision, Talmadge said, would be "the most difficult thing that we in the Southern States have had to approach or deal with since the War Between the States." He said Georgia has not adopted a definite course of action

> "We condemn the agitation for the mixing of the races. As decent public officials we deplore it. Specifically we condemn The Ford Foundation for its gift of a quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council for the purpose of propagandizing against the principle of separation of the races. Nor do we fail to note that persons highly connected with said Ford Foundation and said Southern Regional Council are and have been prominently connected with subversive fronts."

● Meanwhile, Robert M. Hutchins, former Chancellor of the University of Chicago and now an Associate Director of the Ford Foundation, was recorded in the press as declaring "that segregation in the public schools (of the South) is on the way out and there is very little opponents of de-segregation can do to prevent the breakdown."

Stating that separation of the races in public schools is doomed on economic, legal and moral grounds, Hutchins predicted statements made by Gov. James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Gov. Herman Talmadge, of Georgia, that the public schools of their states would be abolished as a last resort and as the lesser of two evils in the event the Supreme Court outlaws segregation, probably will not take place.

"If they (Governors Byrnes and Talmadge) get away with it, they won't get away with it for long," Hutchins said, stating that Federal authorities could not condone such acts.

Hutchins was principal speaker at the annual Urban League dinner meeting in St. Louis, Mo. The Urban League organization is a mixed group dedicated to destruction of segregation.

Hutchins said he feels the United States Supreme Court's decision that "separate cannot be equal" in a ruling on the Sweat case in Texas several years ago will have some bearing on the five school cases now pending in the high tribunal.

"If a state hasn't enough money to manage one good school system," Hutchins asked, "how can they manage two?"

"Separate but equal then means equally bad," he added.

In discussing what he termed "the present threat to traditional American civil liberties," Hutchins berated the United States when he declared, "that when the negro obtains the same rights as the white man, he won't have much after all."

WHEREAS, an adverse decision in cases now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States threatens the existence of our presently constituted system of separate education for white and colored, and

WHEREAS, the State is presently expending millions of dollars in the construction of schools, principally for colored students, and

WHEREAS, we consider it to be of paramount importance to continue our system of separate schools for white and colored, now

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by Association County Commissioners of Georgia, in Convention assembled at Savannah on this twentieth day of April, 1954, as follows, to wit:

1. The experience of generations and the lessons of history have demonstrated that where the two races live together in great numbers as in this State, the best interests of both are promoted by their education in separate schools. Upon the principle of parallel civilizations our institutions are erected, having as their goal the excellence of the individual rather than the reduction of the mass to some undetermined common level.

2. We know that not only the white people of our State approve the principle of separate schools, but also that the vast majorities of our colored people approves of it and that they earnestly hope for a continuation of the present system.

3. Lawyers who have studied the subject tell us the Federal Supreme Court has no lawful authority to interfere with our schools: and we know that through the years that Court has so held. This Association is not made up of lawyers, but we know that the United States Constitution has not been changed or amended since these decisions were made, and we are unable to understand how the Federal Supreme Court has authority to change its language or meaning. We know in our hearts that judges in Washington have no moral or legal right to interfere with our social institutions.

4. If the Federal Supreme Court undertakes to interfere with our separate schools, we pledge ourselves as free citizens of a free State to resist this usurpation by all means at our disposal.

5. We condemn the agitation for the mixing of the races. As decent public officials we deplore it. Specifically we condemn The Ford Foundation for its gift of a quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council for the purpose of propagandizing against the principle of separation of the races. Nor do we fail to note that persons highly connected with said Ford Foundation and said Southern Regional Council are and have been prominently connected with subversive fronts.

6. We commend Governor Herman Talmadge for his loyalty to the State, her institutions, and her traditions, and we commend him and the General Assembly for submitting to the people of the State the following proposed Amendment to the Georgia Constitution:

> "Section I. That Article VII of the Constitution of Georgia be amended by adding thereto a new section, to be numbered Section XIII, asc follows:
> 'SECTION XIII, PARAGRAPH I, GRANTS FOR EDUCATION: Notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution, the General Assembly may by law provide for grants of State, county, or municipal funds to citizens of the State for educational purposes, in discharge of all obligation of the State to provide adequate education for its citizens.' "

In our judgment said proposed Amendment will expand the authority of the General Assembly and thus facilitate their labors in dealing with the problems which will confront us in the event of an untoward decision of the Federal Supreme Court in the school cases now pending.

We note with satisfaction that nothing in said Amendment harms free public education in this State, nor does it contain anything which should disturb the status of our teachers in respect to tenure, salaries, salary increases and pensions. Said Amendment merely provides the General Assembly with authority to devise a means to continue free, public and separate education, in the event of an unwarranted decision of the Federal Supreme Court makes it necessary to revise our system.

The issue before the people on the ratification of said Amendment is whether they wish to make it possible to continue free public education in separate schools. A vote for this Amendment is a vote for separate schools. A vote against the Amendment is a vote for mixed schools. This Association endorses said Amendment.

● The Georgia Governor attributed President Eisenhower's large vote in Georgia in the last general election to his personal popularity, the respect and confidence people have in him and the dissatisfaction of many with the administration of President Truman. He pointed out, however, that despite these factors Georgia gave the Democratic nominees "the greatest percentage-wise majority of any State in the Union."

Georgians, Talmadge said, recognize Adlai Stevenson as "titular head of the Democratic Party" but look to their Senators, Congressmen and Governor "to form policy in our state." He said should Senator Richard B. Russell, Jr., decide again to be a candidate for the Democratic Presidential Nomination in 1956, Georgians "will support him as loyally as they have in the past."

Regarding control of the National Democratic Party, Talmadge said "Southerners and the conservatives" gained ascendency over "the left-wing elements of the industrial East" at the close of the last National Convention.

● Regarding segregation of the races in public schools now under court attack, Talmadge said Georgians "intend to maintain separate schools one way or another, come what may." He maintained, however, that if the United States Supreme Court Justices "follow the law as all lawyers understand it, they will uphold the present method, which is separate but equal schools."

An adverse decision, Talmadge said, would be "the most difficult thing that we in the Southern States have had to approach or deal with since the War Between the States." He said Georgia has not adopted a definite course of action in such an event but added he does "not think there is any doubt" but that the state would set up a private school system if such be necessary to maintain segregation. Machinery for such action, he pointed out, is being set up.

"The thinking white people in the South and also the Negroes in the South want it (segregation) left alone—just like it is," he declared. "Only a few agitators—white and colored—want it changed."

The future of race relations in the South must be left to the individual states, Talmadge maintained. Otherwise, he declared, republican government "as we know it today will be destroyed" and the result would be to set up a system of "thought police" to regulate citizens in every detail of their private lives.

● Except for farm prices, Talmadge said, Georgia's economy has "held up remarkably well." Farmers, however, he explained, have been "caught in the price squeeze and it has concerned them greatly."

Talmadge Swing Through East Wins More Praise

Governor Herman Talmadge's recent Good Will Tour of the East continues to elicit praise from Georgia newspapers.

Some recent editorial comments on the Governor's out-of-state speeches and television appearances, include the following:

"Once again, Governor Herman Talmadge has proved he is a worthy spokesman for the people of this state . . . The Governor laid his facts on the line. He told of progress in industry, agriculture, schools, state government. He recited the evidence. He told how this is taking place . . . The Governor is one of the ablest spokesmen for the new Georgia and the new South."—The Rome News-Tribune.

"Georgia's present Governor certainly should rank as one of the best top executives the State ever has had . . . As people of his own State we may overlook our Governor's ability to represent Georgia in a fine and almost brilliant manner on the outside. He has been in considerable demand for speeches all over the North and for television appearances. Always he has done a good job and given Georgia a boost . . . The Governor will be surrendering his leadership of the State now many months hence. It is to be hoped that he will remain its 'Ambassador.' "—The Carrollton Daily Times-Free Press.

"Those of us who live in Georgia are sometimes unmindful of the tremendous strides our state is making. Maybe we are too close to the scene to fully appreciate what is going on. It is well that on occasions we be reminded of what is happening right here at home."—Turner Rockwell in The Valdosta Times.

"Most Georgians will be in complete agreement with Governor Herman Talmadge's address before the Traffic Club of New York City on last Wednesday. The Governor not only described the impressive progress that has been made at Georgia's Savannah Port, but defined, as well, in no uncertain terms, Georgia's position in the present struggle between the ideologies of liberty and totalitarianism."—The Augusta Chronicle.

"It should be noted that the subject individual (Dr. Robert M. Hutchins) is not necessarily a Communist, a Communist sympathizer or a fellow-traveler unless otherwise indicated," the Committee report emphasized.

Following is factual information on Dr. Hutchins, as contained in the public records, files and publications of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities:

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor, University of Chicago, was a member, Commission for Academic Freedom, National Council of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, according to the September 13, 1948 (page 6) issue of the Communist newspaper, "Daily Worker." He was shown as a sponsor of a conference held by the National Council . . . . , October 9-10, 1948, on a leaflet, "To Safeguard These Rights . . . ' " published by the Bureau on Academic Freedom, National Council . . .

The National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions was cited as a Communist front by the Committee on Un-American Activities in the "Review of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace" released April 19, 1949, later made House Report 1954, April 26, 1950.

Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins testified before the Seditious Activities Investigation Commission, State of Illinois, 1949. (See Volume II, page 17, of this Commission.)

The "Daily Worker" of April 28, 1949 (page 9) featured a long article by Gunnar Leander entitled "Chancellor Hutchins in the Witchhunters' Den," parts of which read as follows:

"Sen. Paul Broyles suddenly found himself in the defendant's box during his own inquisition into subversive activities in Chicago colleges this week. Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, leading an entourage of distinguished witnesses, turned prosecutor in telling off Broyles that his task as a legislator 'is to eliminate those social and economic evils and those political injustices which are the sources of discontent and disaffection' " (sic.)

"Hutchins turned the tide of the entire state witchhunt as he declared before the Illinois Subversive Activities Commission:

" 'As is well known, there is a Communist Club among the students of the University (of Chicago.) Eleven students belong to it. The Club has not sought to subvert the government of the state. Its members claim that they are interested in studying Communism, and some of them, perhaps all of them, may be sympathetic toward communism. But the study of Communism is not a subversive activity.' "

Dr. Hutchins' photograph accompanied this article.

An article entitled "Chicago U. Head Flays Redbaiting Hysteria" appeared in the "Daily Worker" of June 24, 1949 (page 4), which stated that Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago, in an address before the graduating students of the University charged that the widespread witchhunting was designed to "silence" those who criticize the "status quo" because they "think it can be improved."

In the "Daily Worker" of January 2, 1950 (page 1) Dr. Robert Hutchins was quoted with approval as follows:

"Honest scientists have long agreed with the statement of Dr. Robert Hutchins that 'all talk of secrecy in connection with the atomic principle has been completely asinine, and public utterances which would have us believe we own an atomic secret are rooted either in ignorance or in deceit.' "

In the "Daily Worker" of May 29, 1950 (page 10) Dr. Hutchins was quoted with approval as follows:

"Recently Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago, wrote a blistering attack on American radio for the BBC Quarterly, organ of the British Broadcasting Company. One section of this article is especially worth repeating, the section in which he answers an article written by Victor Ratner, former vice-president of CBS, in 1947.

"And finally, he (Hutchins) pointed out in the answer to Ratner's article, that 'the radio industry disclaims any obligation to improve the people's taste. Actually, they know very well that they are degrading it.'

"Throughout the article, Chancellor Hutchins emphasized that this state of affairs results from a situation in which 'profits come first.' "

The "Daily People's World," west coast organ of the Communist Party, in the issue of April 17, 1950 (page 2), reported the following:

"Chancellor Robert Hutchins, head of the University of Chicago, has informed the National Committee to Defeat the Mundt Bill he has filed a statement with the House Committee on Un-American Activities denouncing the Mundt-Nixon bill as foolish, stupid and dangerous.

"The Hutchins statement follows:

" 'I should like to be recorded as among the numerous citizens of all political parties and all points of view who are united in believing that the Mundt-Nixon bill is foolish, stupid, and dangerous. I hope that Congress will display its intelligence, and its faith in freedom and democracy by overwhelmingly defeating the measure.' "

The "Daily Worker" on June 25, 1951 (page 2) reported that Professor Robert M. Hutchins, former chancellor of the University of Chicago and now associate director of the Ford Foundation, opposed the Supreme Court decision upholding the conviction of the 11 Communist leaders.

It is noted that the Communist "Daily Worker" on April 3, 1951 (page 7) reprinted excerpts from a speech delivered by Robert M. Hutchins in the Sidney Hillman Foundation Lecture Series at Harvard.

"Once again, Governor Herman Talmadge has proved he is a worthy spokesman for the people of this state . . . The Governor laid his facts on the line. We have long needed a Governor who would go out into the East and Midwest and do a good selling job for our state. Look what's happened to the price of electricity

Children aren't the only folks who enjoy a slide. Georgia homes have enjoyed a general slide in the price of electric service during the past 20 years.

In 1933 our residential customers paid an average of more than five cents for each kilowatt hour of electricity. Today they pay an average of only slightly more than two cents. And this is 22 per cent below the national average.

Along with this decline in price has come an increase in use. Georgians today use over three times as much electricity as they did 20 years ago—and 27 per cent more than the national average. This is because electricity is doing more jobs—quickly, cheaply and efficiently—than ever before. It is making life easier and better for all of us . . . and it's truly the biggest bargain in your family budget!

Southern Conference Educational Fund Investigation Before Jenner Committee Reveals Communist Infiltration

SCEF & SRC SIAMESE TWINS - - - ARE DESCENDENTS OF OLD COMMUNIST FRONT, SOUTHERN CONFERENCE FOR HUMAN WELFARE

The Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of New Orleans and the Southern Regional Council, Inc., with headquarters in the historic Wesley Memorial Church building, Atlanta are Siamese twins, descendants of the old defunct communist front, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The SCHW organization which was inspired, originated, substantially financed and dominated by the Communist Party disbanded when its work was no longer effective because Russia's red hand in the affairs of the conference became too conspicious. It followed the Commie line in folding up when Soviet control behind the scenes was exposed and broke out into other organizations where dupes and liberals could more effectively be used wittingly or unwittingly in the so-called names of humanity and human rights to do the bidding of the Kremlin.

Jim Dombrowski a member of the Methodist Federation For Social Action and according to sworn testimony has been a member of the Communist Party, deserted his official position in the SCHW to be the directing head of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. He brought with him the SOUTHERN PATRIOT, one of the communist front's official organs. George Mitchell, a well known communist fronter, deserted the sinking ship, the SCHW and now is the director of the Southern Regional Council. He brought with him the NEW SOUTH, another official mouthpiece of the old defunct communist front, the SCHW. Dombrowski's organization has infiltrated colleges while Mitchell's organization works through the Churches. The Southern Regional Council safely housed in a Methodist Church has been in a strategic position to feed its poison in the name of religion.

Emory Professor Participates In Recent Conference of SCEF Held in Atlanta

Dr. Albert E. Barnett, professor, Candler School of Religion, Emory University, was present at a called meeting of the Board of Directors of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., held on February 7, 1954 in Atlanta, Ga. He, with Dr. James P. Brawley and Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Atlanta Methodist Negro educators among others signed a statement defending the activities of SCEF. The statement was made because SCEF was to be investigated by the Jenner Committee for Communistic activities.

Dr. Barnett is regarded as an influential leader in the Southern Conference Educational Fund group. His "Statement of Objectives" was read at the SCEF sponsored youth conference held at Allen University, Columbia, S. C., in December, 1952 by Dr. Fred C. James in the absence of Dr. Barnett.

British Methodist Defends Malenkov

NEW YORK. — An Associated Press dispatch from Sheffield, England reports Dr. Donald Soper, head of Britain's Methodist Church, as saying that Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov is really more of a liberal than a Communist.

Dr. Soper, who has often espoused socialist, pacifist and liberal causes, has accepted an invitation of the Russian Orthodox Church to visit the Soviet Union. Addressing an open air meeting, Dr. Soper declared that the Russians are "no better and no worse" than Americans, and added that "every Christian should be a left-winger."

Thus Dr. Soper joins the "Red Dean" of the Church of England and the left-wingers of American Methodism in becoming an apologist for Christianity's greatest men-

Dombrowski Named Communist In New Orleans Hearings. Other Board Members Of SCEF Are Revealed As Fifth Amendment Communists. Atlanta Members, Including Mays And Clements Could Be Called When Hearings Are Resumed

The Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., a direct descendant of the old defunct communist front, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare finally was brought up to answer the question that has been in the minds of the thinking public, "To what extent has Communism infiltrated SCEF?" Jim Dombrowski, Director and some of his associates were brought before the Jenner Committee with Senator Eastland of Mississippi presiding, in New Orleans March, 1954 for investigation. Senator Eastland before the Hearings had said that "SCEF was a communist infiltrated organization masquerading behind the facade of a humanitarian educational institution."

Dombrowski denied that he was or had been a Communist, but Paul Crouch who was active in the Communist Party from 1925 to 1942 and was trained in Moscow to aid in the Soviet's program to work for the overthrow of America said under oath that Jim Dombrowski who is also a present executive member of the Methodist Federation For Social Action, "accepted Communist Party discipline, discussed the revolutionary movement and sang the Communist Internationale." John Butler, Dallas Texas nurseryman testified under oath that he was a former member of the Party from early in 1941 to 1943 when he lived in Bessemer, Ala., near Birmingham, and, that during that period he knew DOMBROWSKI to be a member of the Communist Party.

Col. Leo Sheiner, a Miami, Florida attorney and one of the leaders of SCEF which has infiltrated many of our schools, took quick refuge behind the Fifth Amendment when questions were asked him concerning his Communist connections, and activities. Paul Crouch said he had known Sheiner as a Communist. When Sheiner objected to the questions, Senator Eastland said to him, "Keep your mouth shut. You will take orders from me. I know Communist tactics. I am not going to let you take over this hearing". Later the Senator said to the Miami lawyer, "You're a big time Communist and I know it."

Miami, Fla., April 17—Disbarment proceedings have been started against Col. Leo Sheiner for refusing to answer questions on Communist activity before a Senate Internal Security subcommittee. Among the organization specified in the petition were the Communist Party of the United States

BOLLINGER WIRES GREETINGS TO COMMUNIST INFILTRATED SCEF

Dr. H. D. Hope great experience" to the Youth Conference held at Allen University, Columbia, S. C., December, 1952, which was directed and sponsored by the Communist infiltrated Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. We would like for Dr. Bollinger to tell the Church whether or not this transatlantic cablegram was paid from church funds. If it were, the Church should be reimbursed.

Dr. Bollinger has also been a sponsor of Dombrowski's group. Let him openly repudiate his past connections, if he is going to remain in the strategic and influential posi-

THE PROBLEMS WE SOUTHERN METHODISTS FACE

We do not believe that it is unChristian to face realism. It is not sinful to be practical. It is not disloyal to question the behavior or lack of behavior on the part of our leadership in the Church in regard to the question of segregation. It is not fomenting "racial hatred" to demand that the traditions which are peculiarly necessary in the South be maintained. We contend that it is not stirring up strife to insist that our historic cultural and traditional patterns in the South be preserved.

Our belief in our Souhern way of life is based on years of experience. We know that if the mixing of the races be permitted more problems would rise than could be settled and more wounds would be made than could be healed. The continued agitation on the part of our beloved denomination and allied organizations will cause disunity, foster ill will and impede the progress of Methodism in the South.

We Southerners—not "race-haters"—not bigots, nor narrow minded, prejudiced and ignorant rebels—BUT Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Church folk, Christians and even Jews KNOW that the abolition of segregation in our churches, schools and social gatherings just wouldn't work.

We are faced with a grave problem. Our church on the national level has declared war against segregation. In paragraph 2027, 1952 Discipline bears this out, —"There is no place in the Methodist Church for racial discrimination or racial segregation." It further says, "—to set about achieving a Christian brotherhood in the church that will be free from racial discrimination and segregation"; and "we propose that the Church seek to free itself UTTERLY from racial discrimination and segregation."

Our Church school literature in obedience to the radical leaders of the Church and in the custody of writers who have a fanatical, socialistic, "racial-complex" constantly remind us that we are unChristian and prejudiced and haters because we practice segregation in our churches. Boards, some leading officials, "policy-makers", "program finders" and "speaker-seekers" manipulate and maneuver to see that we be reminded again and again that we MUST abolish our customs if we are going to be Christian and Methodist. Colleges, Universities, Theological Seminaries and even secondary schools, whose faculties are manned by professors who studied in the East, feed our young people with ideas which strike at the very heart of our Southern way of life. Our Woman's Society of Christian Service on all of the upper levels pass radical resolutions which are written and inspired in some instance by Federationists and prophetesses whose primary creed is racial brotherhood.

Such action is done in violation of the spirit of our agreement in unification. The principal reason for the jurisdictional arrangement in the Plan of Union, which was something new and unique in Church Government, was to make possible the preservation of segregation in the South when union became a reality. There would have been no union had not this arrangement been made. Thanks to the keen brain of the late Bishop John M. Moore.

This plan was accepted by the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern branch). We Southern Methodists believed them to be sincere. We see now they betrayed us. That is dishonest. Their determined efforts to reform us is in violation of their agreement. It is bad to break a gentleman's agreement. It is worse to break a Christian's agreement.

They seek now to remove the legal and constitutional barrier. The Episcopal address of 1952 has this to say, "This system seemed to be the KEY to Unification in 1939, and SOME would contend that we are not far enough from that date to force this constitutional issue upon our people". The last General Conference passed a new law as it appears in paragraph 538, 1952 Discipline which is to accommodate only the transfer of a Negro Church into one of the white jurisdictions and the transfer of a white Church to the Central (Negro) jurisdiction. The new law discriminates against the transfer of a Church from one white jurisdiction to another white jurisdiction. The sole purpose was to break down segregation. It is the entering wedge to abolish the Central (Negro) jurisdiction.

If these agitators and liberal Methodists who suffer from the disease of "raceitis" are successful in their plan to slap the former Methodist Episcopal Church, South in the face by eliminating our organizational structure, the Church will face division as surely as it did in 1844.

Our problem becomes more serious because the leaders of the North Georgia conference make no protest to semi- official and endorsed unofficial organizations which advocate the outright abolition of segregation. They make no protest to the Southern Regional Council's campaign to change our pattern of segregation. They do not call in question the policy of the National Council of Churches to eliminate our Southern heritages. They do not even protest the discrimination the National Council makes against us in the South. They take our money that we give for the education of the Negro and let it be used against our necessary pattern of segregation and never object.

The problem becomes more acute because many of our younger ministers are fresh from the seminaries where they were inspired with a fanatical passion to go out to correct the "injustice" of segregation. Then there are those pastors—great in number, who believe that the preservation of our present system is best both for the white people and the Negro people, but are wiser than this editor, they don't for the present take issue wih the leadership of the conference who ignore the whole affair.

We simply raise the question, discuss the problem—YOU laymen will have to find a solution.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL SHOULD BE REMOVED FROM A METHODIST CHURCH

The April, 1953 issue of OMV carried an expose of the Southern Regional Council whose headquarters are still in Wesley Memorial Methodist Church building, Atlanta. It was a telling blow. It carried a factual expose. Some of the Council hinted that we would be sued. Some tried to get the Post Office Department to revoke our mailing privileges. One district superintendent, in a quarterly conference referred to it.

Just prior to the meeting of the North Georgia Conference we called upon the North Georgia conference to oust this strife-monger organization from beloved old Wesley Memorial building. We urged Dr. Mackay to remove from Wesley Memorial this organization which is advocating the abolition of segregation, which is regarded as a necessity by the rank and file of Georgia Methodists. We pointed out that the SRC was honeycombed with Communist fronters in its leaders. But instead of removing SRC from Wesley Memorial, we were removed from a pastorate this year to which we are legally entitled.

But they didn't stop our publication. They didn't silence our voice. They didn't stop our pen. One year later from our factual expose of the Southern Regional Church—we return to raise our voice against this anti-Southern, anti-Georgia Methodist, segregation-destroying, race-baiting Southern Regional Council which is directed by a communist fronter from the fourth foor of a Methodist Church in the city of Atlanta. The facts published one year ago in ONE METHODIST VOICE have not been repudiated. They have not been denied. We have not been sued.

We repeat that the continued presence of SRC in Wesley Memorial is an insult to every Georgia Methodist who cherish our necessary Southern traditions. We reemphasize that the continued peaceful domicile of an organization that has had and now has on its Board of Control persons who are affiliated with Moscow inspired fronts is a slap in the face of every Georgia Methodist who have not renounced their love for one flag.

There are two reasons why SRC should be removed from Wesley Memorial. The first reason is—its objectives are repulsive to Georgia Methodists. That historic building was redeemed by Georgia Methodists for the purpose of having a building center for official agencies of the Church. The laymen who paid the bill did not give their money to save a building to house an organization which seeks to destroy every vestige of segregation in Georgia.

Georgia Methodists take pride in the advancement of the Negro race. They rejoice in the progress that is being made by the descendents of their grandfathers' slaves. They want the colored people to have an abundant life. But they do not want racial mixture. They are eternally opposed to the mixing of the bloods. They know that to destroy segregation is the final step which will lead to the mixture of the races. Georgia Methodists do not believe that it is unChristian to preserve the integrity of both the white and Negro race. They still believe in an unmodified segregation.

The Southern Regional Council in the name of religion and with the blessings and moral support of some Conference leaders are seeking to destroy our historic pattern of racial segregation. For Methodist officials in high places to permit SRC to remain in Wesley Memorial is not playing fair with our laymen. For those in authority to ignore the charges made against the Council is to neglect their duty.

The second reason why the Southern Regional Council should be put out of the Church building is because of the communist fronting of those at the controls. It is unbelievable that those in authority would be as silent as the tomb, when a man like George Mitchell who has been so notorious in his associations with communist fronts and un-American organizations, can keep his desk on the same floor where our Bishop has his. We published a partial listing of his connections in the April and May, 1953 issues of One Methodist Voice. To this good hour, he has not publicly denied these associations.

An incomplete study shows that twenty-one (21) of former and present members of the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council have been connected in various ways with many communist fronts. Among those belonging to the Civil Rights Congress are Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, GEORGE S. MITCHELL, Aubrey Williams, Louis E. Burnham, The Reverend D. V. Jemison, (deceased), and Clark Foreman. The Civil Rights Congress according to a democratic Attorney General, the Honorable Tom Clark is "dedicated NOT to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" and "controlled by individuals who are either members of the Party or openly loyal to it."

The fact that Louis E. Burnham, the Organizational Secretary, of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, which, according to a former Attorney General is subversive and among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, which seeks to alter the form of Government of the United States by unconstitutional means" has helped to direct SRC, doesn't seem to disturb some of the leaders of the North Georgia Conference. This is not guilt by association, it is a plain tie-in between the Communist Party and the Southern Regional Council.

The whole story is too long to tell in one issue of OMV. It would take several issues to give the entire record of SRC Board Members' sponsorship of, connections, affiliations and tie-ins with Moscow's subversive fronts. It is not only a long record, it is a shameful record.

The continued presence of the Southern Regional Council in Wesley Memorial Church will be more embarrassing if the Jenner Committee includes some of the Atlanta members of SCEF, who are also officials of SRC, when it resumes its Hearings in the near future. We again call upon Dr. Mackay and his board to remove the Southern Regional Council from Wesley Memorial Church. If the Southern Regional Council desires to remain on Auburn street, let it move down Auburn a little further.

WE WANT TO KNOW THE TRUTH

We want to know where the money goes that North Georgia Methodists give each year to that fund in the Expansion Day offering designated for race relations. It is sent of course to Paine College in Augusta. But, we want to know for what is it used.

The president of Paine College was a sponsor of the now defunct communist front, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare whose aim and purpose was to destroy segregation. He, now is affiliated with the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., which, was recently investigated by the Jenner Committee holding hearings in New Orleans. Sworn testimony in these hearings brought out the fact that Jim Dombrowski the director of this organization had been a member of the Communist Party. It was also revealed that there were some fifth amendment Communists in the organization. The organization's purpose is to work through the colleges to break down segregation.

We want to know if Dr. Peters is in sympathy with the objectives of the SCEF. North Georgia Methodists are entitled to know. Our leaders should make clear, if, our race relations offering is to be used to destroy segregation. We believe a little frankness and honesty should be used when we are asked to make another offering next year.

GENEVA POINT PACT

The Geneva Pact which seeks to break down segregation in the Methodist Churches is sponsored by the ZIONS HERALD, a New England Independent Methodist publication. The pact says, "In the name of the Father of all mankind, we are resolved that we shall receive fully qualified and regularly appointed pastors without regard to their race, color, or national origin." Eight Methodist churches, according to the April 7th issue of Zions Herald, have signed it.

Emory Professor Against Segregation

Dr. Albert Barnett of Emory University signed the SCEF statement which included these words: "Specifically we have UNDERTAKEN by educational measures to show the un-American character of the institution of segregation and to bring about its ELIMINATION from our common life, whether in public education, hospitalization, employment, transportation or the exercise of the franchise".

MAYS AND CLEMENTS FORM EFFECTIVE TEAM TO UNDERMINE OUR SOUTHERN WAY OF LIFE

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of the Negro Morehouse College in Atlanta, and Dr. Rufus E. Clement, of Atlanta University are in a strategic position to work against our necessary pattern of segregation. Both were members of the old defunct communist front, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Both are members of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., which has Communist infiltration according to the recent Investigation made by the Jenner Committee in New Orleans, La. Both are associated with the Southern Regional Council. Both appear on the programs of white churches and institutions of learning in Atlanta. Both have expressed themselves as being for the destruction of segregation. BOTH HAVE NUMEROUS AFFILIATIONS WITH COMMUNIST FRONTS AND OFF-COLOR ORGANIZATIONS. HERE ARE SOME OF MAYS' CONNECTIONS:

He is associated with "The American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born which the U. S. Attorney General says, is, "One of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States". The California Committee says it, "Works closely with the International Labor Defense, the legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". The crowd Dr. Mays associates with in this organization is quite different from Georgia Methodists he associates with when he appears on the programs in white Methodist Churches and institutions in Atlanta. He was sponsor of the "DEMAND NEGRO RIGHTS NOW" delegation sent to Washington. He was one of the initiating sponsors of the Communist inspired Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in New York, 1950.

MAYS was initiator and honorary chairman of the notorious Communist front known as "THE CIVIL RIGHTS CONGRESS". This organization condemned the indictment and conviction of the 12 COMMUNISTS. On page 2517, of the House Committee's Bulletin entitled, EXPOSE OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, a reprint of Dr. Mays' organization's explosive and lying circular appears which says, "MORE NEGROES WILL BE SHOT IN THE SOUTH FOR DARING TO VOTE—MORE LYNCHINGS—MORE JIM CROW—UNLESS YOU STAND UP FOR THE TWELVE".

MAYS has a daily column in the Pittsburg (Negro) Courier where he writes says the heading of one of his columns, Uncomplimentary Things About Georgia" and calls for the abolition of segregation in the South. Speaking before the American Baptist Convention in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1951 he said, "Protestant churches throughout the country should take a daring step and throw their doors wide open to Negro worshippers."

He supported the defense of Communist Harry Bridges and was connected with the "National Council of American-Soviet Friendship". He was a member of the Nominating Committee the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

White And Negro Ministers Unite In Virginia Cities

Norfolk, Va. RNS)—Membership in the Norfolk Ministerial Union has been thrown open to all Negro clergymen of this area.

At the same time, the nearby Newport News Christian Ministers Association (white) and the Peninsula Ministers Union (Negro) voted to form a new inter-racial group.

The Norfolk Ministerial Union also announced that segregation will be permanently eliminated from its annual United Preaching Missions held in January of each year.

Virginia state law requires segregation of whites and Negroes at public assemblies and in public conveyances. The Virginia Council of Churches and various denominational and ministerials groups throughout the state have adopted resolutions calling upon the General Assembly to repeal the law.—ZIONS HERALD.

White Minister Chooses To Join Negro Methodists

The Reverend Doctor Ralph T. Templin, a former missionary to India and a teacher at Central State College, Wilberforce, Ohio, since 1947, has been recently transferred from the Delhi Conference in India to the Lexington Conference, one of the 17 annual conferences of the Central (Negro) Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church, reports ZIONS HERALD, an independent New England Methodist journal. According to Rev. Clarence T. R Nelson of Dayton, Ohio, the St Louis Area representative for Methodist Information, "Dr. Templin is probably the first white minister to be received into the membership of a Negro annual conference of the Methodist Church."

The white minister transferred to an annual conference in the Central Jurisdiction to protest against segregation in the Church. He said, "I felt a restraint from within against transferring in to 'white Methodism' while this unbrotherly separation remains."

Investigation of SCEF

and the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

Max Shlafrock, Miami, Fla., contractor who would not admit to all of his alias names and indentified as a member of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., refused to answer several questions on the grounds that he might be incriminated. He in good Communist fashion ducked behind the Fifth Amendment when asked the following questions: "Have you ever been guilty of espionage against the United States"? and "Do you affirm or deny that you recruited members into the Communist Party"? Such is the person who is in an organization NOW with Dr. Benjamin Mays, Dr. Rufus Clement, and Dr. Albert Barnett of Atlanta.

Myles Horton another member of the Board of Directors of the Southern Educational Fund, a communist fronter and an associate of George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council had to be ejected from the Committee room for disorderly conduct before the Hearings being conducted by Senator Eastland. Horton is the founder and present head of the notoriously Communist fronting Highlander Folk School in Monteagle, Tenn., who had previously given testimony in an executive session of the Committee. The school whose student body is recruited by radical labor unionists pretends to "educate rural and industrial leaders for 'democratic' living and action." It has been a recepient of funds from the Communist Robert Marshall Foundation.

Crouch testified that in a conference held at the school in 1940 between himself, Horton, DOMBROWSKI and Ed McCrae, Tennessee Communist leader, it had been arranged for the Communist Party to send Mildred White into the school ostensibly as a student, but actually to recruit Party members.

Clifford J. Durr former president of the well known communist front, the National Lawyers Guild and former member of the Federal Communications Commission during a recess from the hearings, rushed over to "get" Crouch because he had identified Virginia Durr his wife as having full knowledge of the Communist conspiracy. Crouch testified that Mrs. Durr who was on the Board of Control of the SCHW and a former director of SCEF had been "under Party discipline". Mrs. Durr, used her relation as sister-in-law of Justice Black to put across her radical ideas, however, not to the knowledge and intelligence of the Supreme Court Justice. To all the questions asked her regarding her Communist connections by the Committee during the New Orleans Hearings, she replied, "I stand mute." The former Communist John Butler whose Party name was John Ball said he had known Mrs. Durr in Party circles. She reversed her "I stand mute" position to say to Butler you "had better not go back up to Bessemer (Ala.) If you do, they will kill you."

Aubrey Williams, Editor and Publisher of the Southern Farmer, President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., and a co-worker of Mrs. M. E. Tilly in the Southern Regional Council also was questioned. He denied his Communist connections despite the fact that he has a long record of affiliations with numerous Communist fronts.

Other officials and associates of SCEF who are likely to be called before the Committee when it resumes it Hearings in June are: Dr. Alva Taylor, who is described by the SOUTHERN PATRIOT as the dean of Southern liberals and a well known figure among Southern Methodists, Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, (Negro) Atlanta, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President Atlanta University, (Negro), Atlanta, Dr. J. P. Brawley, Atlanta, a leading official of the Methodist Federation, Dr. Albert Barnett of Emory University and the Reverend C. C. Webber, Methodist minister and President, Virginia State C. I. O. Council, and alleged Communist. Webber is better known for his arrest for illegal picketing.

Thirteen of the present and past members of the Board of Directors of the SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL were officials and leading members of the communist fronting Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Some who got out of the SCHW when it was exposed and affiliated with both SCEF and SRC beside Dombrowski and Mitchell are: Clark Foreman, Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Louis Burnham, Aubrey Williams, Rufus E. Dr. Rufus E. Clement's Connections With Communist Fronts

He was sponsor of Congress of Civil Rights. He is listed as a sponsor of the "Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee" which was cited as subversive and communist not by a Republican—but a Democratic Attorney General. The California Committee says that "The sponsors and officers—with few exceptions are admitted Communists and fellow travelers". The policy "is in concert with the foreign policy of the Soviet Union". Much of the financing is undertaken by the Communist International Workers Order.

"National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions: cited as a Communist front by the House Committee On Un-American Activities. The California Committee on Un-American Activities says it "is the most potent Communist-controlled cultural front in California—." Some of CLEMENT'S associates in this Communist front are Charlotte Bass, the vice presidential nominee on the Communist controlled Progressive Party in the last election; Paul Robeson, the infamous Negro Communist singer; John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker and one of the eleven convicted Communists AND Alexander Trachtenberg who was recently convicted in New York but preferred to go to jail in capitalist America than to go to the "good old USSR" he has been writing for. CLEMENT was associated with the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born which has been cited as subversive and communist by the Atrroney General of the United States. The California Committee On Un-American Activities says it is, "Among the Communist front organizations for racial agitation which also serves as 'money-collecting-media' and as special organizing centers for the racial minority they pretend to champion. Works closely with the International Labor Defense, legal arm of the Communist Party, in defense of foreign-born Communists and sympathizers". National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East, a Communist organization says the Attorney General of the U. S., This 'Stalin Club' propagandized for the Reds in China who killed American boys in Korea. Progressive Citizens of America which was cited as subversive by the California Committee. Some of RUFUS CLEMENT'S progressive associates are Dr. W. E. U. DeBois, Negro communist; The Reverend Jack McMichael, Methodist minister and a member of the Communist Party; the late Louis Adamic who affiliated with forty Communist fronts before he got so progressive and died in his burning farm house in New Jersey, September, 1951. The Southern Negro Congress which was cited by the U. S. Attorney General as subversive The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, says the House Committee, "There can be no reasonable doubt about the fact that the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties - regardless of its high-sounding name is one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party". Sponsor of the so-called World Peace Conference whose aims were to disrupt America's defense and to discredit American culture and extol the virtues of Soviet Culture. Among Clement's fellow sponsors which includes long haired, Russian named, fellow travelers is the Negro Communist poet, LANGSTON HUGHES, who is author of the blasphemous poem, entitled, "GOODE-BYE CHRIST".

California Methodist Church Challenges Tax Exemption Loyalty Oath

The First Methodist Church of San Leandro, California refuses to sign loyalty oath in order to claim tax exemption under the new law in California, according to the April 15, 1954 issue of the DAILY WORKER. The American Civil Liberties Union cited as a Communist front by the California Senate Committee is furnishing legal counsel for the church.

There was need for the passage of such a law in California, because some of the churches and religious institutions in that state have become infiltrated with subversive agents.

SCEF & SRC SIAMESE TWINS---ARE DESCENDENTS OF OLD COMMUNIST FRONT, SOUTHERN CONFERENCE FOR HUMAN WELFARE

The Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of New Orleans and the Southern Regional Council, Inc., with headquarters in the historic Wesley Memorial Church building, Atlanta are Siamese twins, descendents of the old defunct communist front, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The SCHW organization which was inspired, originated, substantially financed and dominated by the Communist Party disbanded when its work was no longer effective because Russia's red hand in the affairs of the conference became too conspicious. It followed the Commie line in folding up when Soviet control behind the scenes was exposed and broke out into other organizations where dupes and liberals could more effectively be used wittingly or unwittingly in the so-called names of humanity and human rights to do the bidding of the Kremlin.

Jim Dombrowski, a member of the Methodist Federation For Social Action and according to sworn testimony has been a member of the Communist Party, deserted his official position in the SCHW to be directing head of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. He brought with him the Southern Patriot, one of the communist front's official organs. George Mitchell, a well known communist fronter, deserted the sinking ship, the SCHW and now is the director of the Southern Regional Council. He brought with him the New South, another official mouthpiece of the old defunct communist front, the SCHW. Dombrowski's organization has infiltrated colleges while Mitchell's organizations works through the Churches. The Southern Regional Council safely housed in a strategic position to feed its poison in the name of religion.

Sixteen (16) of the present officials and board members of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., were officials of the defunct communist front, the SCHW. Thirteen of the present and past members of the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council were officials and leading members of the communist fronting Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Some who got out of the SCHW when it was exposed and affiliated with both SCEF and SRC beside Dombrowski and Mitchell are: Clark Foreman, Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Louis Burnham, Aubrey Williams, Rufus E. Clement and Benj. E. Mays. These people have or have had affiliation with numerous communist fronts.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL SHOULD BE REMOVED FROM A METHODIST CHURCH

The April, 1953 issue of OMV carried an expose of the Southern Regional Council whose headquarters are still in Wesley Memorial Methodist Church building, Atlanta. It was a telling blow. It carried a factual expose. Some of the Council hinted that we would be sued. Some tried to get the Post Office Department to revoke our mailing privileges. One district superintendent, in a quarterly conference referred to it.

Just prior to the meeting of the North Georgia Conference we called upon the North Georgia Conference to oust this strifemonger organization from beloved old Wesley Memorial building. We urged Dr. Mackay to remove from Wesley Memorial this organization which is advocating the abolition of segregation, which is regarded as a necessity by the rank and file of Georgia Methodists. We pointed out that the SRC was honeycombed with Communist fronters in its leaders. But instead of removing SRC from Wesley Memorial, we were removed from a pastorate this year to which we are legally entitled.

But they didn't stop our publication. They didn't silence our voice. They didn't stop our pen. One year later from our factual expose of the Southern Regional Church--we return to raise our voice against this anti-Southern, anti-Georgia Methodist, segregating-destroying, race-baiting Southern Regional Council which is directed by a Communist fronter from the fourth floor of a Methodist Church in the city of Atlanta. The facts published one year ago in One

Methodist Voice have been repudiated. They have not been denied. We have not been sued.

We repeat that the continued presence of SRC in Wesley Memorial is an insult to every Georgia Methodist who cherish our necessary Southern traditions. We reemphasize that the continued peaceful domicile of an organization that has had and now has on its Board of Control persons who are affiliated with Moscow inspired fronts is a slap in the face of every Georgia Methodist who have not renounced their love for one flag.

There are two reasons why SRC should be removed from Wesley Memorial. The first reason is--its objectives are repulsive to Georgia Methodists. That historic building was redeemed by Georgia Methodists for the purpose of having a building center for official agencies of the Church. The laymen who paid the bill did not give their money to save a building to house an organization which seeks to destroy every vestige of segregation in Georgia.

Georgia Methodists take pride in the advancement of the Negro race. They rejoice in the progress that is being made by the descendents of their grandfathers' slaves. They want the colored people to have an abundant life. But they do not want racial mixture. They are eternally opposed to the mixing of the bloods. They know that to destroy segregation is the final step which will lead to the mixture of the races. Georgia Methodists do not believe that it is unChristian to preserve the integrity of both the white and Negro race. They still believe in an unmodified segregation.

The Southern Regional Council in the name of religion and with the blessings and moral support of some Conference leaders are seeking to destroy our historic pattern of racial segregation. For Methodist officials in high places to permit SRC to remain in Wesley Memorial is not playing fair with our laymen. For those in authority to ignore the charges made against the Council is to neglect their duty.

The second reason why the Southern Regional Council should be put out of the Church building is because of the communist fronting of those at the controls. It is unbelievable that those in authority would be as silent as the tomb, when a man like George Mitchell who has been so notorious in his associations with communist fronts and un-American organizations, can keep his desk on the same floor where our Bishop has his. We published a partial listing of his connections in the April and May, 1953 issues of One Methodist Voice. To this good hour, he has not publicly denied these associations.

An imcomplete study shows that twenty-one (21) of former and present members of the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council have been connected in various ways with many communist fronts. Among those belonging to the Civil Rights Congress are Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, George S. Mitchell, Aubrey Williams, Louis E. Burnham, The Reverend D. V. Jemison, (deceased), and Clark Foreman. The Civil Rights Congress according to a democratic Attorney General, the Honorable Tom Clark is "dedicated not to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" and "controlled by individuals who are either members of the Party or openly loyal to it."

The fact that Louis E. Burnham, the Organizational Secretary, of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, which, according to a former Atterney General is subversive and among the affiliated and committees of the Communist Party, which seeks to alter the form of Government of the United States by unconstitutional means has helped to direct SRC, doesn't seem to disturb some of the leaders of the North Georgia Conference. This is not guilt by association, it is plain tie-in between the Communist Party and the Southern Regional Council.

The whole story is too long to tell in one issue of OMV. It would take several issues to give the entire record of SRC Board Members' sponsorship of, connections, affiliations and tie-ins with Moscow's subversive fronts. It is not only a long record, it is a shameful record.

The continued presence of the Southern Regional Council in Wesley Memorial Church will be more embarrassing if the Jenner Committee includes some of the Atlanta members of SCEF, who are also officials of SRC, when it resumes its Hearings in the near future. We again call Dr. Mackay and his board to remove the Southern Regional Council from Wesley Memorial Church. If the Southern Regional Council desires to remain on Auburn Street, let it move down Auburn a little further.

FORD FOUNDATION GIVES 1-4 MILLION TO ATLANTA ANTI-SEGREGATION GROUP

Talmadge, Byrnes Attacked; McGill Southern Regional Council Leader

The Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, has been granted nearly a quarter of a million dollars by the Ford Foundation.

The basic objective of the council is to destroy racial segregation in Georgia and other southern states. It was incorporated under the laws of Georgia, January 6, 1944; its principal office and place of business is in the City of Atlanta. Its charter authorizes the establishment of branch offices elsewhere within or without the State of Georgia.

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro of Atlanta University, are two of the incorporators of the Southern Regional Conference, Inc.; they are charter members.

McGill is a bitter foe of racial segregation in public schools in Georgia and in other southern states: he is an avowed enemy of racial segregation in any form.

McGill was recently appointed a member of the Executive Committee of the Ford Foundation.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, former chancellor of the University of Chicago, now is associate director of the Ford Foundation. Like McGill, he is a bitter foe of racial segregation and fights it at all times and under all circumstances.

Hutchins, as principal speaker at the annual Urban League dinner meeting at Temple Israel auditorium, of Saint Louis, Mo,on February 26, 1954, said that segregation in public schools is on the way out and there is very little opponents of desegregation can do to prevent the breakdown.

Taking the position that school segregation is doomed on economic, legal and moral grounds, Hutchins declared that threats by Governor Herman Talmadge of Georgia and Governor James Byrnes of South Carolina, to abolish public schools in their states probably will not come about.

"If they (Governors Byrnes and Talmadge) get away with it, they won't get away with it long," Hutchins said, stating that Federal authorities could not condone such acts.

What significance could there be about the large gift of money to the Southern Regional Council, of Atlanta, by the Ford Foundation recently, in view of the fight underway in Georgia to preserve racial segregation in the public schools of the State?

McGill, a charter member of the Council is opposed to racial segregation. He has fought it openly at times and under cover for years.

Excerpts from the Council's statement of policy are:

> "The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South free of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and no longer will be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Council can play more than a modest but creditable part toward s its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we strive and short of which, we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

Hutchins, associate director of the Ford Foundation, like McGill and the Southern Regional Conference, of Atlanta, is a bitter foe of racial segregation in Georgia and in other southern states. The focal point of their attacks now is on the public school systems. Both of these men are officials of the Ford Foundation.

Hutchins told his Saint Louis audience that the United States Supreme Court's decision that "separate cannot be equal," in its ruling on the Sweat case in Texas, will have some bearing on the five school cases now pending in the high tribunal.

Formerly, the Southern Regional Council was financed in the main by substantial grants from the Rosenwald Foundation.

The Rosenwald Foundation, according to Dr. Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia, chairman of the board of trustees, devoted its major activities to:

> "Creation of equality between whites and Negroes and to the promotion of interracial relations in the South."

It was during the late 30's and 40's that the first large scale direct attack was made on segregation in the South: it was made by Rosenwald Fund workers.

Since the death of the Rosenwald Fund, the Southern Regional Conference has been existing on grants from individuals and certain out-of-state groups. Now, its coffers have been handsomely replenished by a huge sum of money from the Ford Foundation.

Dr. George S. Mitchell has headed up the Council as its executive director since 1947. He came to Georgia in 1944, the year in which the Southern Regional Conference of Atlanta, was incorporated in Fulton County Superior Court.

Prior to coming to Georgia, Mitchell had seen considerable service in the Federal government: he was in the Department of Interior, Department of Agriculture and the Foreign Economic Administration.

Mitchell's first job after coming to Atlanta was Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee from which he became Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council.

The Southern Regional Council was incorporated in Fulton County, Georgia, Superior Court January 6, 1944: its objects and purposes as set out in its petition for incorporation are:

From: Augusta Courier, 5/3/54
Page 4
"Ford Foundation gives . . . "

"The objects and purposes of said corporation are to exist and function as an eleemosynary organization, and more particularly to organize and maintain a Regional Council for the improvement of economic, civic and racial conditions in the South, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts towards regional and racial developments; to attain through research and action programs, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship: and to cooperate with local, state and regional agencies on all levels in the attainment of the desired objectives."

The petition for charter sets out that the Council's membership is self perpetuating and shall be composed of the incorporators and others as the incorporators shall designate according to such rules and by-laws as may be adoped by the corporation.

The Council is a non-pecuniary corporation with no capital stock. It has the right to receive donations, endowments, devises and bequests, etc.

The petition for incorporation of the Council was filed by Haas, Lyons and Hurt, attorneys of Atlanta. The petition was filed in Fulton Superior Court, January 6, 1944; the order of incorporation was signed by Superior Court Judge Frank A. Hooper, Jr., January 6, 1944, for a period of 35 years. It is recorded in Book 062, page 46, Clerk's office, Superior Courts, Atlanta Circuit.

Does the large grant of money to the Council from the Ford Foundation mean that funds will be expended by the Council in an effort to propagandize against racial segregation in Georgia's public schools and to try to defeat the proposed ammendment to Georgia's constitution, to be voted on in theGeneral Election this fall?

From: Augusta Courier, 5/3/54
Page 5
"Ford Foundation Gives . . . "

That proposed amendment to Georgia's constitution provides:

"Section 1. That Article VII of the Constitution of Georgia be amended by adding thereto a new section, to be numbered Section XIII, as follows: 'Section XIII. Paragraph I, Grants for Education:

Notwithstanding any other provisions of this Constitution, the General Assembly may by law provide for grants of State, county or municipal funds to citizens of the State for educational purposes, and in discharge of all obligation of the State to provide adequate education for its citizens."

The Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, in its annual convention at Savannah, April 20, 1954, unanimously endorsed that proposed amendment to the State's constitution. The resolution of the commissioners endorsing the proposed amendment said in part:

"The experience of generations and the lessons of history have demonstrated that where the two races live together in great numbers as in this State, the best interest of both are promoted by their education in separate schools. Upon the principle of parallel civilizations our institutions are erected, having as their goal their excellence of the individual rather than the reduction of the mass to some undetermined level."

Will the people of Georgia allow the millions accumulated by the Ford Motor Company and expended through the Ford Foundation and the Southern Regional Council, of Atlanta, to destroy the white man's civilization in Georgia?

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By Roy V. Harris

We have been trying to tell you from time to time that everybody who leads the fight on communism in this country finds that he immediately becomes a victim of a nation-wide effort to destroy him in every way possible.

We have called our readers' attention to the fact that Martin Dies, the Texas Congressman, became the victim of a vicious, organized campaign which resulted in destroying his health, breaking him financially and defeating him politically.

In the campaign to destroy Dies there was enlisted thousands of well-intentioned, but little thinking, citizens all over the nation.

It was a nation-wide campaign and millions of dollars were spent to literally crush Martin Dies.

Back in Congress today, Dies says that he is neither physically or financially able to undertake the fight again. He lost everything on the former occasion and the good, decent, patriotic people of America failed to come to his rescue.

The People of America let Martin Dies become a victim of the campaign run by communists and their sympathizers.

We have also called your attention to the fact that the communists have shrewdly maneuvered all of us to the point to where we are now fighting one another over the methods employed by Senator Joe McCarthy.

Here we are today lined up and scrapping one another over Joe while the communists are forgotten and they are shrewdly carrying on a nation-wide campaign to tear us assunder and then pitch us all to the wolves.

Now J. Edgar Hoover, the boss of the F.B.I. makes a speech and confirms everything we have been trying to tell you.

In a speech to the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington on April 22, 1954, Hoover said that everyone who has dared to expose the communist threat has become the target of "experts in character assassination."

No truer statement was ever made. All public people who today stand firm in their fight against the communist threat are constantly the victims of these character assassins.

The funny thing about it is that most of the dirty work isn't done by the communists themselves or those who are closely aligned with them. Most of the character assassination is done by people who have a reputation for respectibility and for some unknown and unexplained reason have aligned themselves on the side of some of the communist objectives in this country.

In this group, are to be found newspaper people, radio and television commentators, a lot of writers, a few ministers and an innumerable amount of crackpots of every known variety.

And of this group, J. Edgar Hoover said:

"One of the most unbelievable and unexplainable phenomena in the fight on communism is the manner in which otherwise respectable, seemingly intelligent persons, perhaps unknowingly, aid the Communist cause more effectively than the Communists themselves."

Concluding this thought, Hoover also said:

"The psuedo liberal can be more destructive than the known Communist because of the esteem which his cloak of respectibility invites."

The communists are always crusading for something. They adopt some immediate objectives and some catchy slogan. As soon as they do, this group of so-called liberals over the country joins in the chorus.

Then when someone undertakes to expose the communists for what they are and to expose the movements for what they are, then the great band of liberals all over the country joins hands with the communists and their fellow travelers in a mighty crusade to assassinate the character of any individual or person who seeks to expose the communists' objectives.

The liberals in this country helped the communists destroy Martin Dies.

The so-called liberals in this country are today calling for Joe McCarthy's scalp.

The so-called liberals can see no harm in the communists, but to them, old Joe is a terrible monster to be destroyed. If you don't believe what I am saying just listen to the news commentators on your radio. Listen to the news commentators on your television set. Just read the columns of the Drew Pearson type of liberal in this country.

Every one of them has joined in every character assassination campaign conducted by the communist party and their sympathizers.

Just listen to Edward R. Murrow some night. Even Malenkov wouldn't sound near as bad as does Edward R. Murrow.

It is a strange thing that these liberals never criticize the communists. They are always after the enemies of the communists.

These so-called liberals belong to Truman's crowd who holler "red herring." They defended Hiss and every one of the rest of the traitors until they were caught red-handed and convicted.

They now swell the chorus of the communist hymns of hate and the communists' attempts to destroy and assassinate the character of every individual who fights the communist cause.

You will notice that you have never heard Harry Truman talk about any of this group. On the contrary, he hollered "witch hunt" and "red herring" and tried to stop every effort on the part of Congress to expose the communists in government.

You will recall that Adlai Stevenson always played along with this bunch of liberals and talked about the witch hunt and the red herring and the attempt to determine guilt by association.

They always associated with this so-called liberal group and followed their line.

They minimized from the very beginning the influence of the communist scientists had delivered to Russia every secret discovery in the field of atomic energy.

They weren't concerned about it at all.

It reminds me of a rape story in the Georgia Law Reports. The Judge who wrote the decision on the Court of Appeals bench said that the young lady in question wasn't seriously concerned about her virtue and that the only signs of concern that she exhibited during the time of the escapade was that her sister's dress which she was wearing not be mussed up in any manner, shape, form or fashion to the extent that she took it off and hunt it up in the tourist court.

These so-called liberals are in the same position today. They are not worried about the government being destroyed by the communists or overthrown in a communist movement.

Their first concern is the destruction of those who fight the communists and their efforts to divide and conquer the American people.

And talking about dividing the American people, we have a recent example that makes you want to vomit.

Recently, the Ford Foundation granted the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Now, the object and purpose of the Southern Regional Council is to divide the people of the South and to create chaos, confusion and violence.

Its objective as stated in its charter is the destruction of the pattern of segregation.

As soon as the charter was granted they issued a statement of policy. This statement said that they looked forward to a South of the future where "segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit" and no longer will be imposed.

That is the object of the Southern Regional Council. It was so stated at the time it was created.

Now it is anticipated that the Ford Foundation gave this one quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council to carry out its avowed purpose.

Now mind you, this grant is given at a time when an adverse decision from the Supreme Court of the United States is anticipated and at a time when we all look forward to chaos, confusion and violence as a result of the effort made to abolish segregation in the public schools.

Now why would the Ford Foundation grant this money at this particular time?

It can be for only one purpose and that is to help them wage a fight to destroy segregation in the South and to mix and mingle the races.

Now mind you, this money which the Ford Foundation gave them came from you people who buy Ford automobiles. Every time you buy an automobile you contribute money into this Ford Foundation and the Fords in turn take the money to destroy you and your children.

The next time you think about buying a Ford automobile, just think about that.

Now the money the Ford Foundation has is not their money. The Ford Foundation has this money to dish out due to a loophole in the federal taxing laws and while it was legal, it is nothing more or less than stolen from the federal government even though the stealing is legalized.

Here is why I say it. These giant corporations can set up a foundation devoted to what they call charitable and eleemosynary purposes and then it isn't subject to taxation.

These giant corporations can take money which would go to the Federal government in the way of taxes and put it in a foundation and then spend the money as they see fit.

That is exactly what the Fords have done. They have set up a foundation and instead of paying the money to the government in the way of income taxes, they put it in the foundation and then use it for any purpose that they see fit.

Now they have taken this money which should have gone to the United States Government, put it in a foundation and turned it over to the Southern Regional Council to spend it to destroy degregation in Georgia.

Now what can you do about this situation?

From: Augusta Courier, 5/3/54
Page 6
"Strictly Personal"

There are two things you can do. You don't have to buy a Ford automobile the next time, for one thing. Then the other, you can sit down and write your congressman a letter today and tell him that these foundations should no longer be exempt from taxation.

The tax exemption of these foundations is a crying shame.

Now if you or I would like to help some poor devil by helping send his sick child, his wife or himself to the hospital and contribute to the cost, we must pay income tax on the money we contribute. We can't deduct it from our income tax returns.

If you have an aged father or mother and are contributing to their support this cannot be deducted from your income tax return. You must pay it.

If you had a little spare money and would like to contribute it to help a niece, a nephew or grandson or granddaughter, you must then pay income tax on the amount you contribute.

But the Ford Foundation can put millions of dollars every year into the Ford Foundation and they can deduct it from their tax returns. This means that they take the money which would otherwise have gone to the federal government, put it in a foundation and they can spend it where they believe that it will help their business of selling Ford automobiles.

They do it by making grants to all kinds of crackpot organizations like the Southern Regional Council.

This Southern Regional Council picked up one of the platforms of the Communist Party in America and that was the destruction of the pattern of segregation in the South.

This Southern Regional Council is helping the Communists carry out this part of their platform.

The communists care nothing for the negro or the South. Their only hope and only aim is to divide Southern people and keep us in a fight.

From: Augusta Courier, 5/3/54
Page 7
"Strictly Personal"

The Southern Regional Council is helping them in their objective and the Ford Foundation is financing their activities.

Now, sit down and write your congressman today and insist that he sponsor a movement in congress to make these giant corporations which are now setting up these foundations pay income taxes just like you and I do.

We are allowing these giant corporations to set up these foundations, take millions of dollars and use it to control and influence the thinking of the people of the nation and to aid the communists and the wildcat liberals in the darndest wildcat schemes ever dreamed about.

Unless these foundations like the Ford foundations are curbed and made to pay taxes like you and I, they will eventually destroy this great country.

You haven't forgotten about the Rosenwald Fund. The Rosenwald Fund was set up by old Julius Rosenwald for the sole purpose of starting this fight to destroy segregation.

Now it looks like the Ford Foundation has taken up where the Rosenwald Foundation left off. Sit down and write your congressman and senator and unless they are willing to do something about these foundation funds, let's elect somebody to the Senate and Congress who will do something about it.

THE AUGUSTA COURIER

May 3, 1954 Recently the FF granted the SRC $250,000. The object and purpose of the SRC is to divide the people of the South and to create chaos, confusion and violence. (4)

(3) This SRC picked up one of the platforms of the Communist Party in America and that was the destruction of the pattern of segregation in the South. This SRC is helping the Communists carry out this part of their platform. The Communists care nothing for the Negro or the South. Their only hope and only aim is to divide Southern people and keep us in a fight. The SRC is helping them in their objective.

June 28, 1954 The SRC, a biracial organization and recipient of a $240,000 grant from the FF is a haven for known communist fronters and could well become the Communist Party apparatus in the South. .. It is the successor of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Comm. investigating un-American activities. (1)

Top members of the SRC Board of Directors have been branded as Communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates in the party.

(4) Dr. G. S. Mitchell, Exec Dir of the SRC was listed as a top official of the SCHW in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts according to records and reports of congressional committees.

The Courier had anticipated finding a handful of people in it with Communist front associations. It was amazed to find two known communists on its Board of Directors and 38 others who have associations with Communist fronts in varying numbers and degrees. It would be impossible to congregate this many people with such backgrounds and affiliations except by design. (Long list of individuals with comment about their association with known communist ~~subversive~~ groups - - Morris B. Abram, Philip Hammer, etc.)

Harold C. Fleming's statement on the decision of the Supreme Court reinforces what we have said all along - that this FF money will be used to force an end to segregation upon us and for political action to elect candidates for office who are in sympathy with the Council's pro-communist, anti-Southern aims and ideals.

Stripped of all its window-dressing, the aims, purposes and platforms of the Communist Party, the defunct SCHW and now the SRC are one and the same. They are identical on all points.

Many Southern taxpayers have raised the point that SRC's pro-communist, anti-segregation activities are financed by money good law-abiding Americans pay in federal taxes. They say this because donations to SRC are exempt from taxation due to its classification as a "charitable organization".

July 5, 1954 "Tax-exempt millions financing fight made against white people in Georgia by SRC". The keyman in the FF is Robert M. Hutchins, Because of the furor created by his part in making the grant to the SRC he has been "promoted" to be president of the Fund for the Republic, one of the FF's subsidiaries. In his capacity as the policy-maker of the FF, Hutchins possess a completely unprecedented financial power over education, the humanities, and the social sciences. By giving or withholding grants, Hutchins is in position to insinuate his views into any aspect of American intellectual life. Therefore, it is essential to inquire about Hutchins' views and his record concerning the Communist menace. . . The University of Chicago, under Hutchins' administration, has distinguished itself as the only institution of higher learning in America which has been investigated five times for immoral or subversive activities. . . .

... In view of the attitude of Hutchins toward communism, it is not at all surprising that the FF has made some highly dubious grants.

This is the same man who was instrumental in making the $240,000 grant to the SRC which this newspaper has exposed as a haven for Communists and communist-fronters.

July 12, 1954 As the successor to the SCHW, the SRC has picked up where the earlier group left off in furthering the communist party line in the South.

"The Southern People's Common Program for Democracy, Progress and Peace" as contained in the Daily Worker, official organ of the Communist Party of the U.S. sets forth the platform and program of the party in the South. This platform has ten points which have been followed to the letter in the SRC's activities and programs.

As a matter of fact, the record shows that the SRC is not the first of red-infiltrated activities to which the FF has let its funds and support.

Prominent members of the staff of the FF have long records of affinity for pro-communist causes and association with communist fronts and their activities, according to the July 27, 1953 edition of the Congressional Record. (Reference is made to various directors of the FF, quotations by them and a record of their questionable affiliations).

In a reprint of a Ralph McGill article he says: . . . "You cannot allow the Commies to go along with you in any organization. If they espouse the same principles, then let them do it on their own. To admit them to membership or companionship is fatal - as the SCHW has learned". The Courier follows: "Now Ralph you say in your article that you helped drive the SCHW out of existence. . . . Now you have another opportunity to do a great service to your country and your people. Why not help the Un-American Activities Committee and the FBI expose the SRC for what it is.

It is strange to note Ralph that no one else connected with the SRC has denied my charges except you. If you don't know what kind of a gang you are ganged up with you had better stop and investigate it.

July 19, 1954 Exposure SRC brings Hasty McGill-Abram meeting. A hasty meeting between Abrams and McGill which resulted in a telephone call to the Atorney General of Ga. threatening him with opposition if he investigated the SRC.

Cook told the press that as far as he knew the Special Services Agency of the State govt, ferreting out Communists, and the FBI, might already be looking into SRC's activities.

When officials of the SRC learned that the Courier's expose of that group was going to be spread before the public in the columns of this newspaper, they sought by every means to bring pressure to suppress the story.

They claim that the SRC is not successor to SCHW but another organization the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., headed by Aubrey Williams, as its president is the successor to SCHW.

Dr. G. S. Mitchell told the press that he is not a communist "but a harmless old socialist." Editor McGill sought to dissuade the wire services from carrying news stories of The Courier's expose by asking the threatening question: "Is there any libel in it".

It was also learned authoritatively that queries were made by the press to experts on the question of communist subversion in an effort to discredit the Courier's news story. We have learned from an unimpeachable source that the replies to all of these queries was that "the SRC is just as red as Roy says it is."

Records and official reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities reveal that the leading lights of the SCHW, its offshoot the SCEF and its actual successor, the SRC are one and the same.

~~Records and official reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities reveal that the leading lights of the SCHW~~
We have discovered that two persons who have been branded as known communists are listed in official publication of the SRC as members of its Board of Directors. One of these, Aubrey Williams, is also president of the SCEF.

To keep the record straight, the SCEF was set up by Aubrey Williams and James Dombrowski to combat the effectiveness of the Southern Regional Education program. The organization has met with no success has no standing and has not been able to garner the funds which it expected to receive. However, the SRC operated by the same element has met with financial success through grants from the Rosenwald Fund and at present the FF. It is pursuing the course laid down in the Communist Party-USA.

July 26, 1954 — Two known communists have been listed as members of the top level board of directors of the Ford-financed SRC. Testimony adduced before House and Senate Congressional committees has branded SRC's directors, Aubrey Williams and Clark Howell Foreman "as Communist Party members." (Complete item about their association with SCHW, "Hank Wallace and his gang of communists" and other affiliations).

August 2, 1954 — Dr. Mitchell, who along with Editor McGill of the Constitution and others incorporated SRC, not only held a high post in the "red" dominated SCHW but his name also has been linked to other Communist-fronts, according to reports and records of Congressional Committees.

It is in this atmosphere that a FF grant to SRC is being spent to destroy segregation in the South.

The SRC has been directed toward the complete elimination of segregation in Georgia and the South. It looks forward to an amalgamated region with no color distinction.

While the Council itself has never been branded as a Communist-front, it and its members have been in the vanguard of the fight to destroy our cherished heritages and traditions in the South.

For months the Council has been getting small interracial groups together to prepare for what many of them considered inevitable. (The Supreme Court Decision). These booklets, while skillfully presenting the arguments on both sides, are really textbooks for integration of Southern schools, and I heard them quoted several times in the most unexpected places.

Several Southern attorneys general already ruled - officially and unofficially - that the Supreme Court decision automatically abrogated such state laws. And Mitchell sees in this the wedge which is already splitting the once solid South.

August 9, 1954 — Philip Hammer, former president of the Communist-front SCHW in Washington, D.C., has been listed by the SRC as being on the central staff of the FF project personnel. He is also executive officer of the Committee of the South, a vague sort of organization which has no definite announced program and whose source of funds cannot be determined.

Dr. Rufus Clement, an organizer of the SRC was listed by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in its report branding SCHW a communist-front, as being a member of the top level executive board of that organization.

August 16, 1954 — This week the Courier is publishing the communist-front records of two former leading lights in the SCHW and who have been listed as members of the board of the SRC: Dr. Benjamin E. Mays and Dr. Charles S. Johnson. Their records as furnished by the House Committee on Un-American Activities follows.

August 30, 1954 — Information on SRC officials taken from the public records, files and publications of the House Committee investigating Un-American activities is given on the following: Guy B. Johnson, R. B. Atwood, William E. Cole, Donald Comer, Grace T. Hamilton, Luther P. Jackson, Rev. D. V. Jemison, David D. Jones, Z. A. Looby, Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, Glenn Rainey, G. D. Rogers, Jacob L. Reddix, Austin T. Walden.

September 13, 1954 — This week the Courier is printing 14 more records of persons who have been listed as directors of SRC. The records of these people show a particular affinity for communist-front groups and communist front activities. Record of association with these groups are given on the following: Dr. Howard W. Odum, Marion A. Wright, Carter Wesley, Albert W. Dent J. Gordon Hancock, F. D. Patterson, Florence Sytz, Paul Christopher, Will W. Alexander, Forester B. Washington, Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr. Lucy Randolph Mason, Josephine Wilkins.

Nov. 7, 1955 — (Repeated article on Hammer & Dr. Clement that appeared 8/9/54) A notice appeared in this issue that the series exposing the communist-front SRC will be re-produced.

Dear Fellow American

In speeches,left wing press and radio in recent weeks charges implying racism have been made against the incumbent State Senator the Honorable Jack B. Tenney.

Our Americanism Committee has investigated the charges and the findings briefly stated are as follows.

The issue of racism appears to revolve around three factors.

1. That a preponderance of subversives exposed by the Calif. Senate Fact Finding Committee on Un-American Activities happened to be of ethnic Jewish orgin, Senator Tenney served as Committee chairman for approximately ten years.

2. That in the Fact Finding Committees Report of 1948 (pg.263) The Institute For American Democracy and The Institute For Democratic Education were listed under communist fronts, later it was revealed that they were subsidized fronts of the so called Anti Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith, thus incurring the wrath of an organization that purports to speak for the Jewish people.

3. A series of books written by Senator Tenney including Zion's Fifth Column, Zionist Network, and Zion's Trojan Horse.

Unfortunately all committees, State and Federal investigating communist subversion have been accused of racial bias,for reasons similiar to those encountered by the Calif. Senate Fact Finding Committee.

This does not constitute racism or bigotry on the part of the committee or its chairman, those who appear before investigative committees make their own record, good or bad, the committee only seeks the facts and compiles the record.

The books written by Senator Tenney are documented accounts of subversive activities that have no part in our American way of life.

An official communist party order intercepted by the Calif. Senate Fact Finding Committee states in part,"Members and front organizations must continually embarrass,discredit,and degrade our critics.Accuse them of being fascists,Red-baiters,peace destroyers,labor-baiters and Anti-Semites." the scource for the charge of anti-semitic racism used by the communists and their dupes against those who effectively fight the communist conspiracy is obvious.

Communist technique now as in the past has been to destroy public confidence in committees investigating communism and their compiled reports.

Current propaganda in discrediting Senator Tenney would there-by tend to discredit the documented material compiled by the Calif. Senate Fact Finding Committee.

Our unaminous decision is that the implication of racism against the Honorable Jack B. Tenney is false and without foundation in fact, all propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding.

June 1, 1954

Dear Friend:

As your State Senator from Los Angeles County, a position that I have held for twelve years, I want to talk to you about organized Jews in politics.

I want to do this because the organized Jews are an important factor in the forces at work against my re-election to the State Senate. Because they are a factor, I, or any other American citizen, be he a candidate or a man on the street, has a right to discuss the Jews and their political activities.

Please bear in mind that I am not indulging in nor advocating anti-Semitism or racism when I talk about the organized Jews. I have always held that it is wrong and even wicked to discriminate against a man or woman because of race, color or creed. I believe that we should always preach and practice that a person is equal before the law and entitled to every constitutional right regardless of his race, color or his creed. I sincerely believe that anti-Semitism is amoral and un-American.

On the other hand, I have always held that the majority race also has rights, and that the members thereof should be protected against the political machinations of the minority groups. The fact that the leaders of the so-called minority groups attempt to use politicians and candidates for public office as their tools is well known to most politicians.

Some how or other (and I think I know why because of events that have occurred over the years) I have aroused the antagonism of the professional leaders of the organized Jews. This is not to say that the Jews as a whole are responsible for this antagonism. I merely wish to state, and if you don't know it, it is time you did, that the Jews are highly organized to promote their own cause, sociological and political program. You can see evidence of this on every hand; -- in the daily press, community activities and in other areas of public interest.

It is strange, however, that although we in political life know it and feel it strongly, organized Jewry seldom wants to be found exerting pressure in political campaigns, but believe me, they do!

I first became cognizant of the fact that I was antagonizing the Jewish leadership when some good Jewish friends of mine informed me that certain Jewish organizations were resentful of the fact that the Reports of the California Committee on Un-American Activities contained the names of too many Jewish people. I assured them that this situation was due to no desire on the part of the Committee, and that there was no intention to wrongfully pin anything on the Jews. I pointed out that the names just naturally came up in the course of our investigations; --- that the people named made the record; we didn't. In order to assure these Jewish leaders that there was no intent on the part of the Committee to make an issue of Jews in Un-American Activities Reports, I inserted, in the 1947 Report, at the request of the Director of the Jewish Anti-Defamation League in Los Angeles, a section deploring racism in general and anti-Semitism in particular.

During the nearly ten years of my chairmanship of the California Committee on Un-American Activities I have experienced the pressure of organized Jewry in its attempts to influence Committee hearings, investigations and even the Reports of the Committee itself.

I often wondered why organized Jewish leadership bitterly opposed my bills requiring a loyalty oath from public officials and employees. Whatever the reason it is a fact that organized Jewry did just that. "The Record" is the name of the only official Jewish B'Nai B'Rith newspaper in Southern California. This Jewish publication headlined opposition of the Jewish Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith to the loyalty and anti-Communist bills introduced by me in the 1949 Session of the Legislature. I quote from "The Record" for July, 1949: "In making its recommendations, the ADL (--that is the Anti-Defamation League) is of the opinion that these bills are conceived in fear . . ." and "would pave the way for witch hunts unprecedented since the days of the Alien and Sedition Laws." Five full columns of the newspaper were devoted to a description of these bills, together with the reasons why the Anti-Defamation League advised B'Nai B'Rith members to write to the members of the Legislature and oppose my anti-Communist program as individuals.

The Communist press -- the "Daily People's World" -- and the Communist Party of California worked incessantly against the 1949 Loyalty Oath and anti-Communist program -- as was to be expected. When the program met defeat the Communist Party claimed much of the credit -- but so did the B'Nai B'Rith. The "California Jewish Voice" in its issue for February 17, 1950 had the following to say: "Jack B. Tenney is a character whom we know well in Los Angeles. He authored the 'Little Mundt-Nixon Bills' which were killed in the California Legislature last year after a militant and widespread campaign for their defeat in which many Jewish organizations participated, including the local B'Nai B'Rith."

The first real concerted effort by the Jewish leaders to drive me out of public office developed behind the scenes during my 1952 campaign for Congress in the 22nd District, when a well known political writer for a Los Angeles newspaper was informed by a prominent Jewish political worker that "The Jews Won't Take Jack Tenney." This Jewish political worker wanted to know if the newspaper would "back away from Jack Tenney." This is a fine example of professional Jews at work in the political field. Naturally, I must keep the name of this political writer confidential because of reprisals that organized Jewry might attempt to work on him if his name were disclosed. He informed me of the incident at the time - in 1952.

Since I became aware of the fact that the leaders of Jewish groups were out to get me politically, I have devoted considerable time and study to their organizations and methods. I have, from time to time, given the story of this study and research in articles I have written and periodically published for public distribution. I have shown in these publications the extent and efficiency of the organization of the Jews. It is an imposing network with many ramifications in leagues, societies, groups and committees, and it is used by the Jewish leadership in promoting the Jewish cause and program in all community activities. It is used to promote Jewish welfare, which is understandable. But it is also used to punish its political critics. I learned, in my own case, that the Jewish leaders will go to any length to destroy any public official or person whom they believe interferes with their plans or is a threat to their program.

I believe that the Jews have the right, if they wish, to organize to promote their own welfare but, as I said at the beginning, when they indulge in political campaigns they should have no objection to having that fact made known to the public. If their activities in political campaigning or maneuvering cannot bear the light of day, then they should not indulge in such political activities.

Make no mistake about it. Organized Jewry is a potent influence in any political campaign and in any legislative situation where it is interested. The bad part of it is that some of its most effective work is conducted behind the scenes, where the voting public has no knowledge of what is going on. If anyone publicly discusses its political activities the leaders cry "Anti-Semitism!"

And please bear this in mind. I do not say for one minute, as the Jewish leadership will cleverly try to make it appear I am doing, that all Jews are Communistic, fellow-travelers, or engaged in subversive activities. I do not even say that all the Jews agree with what some of their professional political leaders are saying and doing. As a matter of fact I know that this is not true. I do not say that all those who may oppose my candidacy are Communists or fellow-travelers. I recognize, as does every other man in political office, that you cannot hold a political job for 18 years without incurring enmities and making enemies. That happens, more or less, in the life of every man in public office. I think, however, that it is only fair to you, the voters, to know that a real motivating force and the spark plug against my candidacy for re-election is the powerful militant arm of organized Jewry -- the Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith -- which makes it its business to reward its friends and punish those whom it considers enemies in public office. Some Republican leaders fear this opposition of the Jews to me and are willing to sacrifice me. And there is always a politically ambitious person willing to offer himself - or herself - to help perform the political sacrificial rites.

That organized Jewry is up to its neck in this campaign for State Senate is evidenced by the wide-spread publication of an expensive four-page pamphlet entitled "The Facts About Jack B. Tenney" mailed under Los Angeles Post Office Permit Number 10592. The publication and mailing of this pamphlet is by the "Community Relations Committee of the Los Angeles Jewish Community Council" which is located at 590 North Vermont Avenue in Los Angeles.

A second political leaflet signed by I. B. Benjamin, William H. Rosenthal and others establishes Younger and Richards as the candidates of organized Jewry in Los Angeles County. Republicans are urged to vote for Younger and Democrats are urged to vote for Richards. I am referred to throughout as "Hate-monger Tenney." The final appeal is for funds. "Help to beat Tenney," - says the leaflet - "by mailing your contribution in the enclosed stamped envelope" to 8268 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, 46.

So, as the Jewish political worker told the Los Angeles political writer, "THE JEWS WON'T TAKE JACK TENNEY!"

Well, that's all right with Tenney! I intend to carry on my campaign for re-election with all the vigor at my command and I hope that I may continue to enjoy your support and the support of hundreds of thousands of others as I have in the past. However, and I want you to know this -- win, lose, or draw, I will not knuckle under to any group in the political field regardless of race, color or creed.

I will continue, with God's help, to vote and conduct myself in public office as I have in the past, always mindful of the rights of the majority as well as the rights of the so-called minority groups. If you sympathize with me in this concept of the duty of a public official, then vote for me. If you think otherwise, vote for my opponent.

And remember this! My twelve year record in the State Senate is not an issue in this campaign. When you cast your vote for State Senator for Los Angeles County on June 8th you will be deciding the most important -- in fact the most critical issue of our times. You will be deciding whether the majority of our people are to conduct our affairs or if a small, compact, well organized and financed group is to dominate. And your vote will also decide whether or not your representative is to be free to represent you and your State, or if he will be the creature of the Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'Rith.

The decision will be yours on June the 8th.

Very sincerely yours,

Jack B. Tenney

MEMORANDUM

The April issue of One Methodist Voice, published by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton, Georgia, charges that the Board of the Southern Regional Council is "honeycombed with Communist fronters." The paper then undertakes to support this charge by a series of misstatements, innuendoes, and a record of alleged associations of past and present Board members. The conclusion which Craft wishes to leave with the reader is stated in an editorial on page 2: "The Southern Regional Council with its Board of Directors top heavy with fellow travelers and Communist fronters is unknowingly to some of its members aiding the Russian Cause to stir up the Negro question in the South. That is what pleases the Kremlin. The Red hand of Russia reaches into Georgia."

This charge is wholly false, as are most of the "facts" offered in support of it. The object of the author clearly is to discredit and embarrass the leadership of the North Georgia Conference of The Methodist Church--particularly, the Methodist board which administers the Wesley Memorial Building, where the SRC rents office space. A full understanding of his motives and methods can be gained from his personal background, the history of his relationships within the Church, and his previous utterances, through One Methodist Voice and otherwise. However, since the sole purpose of this memorandum is to demonstrate the false and libelous nature of the publication, these personal and denominational aspects will not be discussed here.

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

The following brief account of the Southern Regional Council's history and make-up will give some idea of the far-fetched nature of Craft's attack.

The organizing meeting of the Council was held in response to a "call" issued by some of the South's finest leadership, including:

C. H. Gillman, Georgia Director, C. I. O.
George L. Googe, Southern Director, A. F. L.
M. Ashby Jones, Baptist minister
Ryland Knight, Baptist minister
Rabbi David Marx, The Temple, Atlanta
Bishop Arthur J. Moore, The Methodist Church
Ralph McGill, The Atlanta Constitution
Stuart R. Oglesby, Presbyterian minister
Rt. Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Catholic Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta
Dean S. Paden, President, King Hardware Company
J. McDowell Richards, President, Columbia Theological Seminary
Bishop John Moore Walker, The Protestant Episcopal Church
Goodrich C. White, President, Emory University

Following the deliberations of this group and a subsequent conference with Southern Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered, the incorporators being Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, and Dr. Howard W. Odum.

Attached is a complete list of SRC's Board members, past and present, showing the dates served. It is obvious that the Board, from the beginning, has been composed overwhelmingly of Southerners whose record of patriotism and public service is above reproach.

Recognizing that most of these persons are unassailable even by his standards, Craft attempts to suggest that they have been deceived about the nature of the SRC and have lent their names to it unwittingly. This is untrue on its face, since the members of the Board receive full reports on the activities of the SRC and review them in detail at an annual session. The claim is even more conclusively refuted by the fact that the Executive Committee, which is elected by the Board, meets quarterly, intimately reviews the SRC's activities, and formulates the detailed policies of the organization. (The full minutes of these meetings are on file in the SRC's offices.) A list of the members of the Executive Committee, past and present, with their terms of service indicated, is also attached. No informed person could imagine that this group would direct or condone a Communist-influenced program.

From its inception, the SRC has had substantial contributions from many of the major religious groups (Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Society of Friends, Catholic, Jewish). Representatives of these and other religious groups have also participated actively in the SRC's affairs.

In view of the nature of the charges here considered, it is perhaps particularly pertinent to note the extent of Catholic participation in the SRC. One of the founders and a charter member of the SRC is the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Archbishop of Savannah-Atlanta. The Executive Committee has always included a Catholic clergyman. Mr. Paul D. Williams, a distinguished Catholic layman, a founder of the Catholic Committee of the South, and more recently a Knight of St. Gregory, was president of the SRC from 1945 through 1951. In April of this year, Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the SRC, received the award of the Catholic Committee of the South for his "significant contribution to the welfare of the South." The same award was conferred in previous years on Dr. Howard W. Odum, the first president of the SRC, and Dr. Guy B. Johnson, executive director from 1944 to 1947. For those who are aware of the Catholic Church's militant anti-Communism, these facts need no amplification.

The publications and public utterances of the SRC speak for themselves. They have been read, used, and acclaimed by hundreds of persons whose intelligence and loyalty are unquestioned. Far from "fomenting racial strife and hatred," as Craft would have it, the SRC has a wide reputation for temperateness and constructiveness. Two noted Southern journalists who are closely familiar with the SRC's work have given the following public estimates of it:

Ralph McGill, in The Atlanta Constitution: "The Southern Regional Council is an able and worthwhile organization working in the field of race relations. It has no radical tinge, but is, nevertheless, an aggressively energetic coordinating agency."

Hodding Carter, in Collier's: "The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is bi-racial, non-denominational and non-political. It does not indulge in tom-tom beating, parades or lengthy pronunciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's--or from the nation's concern."

GENERAL

The method which Craft has used in assembling and presenting his allegations against the SRC is by now a familiar one. The following points should be noted:

(1) He does not give any sources for his statements about the individuals attacked, except for two instances in which he cites the Daily Worker and another in which he mentions a former member of the Communist Party.

(2) Some of his "dossiers" on past and present Board members bear a close resemblance to the assortment of unverified reports, rumors, miscellaneous clippings, and old letterheads which comprise the "raw files" of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Although the Committee itself has stated that it cannot vouch for this unchecked and unevaluated material, unscrupulous individuals have been able to secure copies of it and use it for their irresponsible purposes.

(3) Although the past and present Board members of the SRC number 130, he comments on only 11 current Board members and 6 ex-Board members.

(4) He weaves in long, irrelevant passages about Communist activities and individuals that are in no way related to the SRC. This sort of purely verbal association is evidently designed to lend the appearance of substance to his unsubstantial charges.

(5) He cites perfectly innocent and respectable associations in such a way as to convey the impression that they are improper or subversive.

(6) As evidence of the irresponsibility of Craft's material, he lists as a Board member of the SRC one "Harry Stanley Brav." No such person has ever served on the Board, though Rabbi Stanley R. Brav, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, was a highly valued Board member until he moved out of the South in 1948.

(7) Craft makes no distinction as to the time, the nature, or the termination of the various affiliations of which he accuses directors and staff members of the SRC. It is no secret that Communist-front organizations have frequently made use of names without the permission or approval of the persons so named. It is also well known that many organizations which were entirely sound at the beginning were later infiltrated by Communists and Communist sympathizers; therefore, the time of joining and the time of withdrawal are of great importance to any real understanding of the association. It is obvious that any such understanding is alien to Craft's purpose.

LEAD ARTICLE, BEGINNING ON PAGE 1, ONE METHODIST VOICE

1. The first paragraph consists of a general indictment of the SRC unsupported by facts. The SRC is alleged to be carrying on an obnoxious program from a "point of advantage and influence"--i.e., the Wesley Memorial Building. It may be noted, in passing, that all stationery, publications, and news releases of the SRC bear the address 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E.; the SRC has never sought in any way to capitalize on the location of its offices.

2. Dr. Mitchell is described as "a former professor of Columbia University and a notorious Communist fronter." He is neither. He was an instructor in economics at Columbia from 1929 to 1935, though it is hard to see what relevance this is supposed to have.

3. The next paragraph attributes to an anonymous "reliable source" an account of a meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA, September 9, 1952, under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee. According to this account, the chairman is supposed to have said, "We have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that," after which Dr. Mitchell was called upon. The paragraph concludes with the statement that,"Dr. Mitchell did not deny that he was a member of the Communist Party."

This entire paragraph is as false in fact as it is vicious in implication. Attached are copies of signed statements by three persons who were present at the meeting and who declare unequivocally that no such incident took place. More than a dozen other reputable persons who were present can testify to the same point.

4. It is stated the SRC's publication New South was "consciously or unconsciously borrowed from the old official organ, New South, of the now defunct Communist originated and Communist inspired organization known as, 'The Conference for Human Welfare.'" This can only be described as hate-inspired nonsense. The SRC's publication was named New South in 1946 by the Executive Committee, after lengthy consideration of many possible titles. Neither the Committee nor the staff had ever heard of another publication of that name; the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (if that is the organization meant) never published anything by that title, to the best of our knowledge. The phrase "New South," as most schoolboys know, is taken from an historic address by Henry Grady. Apparently, Mr. Craft would attribute the origin of this famous phrase to the Communists!

5. In this paragraph and elsewhere in the paper, Craft makes much of the fact that several SRC Board members were at one time affiliated with the late Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This is one of the most shopworn methods used to discredit liberal-minded Southerners. Commenting on an attack upon Dr. Rufus E. Clement (almost identical with that in One Methodist Voice), The Atlanta Constitution editorialized on May 12, 1953:

> "A member of the Board has charged that Dr. Clement is a Communist sympathizer because he once belonged to the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This newspaper is proud of the fact that it contributed largely to the demise of that organization. We were twice threatened with lawsuits because of our exposure of it; therefore, we believe we have some authority to speak.

"The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was organized by honest, loyal Americans, with a viewpoint to organizing all constructive forces in the South to improve the South's economic and social status. It later was infiltrated by Communists, but for a good many years it was composed of and led by persons of unquestioned loyalty, during which time its membership was about 99.95 per cent loyal. It offers the typical example of a few rotten Communists spoiling a good barrel of apples.

"Even so, it was not until a good many years had passed, and after most of the membership had withdrawn, including Dr. Clement, that persons of suspected Communistic tendencies took over what remained of the organization. They did not long endure, largely because this newspaper exposed them and kept upon them the full light of publicity."

Ralph McGill, editor of The Constitution, who led the exposure of the Southern Conference in its latter years, was an incorporator of the SRC, and has been a close friend of its work ever since. During the few years of their co-existence, the two organizations were widely considered rival agencies, markedly different in ideology and approach to Southern problems. To suggest, as Craft does, that the SRC was related to, or sympathetic with the left-wing element in the Southern Conference is to fly in the face of incontrovertible facts.

6. Craft declares, "Mitchell was an endorser and sponsor of Brookwood College at Katonah, New York, which the American Federation of Labor put a ban on it because of the school's Communistic affiliations." Dr. Mitchell recalls that he taught a class at Brookwood College on one or two occasions in 1930 or 1931. Brookwood was then a widely respected workers' education center. Craft does not give the date when the AFL allegedly "put a ban" on the institution.

7. Craft charges that Dr. Mitchell "is affiliated with the notorious Communist organization, Civil Rights Congress." Dr. Mitchell's comment follows:

"Untrue, though in 1946 I permitted my name to be used in a newspaper ad as one of the sponsors of the first meeting of what became the Civil Rights Congress. This was the time when a movement was under way to repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Act, which forbade the use of injunctions in most labor disputes. I was asked to be a sponsor of an emergency meeting to form an organization to combat the movement to make these injunctions legal again. The great majority of those whose names were put to the invitation sent me were sound Americans with the good interests of the country at heart. I was, and am still, opposed to the use of injunctions in labor disputes. On the assumption that the proposed organization would work effectively against this practice, I permitted my name to be used as a sponsor for the emergency meeting. Within a few months, it became apparent that the resulting Civil Rights Congress was strongly influenced by Communists, and a year or so later, when the organization asked me again to be a sponsor of some meeting it was having, I refused. I never joined the Civil Rights Congress, am not and have never been a member of it, and have never attended any of its meetings."

8. The last paragraph makes no point at all, apparently having been added for suggestive effect. Dr. Mitchell was from February 1944 until about May 1945 regional director for the CIO political Action Committee, covering the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, and for part of the time, Louisiana. No responsible person supposes that the Political Action Committee was Communist-dominated; the charge was certainly never made against Dr. Mitchell's office. Craft does not identify the mysterious "Mr. Morgan" or explain what a telephone call to him is supposed to have meant.

1. The first paragraph states Mrs. Tilly was "a sponsor of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in Chicago, May, 1950" and proceeds to discuss in detail the leftist record of persons described as her "fellow sponsors." Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or attend the so-called "Mid-Century Conference for Peace and has never even heard of the individuals described as her "fellow sponsors."

2. Paragraph 2 states: "According to the letterhead of the Communist front known as THE COMMITTEE FOR PEACEFUL ALTERNATIVES TO THE ATLANTIC PACT, Mrs. M. E. Tilly is listed as a member of the Executive Board." The first time Mrs. Tilly heard of this charge was in June 1951. She promptly sent a registered letter to the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives, demanding that her name be removed from its letterhead, if it was being so used.

3. Paragraph 3: "Mrs. Tilly was also asponsor of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax which is cited as a Communist Front by the California Committee on Un-American Activities." Mrs. Tilly, along with a great many other leading Americans who oppose any tax on the right to vote, was at one time affiliated with this organization. It is interesting that the California Committee, which is notorious for its loose allegations, should be the authority for the charge that this organization was a Communist front. So far as is known, no responsible Federal agency ever declared it to be so during the period of Mrs. Tilly's membership.

4. Paragraph 4: "She was a sponsor of the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties, according to the Daily Worker, April 16, 1948." This doubtful source to the contrary, Mrs. Tilly did not sponsor or participate in anything called the National Citizens Conference on Civil Liberties.

5. Paragraph 5: "Mrs. Tilly was one of the initiators of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act and appears as Mrs. M. E. Tilly on the letterhead while her signature appears with other signers of an open letter to all Congressmen as Dorothy Tilly." What is the point? Is the fact that Mrs. Tilly signed her name in two different ways supposed to be subversive? No allegation is made against the Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act. In any case, Mrs. Tilly resigned from the Committee--for quite other reasons--more than a year ago.

6. Paragraph 6: "Mrs. M. E. Tilly's name appears on the official roll of the Methodist Federation for Social Action several years as an executive member." That is true. Mrs. Tilly withdrew from the MFSA in 1949.

7. Paragraph 7: "Mrs. M. E. (Dorothy) Tilly of Atlanta, Ga., is listed as a member of 'The National Citizens' Political Action Committee.'" When this organization was founded in 1944, it commanded the respect and participation of a host of reputable citizens. There was no suggestion that it was anything but a sincere and honest movement. Only in its latter days--well after Mrs. Tilly and other influential citizens had ceased to be active in it--did the NCPAC fall under Communist influence, and shortly thereafter it was merged into a left-wing organization with which Mrs. Tilly had no connection whatever. Since the NCPAC has been out of existence for years, Craft's use of the present tense to suggest a current affiliation is either inexcusable ignorance or downright deceit.

8. Paragraph 8: "Mrs. Tilly's name appears on the letterhead of the 'American Civil Liberties Union' as a member of the national Committee that was used in October, 1951, which the California Committee on Un-American Activities says it may be definitely classed as a Communist front or 'transmission belt' organization." Mrs. Tilly's affiliation with the American Civil Liberties Union requires neither defense nor apology. It is a well established fact that the ACLU is a non-Communist organization. One can only wonder at the reliability of Craft's source in view of the following statement which appears in a document issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee on February 17, 1952 (quoted by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam in the Washington Post): "The American Civil Liberties Committee has never been cited as Red-dominated, or as Communist, by any official organization charged with the duty of investigating subversive activity."

Same paragraph: "She has been a member of the National Board, 'Americans for Democratic Action.'" Craft does not explain what this is supposed to mean. The Americans for Democratic Action is a militantly anti-Communist organization.

Same paragraph: "She was listed as one of the signers of a statement on Korea, released by the Communist inspired 'Committee for Peaceful Alternatives--' as shown in the Daily Worker of July 28, 1950, the official organ of the Communist Party in the U. S." Mrs. Tilly has never signed any statement on Korea. The half-truth behind this charge may be the fact that in February 1950 Mrs. Tilly joined a number of religious leaders in signing an open letter to the President. This letter urged the President to work for a practical agreement on international control of atomic energy--an objective which has been an official part of U. S. policy since 1945. The Korean war had not begun--or even been foreseen--in February 1950.

9. Paragraph 9: "Mrs. Tilly, according to the Daily World, April 6, 1952 addressed a three days' Women's Conference on World Peace at Daytona Beach, Florida called by the notorious Communist fronter Dr. Mary McCleod Bethune founder of the National Council of Negro Women." This characterization of Mrs. Bethune is an unwarranted smear of a great American woman who has won national and international honor for her many constructive activities. Mrs. Tilly was present at the meeting in question, along with leading representatives of Protestant, Jewish and Catholic church women; the vice-chairman of the World Council of Churches; and the National Committeewomen of both the Democratic and the Republican Parties.

BOARD MEMBERS

Eleven current Board members of the SRC are accused of Communist-front affiliations. These persons were elected to the Board in consideration of their recognized worth and service to the South and the Nation. The high positions of public esteem which they occupy are enough alone to discredit this implied attack on their loyalty. In any case, men of the stature of Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Dr. F. D. Patterson, Dr. Will Alexander, and the rest, require no defense by us.

The same may be said of the two persons who hold no position in the SRC but are attacked as having taken part in SRC activities--i.e., Dr. Channing Tobias and Mr. Frank McCallister.

It may be noted that at least two of these persons have had occasion to repudiate these same charges in more important connections. In the Senate hearing on his appointment as delegate to the United Nations, Dr. Tobias was confronted by the same kind of irresponsible attack as appears in One Methodist Voice. After hearing his testimony, the Senate committee unanimously confirmed his appointment, as did the full Senate in a subsequent session. Dr. Rufus E. Clement was similarly attacked by certain members of the Stlanta City Executive Committee who sought to have him disqualified as a candidate for the Board of Education. Following a hearing at which Dr. Clement testified, the Committee dropped the charges and Dr. Clement was overwhelmingly elected by the people.

Six ex-Board members are mentioned in One Methodist Voice. Two of these, to our knowledge, have been identified with leftish or Communist infiltrated movements--largely, however, in the last four years, when they were no longer members of the Board of SRC. In any case, these two former Board members--out of a total of 130--participated only in the early years of the SRC and played no significant part in the policy-making activities of the Board.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

My attention has been called to the April, 1953 issue of the publication, "One Methodist Voice". To say that I found the material in this publication shocking, is to indulge in understatement. I have known the work of the Southern Regional Council intimately for the last several years, and I have been well informed about the activities of Dr. George Mitchell, the director of the Council.

I have always regarded the Southern Regional Council and Dr. Mitchell as being in the forefront of the enemies of communism, not only in this country but even more importantly in the international arena. By attempting to extend the horizons of democracy, you have been contributing materially to the constant battle which the American way of life must consistently wage against the totalitarianism of the Soviets.

It so happens that I was present at the meeting held at the Atlanta YWCA on September 9th, 1952 under the sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee, and which is described in "One Methodist Voice". The purpose of this meeting was a highly admirable one, one which any person with religious convictions must admire -- and that is the attainment and advancement of peace. During the course of the discussion, attention was directed to the fact that an important enemy of peace is communist Russia and that the intransigence of the Soviet leaders is a tremendous obstacle to the achieving of international understanding.

The description of this meeting as contained in "One Methodist Voice" leaves me completely bewildered. Dr. Mitchell was never by direct statement nor by implication identified as a communist or as a spokesman for communism. Dr. Mitchell never indicated by statement or by implication that he is a communist or a spokesman for the communists. I was present during the entire session and I have a good and retentive memory. I never heard the words uttered ascribed either to Dr. Mitchell or to the Chairman.

Sincerely yours,

Alexander F. Miller

Dear Sir:

I have recently seen a printed sheet which charged that at a meeting at the Atlanta YWCA, sponsored by the American Friends Service Commission, the presiding officer made the statement, "We have a member of the Communist Party here." The printed sheet stated that this information was furnished by a "reliable source."

I wish to state that I was present at the meeting and at no time during the meeting did the presiding officer or any other person in the room make the statement or any statement that could have been construed to mean the same thing. In fact, it seemed to me that the members of the group showed real concern for the values of democracy and Christianity, as applied to human relationships.

Yours very truly,

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

The ONE METHODIST VOICE, April 1953, reports that you are singled out as a Communist at a meeting in the Y.W.C.A., September 9, 1952. I attended this meeting and remember that Mr. Roosa, from Greensboro, was presiding most of the time. I am sure that Mr. Roosa never made the statement "we have a member of the Communist Party here, let's hear what he has to say to that." I feel very definitely that some one is putting words into the mouth of Mr. Roosa as well as misquoting you. I hope some protest will be made.

Sincerely yours,

HARRIS CHARGES SRC HAVEN FOR RED FRONTERS

Says It Could Become Party Apparatus of the South

By Peter S. Willett

ATLANTA, June 28 (UP).

Political leader Roy Harris of Augusta today accused the anti-segregation Southern Regional Council of being a "haven for known Communist fronters" and "could well become become the Communist party apparatus of the South."

Harris charged in his personal newspaper that the S.R.C., financed partly by the Ford Foundation, is "the successor" to the Old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a "Communist-front" by a House un-American activities committee.

"Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, pratically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the S.C.H.W.," he said.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said his office is investigating the S.R.C. for possible prosecution under the state's anti-subversive act. Cook said his office is investigating "every group" where there is the slightest suspicion of any subversion.

He said he would never release any details of the investigation since "we are not going to take a chance on smearing any individual."

Cook said that evidence indicating anyone was a Communist would be turned over to a grand jury and information released to the public would have to come from a grand jury.

The article in the Augusta Courier said "stripped of all its window dressing, the aims, purposes and platform of the Communist party the defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare and now Southern Council are one and the same."

But a council spokesman denounced Harris' "unfounded attack" as a "politically-motivated essay in character assassination" and in effect dared him to prove his charges.

"There is a Georgia statute which makes it a crime to belong to a Communist-frong organization," the spokesman said. "If Mr. Harris were making his charges in good faith, he would have recourse to due process of law instead of cunningly distorted propaganda."

The council was chartered in 1944 by Methodist Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta; Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of the Atlanta Negro University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk Negro University and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina.

Harris called McGill the "chief apologist" for the SRC and also a member of the old SCHW who got out when it became apparent that communist elements were being attracted to it. Then, the editor helped the outfit, Harris said.

McGill's paper later said the SCHW was "organized by honest loyal Americans with a viewpoint to organizing all constructive forces in the South . . . it offers the typical example of a few rotten Communists spoiling a good barrel of apples."

McGill said, however, that "there is no connection even remote between the Southern Regional Council and the Southern Council for Human Welfare. They were never at any time even remotely related."

"The Southern Regional Council is highly approved by the attorney general of the United States, by the FBI and by all reputable agencies. It has never been accused of being subversive. It has been strongly supported by the Roman Catholic Church and the Protestant churches, all of whom have representatives in it and it is and has been a conservative research organization."

The Ford Foundation recently granted the Council $240,000 to expand its activities -- mainly to staff branch offices to support the U. S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Here is a rough first effort at a brief outline of the study on local and state human relations agencies.

I am still working through some of the data, but after your criticism of this I will start immediately on a detailed outline of sections 2 and, later, section 3. In a conference with Harold, it was suggested that I prepare this manuscript without too much attention to the requirements of its final form in terms of language, styling, focus, and so on. It was his suggestion that he would re-work the material along this line. Even so, I would like to tailor it to these requirements as closely as possible so that his editorial work and rewriting would be at a minimum in the interest of economy of effort.

The greatest gap in this "quickie" study now appears to be data on Southern experience at the local and state levels. This is the spot at which the SRC should be able to be of most help. What sources or experiences can you suggest? What criticisms and suggestions do you have?

FIRST ROUGH OUTLINE OF MANUSCRIPT ON LOCAL AND STATE HUMAN RELATIONS AGENCIES

1. The New Situation in the South.

This will be an introductory and brief section dealing with the "trend" toward more equal facilities and more non-segregated opportunities for Negroes with special reference to the recent Supreme Court Decision on public education. This section should be only a few paragraphs in length and will serve as a rationale for this study.

2. Meeting the Situation in Local Communities.

This section will contain the bulk of the study.

(1) Non-South Experience.

The existence of private agencies and citizen groups prior to the Detroit Riot of 1943 and the spread of Mayors' Committees of a private, quasi-public and public nature since that time.

A rapid review of the nature, structure, and functions of these groups.

The relation of these agencies to human rights, state laws, and city ordinances.

A case study or two from northern or western cities.

(2) Southern Experience.

The existence of local private agencies and citizen groups in various southern cities. The stimulus of the Supreme Court Decision in the setting up of Mayors' Committees and other such groups.

A few case studies of efforts along these lines: Dade County Council on Community Relations, Rock Hill Council on Human Relations, the efforts in Charlotte, N. C. and Atlanta, Ga. toward establishing Mayor's Committees. Others?

(3) Proposals and Opportunities.

Here would appear the major construction work of this section. It would not be a blue-print for action. However, drawing upon the experiences reviewed and facing up to the new situation in the South, starting where the South is rather than where the North and West are, various suggestions will be made for action and organization from the informal citizen level to the formal local public agency level. The Southern context, opportunities and areas for study and action, principles, cautions, and problems growing out of the study will be set forth.

3. Meeting the Situation in the States.

(1) Non-South experience.

(2) Southern experience.

(3) Proposals and opportunities.

This section will do, in briefer compass, at the state level what section 2 attempts for local communities and cities.

4. SRC and the New Situation.

This section is suggested to "round out" the study. However, no work will be done on it here since this is assumed to be a staff function of SRC.

5. Resources for Further Study and Action.

(1) A brief list of books and pamphlets.

(2) A selected list of human relations agencies.

GEORGIA'S ROY HARRIS
. . . sees Red menace . . .

Bi-Racial Body Called Haven For Red Dupes

ATLANTA, June 27 (UP) — A Georgia political leader today accused the bi-racial Southern Regional Council, financed partly by the Ford Foundation, of being a "haven for known Communist fronters."

Roy V. Harris, a close behind-the-scenes friend of Gov. Herman Talmadge, said in his personal newspaper that the council "could well become the Communist Party apparatus in the South."

The Ford Foundation recently granted the council $240,000 to expand its activities—mainly to staff branch offices to support the U. S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

A council spokesman denounced Harris' "unfounded attack" as a "politically - motivated essay in character assassination" and in effect dared him to prove his charges.

"There is a Georgia statute which makes it a crime to belong to a Communist-front organization," the spokesman said. "If Mr. Harris were making his charges in good faith he would have had recourse to due process of law instead of cunningly distorted propaganda."

Harris, who has kept up a running attack against the Supreme Court segregation decision in his paper, the Augusta Courier, charged in the current issue that:

1. Two known Communists served on the Southern Regional Council's board of directors.

2. Thirty-eight other persons with "associations with Communist front" organizations served on the council board.

3. The defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare, branded as subversive by the House Committee on un-American Activities, was succeeded by the Southern Regional Council, and leadership of both groups was virtually the same.

"Stripped of all its window dressing, the aims, purposes and platform of the Communist Party, the defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare and now the Southern Regional Council are one and the same," Harris said.

A council spokesman contended that leadership of the group has been composed "overwhelmingly of Southerners whose record of patriotism and public service is above reproach." The council has major support from Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths, the spokesman said.

The council denied Harris' tieup between it and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The latter was organized in 1938 and existed until 1947 while the Southern Regional Council was chartered in 1944, the council said.

The Southern Regional Council was chartered in 1944 by Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist church, Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta (Negro) University, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University, and Dr. Howard W. Odum, of the University of North Carolina.

Serious Charges Which Demand A Serious Reply

The Augusta COURIER has raised serious charges against the Ford Foundation-financed Southern Regional Council. They are charges of such a nature that they demand a full and complete explanation by that bi-racial group which is working to destroy segregated schools in Georgia and the South.

Replying to the COURIER'S charges, an unnamed "spokesman" who obviously did not want his name revealed in connection with the organization, did not deny the charges but instead resorted to flimsy hedging. His statement answered nothing and attempted through raising a non-existent legal point to call attention away from the charges.

The point raised was that if officers of the Southern Regional Council were members of Communist-fronts why they have not been indicted under the Georgia Subversive and Sedition Act. Of course, no ground exists under the statute for such an indictment. As a matter of fact some of the leaders of this same Regional Council are those who sought behind the ing action and it is doubtful whether reinforcements in adequate numbers could be brought up in time.

Same Fate In addition to the NATO alliance, our government also has troops stationed throughout the world, primarily in countries that form a ring around the Communist empire. These troops are very limited in number and would suffer about the same fate as those stationed in Europe in case of all-out Communist attack.

America and her allies suffer in comparison with the Soviet Union and its satellites in terms of manpower.

Yet, on the other hand, we have a tremendous margin over them in terms of industrial capacity, engineering ability, scientific and inventive genius. We were the first to split the atom and release its gigantic power. The Russians only have been able to advance in this field with the aid of captured German scientists and traitors in our own country.

Striking Power The Russian Air Force is approximately twice the size of our own. In many respects its planes are equal to ours. They have recently demonstrated a large four-engine jet bomber that is comparable to our B-52 that could make bombing runs to the United States and return to their own land.

It seems to me that in the defense of our country we should emphasize those things in which we have advantages and by all means we should refrain from land combat with the Russians, Chinese and their satellites when they have manpower advantage over us of approximately ten to one.

Our defense should be predicated upon the world's mightiest air force. This air force should be capable of defensive as well as offensive action.

The greatest deterrent to the Kremlin is the belief that in a matter of minutes the American Strategic Air Force could destroy millions of Russians, including their military potential.

Georgia's Parade of Progress

From—THE MACON TELEGRAPH AND NEWS

One of the most impressive stories of Georgia progress is the report issued last week by Gov. Herman Talmadge to members of the state legislature.

True, such a report would be expected to present a favorable picture, but despite its political nature, the facts are undisputable evidence of our state's achievements in virtually every field.

Further, current independent reports of non-political sources bear out the progress Georgia is making and our state's relatively high economy among other southeastern states.

It would be impossible to even summarize the contents of Governor Talmadge's 121-page story in so short a space as this editorial.

Serious Charges Which Demand A Serious Reply

The Augusta COURIER has raised serious charges against the Ford Foundation-financed Southern Regional Council. They are charges of such a nature that they demand a full and complete explanation by that bi-racial group which is working to destroy segregated schools in Georgia and the South.

Replying to the COURIER'S charges, an unnamed "spokesman" who obviously did not want his name revealed in connection with the organization, did not deny the charges but instead resorted to flimsy hedging. His statement answered nothing and attempted through raising a non-existent legal point to call attention away from the charges.

The point raised was that if officers of the Southern Regional Council were members of Communist-fronts why they have not been indicted under the Georgia Subversive and Sedition Act. Of course, no ground exists under the statute for such an indictment. As a matter of fact some of the leaders of this same Regional Council are those who sought behind the scenes to "water down" this law when it was passed by the Georgia General Assembly.

The Augusta newspaper, in a lengthy article documented by copious citations from the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and the Attorney General of the United States, reported results of an investigation by it into the membership, activities and affairs of the Southern Regional Council.

The newspaper charged as follows:

"1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

"2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates in the party.

"3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

"4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a Communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

"5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to 'promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions' to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group."

We have known all along that there is nothing Southern, nor Regional about the Southern Regional Council, its membership or its aims. It is as alien to the way of life embraced by the South as independence is to the satellite nations enslaved by Soviet Russia.

The Southern Regional Council is an inter-racial organization in the truest sense of the word. It is as dedicated to destroying segregation in the South as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Augusta COURIER charges that SRC's Board of Directors is composed of men and women with records of affinity for Communist-front groups and causes, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and citations by the Attorney General of the United States.

The Council, under the direction of Dr. George S. Mitchell, espouses ideologies completely foreign to the South and is dedicated to the overthrow of every tradition and institution held dear by the region.

The Council's statement of policy dedicates it to a South "free of the stultifying inheritance of the past . . . where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit and will no longer be imposed."

Had the Ford Foundation bothered to check the background of this organization and its members with either the Un-American Activities Committee or the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it could have learned these things for the price of two three-cent postage stamps. Therefore, the only conclusion that can be drawn is that those in the Ford Foundation responsible for this grant are in sympathy with the avowed purposes of the Southern Regional Council and made no attempt to investigate it.

The man responsible for the grant is Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, former Chancellor of the University of Chicago. It is he who has been making speeches in his capacity as Associate Director of the Ford Foundation advocating an end to racial segregation and proposing complete integration of the races. It is he whose record, according to the records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and material appearing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, shows a particularly consistent attraction to Communist-front causes.

That this grant has met with revulsion among true Southerners is evidenced by the action of the Association County Commissioners of Georgia in condemning it at its annual convention earlier this year.

We cannot believe that this action has the understanding approval of the heirs of the late Henry Ford, that great automotive genius who made his fortune under the system the Ford Foundation now seems bent on destroying. We cannot believe that those in control of the Ford Motor Company now will let it stand.

Therefore, for all true Southerners, we suggest to the Ford Motor Company and the Ford Foundation that they do two things:

1. Revoke this grant and thus serve notice that it will have no truck with schemes to tear down traditions and constitutional government in any section of our great nation.

2. Discharge this man Hutchins and thus serve notice that the Ford fortune as dispensed by the Ford Foundation will be used for philanthropy and not political or sociological crusades.

Only in so doing can the Ford Motor Company and the Ford Foundation regain the confidence of their friends and well wishers in the South.

Striking Power The Russian Air Force is approximately twice the size of our own. In many respects its planes are equal to ours. They have recently demonstrated a large four-engine jet bomber that is comparable to our B-52 that could make bombing runs to the United States and return to their own land.

It seems to me that in the defense of our country we should emphasize those things in which we have advantages and by all means we should refrain from land combat with the Russians, Chinese and their satellites when they have manpower advantage over us of approximately ten to one.

Our defense should be predicated upon the world's mightiest air force. This air force should be capable of defensive as well as offensive action.

The greatest deterrent to the Kremlin is the belief that in a matter of minutes the American Strategic Air Force could destroy millions of Russians, including their military potential.

Herman E. Talmadge

Georgia's Parade of Progress

From—THE MACON TELEGRAPH AND NEWS

One of the most impressive stories of Georgia progress is the report issued last week by Gov. Herman Talmadge to members of the state legislature.

True, such a report would be expected to present a favorable picture, but despite its political nature, the facts are undisputable evidence of our state's achievements in virtually every field.

Further, current independent reports of non-political sources bear out the progress Georgia is making and our state's relatively high economy among other southeastern states.

It would be impossible to even summarize the contents of Governor Talmadge's 121-page story in so short a space as this editorial column. The report is chock full of statistics and comparative figures which show graphically what the story tells.

Here are some of the most important ones:

EDUCATION — Common school appropriations from Nov. 17, 1948 through Jan. 1, 1955 will total $451,688,542; compared with a total of $407,798,159 spent between 1871, the year the first appropriation for public education was made, and Nov. 17, 1948. Comparative figures for a decade, the first figure representing the school year 1943-44 and the second figure representing the year 1953-54 show:

Education appropriations $17,995,210; $99,890,557.
Teachers salaries $10,995,880; $71,257,400.
Numbers of teachers 21,195; 25,094.
Average annual salary $518; $2,820.

PUBLIC WELFARE—In 1945-46 Georgia's welfare program totaled $11,262,813 of which the state put up $5,068,329. This fiscal year the total will be $58,088,756 with the state appropriating $14,956,508. Number of persons on the welfare rolls has increased from 83,666 to 136,553 persons.

PUBLIC HEALTH—A total of 141 projects has been undertaken at a cost of $56,146,901 under the federal Hill-Burton plan enacted in 1947. These include 51 new hospitals, 68 health centers, 15 hospital additions. The state's share of the cost has been $13,103,009.

HIGHWAYS—Contracts let by the Talmadge administration through Dec. 31, 1953 totaled $189,915,300 of which almost $42,000,000 went exclusively for the construction of farm-to-market roads and the remainder for state and federal routes. The program has included work on 7,825 miles of state and federal routes and 4,957 miles of post roads, the greatest rural road program in Georgia's history.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY—In 1946 Georgia had 4,488 industrial plants employing 261,941 persons who produced goods valued at $1,637,040,000. Today approximately 7,000 plants employ 312,000 persons and produce goods valued at more than $4,000,000,000 annually. Georgia lead the entire South in industrial development last year with 270 new or expanded plants.

And so the story goes.

One independent source, the U. S. Department of Commerce, reported last week that Georgia had a 24 per cent increase in the number of newly incorporated businesses during the first quarter of this year over the corresponding period of 1953.

Still another independent source, Manufacturers Record Magazine, reports in its June issue that Georgia led the South and the national average in business volume for this same comparative period.

Georgia's parade of progress marches on!

ANOTHER STUPID INQUIRY

Under the conditions laid down by Chairman Reece the suspension of public hearings by the special House of Representatives committee to investigate foundations is inexcusable. Twelve witnesses have so far been heard in public session. Nine of these have attacked the foundations—on grounds fantastic almost beyond belief, as we have pointed out before. The committee thus far has called only one witness for the defense. To stop hearings now places the committee in an indefensible position. Even though it will admit written statements for the foundations, and continue its investigation in private, statements can never offset the effect of the attacks which the committee has featured in its public hearings.

The history of this committee has been a disgrace to Congress. There was no need for it to begin with. A special committee of the Eighty-second Congress with the very same assignment, under the chairmanship of the late Eugene Cox, made a thorough investigation of foundations. In supporting the resolution to make the first study Mr. Cox made a bitter attack on foundations, but, on the basis of the most detailed reports as to their activities for the past twenty-five years, the committee ended with a unanimous recognition of the enormous public service which foundations have rendered. The committee found only a few minor mistakes of judgment in supporting people and projects with Communist connections. Mr. Reece himself was a member of the Cox committee. Even though he attended only three of its meetings—because of illness in his family, he has said—he should have known better than to plow the same field all over again, even to get publicity for himself. Further study of foundations, if any were needed, had far better have been left to two regular committees of the House: the Ways and Means Committee, already charged with the study of tax-exempt organizations, and the Un-American Activities Committee.

In spite of all this—and with a background of political maneuvering not on the public record—the House voted, 209 to 163, with sixty-nine not voting, to authorize "a full and complete investigation and study * * * to determine if any foundations * * * are using their resources for purposes other than the purposes for which they were established, and especially to determine which * * * are using their resources for un-American and subversive activities, for political purposes, propaganda or attempts to influence legislation."

The activities of the Reece committee have been a travesty of this assignment. Far from "a full and complete study" Mr. Reece, often over the vehement objections of committee members Wayne L. Hays and Gracie Pfost, has staged a crude and ignorant attack on foundations through a series of public hearings featuring the reports of staff members and a few witnesses, none of whom gave evidence of the thoroughgoing objective knowledge of foundations which the occasion required.

These witnesses for the prosecution have failed to cite, as far as we are aware, a single specific instance of a foundation engaging in "un-American and subversive activities" (defined by the committee's research director as "any action having as its purpose the alteration of either the principle or the form of the United States Government by other than constitutional means") or even in political propaganda or "attempts to influence legislation" as these terms are commonly understood or defined by the Bureau of Internal Revenue for tax-exemption purposes.

We urge the committee to reconsider its decision. It should wind up its affairs at once with a pronouncement that it has found no evidence of such wrongdoing and that none of the attacks on the foundations staged by it needs be dignified by further answer from those which have been so stupidly maligned.

On The North Side Lines

By Matt G. Perkins

Sunnyside, an apparently peaceful little business community on Peachtree road near Wieuca, has no peace except for a little while at a time.

It seems that Sunnyside was practically born in trouble. The place hadn't been named more than a month or two, when on that sad day back in 1925 one Mel Gore emptied a six-shooter at close range into the body of "Buddy" Cheek, a groceryman. (I'm not sure, but I believe that Gore was the first to die in Georgia by the chair and push-button method.)

Now, we don't mean to imply that Sunnyside is about to have another shootin' scrape, but just the same, peace does not reign supreme in Sunnyside today.

A Mr. Matthews, an up-and-coming groceryman, wants to build a bigger store to take care of his customers, and a Mr. Smith, don't want Mr. Matthews to add the new space to the old store.

The law has told Mr. Matthews to sink no shovel in the ground and drive no nail in a board until there can be a hearing.

Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Matthews are good business men, and both love a dollar, but they love peace and dignity more. So, this will probably be the mildest "war" Sunnyside has ever had.

Zone Rule Debate Delaying Matthews On His Expansion

A temporary injunction has been invoked to delay building operations that will mean more than doubling in size by J. D. Matthews of his Matthews Supermarket on Peachtree road, at Sunnyside, the legal action having been started by Raymond T. Smith and Thelma W. Smith, of Kingsboro road, owners of the property the Northside Pharmacy occupies next door to the Matthews operation.

The temporary injunction was obtained just three days before the first shovel was to be sunk into the ground to get the Matthews improvement under way in a development to cost approximately $150,000.

Non-Conformity Charged

The point of zoning commission debate offered by Smith was that the new Matthews building, planned by the North Side's Ellis Williams, owner of the property, and Matthews, the leassee, does not conform with a current city zoning regulation which requires all build ings on Peachtree road to be set back 40 feet from the thoroughfare. Variances have been granted to other property owners, some of whose buildings are recent additions to this block.

Mr. Williams tried to get the city to condemn the existing property on Peachtree Road and cut off the front of the existing buildings in that stretch of commercial property to conform with the regulation. The city protested that this could not be done; that it has too many similar cases for which it would be setting precedent.

North Side ROTC Middies On Cruise In War Training

Six North Side boys, among 700 Navy ROTC midshipmen on their summer training cruise, left Corpus Christi, Texas, this week for Little Creek, Va., where they will complete their training in amphibious warfare.

They are, Robert A. Johnston, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnston, of Powers Ferry road; John A. Neal, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Neal, of Garden lane; Robert C. Nygaard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Nygard, of Powers Ferry road, and James W. Benson, son of Mr. and Mrs. M L. Benson, of Piedmont avenue. All of these boys are students at Georgia Tech.

Theres no place supreme in Sunny-

The law has told Mr. Matthews to sink no shovel in the ground and drive no nail in a board until there can be a hearing.

Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Matthews are good business men, and both love a dollar, but they love peace and dignity more. So, this will probably be the mildest "war" Sunnyside has ever had.

Back in the days following World War II Sunnyside had some real scraps. The worst one was between a young man named Monroe Dodd, the Gulf Oil Company, and the venerable Henry A. Alexander.

Mr. Dodd ran a Gulf station which was partly on Gulf Oil property, but the other part was on Mr. Alexander's land. The oil company cancelled Mr. Dodd's lease and forbade him to use the pumps. But, Mr. Dodd by the light of the moon and electricity, dug new pits for new pumps one night and when the sun had risen over Sunnyside, Mr. Dodd was selling gasoline and lots of it.

That isn't all. Mr. Dodd got several huge chairs and padlocked the part of Gulf's station which was on Mr. Alexander's land, and Gulf didn't bother to cut the chains, and Dodd kept on selling gasoline, but not Gulf No-Nox.

Finally, Gulf and Mr. Dodd settled the feud and Mr. Dodd moved to Daytona Beach. The last we heard of him he had a string of cottages on South Daytona Beach nearly a mile long and was worrying nights because he had more money than he knew what to do with.

Sunnyside has had two or three other scraps in the last five or six years, most of them involving the building plans of Ellis Williams, the singer. Mr. Williams not only has a fine tenor voice, but he plays any woodwinds instrument well enough to have a chair in Mr. Toscanini's or anybody else's orchestra. But Mr. W.'s utterances, as he sought to put through his Sunnyside building plans, with first one and then another trying to block him, were not musical, although they were often sharp and flat.

Though Mr. Williams owns the property on which Mr. Matthews wants to build the addition to the Matthews super-market, he is not directly involved in the litigation, since Mr. Matthews has the ground under lease. Indications are that this "war in Sunnyside" will not go to the deep hatred and would-be-violent stage. If Mr. Matthews loses, he'll find some way to sell his groceries and meats to all who want them. And if Mr. Smith loses, he won't actually lose anything. To begin with, the type of building Mr. Matthews proposes, probably won't mar Mr. Smith's adjoining property. But even if the addition should slightly mar the Smith property, that particular block of Sunnyside property is so valuable that a few thousand more or less in property damage would bring no financial pain to the Raymond T. Smiths.

What D'ya Mean "Austerity" When Your Credit's Good For 10 Million?

(An Editorial)

A week ago we asked Marc Miller, our camera man, to see what he could get pictorially around the bond election polls. . . something for color, we explained. . . just to give folks a preview of what things will be like come September 8 when personalities will not be hiding behind screens made of the best in bond paper.

Just above is what he brought back.

"I didn't even have to set this one up for color," he commented. "There it was. . . just as natural. . . One gal in shorts voting. . . It was about 11 a. m. . . Only 15 voters had been in all morning. . . almost one voter to each poll worker so far. . The workers were just sitting there, looking sort of bored. . . the lone lady voter just popped in between home and the pool. . . Think the pools will still be open September 8? If not, what will we do to get them to vote?"

A promising young photographer is Marc Miller. He knows how to get the story into the picture, which seems to be what the public wants. We merely surmise that—the public must want something.

Only 11,000 voted in last week's bond election.

More than 100,000 didn't bother to vote, but they were registered.

It's easy to win an election like that. The whole thing could be swung by the city payroll vote and a few interested friends—just a few is all that can get in on $10,000,000 these days.

We don't know the name of the lady voter—or how she voted. We do know, though, that if she was writing down a bitter protest against a city being up to its ears in debt, she might as well have gone on to the pool without bothering to stop off at the polling booth.

We wonder if this is a preview of September 8. What candidates we have talked to are more worried about public apathy than they are about their opponents. If something could be done about that apathy, this $10,000,000 two-picture warning might be worth the price.

(From The Augusta Courier,) Editorial Dated July 19—

The exposure of the Southern Regional Council, beneficiary of a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, as a haven for known Communist-fronters and potentially the Communist Party appartus in the South, has created consternation among the liberal element in Atlanta and the South.

The Ford Foundation and the Southern Regional Council have been under fire for seeking to destroy segregation in the South.

Recent Developments

1. A hasty meeting between Morris Abram and Ralph McGill which resulted in a telephone call to the Attorney General of Georgia threatening him with opposition if he investigated the Southern Regional Council.

2. A statement by Morris Abram to the Attorney General of Georgia in a telephone conversation threatening the Editor of the Augusta COURIER.

3. A bitter letter from the Editor of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION to the Editor (Roy Harris) of The Augusta Courier denying that Ralph McGill had ever been a member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare;

4. The policy of the Atlanta newspapers (Journal & Constitution) to suppress all news not favorable to the SRC; and

5. Additional detailed information from the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and the records of the Attorney General of the United States regarding Communist-front activities and Communist Party membership of some of the leading lights of the Ford Foundation-financed Southern Regional Council.

Frying The Political Fat

By Lamar Q. Ball

You can write down on your political calendar that last Sunday—July 18, 1954—could very easily prove itself Demolition Day for Fred Hand, who up to that disastrous moment had been a serious contender gubernatorially in Georgia.

Nice boy, Fred! Lovely chap! Many fast friends! Too bad he let Fred Hand get out of the hands of Fred Hand.

In the adjoining column, for instance, we reprint from The Augusta Courier, Roy Harris's political newspaper, a sample of the sort of stuff two strutting nitwits off the political stage cooked up as the very thing that Fred Hand needed to be elected Governor of Georgia. They seemed to forget that it's Fred Hand who's running for Governor. These hams are always trying to muscle into somebody else's act. Why does Fred Hand let them do it? Why should he team up with a pair of editorial elephant dancers of the Ralph McGill and Roy Harris heavy-footed sort? That pair can wreck any stage.

Ladies and gentlemen, let me assure you that all this is part of the contract Fred Hand took over when he made the mistake of saying to the Coxpapers: "Yes, I'll be your candidate! At your terms!"

THERE IS NO QUARREL between Ralph McGill and Roy Harris. That business printed in the columns of The Augusta Courier (as we have reprinted it for you here) is just a touch of hokum.

You know how it is with professional wrestlers, don't you? That's the way it is with Roy Harris and Ralph McGill, who pride themselves on being the showmanship team of Georgia politics. For the last three or four weeks Roy Harris and Ralph McGill have been calling one another liars in letters and in print (Augusta Courier).

This reprint in the other column is the third or fourth of the week-by-week arguments they have been staging in the columns of the Roy Harris paper. The idea is to make you and me believe they hate each other. Actually they're as close to each other as McCarthy's Cohn is to McCarthy's Schine. It's real affection.

They genuinely believe that the two of them, in a political team are unbeatable.

THE IDEA IN ALL this war-to-the-death hooey is to get people out in the two-vote counties of Georgia believing that this Fred Hand must be an irresistible man, he must have plenty on the ball. Why, Fred he can get two implacable enemies on his side, working together, shoulder-to-shoulder for the election of Fred Hand! He must be the sort that can get all Georgia harmonized!

More than that, the purpose also is to spread the belief around Georgia that Coxpapers and the Atlanta City Gang are split wide open in this state race. You mustn't believe that either. McGill has merely gone Machiavelian in a great big way.

The News Notes———

Doctors who have leased office space—some really large quarters among them—are watching closely the fight Sam Massell Jr., builder of the new Cyrus Strickler Medical Building on Peachtree street, just north of Peachtree circle, is having with long-established home owners along Peachtree circle in Ansley Park. The residents, who have been promised in the Bartholomew plan nothing will be done to upset Ansley Park's historic residential sanctity, are complaining about the parking lot for Cyrus Strickler medic's clients that Massell has designed to adjoin their back yards, under some of their back bedroom windows. The fight is really serious. Doctors with leases are wondering what they'll do for office space if Massell does not produce the parking he promised medical men to get them away from Medical Arts or the Doctors Building. Strickler building construction is moving ahead fast toward the fall opening promised—but if there's not the parking promised, what'll the doctors do?

How's business? Couldn't be better, reports Frank Burson and who general manages the movement of money at Peachtree Federal and Loan Association, on Peachtree road. "Assets increased 20 per cent during the first six months of this year," reports Mr. Burson.

"SHORTY" DOYAL this week sets up North Side campaign headquarters in the old Jacobs drug store in the heart of Buckhead. At least, he is giving some warmth to what has been a bleak spot in the heart of Buckhead these last several months. He is in the race for the Fulton County seat in the Georgia State Senate and his effort will be to block the re-election of Everett Millican. He wants all Northsiders to be dropping by to hear the full story of why he is determined as he expresses it, to get the government of Atlanta and Fulton County "back into the hands of the people, where it belongs." He has some interesting stories about local government to tell. "And I've got some strong support," he says.

Williams Street Changes Helping Traffic On X-Way

Yesterday Northsiders found another "kink" taken out of their rush hour traffic tie-ups, with the opening of a revised traffic flow at the Williams street entrance at the South end of the North expressway.

Opening of the lanes eased the usual tie-up of cars entering the expressway moving into and out of the North Side, saving some of those valuable early-morning and late - afternoon minutes which can always be put to use.

The finest tires you can buy are 100% nylon-cord Dayton Blue Ribbon Thorobreds from Gordy Tire Co., 14th St. at expressway.

next door to the Matthews operation.

The temporary injunction was obtained just three days before the first shovel was to be sunk into the ground to get the Matthews improvement under way in a development to cost approximately $150,000.

Non-Conformity Charged

The point of zoning commission debate offered by Smith was that the new Matthews building, planned by the North Side's Ellis Williams, owner of the property, and Matthews, the leassee, does not conform with a current city zoning regulation which requires all buildings on Peachtree road to be set back 40 feet from the thoroughfare. Variances have been granted to other property owners, some of whose buildings are recent additions to this block.

Mr. Williams tried to get the city to condemn the existing property on Peachtree Road and cut off the front of the existing buildings in that stretch of commercial property to conform with the regulation. The city protested that this could not be done; that it has too many similar cases for which it would be setting precedent.

Matthews Was Trying

Matthews, the Williams' tenant, proposes to construct his new building in a curve so as not to mar the front of the Smith property. The city has given Matthews a variance to the building law at that point of Peachtree road, an evidence that zoning and building authorities are convinced of the soundnes of Matthew's present plan for the expansion of his supermarket operations at Sunnyside.

Matthews has two North Side stores, one at Pershing Ponit and this one at Sunnyside. The Sunnyside store now measures 40-foot front with 125-foot depth. He plans now a 105-foot width and a complete modernizing inside. He plans to air-condition; to install a complete gracery department, something not permitted in his cramped space of today. He will have a self-service and personal service meat department, as always; a complete bakery department and what he describes as the largest and most modern fresh fruit and vegetable department in Atlanta.

His Bakery A New Ideal

His bakery, he says will be the first complete bakery to be included in a supermarket's scope of operations anywhere in Atlanta. He will have what he describes as homemade style pies and pasteries and a refrigerated department for dainties requiring low temperatures.

The new fruit and vegetable department will be unusual featuring rare items such as out-of-season products from distant markets.

He will have a lounge where shoppers may rest before or during or after they make the rounds and there will be a corner to keep the children amused while parents shop.

Plenty Of Parking

Entrance to the building will be on the south side where there will be a vast parking lot and a canopy from the store to the lot. There wil be room for more than 200 cars.

The contract for the new building has been let to the Benning Construction Company. The work was to have begun last Monday but the injunction was served and the proceedings halted.

"I am not alarmed over the injunction," said Mr. Matthews. "Nothing will result but delay. Construction will begin as soon as possible."

Airborne Officer From Sandy Springs Weds Decatur Girl

Very special guests at the George Coleman home on Mt. Vernon highway during the week-end were the Coleman's son, Lt. George E. Coleman, Jr., of Fort Benning, and his bride, the former Barbara Lee Buice of Decatur.

Their marriage was an event of July 10, culminating a romance which began when the two were students at North Georgia College, in Dahlonega from which they graduated, she in home economics, and he in business administration. He is a graduate of North Fulton High school.

They were married in the chapel of the First Baptist Church of Decatur, with many Northsiders in attendance.

The newlyweds have an apartment in the Pine Terrace Apartments, Columbus, where Lt. Coleman has been assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division, in the communi cations school at Ft. Benning.

Candidates Assail Thompson

By International News Service

Georgia's gubernatorial hopefuls moved busily through new speaking engagements today with many of the verbal punches aimed in the direction of M. E. Thompson.

The Thompson strategy, on the other hand, appears to be that of "turning the other cheek," at least for now.

A Decatur radio station, WEAS, meanwhile, pin-pointed a side issue in the whirling campaign by asking House Speaker Fred Hand why his campaign manager, Roy Harris, is feuding with the Atlanta newspapers. The Journal and Constitution have endorsed Hand for the governorship.

Harris, Augusta attorney, has lambasted the newspapers for alleged refusal to publish criticism of the Southern Regional Council. Hand told WEAS news director Bob Siegrist he knows nothing about the regional council, an economic-social study group operating in Atlanta.

In a speech prepared for delivery at Claxton, Hand called for a "businessman's administration" of state affairs.

Hand took two long pokes yesterday at two opponents, Thompson and Marvin Griffin, charging one could not be trusted and the other was jealous.

Meanwhile the candidates continued to vie with each other in obtaining endorsements. Thompson headquarters announce the support of Ivan Allen, Jr., Atlanta business and civic leader. Three state officials endorsed Griffin. They are Lawton Griffin, Eastman; Vaughn Rice, Hiawassee; and Senator J. C. Lord of Harrison.

Charlie Gowen, speaking in Lyons, attacked insurance companies saying they should live up to policy agreements. He added that hospital and hospitalization insurance rates can be reduced in Georgia. Gowen took a jab at the merit system saying "it can be improved".

In the Fourth District Congressional race, State Senator Robert H. Jordan withdrew from the race leaving three candidates vying for the seat of the late A. Sidney Camp.

Albert Wallace of Newnan was named as Frank Adamson's campaign manager. Adamson was the only candidate who qualified before Camp's death.

In the comptroller general race, Joe Miles charged that incumbent Zack Cravey is making a false charge of rate cutting to lure votes. Miles said Cravey's order to cut fire insurance rates is scheduled to become effective September 1, but he predicted that Cravey will cancel the order if he is renominated.

One of the lieutenant governor aspirants, Ernest Vandiver, lashed out at the supreme court school segregation decision saying, "they should have let us work out our own problems." He pledged to keep Georgia's schools segregated.

In the current gubernatorial talkathon, Gowen speaks at Swainsboro, Dublin, and Macon today. Griffin will talk in Homer and Royston. Linder will address a rally in Cuthbert. Thompson will be in Covington and Hand will speak before Savannah Kiwanians.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

Owing to the fact that your letter of August 4 was forwarded to me here, I have been considerably delayed in replying.

As one of those who issued the call for the meeting at which the Southern Regional Council was organized in 1943, I wish to declare categorically that this organization was not formed as successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, with which I have never had any relationship whatever. The Southern Regional Council came into existence as a result of a belief shared by many individual Southerners- some of these being persons of distinguished leadership - that such a Council could make a real contribution to the life and progress of our Southern States in our time. It is a thoroughly patriotic organization, loyal to the ideals and the Constitution of the United States of America.

Sincerely yours,

My dear Governor Talmadge:

Friends have informed me that in your broadcast over WAGA-TV Tuesday evening, October 26, you made reference to the Southern Regional Council as a Communist organization.

Such a statement is without any basis in fact. The Southern Regional Council has never been cited by any official body as a Communist front or identified in any way with the Communist movement.

We request an early retraction by you of your unfair and untrue accusation against the Southern Regional Council.

Respectfully,

George S. Mitchell

One-Way 'Experts'

10-4

To The News and Courier:

"The South and the Race Problem, If Any" is the subject of a panel of "experts" to be discussed at the annual convention of the National Conference of Editorial Writers at Asheville, N.C., Oct. 6-9, with 200 editors attending from the U.S. and Canada. Such a discussion to be fair and factual should present unbiased viewpoints from all sides of the question.

But this vital subject, the "Race Problem," is scheduled for discussion by the following three speakers: (1) Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College (Negro), a member, sponsor or official of several organizations cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee and the U. S. Attorney General as Communist or Communist - front, as per his record published in the Augusta (Ga.) Courier, Aug. 16; (2) George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, formerly a member of the Board of Representatives of the Communist - front Southern Conference for Human Welfare (see page 139 of House Un-American Activites Committee report of July 21, 1947) and (3) Harry S. Ashmore, editor of The Arkansas Gazette.

Mays is a member of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council, 38 of whose directors and officers are exposed by The Augusta Courier as having been associated with Communist-front groups or activities. The official monthly publication of the Southern Regional Council is called New South. Note that in August 1938 there was launched "the New South, an organ of the (Communist) party which was edited by Paul Crouch, Benjamin Davis, James W. Ford, Ted Wellman, and Henry Winston (notorious Negro Communist). It propagandized for certain issues which in time were taken over by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare." (See House Un-Amer. Acts. Com. report, July 21, 1947, page 137.)

Is this a mere coincidence?

Harry Ashmore is author of "The Negro and the Schools," a publication which fails to mention certain facts essential to complete discussion of this subject. It is evident that this group of 200 editors most probably will be given biased misinformation on the "Race Problem" in the South — unless some reliable speaker is secured to present the other side of this question.

The Honorable Eugene Cook
Attorney General
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Cook:

We were somewhat concerned by a news broadcast on Monday to the effect that you might be considering an investigation of the Southern Regional Council upon some theory of its alleged subversive nature.

We are gratified to observe in today's Constitution that you had been incorrectly quoted and did not contemplate such an investigation any more than you contemplated it against the American Legion or the Baptist Church.

We do not wish to seem to be unduly proud of our personnel. However, it is our conviction that the men and women who compose the organization, its Board of Directors, and its staff, will compare favorably with any group in the South. Each of them has a reputation which may be damaged by carelessly initiated investigations or rumors of investigations. It is encouraging to note that you are sensitive to the value of a good name and will not impair that value unless there is substantial reason for you to do so.

Your disclaimer of any present purpose to take action which would be detrimental to many of the South's foremost citizens, in our opinion, reflects a proper conception of the duties of your position.

Yours very truly,

M. A. Wright

Probe of Group Denied by Cook

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook Tuesday branded broadcast reports he is investigating the Southern Regional Council as false.

The attorney general said he would investigate the activities of any organization, including even the American Legion and Baptist Church, if evidence warranted it. He said he has no evidence concerning the Southern Regional Council.

Holiday at Camp

WAS

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Democratic Party of the State of Georgia in convention duly assembled in the City of Macon on this September 30, 1954, as follows:

First: We condemn the Supreme Court of the United States for the decision which it rendered against the separate public schools. We denounce said decision as a gross and flagrant abuse and perversion of power and authority, and we denounce the personnel of said Court for the rendition of this political opinion.

Second: We condemn President Eisenhower for his appointment to said Court of Chief Justice Warren, for his having caused said Brownell, as Attorney General of the United States, to urge the Court to make said decision, and for having set in motion the forces which led thereto.

Third: Said Southern Regional Council is condemned for its activity in support of said decision. In the judgment of this Convention the workings of said Southern Regional Council are a menace to the institutions of this State, and the people of Georgia, by the force of their opinions, should drive this organization from our midst.

Fourth: We deplore the conduct of those of the present leadership of the Georgia Education Association who have caused the great teaching profession of this State to be credited in the National press with acts and opinions contrary to the actual views of Georgia teachers, and out of harmony with the ideals of Georgians.

Fifth: We call upon our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States to introduce in that body appropriate Amendments to the Federal Judiciary Act, so that the Federal Courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States, may be stripped of all power and authority to decide cases against the public schools of Georgia or any other State of the Nation.

Sixth: It is the sense of the members of this Convention that said usurped decision of the Federal Supreme Court should not be accepted in this State, but that it should be resisted.

Seventh: We applaud the position of our distinguished leader, Governor Nominate Marvin Griffin, with reference to said decision, as stated by him in the recent campaign before the people, in that he pledges that at all hazards separate schools will be maintained in Georgia and the Georgia way of life preserved. We in turn pledge him our support in this regard and stand ready to do whatever is necessary to this end.

Eighth: It shall be the duty of the nominees of this Convention said decision to the contrary notwithstanding, to uphold, maintain and defend the provisions of the Constitution of this State that there shall be separate schools for the white and colored races. Upon election to their respective offices, it shall be their duty to maintain this law with all the resources of the State and every power at their disposal, which duty each nominee, by acceptance of his nomination, pledged himself to perform.

NAACP SLOGAN RED-INSPIRED

Editor, The News:

That the principal speaker at the NAACP testimonial dinner to former Judge Waties Waring in Charleston should be the head of the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta is very appropriate. While the Southern Regional Council has not yet been cited as a Communist-front by federal authorities, it has been revealed recently by the Augusta (Ga.) Courier that "at least 38 officials, members of the executive staff or directors of the SRC have had known records of association with Communist or Communist-front groups." The Southern Regional Council is conducting a South-wide campaign against segregation.

The official monthly publication of the Southern Regional Council is called New South. It may be significant that New South was started in 1938 by a group of Communist leaders including the notorious Negro Communist Henry Winston (see House Un-American Activities Committee Report of July 21, 1947, page 137).

Just as thousands of White "intellectuals" have been duped by Marxian propaganda, so many intelligent Negroes have fallen for the presumably Red-inspired NAACP slogan, "Free by 1963." This means that Negroes are being told that by 1963 they can be so amalgamated with White Americans that there will be no racial distinction in the U.S.

Let sensible Negroes consider that their progress in the future, as in the past, will depend on their cooperation with that White civilization which has made America the most powerful and prosperous nation in the world.

Mr. Erwin D. Canham
Editor,
The Christian Science Monitor
Boston 15, Massachusetts

Dear Mr. Canham:

Thank you very much for your letter of April 7th regarding the Southern Regional Council.

I am taking the time that should be used for other matters to reply to your letter in the hope that the following information will appear in the Monitor in the cause of truth and justice.

Mr. R. V. Harris, editor of the Augusta Courier, Augusta, Georgia, and member of the firm of attorneys, Harris, Chance & McCracken, has made an exhaustive and fully documented study of the Southern Regional Council. The results of this study were reported in the Courier, editions of June 28, and August 9, 16, 23 and 30, 1954.

In these editions the following facts were published:

(1) The Southern Regional Council is the de facto successor of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare and has been formed directly, if not entirely from the membership of the latter organization.

(2) The Southern Conference of Human Welfare has been cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities as a Communist-front organization.

(3) All except one of the organizers of the Southern Regional Council have been exposed as having records of affiliation with communist-front groups and activities.

(4) Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's board of directors have been branded as known communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates of the Party.

(5) Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, was a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and his name has been linked to other 'red' fronts, according to records and reports of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

COPY

(6) The Southern Regional Conference, while claiming to be a tax-exempt, charitable activity, is nothing more than a political action group which has consistently followed the Communist Party line.

In view of the preceding, I can see no justification for the prominent article on page 3 of the March 12 edition of the Monitor, which quotes, in complimentary fashion, the statements of the Southern Regional Council.

Personally, there is no doubt in my mind regarding your prescience of the background of the Southern Regional Council. You will discover, however, that the time is rapidly approaching when you will find it difficult to pull the wool over the eyes of your readers regarding the organizations which constitute the Un-American movement in the United States.

Your reference to the Southern Regional Council as a "reputable organization" is questionable in the highest degree.

Very truly yours,

Mr. Max K. Gilstrap
Chief, Central News Bureau
333 North Michigan Avenue
Chicago 1, Illinois

Dear Max:

Thanks for your letter of May 16 and the enclosure. We will, of course, keep the matter entirely confidential.

Unfounded charges of the sort Mr. Godkin makes against the Southern Regional Council are a recurring nuisance. The source, as Godkin indicates, is an inflammatory political paper published by Roy V. Harris, whom you may remember as an intemperate and now largely discredited politician of Augusta, Georgia. His attacks on the SRC have been ignored by the reputable newspapers and other media.

In refuting such allegations, it is always difficult to know how much detail to supply. I hope this letter and the attached material aren't too burdensomely complete for your purposes. On the other hand, if more elaboration would be helpful, I will be glad to supply it.

As to the numbered charges that Godkin lists:

(1) The SRC is not the successor -- de facto, or otherwise -- of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The SCHW was organized in 1938 and survived until 1949; the SRC was organized in 1944. As one might expect from this timing, and from their differing approaches to the problems of the South, the two organizations were widely regarded as rival agencies. That some members of the SRC's staff and board at one time participated in the Southern Conference is true. At its inception, the Conference attracted the cream of the South's liberal leadership; it was after these persons had become disillusioned and withdrew from the Conference that it acquired its dubious reputation. The attached copy of an editorial from the Atlanta Constitution helps clarify this history; the editorial was written by Ralph McGill, who was one of the incorporators of the SRC and is a continuing supporter of its work. Also attached are copies of letters from three of the founders of the SRC, written at a time when the same baseless charges were being clandestinely used against Morris Abram, an SRC board member who was then seeking office.

(2) In view of the facts cited above, this is irrelevant; however, it might be noted in passing that the evidence of communist penetration of the Southern Conference, even its latter stages, was not sufficient to warrant its inclusion on the U.S. Attorney General's list of subversive organizations.

(3) The organizers of the Southern Regional Council were Southerners of considerable distinction whose patriotism has never been seriously questioned. A mere listing of their names and identifications should be sufficient to expose this charge for what it is. The organizing meeting of the SRC was held in response to a call issued by the following persons:

C.H. Gillman, Georgia Director, C.I.O.
George L. Googe, Southern Director, A.F.L.
M. Ashby Jones, Baptist minister
Ryland Knight, Baptist minister
Rabbi David Marx, The Temple, Atlanta
Bishop Arthur J. Moore, The Methodist Church
Ralph McGill, editor, the Atlanta Constitution
Stuart R. Oglesby, Presbyterian minister
Rt. Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Catholic Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta
Dean S. Paden, President, King Hardware Company
J. McDowell Richards, President, Columbia Theological Seminary
Bishop John Moore Walker, The Protestant Episcopal Church
Goodrich C. White, president, Emory University

Following the deliberations of this group and a subsequent conference with Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered, the incorporators being Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University, President Charles S. Johnson of Fisk University, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Odum served as the first president of the organization, 1944-1946.

(4) Godkin does not name these "two top members," but Roy Harris's paper provides the basis for this allegation. Two persons who were once members of SRC's board were recently accused of communist sympathies by Paul Crouch in testimony before a Senate Internal Security Committee subcommittee. We have no way of evaluating this testimony against two out of the more than 100 former members of the SRC board. However, no such charges were against these persons during their terms of service on our board -- 1945-1949. Nor by any stretch of the imagination could they be described as "top members"; neither held office or played any significant part in the formulation of SRC policy. (Ironically, one of them resigned from the board because he felt that SRC's position on segregation was not unequivocal enough.)

(5) Dr. Mitchell did hold membership for several years on the board of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, resigning when he found himself in disagreement with its policies. Harris's charges of other "red front" associations are based on a series of falsehoods and distortions which would require a great deal of space to review and refute. The high esteem in which Dr. Mitchell is held by all who know him and his work is typified by the award which he received in 1953 from the Catholic Committee of the South for his "significant contribution to the welfare of the South."

(6) The Southern Regional Council has been scrupulously non-political in all of its activities and has never been specifically charged otherwise. It operates under an official grant of tax-exemption from the United States Treasury Department. Anyone who will take the trouble to examine the Council's publications, statements, and activities will see that, from the beginning, it has stood for the exact opposite of communism.

It is a body of responsible Southerners of both races working for orderly, constructive progress in race relations. Nothing could damage the cause of international communism more than the success of this effort.

Over the years, the Southern Regional Council has received both financial and moral support from many of the major religious denominations in the South, including Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Congregational, Society of Friends, Catholic and Jewish groups. Its work has had the endorsement of many prominent persons; the following characterizations of the Council by three widely known Southern editors -- all of them intimately acquainted with its activities -- are representative:

> "An able and worthwile organization working in the field of racial relations. It has no radical tinge, but is, neyertheless, an aggressively energetic coordinating agency."
> Ralph McGill in the Atlanta Constitution

> "The sanest and best-informed Southwide organization dealing with race relations."
> Virginus Dabney in the Saturday Evening Post

> "The SRC is unique in a number of heartening directions. It is bi-racial, non-denominational and non-political. It does not engage in tom-tom beating, parades, or lengthy pronunciamentos slanted for non-Southern consumption and approval. But it is not an isolationist effort to separate the South's problems from the nation's -- or from the nation's concern."

Some Background On The NAACP

Jackson Daily News: The origian of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) is not so well known as it should be to both negroes and whites. Therefore, as a danger signal to be heeded not only by all true Southerners but by all true Americans, I quote the following from Research Bulletin No. 1 (3) 18)54) of the Grass Roots League, Inc., Box 551, Charleston S. C., entitled "Negroes Menaced by Red Plot":

"Evidence that unsuspecting negroes are being used as tools by Communist and Socialist negro (and white) leaders may be found in the following statement of FACTS carefully checked and documented:

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was organized in 1910 to aid negro progress. But in 1925 "the official report of the Communist Party's 4th national convention stated that the party had penetrated the NAACP". . .During the 7 years, 1923-1930, the NAACP received some $43,000 from the radical Garland Fund among whose directors were Communists Wm. Z. Foster, Eliz. Gurley Flynn and others.

"Today the chairman of the NAACP Board of Directors is Dr. Channing H. Tobias, listed at least 17 times as having been a member, or officer, or affiliate of Communist or Communist-front organizations. DR. W. E. B. DuBois, Communist-front negro leader, one of the NACCP founders, was its director of Research until about 1949. Official records show that the NAACP has been affiliated with Communist and left-wing movements. The NAACP was a member of "American Youth for a Free World," cited by the Federal Government as having been "a Communist clearing house," and is listed as "heavily infiltrated and effectively dominated by the Communist Party." Gloster Current, representing the NAACP was one of fifty delegates in 1945 when the "world Federation of Democratic Youth" (cited in 1948 as "a part of the Communist international solar system" in House Un-American Activities, Document 137) was founded in London. The president of the NAACP is a white man, Arthur B. Spingarn of New York (also having Communist Listings). "The Communist negro drive was started in the United States in 1920. How to organize the negroes for the revolution in the United States was discussed in the official report Communist International held in Moscow in 1928, and Comrade Jones, USA, chairman of the negro delegation from the United States, stated: "The central slogan around which we can rally the negro masses is the slogan of social equality.

GEORGIA COMMITTEE ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION
63 AUBURN AVENUE

For the Attorney General to label the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation a "front" organization is not only ridiculous, but it is a libel on those Georgia leaders he labels as "dupes" and on Georgia officials as well.

True, the Georgia Committee is composed of "some of Georgia's most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders." And it is these same leaders who make up the board of directors and the executive committee of the group. It is these same leaders who plan and direct the policy and program of the Georgia Committee and are sincerely trying to help solve a difficult Southern problem.

The Georgia Committee has a history dating back to 1919. If, as the Attorney General claims, an investigation is being made of the Georgia Committee, why should it come at this time? The answer is obvious when one stops to consider the fact that there are some irresponsible people today who claim the Supreme Court of the United States is under the influence of Communists. Who could better claim the label of subversive -- those who seek to uphold the supreme law of the land or those who seek to circumvent it? The Attorney General is seeking to delay the solution and impugning the motives of those who seek to help work out a solution.

On a monument to the British soldiers who died on King's Mountain, S. C., is this inscription, "They came 3000 miles to keep the past on the throne." There are still those who fight to keep the past on the throne.

The Georgia Committee will welcome any investigation by responsible people. It has nothing to hide.

Guy H. Wells
Executive Director

The NAACP is being aided and abetted in its agitation by three "front" organizations on the Southern scene -- the Southern Conference Education Fund; the Southern Regional Council; and the SRC's affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Southern Conference Education Fund and the Southern Regional Council are both dominated by individuals who, like the officials of the NAACP, have long records of affinity for and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, left-wing and subversive organizations and activities. Sworn testimony taken by both House and Senate Committees has placed known Communists in both organizations and the Southern Conference Fund may soon be designated a subversive organization.

The Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation is a perfect example of an organization formed for the purpose of exploiting the names, reputations and services of well-intentioned do-gooders. It is composed of some of Georgia' most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders who have been duped into doing the bidding of the more sinister elements manipulating the Southern Regional Council.

Investigations are currently being made of all three organizations -- the results of which will greatly embarrass those good citizens who unwittingly have become involved in their activities. I urge all such persons to take immediate steps to disassociate themselves from these groups and to disavow their programs and their leaders before they, their friends and their congregations are exposed to the anguish and embarrassment which exposure of these groups will necessarily mean.

THE ATTACK ON

and

THE GEORGIA COMMITTEE ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

A Brief Statement on the History and Aims of
The Southern Regional Council
October, 1955

THE ATTACK ON FREE OPINION

Last March the Southern Regional Council declared:

"There is presently a concerted attempt by official leadership (in the deep South) to stamp out independent thought and stifle all dissent with respect to school segregation...."

In recent weeks, the attempt to intimidate and silence those who believe in an enlightened, law-abiding approach to race relations has gone into high gear. Georgia's Attorney General Eugene Cook took up the attack in a diatribe aimed mainly at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. In the course of his speech, Mr. Cook also attacked the Southern Regional Council and the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation.

The object of this side attack on two constructive Southern organizations was to frighten off the thousands of religious, civic, labor, and business leaders who have joined together to work positively at the South's most urgent problem. It is revealing that, although the work of these two organizations goes back 35 years, Mr. Cook has only now chosen to strike at them.

Every intelligent person will recognize this cynical attack for what it is. Mr. Cook hints darkly at "subversion," "sinister manipulation," and"leftwing associations." There is on the statute books of Georgia a strong law providing severe punishment for anyone guilty of subversive conduct or association. As the chief legal officer of the state, Mr. Cook should be expected to act through the process of law, safeguarding the rights and reputations of good citizens. But Mr. Cook knows his charges are false. Neither the Southern Regional Council nor the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation has ever been listed or accused of disloyalty by the U. S. Attorney General or any other official body. So Mr. Cook must resort to smear and innuendo in the public forum.

This, in brief form, is the story of the Southern Regional Council. Many Southerners may disagree with the Council's point of view. But no fair-minded person, in full possession of the facts will doubt that it is an honest and patriotic organization, responsible in both its methods and its aims.

HOW THE SRC BEGAN

The Southern Regional Council and its predecessor, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, have a history of 35 years of constructive activity. The Commission was founded in 1919 by a group of the South's leading church men and women. Among them were Dr. M. Ashby Jones, prominent Baptist minister, Mr. John J. Eagan, businessman and philanthropist, Dr. Plato Durham, dean of the Emory University Theology School, and Dr. Will W. Alexander, the Commission's director. Its work in behalf of sound race relations was acclaimed by the South's leading newspapers, religious leaders, and by many public officials. It provided a meeting ground where the best people of both races could work together to dispel prejudice, tensions, and violence. It made possible, through persuasion and education, much of the interracial progress of which Southerners today can be justly proud.

Early in the 1940s, leaders in the Southern interracial movement joined together to revitalize their efforts. As a result, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation merged in 1944 with the newly formed Southern Regional Council. The organizing meeting of the Council was held in response to a "call" issued by some of the South's finest leadership, including:

C. H. Gillman, Georgia Director, C.I.O.
George L. Googe, Southern Director, A.F.L.
M. Ashby Jones, Baptist minister
Ryland Knight, Baptist minister
Rabbi David Marx, The Temple, Atlanta
Bishop Arthur J. Moore, The Methodist Church
Ralph McGill, editor, The Atlanta Constitution
Stuart R. Oglesby, Presbyterian minister
Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta
Dean S. Paden, President, King Hardware Company
J. McDowell Richards, President, Columbia Theological Seminary
Bishop John Moore Walker, The Protestant Episcopal Church
Goodrich C. White, President, Emory University

Following the deliberations of this group and a subsequent conference with Southern Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered early in 1944. The incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Ralph McGill, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, and Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina.

Since this auspicious beginning, the Council's membership has included distinguished Southerners, white and Negro, in all walks of life. Dr. Odum was the first president of the organization. He was succeeded by Paul D. Williams, of Richmond, Va., a prominent Catholic layman and co-founder of the Catholic Committee of the South. Mr. Williams served as president for six years -- from 1945 until 1951. He was succeeded by Mr. Marion A. Wright, widely known as a South Carolina attorney active in civic and educational affairs, now living in Linville Falls, N. C.

The Council's present and past board members number well over 150. The quality of its leadership may be measured by the list of members of the Executive Committee over the past 12 years, appearing on page 9.

HOW SRC WORKS

The Southern Regional Council consists of a board of some 80 Southerners representing the major religious faiths, both races, and the 13 states of the region. The members listed on page 10, are respected residents of their states and their communities. These people are the Southern Regional Council. They make the policies and review all activities at an annual meeting. They elect an Executive Committee which meets at least every three months to give closer direction to the organization. And full reports of all activities are sent to the members quarterly. The Council is non-profit, non-political, and non-denominational.

WHAT SRC HAS DONE

The Council works through the sound methods of education, fact-finding, and persuasion. It seeks no legislation, it carries on no court action, and it uses no "pressure group" tactics. It collects the facts about racial problems and progress in the South and makes these facts available to private citizens and public officials. NEW SOUTH, the Council's monthly publication, has built an unchallenged reputation for reliability and accuracy. Following are some of the areas with which the SRC's educational program has been concerned:

* Employment of Negro policemen in Southern communities.

* Newspaper handling of racial news.

* Community self-surveys, in which local people study their problems as a basis for achieving local solutions.

* Conferences of leading white and Negro Southerners with common concerns and a common desire to further democratic practices in their areas of interest -- health, housing, education, etc.

* Voluntary decisions to open professional associations, private colleges, public libraries, and the like to all qualified persons without respect to race.

* Impartial enforcement of the law and administration of justice in the South.

* Orderly adjustment at the community level to the recent decisions of the Supreme Court holding public school segregation unconstitutional.

AFFILIATED STATE ORGANIZATIONS

With the aid of a grant from the Fund for the Republic, the Southern Regional Council is assisting interracial organizations in 12 Southern states. Each of these organizations has its own membership, officers, and staff. In each case, people of the state involved make their own decisions as to policy and program. Affiliation with the Southern Regional Council is voluntary, and the purpose of the short-term financial aid from SRC is to help the state groups become strong, self-sustaining bodies.

The affiliated organization in Georgia is the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Georgia Committee has a long and distinguished history, having operated continuously since 1919. Its directors and officers include some of Georgia's most respected clergymen, church women, and civic leaders. Its executive director is Dr. Guy H. Wells, President-Emeritus of Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville. A list of the Georgia Committee's board members appears on page 11. To suggest that people of such intelligence and character would lend themselves to an unworthy cause is insulting to them and absurd on its face.

CHURCH SUPPORT

Church people have always been the moving force in the Southern interracial movement. This is as true today as it was 35 years ago. All of the major religious groups represented in the South have taken their stand in favor of the principle embodied in the Supreme Court's segregation ruling. The court ruling was endorsed by the Southern Baptist Convention, many of the Southern conferences of The Methodist Church, the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Province of Sewanee (Southeastern) of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Catholic Bishops of the South, the various Jewish religious and fraternal groups, and virtually all of the other denominations found in the South. It is only natural that many religious Southerners should seek to put the principles of their faith into everyday practice.

The Southern Regional Council and the affiliated state groups have enjoyed both financial and moral support from religious bodies representing the three major faiths.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Council, received the 1953 Annual Award of the Catholic Committee of the South "for his significant contribution to the welfare of the South."

COMMUNISM AND RACE RELATIONS

Those who seek, for political or other reasons, to fan the fires of racial prejudice have set out to brand interracial progress as "communist-inspired." By this means they hope to confuse the public and discredit the growing number of individuals and organizations who believe in equal citizenship for all.

Not only is this phony "anti-communism" vicious; it offends the intelligence of every thinking person. The international communist movement has one, and only one, interest in our racial problems -- that is, to exploit them throughout the world. Some two-thirds of the people of the earth are dark-skinned, and the communists are trying desperately to win them with the claim that our kind of democracy is available only to white persons. If there were no racial discrimination or segregation in this country, the communist movement in Asia and Africa would lack its must effective weapon.

A perfect example of this fact is the reaction of Soviet Russian officialdom to the Supreme Court decision. For days, the government-controlled Russian press made no mention whatever of the decision. When at last they could ignore it no longer, they announced defensively that the decision meant nothing -- that it would never be implemented. This is precisely the argument that Attorney General Cook and his fellow demagogs make so noisily. Unwittingly perhaps, but undeniably, they do a great service to the cause of communism every time they raise their voices on behalf of "white supremacy."

Individuals and organizations that work responsibly and conscientiously for the growth of democracy in the South and the Nation are the opponents that the communists really fear. Yet it is precisely these individuals and organizations that Mr. Cook and his kind seek to defame and discredit. What could please the communists more than to get the credit for every effort to make our American ideal a working, living reality? What could please them more than a campaign to arouse suspicion and hatred of those citizens who work intelligently for a more just, democratic, and Christian society? How they must delight in the irony of such Americans being stigmatized as servants and dupes of the communist cause!

No informed person believes that the communists want to see Negroes accorded equal rights and dignity or that they want to see our racial problems solved through the orderly processes of the law and constructive community action. The communists want to see us hopelessly bogged down in our prejudices and our fears. They want to see us defying the law of the land, whipping up racial hatred for political purposes. In this respect, they have a common purpose with Attorney General Cook and his kind.

TO KEEP OPINION FREE

The Southern Regional Council is a realistic organization. It was organized by Southerners and is run by Southerners who have lived with the problems of our region and know them well. Therefore, the Council recognizes the difficulties inherent in the changes now required of the South. But the people who make up the Council and the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation believe that we can and will -- as, indeed, we must -- make the transition to a society in which citizenship is not qualified by race.

The issue here is not whether everyone can agree with this point of view -- obviously many do not. The issue is whether or not citizens can voice this and other legitimate opinions without suffering abuse at the hands of irresponsible officials.

The answer must be "yes" if we are not to have thought-control in the South. The power of state officials is great, and if misused it is dangerous to all. If any citizens can be penalized for legitimate opinions honestly held, then all citizens can be penalized at the pleasure of a few.

Ford Funds To Strengthen School Work

Regional Council Given $150,000 for Southern Project

ATLANTA, Oct. 16 (AP). — The Southern Regional Council announced today that it has received a new grant of $150,000 from the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic to strengthen its educational work in 12 Southern states . . .

The board of directors of a Southern organization granted $240,000 by the controversial Fund for the Republic includes 21 members with past pro-Communist affiliations, a survey revealed today.

Investigation of the background of the Southern Regional Council also revealed that 13 of these supported the now-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare,* cited as an arm of the Communist Party by two Congressional committees.

Frank P. Graham, former President of UNC, who is speaking in Norfolk today was a former Honorary President of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

HEADQUARTERS IN ATLANTA

The Council, with headquarters in Atlanta, operates in 12 Dixie states. Its stated aims, in substance, have been to explore relationships between white and Negro in the South.

Early last year, the Council received the grant from the Fund which has been under strong attack recently for alleged leftwing activities. The Fund was set up by the Ford Foundation under $15,000,000 no-strings-attached grant.

Out of 14 members of the Council's executive committee, four were

✓ The Rev. A. S. Turnipseed, connected with the National Committee of Methodist Federation for Social Action, cited subversive by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

✓ Paul R. Christopher: signed protest against Dies Committee, under auspices of National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, cited subversive by Attorney General.

Besides these commie-fronters who boss the Council, the partial records of other board members follow:

Rufus B. Atwood: signed statement supporting Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, according to Daily Worker, Feb. 8, 1939.

B. R. Brazeal: Civil Rights Congress sponsor.

✓ W. C. Brooke: sponsored Bill of Rights Conference, cited by House Un-American Activities Committee.

X G. E. Clary: signed statement for Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, cited by Congress as Communist front.

Charles Clingman: sponsored dinner forum on behalf of Protestant Digest, cited by California Un-American Activities Committee.

? Herbert Davidson: sent greetings to Mother Bloor (Communist heroine) Celebration Committee.

✓ J. M. Ellison: signed statement for National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions according to Daily Mirror, June 29, 1951. Organization is on Attorney General's subversive list.

Ralph O'Hara Lanier: also on board of Southern Negro Youth Congress.

✓ Benjamin L. Mays: has long list of affiliations with organizations cited by Attorney General and House Un-American Activities Committee.

Florence S. Sytz: sponsor, National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

L. E. Thomas: signer of First Line of Defense, according to Daily Worker, Aug. 29, 1948.

H. Councill Trenholm: sponsored program for W. E. B. Dubois, Feb. 23, 1951. Dubois is a veteran pro-Communist.

✓ Carter Wesley: sponsored dinner honoring Communist leader Ferdinand C. Smith.

✓ Josephine Wilkins: sponsored Council of Young Southerners, cited as Communist-front by House committee.

Those who were members of the openly pro-Communist Southern Conference for Human Welfare include Atwood, Christopher, Clary, Clement, Davidson, Johnson, Mitchell, Trenholm, Wilkins, Gomillion, Mays and Ellison.

The Fund for the Republic, which is coming in for criticism from American Legion spokesmen and others, was established to make scholarly studies to determine whether American liberties are being imperiled or undermined in various fields. In the words of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Fund, its purpose "is to defend the American principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

Organized by the Ford Foundation but now enjoying an independent status, the Fund for the Republic has a $15 million endowment. It has a board of directors composed of eminent citizens . . .

Dean Resigns Fund Group Post

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP) —Arthur H. Dean, former United States ambassador to Korea, said today he has resigned as a director of the Fund for the Republic for "policy reasons."

Asked if this meant he was quitting because of the organization's policies, Dean said, "yes." He declined to go into details.

The fund, an independent foundation set up to promote the principles of the Constitution, Bill of Rights and Declaration of Independence, has been accused by some groups of left-wing activities.

Dean, a corporation lawyer and head of the United Nations truce team that negotiated the peace terms in Korea, said he resigned September 27 as a member of the fund's 16-member board of directors.

Name 21 Pro-Reds on Board of Dixie Race Study Council

By Leon Racht and Jeffrey Roche

The board of directors of a Southern organization granted $240,000 by the controversial Fund for the Republic includes 21 members with past pro-Communist affiliations, a survey revealed today.

Investigation of the background of the Southern Regional Council also revealed that 13 of these supported the now-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare,* cited as an arm of the Communist Party by two Congressional committees.

Frank P. Graham, former President of UNC, who is speaking in Norfolk today was a former Honorary President of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

HEADQUARTERS IN ATLANTA

The Council, with headquarters in Atlanta, operates in 12 Dixie states. Its stated aims, in substance, have been to explore relationships between white and Negro in the South.

Early last year, the Council received the grant from the Fund which has been under strong attack recently for alleged leftwing activities. The Fund was set up by the Ford Foundation under $15,000,000 no-strings-attached grant.

Out of 14 members of the Council's executive committee, four were found to have supported pro-Communist enterprises in one form or another. They are:

✓ George S. Mitchell, executive director: sponsor of the Civil Rights Congress, cited subersive by the Attorney General.

✓ Rufus E. Clement, chairman: sponsor of American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, one of the oldest subversive organizations in the United States. In addition, Clement has been a member of many other Communist fronts.

✓ The Rev. A. S. Turnipseed, connected with the National Committee of Methodist Federation for Social Action, cited subversive by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

✓ Paul R. Christopher: signed protest against Dies Committee, under auspices of National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, cited subversive by Attorney General.

Besides these commie-fronters who boss the Council, the partial records of other board members follow:

Rufus B. Atwood: signed statement supporting Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, according to Daily Worker, Feb. 8, 1939.

B. R. Brazeal: Civil Rights Congress sponsor.

✓ W. C. Brooke: sponsored Bill of Rights Conference, cited by House Un-American Activities Committee.

✗ G. E. Clary: signed statement for Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, cited by Congress as Communist front.

Charles Clingman: sponsored dinner forum on behalf of Protestant Digest, cited by California Un-American Activities Committee.

? Herbert Davidson: sent greetings to Mother Bloor (Communist heroine) Celebration Committee.

✓ J. M. Ellison: signed statement for National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions according to Daily Mirror, June 29, 1951. Organization is on Attorney General's subversive list.

Albert D'Orlando: signed Amicus Curiae on behalf of the Rev. John Howard Mellish when latter was before Supreme Court fighting his ouster from a Brooklyn church for alleged pro-Communist activities.

✓ Charles G. Gomillion: On advisory board and secretary of Southern Negro Youth Congress on Attorney General's subversive list.

✓ Charles S. Johnson: sponsor of of American Committee for Foreign Born. Has other affiliations in same direction.

Ralph O'Hara Lanier: also on board of Southern Negro Youth Congress.

✓ Benjamin L. Mays: has long list of affiliations with organizations cited by Attorney General and House Un-American Activities Committee.

Florence S. Sytz: sponsor, National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

L. E. Thomas: signer of First Line of Defense, according to Daily Worker, Aug. 29, 1948.

H. Councill Trenholm: sponsored program for W. E. B. Dubois, Feb. 23, 1951. Dubois is a veteran pro-Communist.

✓ Carter Wesley: sponsored dinner honoring Communist leader Ferdinand C. Smith.

✓ Josephine Wilkins: sponsored Council of Young Southerners, cited as Communist-front by House committee.

Those who were members of the openly pro-Communist Southern Conference for Human Welfare include Atwood, Christopher, Clary, Clement, Davidson, Johnson, Mitchell, Trenholm, Wilkins, Gomillion, Mays and Ellison.

Disclosure of the Southern Regional Council's heavily pro-Communist tinge is the latest blow at leftwing activities of the Fund for the Republic.

Earlier, the Fund came under strong anti-Communist attack for its allegedly slanted bibliography on communism in the United States; its employment of Earl Browder, former secretary of the American Communist Party, as a "paid informant"; and employment of Amos Landman as publicity man, three weeks after he took the 5th Amendment when asked if he ever was a Communist.

Do-Gooders Stirring Bloodshed

In the 1850s, before the Civil War, Northern do-gooders gave money to stir racial strife in the South. John Brown's murderous raid at Harper's Ferry, Va., for example, was financed by supposedly responsible people. Among the notable contributors was Gov. Salmon P. Chase of Ohio. Later he was chief justice of the United States.

Brown bought guns and pikes to arm a slave rebellion. His men seized a federal arsenal. The bewildered Negroes didn't rebel. But Brown's fanatics did some shooting anyway. Their first victim was a free Negro. He failed to halt on orders and stopped a bullet.

Wendell Phillips, New England orator, declared the State of Virginia a pirate and called John Brown a lord high admiral commissioned to sink every pirate. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the poet and philosopher, compared the "glorious" scaffold on which John Brown was hanged to the cross at Calvary. The governor of Virginia announced that any further invasions from other states would be met with armed reprisals. Meanwhile—it was 1859—federal troops kept order in "Bloody Kansas."

Today Northern do-gooders again are pouring money into organizations to goad the South. One of these is the Fund for the Republic. It has just donated an additional $150,000 to the Southern Regional Council, which is dedicated to break down separation of the races in the South. It is time that donors of money take responsibility for their beneficiaries. Money is power.

While slavery and secession no longer are issues, violence can take many forms. Already such incidents as the kidnaping of the Till boy in Mississippi are being blown up to inflame the public.

In Chicago a Negro policeman last week beat a 72-year-old man to death on the street. In Brooklyn, a judge sentenced three Negro members of a teenage gang to prison when they pleaded guilty to killing a rival youth. Meanwhile, another juvenile gang death was reported in the neighborhood as the toll of violence mounts.

Usually the race angle is omitted in the Northern press on crime news in its own backyards. Race is played up whenever a victim is a Negro in the South. Both white and colored Southerners know the tension is reduced and peace promoted by separation of the races. An unbiased review of the facts, both past and present, proves this contention.

A SIMILAR smear, although on different lines, was a story printed in the New York Journal-American, saying that 21 members of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council have "past pro-Communist sympathies." The lingo of the smear-bunds is now familiar to the American people. It is libelous to call a man a Communist unless one can prove it in court. But one can imply the same thing by saying a man is a "leftie," and that smear word is safe from libel action. Whether it is "safe" to say that a man has pro-Communist sympathies might some day be tested by libel suits.

The Journal-American named the 21 directors of SRC it claims have "past pro-Communist sympathies." But the Associated Press story concerning the Journal-American article didn't name any of them. It is not known whether the Associated Press consulted the Southern Regional Council on the 21 men attacked before giving wide circulation to gist of the Journal-American article.

————*

AMONG the 21 named by the Journal-American were Dr. George Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council; the Rt. Rev. Charles Clingman, retired Episcopal bishop of Kentucky; George E. Clary, executive secretary of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Commission of the Methodist Church; W. Carol Brooke, Episcopal minister of Virginia.

Especial emphasis was laid on leading southern Negro educators in the Journal-American listing. All of these are highly respected and are devoted to the South.

The Journal-American named Dr. Rufus Clement, president of Atlanta University. Dr. Clement is the only Negro within memory ever elected by the people to the Atlanta school board. In an effort to defeat him for that post covert charges were made that he had Communist sympathies. The Atlanta papers denounced the attack as a smear and the people of Atlanta elected Dr. Clement to the school board by the largest vote given any candidate in that election.

Other Negro educators listed by the Journal-American as having "Past pro-Communist sympathies" were Dr. Charles Johnson, president of Fisk University, and Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, neither of whom by any stretch of the imagination could be seriously charged with having pro-Communist sympathies.

THE JOURNAL-AMERICAN mentioned that the Fund for the Republic has contributed a total of $350,000 in two separate grants for the work of the Southern Regional Council. Dr. Hutchens, chairman of the Fund for the Republic, gave the perfect answer to the Journal-American. He said he knew a number of the council people and has the highest faith in them. Dr. Hutchens added that if anyone can prove that any of the 21 mentioned by the Journal-American are Communist sympathizers he would turn over all of the Fund for the Republic's remaining millions to the individual furnishing the proof.

There then is a chance for someone to make millions of dollars. But this columnist was for a number of years a member of the Board of the Southern Regional Council. He never met anyone in the council who had the slightest sympathy for Communism. The SRC, in fact, is anti-Communist. It is the outgrowth of the former Southern Commission on Interracial Relations, a group of Southerners of both races desirous to have Southerners work out Southern problems and to avoid violent frictions. Communism thrives on Southern racial frictions. Nothing could damage international Communism's propaganda apparatus more than to have the South solve these racial problems.

A WORD IS CORRUPTED

"Subversive—tending to subvert; having tendency to overthrow, upset or destroy."—Webster's International Dictionary.

In this country, the word "subversive" has been corrupted from its real meaning by the tendency to brand any person or any organization which—however long ago—may have had Socialists or even Communists among its members. A subversive may be one who merely, unknowingly, attended groups which may have had radicals in their memberships.

The corruption of the word "subversive" goes full cycle in a recent action in Mississippi. Gov. Hugh White has appointed Earl Evans of Canton, Miss., a former FBI agent, as chairman of a subcommittee to draft a bill whereby the Legislature would authorize the Mississippi attorney general's office to publish a state subversive list.

According to a United Press story, "It will be a state list aimed primarily at discrediting organizations whose purpose is to break down segregation in defiance of Mississippi's laws and customs."

Mr. Evans says that there will be no penalties in the law for persons belonging to one of the "subversive" organizations. Apparently, it will only be used for smearing persons.

It is announced that the Mississippi list "would serve as a guide for public officials and others in hiring people." In other words, there is the economic weapon to be used against those who don't like the attitude of Mississippi's politicians and Citizens Councils against the Supreme Court segregation ruling.

The United Press story says: "The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People would, of course, lead the subversive list." Now, the NAACP has certainly been too brash in trying to force immediate desegregation when even the Supreme Court wanted to give reasonable time. But since when did it become subversion for people—even Negroes—to try to secure rights declared for them by the United States Supreme Court?

Subversion means the overthrow or the attempt to overthrow American institutions. In this Mississippi move, subversion is corrupted to mean the attempt to support one of the leading American institutions—the Supreme Court.

This Mississippi move doesn't make any sense. A number of church groups with congregations in Mississippi are on record in opposition to segregation. A fraternity on the campus of a Mississippi State Negro college is charged with having given money to the NAACP and it is said that that fraternity would probably be on the subversive list. The fraternity also supported civil rights causes. In Mississippi, nowadays, civil rights is a subversive technique. Only states rights are supreme.

Such things, of course, make the word "subversive" have no meaning whatsoever and it is important for the life of this country that subversion have a definite meaning, for real subversion could bring about our ruin.

Southern Regional Council Working To Enforce Court's Racial Decision

Congressman Davis Rips Into Race Mixing Plot Of GOP

Georgia Officials, Citizens Lauded For Stand Protecting Basic Rights

Decent white people everywhere resent the efforts of the Supreme Court and the federal government to force the unnatural mixing of the races in this country.

This statement was made by Congressman James C. Davis of Georgia in a speech to a joint session of the General Assembly of Georgia on January 24, 1956.

Eisenhower's Party

Congressman Davis pointed out that since President Eisenhower ordered the mixing of the races in the public schools in the City of Washington that the white people have been moving out of Washington as fast as they possibly could.

Congressman Davis said:

"Proof that white people do not intend to mix with Negroes, and cannot be forced to do so, is the manner in which the white people of Washington treated the order of the Federal government abolishing segregation in Federally owned swimming pools. Washington is a hot city in the summertime, and prior to the issuing of this order by the Federal Government, the white swimming pools have been crowded. When the order was issued in 1949, and 1950, it did not result in whites and Negroes swimming together, it simply resutled in the previously white swimming pools becoming Negro swimming pools, as the white people abandoned them to the Negroes."

Georgians Praised

The Congressman, in addition to pointing out this resentment of the white people, praised the people of Georgia for having a governor and other statehouse leaders who are willing to fight a packed Supreme Court and a appeasement-minded president in their efforts to destroy our Constitution.

In this connection, the Congressman said:

"Resentment of white people manifests itself in every section of our country—north, east, and west, as south over these efforts to force the unnatural practice of mixing the races. In Chicago, in many sections, a determined white population has successfully resisted forcible efforts to destroy their residential segregation pattern. This has been done although Illinois has had a Governor, and Chicago has had a Mayor who have sought by forcible means to ram this integration policy down their unwilling throats.

Riots in Chicago

"In Chicago on August 11, 1953, 1500 persons rioted in protest over a Negro family being moved into Trumbull Park Homes in the South Deering section of the City.

"The Police Commissioner had to send 3 shifts of 250 policemen, or 750 per day to keep down the violent rioting. On one occasion 1250 policemen were called out.

"The Commissioner was quoted 16 days later, on August 27th as saying that racial disturbances had required the service of 12% of his 6889 man force — in other words 826 policemen spent all of their time working with racial trouble.

"Under these circumstances the battle was carried on in Trumbull Park Homes for more than a year. The Negro family was finally moved out, and then brought a damage suit against the Chicago Housing Authority. In one year there was more racial trouble in Chicago than in the whole South put together, and it resulted from efforts to force intermingling between whites and blacks.

Praises Griffin

"Thank Almighty God that we do not have that kind of Governor in Georgia willing to join hands with a packed Supreme Court and an appeasement-minded Chief Executive in destroying our Constitution. I thank Him that we have in Georgia a Governor who has said:

"'I speak for the people of Georgia when I say that we accept this challenge. We accept it with the firm assertion that we shall not surrender to this Court the inalienable rights of our sovereign State. We shall not surrender our right to conduct and regulate our own educational institutions. The State created them. The State built them. The State finances them. The State shall run them.'

"I am thankful that we have a Lieutenant Governor who is holding up the hands of the Governor in this crisis.

Lauds Gene Cook

"I am grateful that we have in Georgia filling the high office of Attorney General an official who has the intelligence and ability to recognize this fraudulent scheme for the sorry thing it is, and the energy and courage to expose it and its backers not only to our people here at home, but in areas where hotbeds of radicalism exist in other sections of the country. I am grateful for the determined attitude of Georgia people who voted by a substantial majority to amend our Constitution so that if worst comes to worst, and the public schools in Georgia could only be operated as non-segregated and mixed schools, this intolerable thing can be avoided by elimination of public schools entirely and the teaching of our children in private schools.

"I am grateful for this Legislature and its officials who are resolutely and determinedly enacting a program of legislation to keep within our own hands the conduct of our own affairs.

Proud of Georgia Court

"I am grateful for the Chief Justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, who wrote the opinion, and for the six Associate Justices who joined with him in a unanimous opinion by that Court in the case of Williams vs. State of Georgia in which the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia said to the Supreme Court of the United States:

"'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.—(Constitution of the United States, Tenth Amendment). Even though executives and legislators, not being Constitutional lawyers, might often overstep the foregoing unambiguous Constitutional prohibition of Federal invasion of State jurisdiction, there can never be an acceptable excuse for judicial failure to strictly observe it. This Court bows to the Supreme Court on all Federal questions of law but we will not supinely surrender sovereign powers of this State.'

"This was a courageous declaration by the highest Court of our State warning the United States Supreme Court to stay out of our State affairs—a declaration to one and all that the State of Georgia knows her rights, and will have them. It was a stinging and merited rebuke."

STRICTLY PERSONAL

It hasn't been un-Christian for nearly two thousand years.

Who changed the Christian religion? By what authority has this modern-day group of communists, communist-sympathizers, fellow travelers, subversives and weak-minded group changed the principles of the Christian religion?

For nineteen centuries good Christian people walked the face of the earth practicing and preaching against this mass amalgamation of the races.

Millions of people have believed and practiced it before us. Millions of good church-going people have preached and practiced it.

It has been one of the fundamental principles of Christian religion.

This bunch of weak-minded "good" people and socialist and communist-minded folks seem to think that the white people are responsible for the Negro being black and they seem to think that we are guilty of a great crime because he is black.

Now, who created the Negro? Who made him black? Who set him apart from the rest of mankind?

The mixing process is man's work.

3. Are we unconstitutional in our efforts to prevent this massed mixing of the races?

Those who wrote the constitution itself practiced segregation. Those who wrote the constitution even owned slaves. Those who wrote the constitution practiced separation of the races and believed in it.

For over a hundred and fifty years every court in the land held that segregation was not unconstitutional. This included both the federal and state courts and the courts of every state in the nation where the issue was ever made.

Now, in 1954 the Supreme Court of the United States came along and changed all of the law we had ever had in this country and changed the constitution without any authority.

This decision is just as unfounded and as illegal as anything can be. It does not deserve the respect of the people. It deserves the contempt of the people and deserves to be ignored.

4. When did it become scientific for massed mixing of the races?

The people of America insist on pure bred hogs. They insist on having pure bred cattle and horses.

Now, are our children not worth as much as a pig or a cow or a horse?

Even the birds of the field won't mix. They remain separate. The blue birds won't mix with the red birds. Even the crows and buzzards won't mix.

Yet, human beings are expected to pull off a massed mixing of all kinds and all races.

Now, if it is unscientific to develop pure bred hogs and cows when does it become unscientific to develop a pure breed of mankind?

There isn't a hog raiser in Georgia who would again mix his pure bred hogs with the old piney woods rooter. If he did he would soon have nothing but piney woods rooters.

The federal government and the states of this nation spend millions of dollars every year trying to improve the breed of hogs and cattle and every form of vegetable life. We spend billions of dollars in research trying to achieve this aim.

And now this would-be bunch of communist, communist sympathizers, fellow travelers, subversive agents and weak-minded crackpots would have you destroy a great race of people by massed mixing.

We spend billions to improve the hogs and the cows, but we seek to destroy the American people.

Yes, I believe that the whole country is beginning to realize that in the South we find a fight being made to preserve and perpetuate the Americanism of the founders of this Republic and of those who constructed the Constitution itself.

It is here that we find that the dream and the vision of the early American settler and those who forged the American way of life to be still a great emotion.

Those who are advancing the idea of massed mixing of the races are following a foreign and a strange doctrine. It is not American. It comes out of Russia and it follows the communist ideal.

Yet, the Russians do not practice what they preach for us. There are over one hundred different racial mixtures in Russia. These different stocks of people cover people of all colors.

Yet, you see only the white Russians holding position in the Communist Party or in the Communist government.

Attorney General Of Georgia Reveals Origin, Viciousness Anti-Southern Group

Assistant Special Council, the Southeastern Regional Secretary, the West Coast Secretary, the Director of the Washington Bureau, the Director of Public Relations and two Field Secretaries have records of affiliation with or participation in communist, communist-front, fellow travelling or subversive organizations or activities.

There is no doubt that the NAACP is a South-hating group.

Hates Southern Whites

There is no doubt that the NAACP crowd hates the white people of the South.

There is no doubt that it was originated by and has been directed by communist sympathizers, fellow travelers or downright traitors to the whole nation from the beginning of the organization forty-six years ago to the present time.

It is nothing in the world but a subversive organization designed to stir up hatred, bitterness and bloodshed and to divide, conquer and destroy the American people.

The NAACP is the most effective weapon of the Russian communists in America today. It is being so used and will be so used.

The NAACP ought to be outlawed in every Southern state and the lead that South Carolina is taking is one which ought to be followed throughout the entire South.

Constitution's McGill One Of Incorporators Of Group Fighting Segregation Laws

ern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

Editor of Constitution

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of thirty-five years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Mr. Cook Should Be Removed From Public Office at Once

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook ought to run for governor of Georgia. He has been talking like he wants to do that for some months now and there are repeated reports that he would like to be either our state's chief executive or congressman from the sixth district. (Mr. Cook mantains his legal residence in Wrightsville.)

With rare exceptions, Mr. Cook has captured the political spotlight on race matters in Georgia.

Time was when Herman Talmadge or Marvin Griffin was in the forefront. But, alas, Mr. Cook has moved forward with vigor and has actually usurped Gov. Griffin's place at the podium. In most states the chief executive is the principal spokesman, but not so in Georgia today.

Mr. Cook has shouted louder and longer than any of the others.

When tensions were easing slightly on the education front last July, it was Mr. Cook who came forward with the proposal that teachers be required to disclose whether or not they were NAACP members and that they either resign such membership or be banned from teaching in public schools.

Two months later, in October, 1955, Mr. Cook made a speech before the Peace Officers Association which would have done Joe McCarthy proud. While taking out after the NAACP—for which the Telegraph holds no respect and which organization is well on the way to discrediting itself — the attorney general also unleashed a bucketful of smears upon all citizens everywhere who seek to intelligently work out any sort of interracial solution to the mammoth problems before us.

Last week, lest he might have begun to lag in performance, the attorney general catapulted himself into the blazing, pure white spotlight again.

He courageously proposed, candidly and unabashedly, that Georgia make it a capital crime, punishable by death or life imprisonment for any public official to assist federal authorities in enforcing Supreme Court desegregation decisions.

Such a heretofore-unthought-of suggestion, coming from the top legal officer of a sovereign state, made front page headlines in newspapers across the nation.

And so, Eugene Cook continues to lead in pronouncements on this vital issue of our times.

His record, his ability, his astuteness are before us.

We think he should run for governor.

It is high time he be removed completely from public office.

Cairo Messenger

Sen. Walter F. George may have opposition in his race for reelection, but he is by far the most outstanding man in the U.S. Senate and it would be a disgrace to defeat him, especially at this time. He is badly needed to help guide this country in these times of trials and tribulations.

Colleges Due Ford Funds For Teachers

A total of $1,895,000 was placed in the mails for 15 Georgia privately supported colleges Sunday as the Ford Foundation's first payment in its program to help raise faculty salaries.

These payments are half the sum of two appropriations totaling $3,790,000 for Georgia Colleges to be made by July 1, 1957.

The foundation is donating a total of $260,000,000 to 630 private institutions throughout the nation. The money is to be added to each school's endowment fund and is expected to produce an annual income of about 4 per cent.

Under terms of the endowment program, the income must be applied in full to increase faculty salaries.

Accomplishment grants will be made to five Georgia colleges which have shown "special leadership within their own regions in improving the status and compensation of college teachers."

These accomplishment grants may be used by these institutions either to raise faculty salaries or for "other pressing academic needs," the foundation said.

The Georgia schools with amount of grants (with accomplishment grants in parentheses) are:

Agnes Scott College, Decatur, $110,000. ($60,000); Atlanta University, $65,000; Bessie Tift College, Forsyth, $40,000; Brenau College, Gainesville, $45,000; Clark College, Atlanta, $70,000; Emory University, $475,000, ($265,000).

LaGrange College, $40,000; Mercer University, Macon, $155,000; Morehouse College, Atlanta, $85,000, ($50,000); Morris Brown College, Atlanta, $75,000; Oglethorpe University, $50,000, ($30,000); Paine College, Augusta, $35,000; Shorter College, Rome, $50,000; Spelman College, Atlanta, $65,000, ($35,000); and Wesleyan College, Macon, $95,000.

Ford Foundation Has A Magnificent Record

The Ford Foundation's annual report reveals that since its founding in 1936 its philanthropic commitments have totaled an impressive 875 million dollars.

Outlined in the report is the program of grants and appropriations for the fiscal year, Oct. 1, 1954, to Sept. 30, 1955, coming to $137,063,164—the largest sum given away in any one year.

Many hospitals and private schools in Georgia were among those institutions receiving substantial aid in this program.

Among other projects, institutions and public needs supported during the fiscal year was mental health. The sum of 15 million dollars was given for research. Assistance to the more able high school graduates was given in the amount of 20 million, that sum going to the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which grants the four-year awards on the basis of competitive examinations. Seven law schools were granted $7,500,000. Internationally the foundation gave educational assistance in south and southeast Asia and the Near East.

In previous fiscal years the foundation's contributions have been equally substantial and varied. It has proved its value to the nation both in support of its domestic and international problems. More and more it will demonstrate that the profits of the free enterprise system may be used to further the cause of a stronger and happier nation, the more committed to the American way of life.

$75,000 Grant From Ford Fund To Morris Brown

Dr. John H. Lewis, president of Morris Brown College, announces that the college received on Saturday, June 30, a check in the amount of $75,000 from the Ford Foundation. This first installment represents approximately half of the total endowment grant made by the Foundation to Morris Brown.

The purpose of the $210,000,000 grant made last December by the Ford Foundation to accredited private colleges of the nation—the largest single educational grant in the history of philanthropy—is to provide for the increase of faculty salaries. By matching the income from this grant, Morris Brown will be able to increase salaries 6 or 7 percent.

Morris Brown, like most other small, privately operated colleges, is caught between the rising cost of education, which reflects the rising cost of living in general on the one hand and more-or-less static income on the other. This, coupled with the fact that its enrollment is steadily increasing, confronts the school with the grave problem of improving both the quantity and quality of educational offerings. This endowment, the income from which is to be used for teachers' salaries, fills therefore, a real need. But the need is too great to be met by the grant of any one foundation, however, liberal.

"America could ill-afford to lose the contributions made by the smaller, privately-operated colleges. There are certain values inherent in their educational philosophy which are vital to the development of leadership for this critical period in the life of the nation.

"We believe, therefore, that the alumni and supporting constituency of any private college have an inescapable obligation to help in the solution of this financial problem which confronts them all. We believe, further, that this generous

SUMTER COUNTY CITIZENS' COUNCIL

P. O. DRAWER 429

SUMTER, SOUTH CAROLINA

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE SUMTER COUNTY CITIZENS' COUNCIL:

Recently a press release in the Sumter Daily Item, as well as The State and The News & Courier, brought to light that a small group of Sumter people, both colored and white, were planning a "workshop" at Morris College, the colored college in Sumter, for the purpose of "finding workable ways of further extending the lines of communication between responsible leaders in our community, to break down barriers, to change thought, and to widen the reach of goodwill." This group styled themselves a "Bi-racial" group, and appears to be connected with the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, which receives annual grants of approximately $12,000.00 from the Southern Regional Council. The Southern Reginal Council has been listed by the House Un-American Activities Committee. This workshop was scheduled for 18 July 1956, and was to be held from 5:00 P. M. to 9:00 P. M., accordng to the announcement made by Earle L. Kirby, the owner of Kirby's, a business establishment on East Liberty Street in Sumter, S. C., who is the chairman of the "Bi-racial" group. The Secretary of the group is Anna D. Reuben, the wife of O. R. Reuben, the President of Morris College. The meeting was to have been conducted by Ira Kaye, a lawyer who is a native of New York, but who has settled in Sumter after coming here while in the armed forces.

Insofar as can be determined by your Committeemen assigned to study the Press release and the information on the "Bi-racial" group which has been assembled, the group is composed of persons who believes that the Decree of the Supreme Court of the United States with regard to integration of the races should be obeyed and that all barriers should be broken down and our thoughts on the subject changed, and that Negroes should be accepted by us in all walks of life. Accordingly, it was determined that a member of any such "Bi-racial" group could not possibly have the same standpoint as that expressed by the Citizens' Councils, for the reason that such a group favors integration on a gradual basis while we of the Citizens' Councils have unequivocably taken the position that there will be no integration at all.

Immediately a meeting of the Policy Committee, the Membership Committee and the officers of the Sumter County Citizens' Council met and adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, the sole purpose of this organization is to maintain and preserve segregation; and

WHEREAS, this organization does not condone the actions of any group seeking to bring about integration in the public school or elsewhere in this State, whether directly or through the process of "gradualism," now therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED: That any member of the Sumter County Citizens' Council who knowingly joins or affiliates with any group seeking to bring about integration in the public schools of South Carolina, or in the lives of our people, shall immediately be expelled from this organization.

Thereupon, as Earle L. Kirby was a member of the Sumter County Citizens' Council, he was summarily expelled from membership, was so notified by letter, and his membership fee returned.

The "workshop" was called off.

This report is made for the information of Members of Citizens' Councils. For additional information the following news is furnished: The "workshop" panel, chosen, according to the Press release, "because they have wisdom and experience in ways that work to relieve tensions and promote understanding for better living in South Carolina," were, in addition to Ira Kaye, the attorney from New York, Jack O'Dowd, of the Florence Morning News, who has written many editorials favoring the Decree of the Supreme Court and integration (Mr. O'Dowd has now moved to Chicago), Rev. Henry L. Parker, Orangeburg, Rev. Hawley Lynn, Columbia, and Rev. J. D. Rice, from Morris College.

It should be noted that the "workshop" was scheduled from 5:00 P. M. to 9 P. M., a time during which most of us are at home eating supper.

After the occurrance of the matter reported above, the Mayor of the City of Sumter, M. Priscilla Shaw, who is also the Vice-President of Shaw Lumber Company, wrote from North Carolina that she was in favor of the "Bi-racial" group established here. She mentioned on several occasions in her letter which was published in the Sumter Daily Item that she thought the group would prevent "violence" and "bloodshed." The Citizens' Councils have not advocated any such bloodshed and violence. Your Committee does not understand the frequent reference to "violence and bloodshed" in that the Citizens' Councils initially went on record as being opposed to any violence and, having so stated, has quietly stood on its record, believing that such a course is calmest and best, rather than to continuously refer to such unsettling phraseology.

Your Committees and your officers have met frequently to discuss questions raised by the turn of events as related. Your Policy Committee and the officers recently adopted the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, the purpose of the Sumter County Citizens' Council is to maintain and preserve segregation and

WHEREAS, any person or Bi-racial group advocating and seeking to bring about integration of the races in our public schools or otherwise in the lives of our people are instruments of destruction of our society and therefore should be recognized as such, now, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Policy Committee of Sumter County Citizens' Council in meeting assembled that these facts be brought to the attention of the membership of the Sumter County Citizens' Council.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be sent to all members of the Sumter County Citizens' Council for their consideration."

Your Committees and your officers realize, of course, and appreciate the sentiment of the members of this Council. The foregoing is brought to your attention to show how insidiously those opposed to our views approach this situation, and the necessity of a watchful and united effort of those who wish to preserve our way of life.

Your Committees wish to commend to your attention that Ford, Phillip Morris, Philco, and others have been forced to retreat from certain active support of the forces of integration and the NAACP by actions of members of the Citizens' Councils and other anti-integration groups. Let us keep up the good work. We never know when, where, and in what form, the forces of integration and the destruction of our country may show themselves.

Ford Foundation — Great Philanthropy

Chicago Chronicle 9-27-58

Persons who would criticize and/or boycott Ford Motor Company because Ford in the past has made donations to organizations which these critics disapprove of ought to be awarded a medal for their achievements in ingratitude.

Because we were practically born and raised in a chevrolet—our father having been one of the pioneer GM dealers in the two Carolinas—we might have had a highly conditioned prejudice against Ford, since they were our most successful competitors back in the depression days, when it really took some selling to move a car.

But that fact does not deter us from acknowledging the tremendous generosity and great humanitarian impulse which motivates the Ford family . . . a generosity which found expression last year in the greatest single act of philanthropy that this world has ever known.

The people of America owe a great deal to the Ford family, which has shown, through its Ford Foundation, that it is responsive to the obligations of good citizenship and good government which its powerful position in our economy imposes upon it.

Last year the Ford Foundation gave away to hospitals, schools and colleges $1 billion, with absolutely no strings attached. Just this week other gifts were announced, including a half million dollars to Duke Hospital. Many hospitals and colleges in South Carolina received large sums. Ford gave it because they had faith in our free enterprise system and in the American people; because they wanted to strengthen both by building a stronger, healthier, better educated America.

Compared to this tremendous act of Christian charity, these pigmy critics of Ford sound absurd. In the first place Ford does not stand alone in donating money to certain organizations whose purposes some of us may not entirely endorse. Most of the larger industries, including other auto industries, have given to the same outfits. In the second, it's not in the American tradition to boycott someone or some industry because they may not share all of our social or political views. In the third place, such boycotts are classic examples of cutting off ones nose to spite ones face.

We do not imagine that those people who would boycott Ford—because of a small gift it may have given in past years to some organization they didn't like—would refuse to send their child to some university under a scholarship made possible by Ford's philanthropy; or that they would refuse to send a loved one to a hospital for a new surgical technique, a new drug, or some new treatment made possible through research financed by Ford's gifts to hospitals and scientific centers.

One should, we would think, buy a car, a soft drink, a suit of clothes, a bottle of beer because they liked its performance, its taste or its appearance, and not because they liked or disliked the political or social views of the corporation which manufactured the products.

ATTACKS ON NAACP

Resolution adopted by the Administrative Committee of the American Jewish Congress on October 21, 1956 at New York City.

The effort by Southern state governments to nullify the Supreme Court decision declaring segregation in public schools unconstitutional has now become a concerted attack on the fundamental constitutional guarantees of freedom of thought and freedom of expression, through the device of destroying freedom of association. To that end, a number of states that have openly asserted their intention of preventing enforcement of the Supreme Court decision have enacted laws or initiated legal proceedings to outlaw or paralyze the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and to punish those who support its program.

This newest method of defending the institution of jimcrow is a greater menace to constitutional liberties than mob violence. In the guise of legality and with the stamp of governmental authority, these states are attempting to stop lawful organized protest against segregation and to deprive the Negro community of its chosen instrument for obtaining equality and the full rights of citizenship.

Some of the events that reveal the nature of this attack may be briefly described:

> The State of Alabama has obtained a court decree ousting the NAACP from the state for failing to register as a corporation and on the ground of other alleged illegal practices. In this proceeding, the state obtained an order directing the Association to divulge its membership list. When the Association refused to comply with that order because of the dangers to which its members would be exposed if their names were made public, a ruinous $100,000 fine was levied on it. Independently of this action, Alabama has enacted a statute requiring all organizations, except military and religious bodies, to file membership lists every year.

Louisiana has also obtained court orders to exclude the Association from the state and to require it to make public the names of its members.

Texas has started proceedings to outlaw the NAACP because it did not register under an archaic statute and because its efforts to facilitate desegregation lawsuits are claimed to be illegal. In this proceeding, too,the court has issued an order forbidding the organization to function in the state.

Virginia has enacted a law containing elaborate registration and reporting requirements, including the disclosure of names and addresses of members, for all organizations promoting or opposing the passage of legislation "in behalf of any race or color" or advocating racial integration or segregation. It will be impossible for the NAACP to function in Virginia in accordance with this law's requirements.

Four states - Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina - have enacted laws making it difficult if not impossible for NAACP members to teach in the schools or hold any other government position.

Legislative investigations of the NAACP have been launched in Florida and Virginia to harass the Association and intimidate its members.

In Mississippi, the lesgislature has created a public commission, with a large appropriation and subpoena powers, to fight all elements antagonistic to the state's "way of life."

South Carolina has carried its campaign against the expression of dissent to the point of banning from state libraries all books that are "antagonistic and inimical to the traditions of South Carolina."

These measures are obviously designed to stifle the NAACP, the organization best equipped to organize the struggle against segregation, the organization chosen by the victims of segregation as the channel for the expression of their demands. Those who attack the NAACP recognize that efforts to give reality to the high promise of the Supreme Court decision require effective organization. The oppressive actions described above are designed to interrupt communication among those who share the views of the NAACP and thereby to keep them from expressing those views effectively.

The democratic process of popular government depends on the existence of voluntary organizations. Wherever they are proscribed, constitutional freedoms are abrogated. And it matters not whether the proscription is accomplished by outlawry, exorbitant fines or exposure of the identity of members and supporters to a hostile community.

The right that is at stake is not that of the NAACP or organizations as such, but the right of individuals - of the people as a whole - to express themselves. Just as freedom of the press exists for the benefit not of the press but of those who may read, freedom of organization exists for the benefit of those who may make known their views and needs through organization.

Supreme Court decisions have established both the right of Southern Negroes to go to unsegregated schools and their right to voice opposition to state legislation that would nevertheless maintain segregation. These rights - of equality and freedom of expression - are no more than paper promises to those who cannot organize for their assertion. Individually, the Southern Negro is helpless against the power of a hostile state government. Joined with others, he can safeguard and exercise his constitutional rights.

These efforts by Southern state governments to establish the racially segregated "way of life" as "official" and to bar all organized opposition to such doctrine are a threat to all Americans. Today the NAACP bears the brunt of these attacks; tomorrow it will be any other organization, civic, educational, labor or even religious, that dares to challenge any of the South's peculiar institutions. The entire nation will lose a part of its liberties if this attempt at controlling thought succeeds. All organized groups must recognize that they face a menace to their freedom of action.

The Federal government, in all its branches, has the obligation to oppose this already partly successful move to destroy constitutional guarantees. Since it is the Federal constitution that has been challenged, there can be no ground for adopting a hands-off policy. The theory of the Fourteenth Amendment is that, at those times when state governments oppress their own people, the national government must intervene to protect the democratic processes necessary to the republican form of government.

The President himself, elected by and representative of all the people, is in a position to remind us all, and particularly the officials of Southern states, of the importance of freedom of association and of the role played in our popular government by the NAACP and similar organizations. He should make it clear that he regards the steps described above as an illegal attempt to destroy the NAACP and that he will marshal the resources of the Federal Government to prevent such a denial of constitutional rights.

The Department of Justice has in the past recognized that it cannot be silent on the issue of state-imposed segregation. The briefs filed by both Democratic and Republican Attorneys General in the school segregation cases when they were pending in the Supreme Court embodied the position of the national governments on that issue. But the filing of those briefs did not discharge the Federal government of its responsibility. Now that the Supreme Court has spoken, the Department of Justice has the further duty to make its voice known and its influence felt in the continuing judicial battle to give the Court's decision reality. The Department of Justice has recognized that duty in at least one recent Federal case in which it urged court action against mob violence. It is at least equally important that the Department of Justice intervene in the state court proceedings now pending in which the legality of the measures designed to suppress the NAACP will be determined.

The challenge to constitutional liberty must likewise be met by the United States Congress, acting under its express power to enact legislation to enforce the guarantees of the Fourteenth Amendment. As a necessary first step, it should hold full hearings that will inform Congress, and the nation as a whole, of the nature, extent and implications of the measures that have been taken to prevent the NAACP from opposing the illegal aims of Southern state governments. Indeed, one may hope that their exposure to the public will compel their abandonment without further Congressional action.

NOW, THEREFORE, the Administrative Committee of the American Jewish Congress

1. Calls upon all individuals and organizations dedicated to the maintenance of constitutional liberty to come to the defense of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against the unprincipled attacks to which it is being subjected, recognizing in these attacks a threat to that freedom of association necessary to the exercise of other constitutional freedoms;
2. Calls upon the United States Congress to conduct a public investigation of the extent to which constitutional freedoms have been invaded by these attacks and, on the basis of its findings, to take appropriate action under its legislative power to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment;
3. Calls upon the United States Department of Justice to intervene in the various proceedings in the Southern states that are designed to outlaw the NAACP, paralyze its lawful activities or curb advocacy of its program of desegregating the public schools;
4. Calls upon the President of the United States to realize the vast potentialities for moral leadership inherent in his office by condemning publicly this campaign of oppression and exercising his influence to bring it to an end.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not A Successor

To The News and Courier:

We do not feel called upon to speak in derogation of any other organization. But we think that the record should be set straight as to the origin of the Southern Regional Council in view of a recent letter in The News and Courier from Mr. James E. Godkin of Beaufort.

Mr. Godkin charged that the Southern Regional Council is the successor of an organization called the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The Southern Regional Council was chartered early in 1944 and is the direct outgrowth of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, which was founded in 1919. The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was organized in 1938 and survived until about 1949.

One can readily see that the Council was in existence about five years prior to the disbandment of the SCHW; and therefore, the Council could not possibly be the successor of the SCHW as Mr. Godkin charges.

Regional Council

To The News and Courier:

George S. Mitchell, executive director, Southern Regional Council (described as "the most effective interracial organization in the South" in The New York Times, Oct. 17, 1955), apparently is attempting to befuddle the public by his letter to The News and Courier claiming that the Southern Regional Council is not the (or a) successor of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The fact is, nevertheless, that all five persons who organized and incorporated the SRC in 1944 were or had been members of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (SCHW). These were: Dr. George S. Mitchell, formerly a vice-chairman of the SCHW; Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, an early member of SCHW; Dr. Rufus E. Clement (Negro), president of Atlanta University, member of executive board of SCHW; the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson (Negro), president of Fisk University, member of executive board of SCHW, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, a sponsor of the second Southern Conference for Human Welfare. This information is from the records and reports of the House Un-American Activities Committee and The Bulletin of the Fund for the Republic.

The SCHW was first cited as a Communist front by the HUAC in 1944. The HUAC has stated that the SCHW's "professed interest in Southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union. . ." Apparently the SCHW leaders, realizing that the citing of the SCHW as a Communist front would expose its Red aims, set up the Southern Regional Council to carry on the questionable activities of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Letters To Editor

MUST CLEANSE OUR HEARTS

I am not in the habit of reading articles airing the views of Communists or ex-Communists but someone called my attention to an article in the Hattiesburg American for March 9 which mentioned so called "Southern Red fronts" and gave officers and directors of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. The list, which included my name was out of date. I allowed my name to be used as a director for a short time but withdrew it several months ago, as did the other Hattiesburg lady mentioned. I felt that there should be an organization containing good white people that good Negro leaders could turn to in time of tension. During that time I attended one meeting which was held in the Y. W. C. A. in Jackson. For most of that short period the president was one of our finest Christian leaders and a woman of superior social standing. She is travelling abroad at this time.

As to the accusation of a red-tainted origin, my information is that its former organization was the old Southern Anti - Lynching Society which was made up largely of Southern white women of high character. The testimony given in the Saturday paper was from self-confessed ex-Communists who were excited by politicians listening to their views and suspicions.

My father was a sawmill man who employed many Negroes. He worked for their welfare and helped them with their problems. I was taught that was our responsibility, not only as Christians but as first class citizens. We who are praying for a Christian revival will not have it until we cleanse our hearts of suspicion and replace it with active goodwill.

Mrs. E. E. Deen

Editor The American:

I wish to endorse the statement of Mrs. Deen and to say further that from the two meetings of the Mississippi Council of Human Relations which I attended and from any other possible source of information I have never had any reason to believe that either the Southern Regional Council or the Mississippi Council of Human Relations were other than they claim to be, strictly non - political, non-pressure groups, or that either had any connection whatsoever with any pressure groups.

Race Relations

A FRANK TALK TO NORTH AND SOUTH ABOUT "INTEGRATION"

A Southern leader with a reputation as a moderate raises a storm warning on the current struggle over integration.

Virginius Dabney, newspaper editor and former teacher, discusses these problems:

- Has there been too much haste in mixing whites and Negroes in some schools?
- What do white Southerners fear most about sending children to mixed schools?
- Does the "civil rights" program before Congress threaten traditional liberties?
- Is the North covering up its own racial strife by pointing a finger at the South?

Mr. Dabney reviews a vexing issue.

Following is full text of an address by Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond, Va., "Times-Dispatch," before a meeting of the National Association of Secondary-School Principals in Washington, D. C., Feb. 26, 1957:

Mr. Chairman and members of the Association:

I am glad you asked me to speak to you this morning on "Where We Are on Integration" rather than "Where We Are Going on Integration." I would much prefer to try to tell you what the present posture of interracial relations is than to try to predict what the next few years will bring forth. As a newspaper editor, I have to dust off my crystal ball from time to time and to gaze knowingly into my tea leaves, but the job of forecasting the immediate interracial future in certain areas of the South is, I confess, beyond my powers.

As public-school principals, you are inevitably concerned over the effect of the interracial controversy upon the public-school systems of the various States. In some of those States the effect has not been particularly pronounced one way or the other, whereas in others it has been profound—even potentially catastrophic.

This latter aspect of the problem is one which also concerns me greatly. As a citizen, as a former teacher in a private preparatory school and a parent with a son in a public high school, I am deeply troubled by the thought that the growing intensity of the struggle over integration in some eight or nine Southern States may disrupt, and even close down entirely, the systems of public education in several of those States.

A more chaotic condition would be difficult to imagine. Aside from the educational problems involved, consider the enormous rise in juvenile delinquency which would inevitably accompany such a development.

Already we are encountering acute problems in the educational field in a number of Southern States, and the end not yet. Appropriation of school funds from month to month, uncertainty of the future for schoolteachers, reluctance of citizens to accept appointments to school boards are some of the disturbing phenomena which confront us.

In the Border States, where integration has been proceeding smoothly for the most part, there have been problems growing out of the two to three-year educational lag often noticed in the performance of Negro students by comparison with white students of the same age. Granted that much of this is due to inferior school facilities heretofore available to colored pupils in those areas, and to inferior living conditions—the problem is a huge and bafflin one, nevertheless.

The question of how to avoid handicapping white children by throwing them into classes with Negro children who are incapable of doing the work must be giving many of you genuine concern. The parallel question of how to bring the colored students up t the required level of achievemer doubtless concerns you no less.

Here in this great city of Washington, where 70 per cent of the school population is colored, these problems are particularly acute Although integration is now in it third year here, solutions are a long way off according to the best information I can get. It seems clear to me that mixed schools were put into effect here with too much haste and too little preparation.

The situation described by the principal of the John Pitman Elementary School in Kirkwood, Mo.

Virginius Dabney comes of an old Virginia family, numbers Thomas Jefferson among his forebears. Winner of a Pulitzer Prize for journalism in 1948, he is editor of the Richmond "Times-Dispatch," one of the South's most influential dailies.

Born in Virginia in 1901, Mr. Dabney was graduated at 19 from the University of Virginia, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. After getting an M. A. and teaching for a year, he entered journalism in 1922.

As an editor Mr. Dabney is considered to be a liberal. Among the causes for which he has fought are the end of segregated transportation and for a two-party system in the South.

A Southern Editor Who Favors Desegregation In Buses and Streetcars Discusses:

Why the South Fears "Mongrelization"

How "Civil Rights" Plan Threatens Liberty

What Negroes Do to Hurt Their Own Cause

Effects of "Haste" in Mixing Schools

one of the first schools in that State to desegregate—is a disurbing one. At the end of two years of desegregation, Mrs. . A. Compton, the principal, said to a representative of Southern School News" that the teachers there felt that "the holastic disparity remains just as great and that it is now mplicated by feelings of frustration and defensiveness on the rt of the Negroes—feelings which come out in the form of ater aggressiveness, arrogance and bad temper." It was ded, however, that none of this constitutes an argument inst integration, and that progress in the immediate future hoped for.

Over against such a report as this must be put that made recently for the city of Baltimore, for example, by Superintendent of Public Instruction John H. Fischer, who said, "On the basis of our experience it seems clear that, by desegregating our schools, we have substantially improved the educational opportunities of Negro children without reducing in any way those available to white children."

Baltimore, unlike Washington, did not make the mistake of trying to integrate everybody almost overnight. If we are to have integration generally—and many of us in the South are strongly of the opinion that we are a long way from ready for this in numerous parts of the region—the Baltimore system is far superior to the Washington ystem.

Baltimore did not try to force the races together. It allowed pupils of both races to decide which schools they wished to attend. The first year, only 3 per cent of the Negroes enrolled in white schools. This rose to 7.4 per cent the next year and the figure is now 13.8 per cent.

But even Washington, dubious as its school policies seem to me to have been in certain respects, is more restrained than New York City in its approach to the problem. As you are doubtless aware, they are transporting children all the way across town in New York, away from the neighborhood schools which they have been reaching conveniently on foot these many years, and compelling them to enroll with members of the opposite race.

All this is being done at great inconvenience and expense, on the theory that a modest degree of integration is not enough. We must have total and complete integration everywhere and at once, it would seem. The folly and absurdity of this strikes me as obvious.

In my home State of Virginia, the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled, on motion of the NAACP [National Association for the Advancement of Colored People], that an excellent regional high school for Negroes in Christiansburg was operating illegally because some of the colored children had to travel longer distances to that school than some of the white children in the area had to travel to their schools.

But we now have this same NAACP instrumental in forcing Negro children in New York to travel all the way across town, instead of attending their neighborhood schools, in order that every child may have what is termed "the right to attend a mixed school." Words fail me in commenting on this fantastic arrangement.

Benjamin Fine of the New York "Times" says many New Yorkers are leaving the city for the suburbs because of it, and that the suburban schools are superior, one reason being that they are more "homogeneous."

I find it easy to understand when Omer Carmichael, superintendent of the smoothly integrated Louisville schools, declares, as he did last week, that the NAACP is chiefly responsible for the Southern chaos over desegregation. Not content with achieving reasonable gains, this organization continues to press for drastic changes that cannot possibly be granted, and would not work in the South if they were.

The attitude manifested in Arkansas last year illustrates the point. The plan worked out there for progressive integration in the Little Rock schools, beginning on the high-school level in 1957, was rejected by the NAACP as unsatisfactory. Its leaders were unwilling to admit that this plan represented a long advance toward their goal. Obviously, they insist on having the moon handed them on a silver platter and are unwilling to proceed by gradual steps. Such an unstatesmanlike attitude is hard to reconcile with the genuine advances the NAACP has achieved for the colored people of this country.

In Virginia, I regret to say, the State Legislature has been unfair to the NAACP. It has passed bills designed to harass that organization by obtaining and publicizing the names of all its members and their financial contributions. This is a dangerous action, and one which the Virginia Assemblymen may well live to regret. The legislative harassment of an organization which happens to be unpopular could easily prove a boomerang for the responsible parties.

. . . In Deep South, "resistance to integration is tremendous"

True, the statutes in question apply equally to such organizations as the White Citizens' Councils, which are fighting integration. I am awaiting tangible evidence that these organizations will be harassed in the same manner as the NAACP.

There is no doubt of the unpopularity in the South of both the NAACP and the Supreme Court's 1954 decision ordering an end to segregation in the schools. The latest Gallup poll, which reported that it reflected the views of both white and colored citizens in the Southern States, found two thirds of those canvassed to disapprove the Court's

—USN&WR Photo

ON MIXED SCHOOLS, Mr. Dabney says, "it behooves us all to evidence a greater measure of good will" ruling. By contrast, the poll found nearly two thirds of those in the rest of the country applauding the same ruling.

All of which raises a question as to the implications of such a situation for the South. How long can the South afford to remain in flat and violent disagreement with the North and West on so fundamental an issue as race relations?

Yet there are no indications whatever at this time of a shift of opinion in nine of the 11 States which constituted the Confederacy. In Texas and Arkansas, the so-called "black belt" areas appear to be as adamant as ever against integration, although some mixing has gone forward in other regions, especially in Texas.

But in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana the resistance to integration is tremendous. Except for the much-disputed entry of about a dozen Negroes into the Clinton, Tenn., high school, there has been absolutely no integration in the public schools of these nine States.

If I had to single out one anti-integrationist argument that seems to influence the greatest number of Southern whites against mixed schools, it would be the argument that mixed schools lead to "mongrelization." Other sections of the United States sneer and jeer at this argument. Herbert Ravenel Sass of Charleston, S. C., presented the ultraconservative Southern position on this about as well as it can be presented in the Novemb 1956, issue of the "Atlantic Monthly." Promptly the mag e was flooded with derisive letters from the North and West hooting at Mr. Sass and his thesis.

Now, it may be possible to argue that integration woul not increase the likelihood of racial amalgamation—althoug any visitor to most of the countries of Central and South America with his eyes open would be likely to reach the opposite conclusion. But even if we accept this argument, which I do not, the desirability that every race strive to maintain its own integrity seems to me to be indisputable There is nothing in my thesis of bigotry or prejudice, an nothing having to do with supposed racial superiority or in feriority.

My point is that the Negro should wish, no less than th white, to retain his racial identity and his cultural heritage, t the end that his race's indisputably great achievements can l properly recognized and handed down to his posterity.

"Acts of Violence" Are "Criminal"

Perhaps the most alarming phenomenon in the South this time is to be found in the repeated acts of violer against Negroes which are not only criminal and utt wrong, but which are bringing the entire region into disrepute in the eyes of civilized people everywhere. The bombings, beatings and shootings which are occurring in some areas, with whites as the guilty parties, are in glaring contrast to the passive and law-abiding attitude of Negro leaders—in the Montgomery bus boycott, for example.

On the other hand, the criminality and immorality of many Negroes is one of the chief reasons why white Southerners object so strongly to mixed schools. Granted that other races might have similar records if they had been enslaved for centuries and then had had to live in slums and to fight against all manner of handicaps. Yet the fact remains that the Negro crime and illegitimacy rates are everywhere so vastly greater than those of the whites that these statistic have an alarming impact on the minds of parents, especiall those of adolescent white boys and girls who would b thrown into rather intimate contact with colored boys and girls in integrated schools.

If I may be pardoned a personal reference, I should like to say that, for the past quarter of a century, I have striven to eliminate some of the major handicaps from which Negroes have suffered in the South. I was a member of the Atlanta conference which met in the early 1940s, in response to an appeal from Negro leaders who had met shortly before at Durham, N. C., and had asked that Southern Negroes be treated more fairly and equitably. I was a director of the Southern Regional Council which was then organized in an effort to achieve these objectives.

I was the first Southern newspaper editor to urge abolition of segregation on streetcars and buses. I proposed this late in 1943, but was unable to persuade the legislature of Virginia to accept my suggestion.

. . . "The race problem is not regional but national"

Our inability to get this and other reasonable concessions for the Negro from the white leaders of the South caused the Negro leaders of the region to turn to their racial compatriots in the North. The South's Negro leadership would have been satisfied, I believe, at least for a time, with much less than the all-out objectives subsequently sought by the NAACP.

But the white leaders of the region were unable to deliver, and the result was that the effort of the Negro leadership of the South to "keep the capital of the Negro race in Atlanta," as one of them put it, failed. It was then that the NAACP's drive for the abolition of segregation got under way, with the support of Southern Negro leaders, and the "capital" moved to New York.

How Races Were "Driven Apart"

The tragic fact today in the South is that hardly any liaison remains between the white leadership and the Negro leadership. Not only so, but, until a few years ago, Negroes were being elected regularly to city councils and school boards in several Southern States, and it was the most natural thing in the world for white and colored leaders to sit down together for discussion of their mutual problems.

These things are no longer true. The two races have been driven apart by the rancorous arguments over segregation, with the result that hardly any avenues of communication exist in most areas. The NAACP leadership has committed all Negroes so completely to its drive for total integration that any white who dissents from this view is stigmatized as an enemy of the Negro race. Of course, Negro dissenters are assailed with still greater violence, and are pilloried in much of the Negro press as "Uncle Toms," "handkerchief heads," and so on.

I hold no brief for the extremist journals in the South published by whites. Some of them are no better than organs of the resurgent Ku Klux Klan. But it is dismaying to find a once well-balanced Negro paper such as the Norfolk "Journal and Guide" saying, apropos of anti-integrationist legislation adopted in Virginia, "We have a determination on the part of a majority of Virginians to continue slavery in spirit and practice."

And the temper of the more extreme Negro press is seen in a recent editorial which appeared—soon after the birthday of Robert E. Lee—in the "Afro-American" chain, largest Negro chain in the nation. It dealt with the proposal in Congress by a Northern member to have Lee's citizenship restored. The "Afro-American" said, in part: "If Lee was stripped of his citizenship it was because the country just after the war felt that should be the penalty for a traitor who violated his oath and carried on a war to destroy the union and preserve slavery. . . . He was engaged as a rebel and traitor in a foul and dirty business. The dear God passes judgment on him now."

In view of the universal verdict of leading historians in this country and Great Britain as to the nobility of Lee's character and the purity of his motives, further comment on this outburst seems unnecessary. It does serve to illustrate the bitterness which infuses a large segment of the Negro press.

The Negro schoolteachers of the South should be deeply concerned over this whole controversy. There are from 75,000 to 80,000 of them, and the great danger is that many of them will lose their positions if matters are pushed to the ultimate conclusion and mixed schools are forced in certain areas.

The unwillingness of many white Southerners to have their children taught by colored teachers is the crux of this situation. Some will consider this attitude narrow-minded, but it exists in such definite form that it cannot be ignored. Several hundred Negro teachers have lost their jobs already in the Border States, chiefly Oklahoma, but I understand that most of them have been re-employed elsewhere.

The criticism heaped upon us by our Northern friends because many white Southerners, by and large, do not wish their children taught by Negro teachers, would come with better grace, I submit, if the public schools of the North employed more Negro teachers. The number, as is well known to each of you, is infinitesimal by comparison with the number in the South. Even where the colored population is enormous, as in New York, Philadelphia, Detroit and Chicago there are few Negro teachers. No satisfactory explanation for this has ever come to my attention.

Permit me to remark parenthetically that the average salary of the tens of thousands of Negro teachers in the South is about equal to that of the white teachers, and in at least three Southern States—Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee—the average annual salary of Negro teachers is higher than that of white teachers. It must be confessed that the NAACP is largely responsible for bringing Negro teachers' salaries up to white level. There is no telling how long it would have taken to achieve this objective, had it not been for the suits filed and won by that organization.

While we are discussing the attitude of the North, or certain segments of it, to the race problem, it seems appropriate to emphasize that this problem is not regional but national.

Troubles in Northern States

Just the other day I read of how a Negro man was beaten to death on the streets of Boston by white hoodlums who had begun yelling epithets at him when they saw him escorting a white woman.

You are, of course, familiar with the situation in Chicago, where scores if not hundreds of police had to guard Negro families around the clock for more than three years at the Trumbull Park housing project. The clear implication of this situation is that these Negroes would have been mobbed long ago for moving into that housing development, but for the protection afforded them.

The mayor of Dearborn, Mich., makes it a well-publicized practice not to allow a single Negro to settle in that community of 125,000 people. "Negroes can't get in here," His Honor declared last year. "Every time we hear of a Negro moving in we respond quicker than you do to a fire." The mayor was given an overwhelming vote of confidence recently, so his policies evidently are regarded with favor and approval by the people of Dearborn.

I hope it is unnecessary for me to say that I abhor the sort of thing that is here described as happening in Boston, Chicago and Dearborn. These things are disgusting and disgraceful. The fact remains that these occurrences—and others which might be mentioned—have all taken place outside the South. Furthermore, the fact that Negroes had to be protected from mobs 24 hours a day for more than three years in the State of Abraham Lincoln is not without its ironic and tragic implications.

Another point which needs to be made, I believe, is the attitude in the North toward the South's so-called "lawlessness" and "flouting of the Constitution and the Supreme Court."

. . . Negroes should "see the folly of forcing the issue"

I do not defend or condone lawlessness, whether in the North or the South, but it is a bit dismaying to observe that some of our Northern compatriots seem to regard lawlessness as something which is not only acceptable but admirable when it occurs in accordance with what is deemed to be the sentiment of their particular communities.

Only a few weeks ago, for example, Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia applauded this attitude. Speaking apropos of a State law forbidding Sunday basketball in the City of Brotherly Love, His Honor said:

> "Free people refuse to knuckle under to laws which completely ignore their welfare and desires. . . . Just as long as the legislature refuses to permit cities the right to determine what activities their citizens are entitled to engage in on Sunday, it is inevitable that the law will be ignored."

I wonder whether the Philadelphia newspaper which has been denouncing Southerners who boggle at all-out integration as bigots and flouters of the "law of the land" has been equally caustic in its references to Mayor Dilworth, who loudly proclaims his intention to ignore the law. Incidentally, Mayor Dilworth is all for "liberalizing" the Democratic Party and putting those law-violating Southerners in their place.

And while we are on this general subject, a great many of those in the North who are blasting the South for failure to comply with the mandates of the Supreme Court on integration violated the Constitution and the statutes wholesale during the prohibition era.

Of course, I realize that no one in this audience could conceivably have patronized a bootlegger when the late lamented "noble experiment" was our prop and stay, but there were thousands, aye millions, who did so. In doing so, they flouted a duly enacted amendment to the Constitution and duly approved acts of Congress—not opinions handed down by the Supreme Court. Yet some of these very drinkers of white mule and bathtub gin are loudest in clamoring today that the South has no respect for law and order!

The Problem of "Intolerance"

Ladies and gentlemen, we are heading into an era of intersectional tension and misunderstanding, and the intolerance that is being manifested on both sides of Mason and Dixon's Line is not reassuring. It behooves us all to evidence a greater measure of sanity and good will and to stop hurling epithets.

The recent actions of a federal judge in Tennessee in connection with the racial disorder at Clinton have alarmed many students of the Constitution, both North and South. They feel that the jurist in question showed a lamentable disregard for certain constitutional verities, and ignored the time-honored right of defendants to free speech and to a jury trial. They feel that the court was too sweeping in its injunctions.

The whole episode seemed symbolic of the prevailing tendency in certain quarters to go to the utmost extremes if integration is thereby promoted—whether by hauling school children many miles away from their neighborhood schools or by stretching the Constitution and the statutes in the name of "liberalism," "democracy," "brotherhood," or what have you.

I would not wish to seem to imply that all the examples of extremism are to be found in the North. In South Carolina, for instance, something very close to witch hunting and book burning has been approved almost unanimously by the State Legislature. That body adopted a resolution last year asking the State Library Board to remove existing books and to screen future books that are "antagonistic and inimical to the traditions and customs of this State."

The "civil rights" program now before Congress is a perfect example of the sort of extremist legislation which frightens and dismays the South—and should frighten and dismay the whole country. Has it been seriously contemplated before in this land that persons "about to engage in" certain acts could be arrested and haled into court?

Dangers of "Thought Control"

Yet, one of the provisions of a pending civil-rights bill embodies this amazing language. Even Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, of New York, not exactly a "race baiter" or a "white supremacist," has said that this plan to arrest persons "about to engage in" certain activities seems to him dangerously like "thought control."

The civil-rights program also appears to negate the right to trial by jury, and it would enable the Attorney General to file, at public expense, suits on behalf of persons who contend that their civil rights have been violated. Another provision would seem to empower a proposed civil-rights commission to summon any citizen from any part of the United States to any other part to defend himself against charges, the nature of which was completely unknown to him prior to receipt of the subpoena.

Most of the foregoing is vouched by former judges who are now members of Congress as being in accord with reasonable interpretation of the language of these "civil rights" bills. Such far-reaching legislation should have much more careful scrutiny than it appears to be getting. A majority of Congress seems to be so bemused by the phrase "civil rights" that it is reluctant to vote against anything which bears the label, no matter how dangerous its potentialities. And these particular measures have about as many potentialities for evil, and for interracial conflict, as have been presented to Congress in a long time.

In conclusion, let me say that I end as I began—reluctant, indeed unwilling, to try to forecast the future of the current interracial upheaval in the South. We are heading into stormy seas, I fear. The Deep South, it must be said in all frankness, has no present intention of integrating its public schools.

Several of those States have a fixed determination to close their schools entirely rather than mingle the races in them. All courts, as far as I know, agree that this would be legal, however deplorable from an educational and social standpoint.

Let us hope, therefore, that the NAACP will see the folly of forcing the issue in these States, and will exhibit a statesmanlike restraint. Enormous gains have been made by the Negro race in education and every other sphere throughout the entire South, and additional gains will be made if only the responsible leadership of the race will assert itself.

What the ultimate future holds is not for me to say. I only know that the course of wisdom for the NAACP today is for that militant organization to "back up," to consolidate its gains and to refrain from pushing matters so fast and so far as to pass the "point of no return." Otherwise, it will do irreparable harm to the cause of Negro advancement and interracial amity. [END]

Ex-Reds Bore Into Integration Issue

This is the last in a series of reports on the school integration issue, written after a two-week trip through South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

By Alfred Friendly
Managing Editor

For three days last month, a special Louisiana state legislative committee conducted hearings in Baton Rouge. They were designed to show Communists were at the bottom of the integration movement—and that they had infiltrated or controlled organizations working for desegregation of the South's schools.

Prime target was the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Star witnesses were a number of professional ex-Communists well known to the headlines three or four years ago. The most notorious of them was Manning Johnson, principal denouncer in the loyalty investigation of United Nations Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche. His accusations were discredited.

In Baton Rouge, Johnson assailed the NAACP and then went on to accuse the Southern Regional Council, [illegible] of being founded by Co[illegible] from that stage, he proceeded [illegible] venerable Mississippi [illegible] on Human Relations as "affiliated" with the Southern Regional Council. The facts are that the Mississippi Council was founded in 1919 by some of the South's leading clergymen, and once accepted a grant of money from the Southern Regional Council, itself eminently respectable.

One of the persons named by Johnson as a board member of the Mississippi Council (along with the Catholic Bishop of Mississippi and several other outstanding ministers) was a Mrs. D. S. Wheatley, of Greenwood, Miss.

Johnson testified on March 8. Six days later a shot was fired into Mr. and Mrs. Wheatley's house.

Presumably it was not intended to kill but just to [illegible] the gun was fired [illegible] dark-ened dining [illegible] Mrs. Wheatley was [illegible] under a light in another part of the house. The bullet drilled a neat hole in the dining room window, pierced a dividing wall, knocking out a chunk of plaster, hit the far wall of the living room and dropped to the floor.

The Wheatleys are scarcely agitators or radicals. They have run a cotton business in Greenwood for many years. The husband is a born Southerner; the wife has lived in Mississippi for 30 years or more. She is the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman, the sister and sister-in-law of other Episcopal [illegible] and missionaries, and he[illegible] president of the Episcopal women[illegible] tion of her state.

She is soft-spoken, middle-aged, gray-haired, unassuming. Sitting in her pleasant but momentarily chipped living room, Mrs. Wheatley recently reminisced to a visitor about the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. She admitted, ruefully, that it hadn't really done very much. It had a few hundred members, mostly Negro, and met once a year, just for some discussion. In fact, said Mrs. Wheatley, it didn't do a thing, when you come to think of it.

Mostly, she felt, it was for [illegible] benefit of the white mem[illegible] [illegible] them to see some [illegible] [illegible]gressive Negroes.

To too many Southerners, she explained, the Negro is known only as a sharecropper, field hand or domestic servant. They have not seen Negroes of better position and better education. And so—with a glance at the bullet hole—you must have a lot of sympathy for these people.

And you know, Mrs. Wheatley mused, some good may come of the shooting. For a wonderful thing happened. On his way to work next day, 50 persons shook Wheatley's hand, expressing horror and outrage at what had happened. They said that sort of thing just wasn't Greenwood. And much the same thing happened to Mrs. Wheatley: So many people telephoned her to express indignation and sorrow. And there was not one unpleasant call.

The story is told here because it centers on a point of great importance for the future of school integration, and of race relations, in the Deep South—the point of violence.

When, under court order, some beginning is made in the Deep South toward school desegregation in the next few years, as is inevitable, there will be the threat or the actuality of violence.

[illegible] question will be the [illegible] best people' in each town, the good citizens who, though not themselves the political officeholders, nevertheless hold the ultimate power and responsibility in each community. They oppose integration for their time and age, but their instinct and their interest is in law and order.

They feel deeply and sincerely that desegregation is wrong for their town. Accordingly, will they look the other way while the riff-raff, who are willing if not eager to use violence, attempt to stop integration by violent acts? Or will they say that much as they oppose integration, they hate law violation and breach of the peace worse, and therefore try to stop it? Will they feel that if the rowdies stop desegregation by violent methods, their position and authority will be threatened? And if they do try to maintain law and order and abide by rulings stemming from the Supreme Court's desegregation decisions, will they be strong enough to win, and to carry the community with them?

One watches for clues to the future in what happened at Clinton, Tenn.; and at Clay and Sturgis in Kentucky; at Hoxie in Arkansas and Mansfield in Texas, and even in Greenwood. In some places the readings show one thing and in other places another.

In scores of cities and towns in the Deep South, the most respected and influential citizens are members of Citizens Councils, organizations dedicated to the preservation of racial separation. Yet one hears these citizens often remark that "at the first sign of violence, we're getting out."

Will they get out? No one knows about that or about anyone's behavior when the last-ditch segregationists seek to defend their cause with terror.

But the way in which America's single greatest domestic problem is resolved hinges on the answer to that question.

The End.

Dear Mr. Wilkins:

This acknowledges your letter of March 28, 1957 referring to testimony recently given by a witness, Manning Johnson, before a joint legislative committee of the State of Louisiana. According to your letter, Manning Johnson has been quoted in several news organs, including the Charleston, South Carolina NEWS AND COURIER, issue of March 9, 1957, as having testified that he is "now employed as Director of Research for the Department of Justice in Washington" and that the NAACP "has become a vehicle of the Communist Party designed to overthrow the Government of the United States." You request that we inform you whether Manning Johnson is employed by the Department as Director of Research or otherwise, and whether, in the testimony as quoted, he spoke for this Department or reflected its views.

Manning Johnson is not employed by the Department of Justice as Director of Research or in any other capacity. In fact there is not nor has there ever been any such position as Director of Research in this Department. Further, with respect to any testimony Manning Johnson may have given before the above mentioned committee, he had no authority to speak for or on behalf of the Department of Justice. You may be assured that his testimony concerning the alleged relationship between the NAACP and the Communist Party does not, in any manner, reflect the views of this Department or any findings it has made.

We have advised THE NEWS AND COURIER of Manning Johnson's non-employment with this Department. We understand that this newspaper published a corrective article in its issue of March 12, 1957.

Motives

Why are people in favor of fluoridating public water supply systems?

Communists approve of fluoridation, and the reasons are obvious. If you can establish the practice of giving mass medication to the people through public water supply systems, how easy will it be to start introducing tranquilizing drugs into the water — to make people placid and amenable to control and authority: to improve their mental health, in other words?

Water Fluoridation Rejected By Big Vote

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A proposal to fluoridate the city water supply was defeated decisively yesterday by a vote of 3,948 to 651.

Two members of the Board of Health campaigned vigorously against the plan claiming fluorides were poison, especially harmful to aged people, and that their use was advocated by Communists. It was supported by the Dover Dental Society and several parent-teacher groups.

Mental Health Molds the Mind

THE NON-CONFORMIST in a controlled society will have no defense against imprisonment under a legal code which sweeps away all protective red tape for the individual vaguely accused of being "mentally ill" or having a "psychiatric disorder." As defined by one state mental hygiene department, "psychiatric disorders" shall mean "psychotic reactions, neurotic reactions, mental deficiencies, behavior disorders, addictions, perversions, and psychosomatic disorders insofar as they are amenable to prevention, rehabilitation, or treatment." With the Fund for the Republic alleging Bricker Amendment supporters are more than a little paranoid; with pro-UNESCO-ITES tossing the allegation "paranoid" at anti-UNESCO-ITES; and with the Eastland sub-committee's Handbook on Communism alleging that Communist Party membership involves psychopathic personality, who will be left to run the world with both right-wing and left-wing locked away in sanitariums?

Of the 768 individual American members in the World Federation more than ten percent are either United World Federalists, parlor pinks, or persons already cited by Congressional Committees for membership in Red fronts. In view of this and the nature of the legislation these persons are sponsoring, requests have been made to members of Congress for an investigation of this movement. The Hon. Usher Burdick, North Dakota, introduced in the last session of the 84th Congress, House Congressional Resolution 267, designed to bring about such an investigation. Its passage is doubtful unless the American public becomes cognizant of the situation and demands that action be taken.

Unitarians Regard Jesus As Spiritual Leader, Reject Doctrine Of His Divinity

BY TRAVIS WOLFE
Post-Herald Religion Editor

Although Unitarians regard Jesus Christ as a "great and inspired moral and spiritual leader," they reject the doctrine of His divinity.

Unitarians don't believe Christ is God in the flesh. They love the person and message of Jesus and consider Him the rarest of personalities.

They endorse His prophetic preaching, His moral teaching and His spiritual insight but they refuse to make a "god" of One Who was so human in His words and deeds.

Generally, a Unitarian is a religious person whose ethic derives from that of Jesus, who believes in one God (not the Trinity) and whose philosophy of faith and life is founded upon freedom, reason and tolerance.

Unitarians are individualistic in their religion. They prefer that every Unitarian speak for himself about his faith.

Unitarians are Christians in the sense that they profess and seek to practice the religion of Jesus. They think the orthodox Christian world has forgotten the real human Jesus and has substituted a Christ of dogmatism, metaphysics and pagan philosophy.

WOLFE

The name "Unitarian" first was used in the 16th century—for certain Christians who protested the teaching of the Trinity. In 1568, King John Sigismund, of Transylvania (Hungary), a Unitarian, gave the Unitarian faith a boost by issuing a decree for religious freedom.

By 1600 there were 425 Unitarian churches in that country. Unitarianism came to America more than 125 years ago.

Unitarians don't believe the Bible is infallible. They hold it dear but reserve the right of critical appreciation.

Many Unitarians practice baptism of infants and more rarely, of adults. They regard it as an act of dedication with only symbolic meaning. It is possible to become a Unitarian without baptism.

Communion is a symbolic rite of remembrance and fellowship in the Unitarian church.

Unitarians turn thumbs down at the doctrine of the virgin birth.

Literal interpretations of heaven and hell as places of eternal bliss or damnation is alien to the mind of the Unitarian. Unitarian attitudes to immortality vary. Unitarians believe life goes on and tomorrow will be determined by our actions now.

Unitarians recognize evil in the world but don't believe in original sin. Man has capacities for good and evil, they teach. They believe in "salvation" by character.

Unitarians recognize no theological doctrines on divorce and birth control.

Science cannot replace God

False Gods are always with us. Millions put their trust in science instead of Christ today. Scientific advance has amazed present-day men to the extent that we worship things instead of God. We act as if the hope of the world rested in tall buildings, long guns, fast planes, tricky rockets and space ships. As those things are poured out of our factories we feel we are marching toward the promised land.

NATIONALISM is fast become a false god. Many nations are getting their freedom and realizing that freedom is not enough, dictators come in, spiritual values are swept aside, and a few men build an altar to the state. When the Communists came to power, they substituted science and communism for God.

Science, nationalism, culture, easy-chair cults, social security, no high wages will or can save us. We have all these things and look at our nation. We are in danger of falling apart into broken bits, full of hate, ill will and distrust, with section rising against section, class against class, race against race, and group against group. This can be our undoing.

ABOUT THE ONLY THING we have in common is mutual ill-will and distrust. What we really need in America is not more things but better men. This is the task in the church. Are we doing it?—Excerpts from message of DR. GALVIN PINKARD, pastor, in the Trinity Methodist Church Bulletin.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 85th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Origins and Aims—Report on Negro Voters

SPEECH

OF

HON. PAUL H. DOUGLAS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Friday, July 26, 1957

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, at various times in the past I have quoted the publications of the Southern Regional Council. The Southern Regional Council is composed entirely of southerners, men and women of good will of both races in the South. It is in no sense a lobbying organization. I have been able to obtain material it provides through the Library of Congress, at my request.

I think the statement which has been prepared on the origins and aims of the Southern Regional Council should be printed in the RECORD at this point so as to indicate the high qualifications of the council and its emotional attachment to the South. So I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the statement be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL: A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF ITS ORIGINS AND AIMS, APRIL 1956

"The South of the future toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritances from the past. It is a South where the measure of a man will be his ability, not his race; where a common citizenship will work in democratic understanding for the common good; where all who labor will be rewarded in proportion to their skill and achievement; where all can feel confident of personal safety and equality before the law; where there will exist no double standard in housing, health, education, or other public services; where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed; where, above all, every individual will enjoy a full share of dignity and self-respect, in recognition of his creation in the image of God." (From a Statement of Policy and Aims of the Southern Regional Council (1951).)

SRC AND THE COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

The Southern Regional Council and its predecessor, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, have a history of 35 years of constructive activity.

In the troubled days following World War I, race conflict and the lawlessness of terror organizations reached such proportions that the need for new techniques of restoring harmony could not be ignored. To meet this need, interracial committees were formed in cities and towns throughout the South. It was found that by bringing together influential members of both races grievances could be aired, mutual problems discussed, and a meeting of minds effected. This method had such beneficial results that interracial committees became an established part of the life of the South in the early twenties. Their influence became southwide through the formation of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, a central organization with headquarters in Atlanta.

The commission was founded in 1919 by a group of the South's leading church men and women. Among them were Dr. M. Ashby Jones, prominent Baptist minister, Dr. John Hope, president of Atlanta University, Mr. John J. Eagan, businessman and philanthropist, Dr. Plato Durham, dean of the Emory University Theology School, Dr. Robert Moton, president of Tuskegee Institute, and Dr. Will W. Alexander, the commission's director. Its work in behalf of sound race relations was acclaimed by the South's leading newspapers, religious leaders, and by many public officials.

The commission helped organize, extend, and guide the work of State and local interracial committees. It assisted them in making their influence felt by newspapers, civil authorities, churches, school officials, police administrators, and health officers. It gave much attention to factual analysis of the problem of lynching and other forms of interracial violence. Its auxiliary, the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, did much to educate public opinion in the causes and possible remedies for such violence.

From these early activities, the commission built up a body of acquaintance and confidence that has been an increasing asset through the years. The traditional barrier between the races was broken down to allow an interchange of ideas and mutual trust. The notion of cooperative action by people of good will, both white and Negro, took root and has continued to grow. In its 25 years of operation, the commission made the meeting of white and Negro citizens for the discussion of common problems an accepted practice almost everywhere in the South. It marshalled thousands of southern church people in opposition to lynching and other injustices, brought new light to bear on race relations, issued 2 million copies of pamphlets and leaflets, and symbolized the faith of the southern white people and Negro people in the processes of mutual agreement and cooperation.

Transition to SRC

In 1939 the leaders of the commission began to explore the possibility of expanding the activities of the organization to permit a broader approach to the problems of the South. In October, 1940, the commission instructed its executive committee to "take whatever steps are necessary to carry out the plans for the formation of a council on southern regional development," which would include in its program "the work of the commission and other activities connected with the economic, educational, and social development of the South."

Meanwhile the efforts of other progressive southerners were leading them to a similar purpose. The first movement in that direction took place when a group of southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., on October 20, 1942, to set forth just what the Negro wants and is expecting of the postwar South and Nation, and to enlist the aid of interested white southerners. The result of this historic conference was a comprehensive statement covering the following areas: Political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, and social welfare and health. Many social thinkers regarded the Durham statement as the most hopeful pronouncement on race relations that had come out of the South in the last 75 years.

In April 1943 a group of southern white leaders met in Atlanta to consider the statement of the Durham conference. These white leaders found the statement so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and so demonstrative of good will, that they gladly pledged their cooperation. "The need," they concluded, "is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation, and mutual respect."

SRC organized

Representatives of both the Durham and Atlanta conferences met in Richmond in June 1943, to work out further details. The Durham statement was adopted as a general guide to action, and a continuing committee was appointed to devise practical means of approach. The organizing meeting of the council was held in response to a call issued by some of the South's finest leadership, including C. H. Gillman, Georgia director, CIO; George L. Googe, southern director, AFL; M. Ashby Jones, Baptist minister; Ryland Knight, Baptist minister; Rabbi David Marx, The Temple, Atlanta; Bishop Arthur J. Moore, the Methodist Church; Ralph McGill, editor, the Atlanta Constitution; Stuart R. Oglesby, Presbyterian minister; Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of Savannah-Atlanta; Dean S. Paden, president, King Hardware Co.; J. McDowell Richards, president, Columbia Theological Seminary; Bishop John Moore Walker, the Protestant Episcopal Church; Goodrich C. White, president, Emory University.

Following the deliberations of this group and a subsequent conference with southern Negro leaders, the SRC was chartered early in 1944. The incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore; Ralph McGill; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. At the charter meeting, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation met and formally merged its program and assets with those of the council. A strong and democratic council had been established to attain through research and action the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region.

Since this auspicious beginning, the council's membership has included distinguished southerners, white and Negro, in all walks of life. Dr. Odum was the first president of the organization. He was succeeded by Paul D. Williams, of Richmond, Va., a prominent Catholic layman and cofounder of the Catholic Committee of the South. Mr. Williams served as president for 6 years—from 1945 until 1951. He was succeeded by Mr. Marion A. Wright, widely known as a South Carolina attorney active in civic and educational affairs, now living in Linville Falls, N. C.

How SRC works

The Southern Regional Council consists of a board of some 80 southerners representing the major religious faiths, both races, and the 13 States of the region. These people are the Southern Regional Council. They make the policies and review all activities at an annual meeting. They elect an executive committee which meets at least every 3 months to give closer direction to the organization. And full reports of all activities are sent to the members quarterly. The council is nonprofit, nonpolitical, and nondenominational.

Financial support for the council has come from many different individuals and organizations. Some of the organizations are: the Julius Rosenwald Fund, General Education Board, the Fund for the Republic, Division of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church, Woman's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, Phelps-Stokes Fund, Catholic Committee of the South, Board of Education of the Methodist Church, Ashby Jones Memorial Fund, Committee on Woman's Work of the Presbyterian Church of the United States, the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Marshall Field Foundation, the Doris Duke Foundation, various trade unions, and some business firms. Individuals support the council through contributions, legacies, and payment of membership dues.

What SRC does

The council's present functions may be summarized as follows: (1) Clearinghouse and coordinating work with numerous agencies working on southern problems; (2) research and survey to determine the facts and the state of public opinion as a basis for sound social action; (3) educational activities through a monthly bulletin, the New South, and through pamphlets, press, radio, television, conferences, and personal contacts; (4) consultative services to private and official agencies; (5) promotion of specific programs of action through the council staff and affiliated State organizations.

Following are some of the areas with which the SRC's educational program has been concerned:

Employment of Negro policemen in southern communities.

Newspaper handling of racial news.

Community self-surveys, in which local people of both races study their problems as a basis for achieving local solutions.

Conferences of leading white and Negro southerners with common concerns and a common desire to further democratic practices in their areas of interest—religion, health, housing, education, etc.

Voluntary decisions to open professional associations, private colleges, public libraries, and the like to all qualified persons without respect to race.

The right to vote without racial discrimination or intimidation.

Impartial enforcement of the law and administration of justice in the South.

Orderly compliance at the community level with the recent decisions of the Supreme Court holding public school segregation unconstitutional.

Church support

Church people have always been the moving force in the southern interracial movement. This is as true today as it was 35 years ago. All of the major religious groups represented in the South have taken their stand in favor of the principle embodied in the Supreme Court's segregation ruling. The Court ruling was endorsed by the Southern Baptist Convention, many of the southern conferences of the Methodist Church, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (southern), the Province of Sewanee (southeastern) of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Catholic Bishops of the South, the various Jewish religious and fraternal groups, and virtually all of the other denominations found in the South. It is only natural that many religious southerners should seek to put the principles of their faith into everyday practice.

The Southern Regional Council and the affiliated State groups have enjoyed both financial and moral support from religious bodies representing the three major faiths.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the council, received the 1953 annual award of the Catholic committee of the South "for his significant contribution to the welfare of the South."

Affiliated State organizations

With the aid of a grant from the Fund for the Republic, the Southern Regional Council is assisting interracial organizations in 12 Southern States—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. Each of these organizations has its own membership, officers, and staff. In each case, people of the State involved make their own decisions as to policy and program. Affiliation with the Southern Regional Council is voluntary, and the purpose of the short-term financial aid from SRC is to help the State groups become strong, self-sustaining human relations agencies.

Toward the South of the future

The Southern Regional Council's main asset is and has always been those southerners who believe deeply in democratic practices, and who know firsthand the problems of the region. On such people rest the hopes of the South. They have wanted a regional organization, not out of any provincial desire to separate the South's problems from the Nation's, but out of the conviction that such an organization has unique advantages. It can express the best and often neglected elements of Southern thought and conscience; it can serve as a convincing demonstration of southerners working together as fellow citizens without regard to race; and it can tap local resources and initiative often inaccessible to national groups.

The Southern Regional Council and its affiliates seek to be practical organizations, aiming at working solutions rather than spectacular pronouncements. They hold the belief that every community must ultimately find its own answers within the framework of law and conscience. They offer no master blueprint, no sovereign remedy for the South's human problems. But they do offer a method—that of representative citizens, white and Negro, coming together in equal dignity to find the best ways to move ahead.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, following the statement with respect to the Southern Regional Council, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a most extraordinarily able survey the Southern Regional Council has made, which is just off the press, under date of July 18, 1957. Again I wish to emphasize I have obtained the material at my request from the Library of Congress to show that it was in no sense forced upon me, so to speak.

The survey deals State by State with the various ways in which Negroes are prevented from voting in the South. I highly commend this factual account to the Members of the Senate, as we debate part IV of the bill.

There being no objection, the survey was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NEGRO VOTER IN THE SOUTH—PART OF A REPORT OF A SURVEY BY THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

DISCRIMINATION AND INTIMIDATION

Just as the main segregationist movement has switched from the white sheet of the Ku Klux Klan to the white collar of the citizens council, so has the pattern of discrimination against the Negro southerner changed in recent years.

In no field is this gradual shift to subtler methods seen more clearly than in a study of Negro registration and voting. Killings, beatings, the dragging of Negroes from their homes in the middle of the night—these are now rare occurrences, compared to previous decades.

Overt violence is, in brief, the exception rather than the rule for racist dealing with assertive Negro citizens. The threat of violent tactics, however, is kept alive in some areas by anonymous telephone calls to Negro leaders. Crosses still are burned, jobs threatened. Occasionally, homes are shot into or bombed.

But, today, with less obvious means employed generally, Negroes interested in voting are far more likely to be barred by a question on the Constitution than by a rope or whip.

Alabama

The Alabama consultant directed a field survey in each of the counties in his State. According to these reports:

Negroes might be treated courteously, as in Bullock County, Ala., where the board of registrars has received Negro applicants pleasantly, let them fill out forms, then told them they didn't pass—with no reasons given. In this county, with 5,423 Negroes of voting age, only 6 were registered in the summer of 1956. In 1953, more than 100 attempted to register; in 1955, only 20 even tried, and of these 19 were refused. One of the six registered succeeded only on his seventh trip to the board.

In other counties of central Alabama, like Bullock, Negroes encounter greater difficulty. This is the black-belt section of the State, so-called because of the dark rich soil, an area where 15 counties have populations over 50 percent Negro.

Among these is Dallas, where only 275 of the 18,132 Negroes of voting age are registered.[1] In 1956 alone, at least 350 were turned down. Some reported that they filled out questionnaires 3 or 4 times but still were not sent registration certificates. Many reported they were given no help in filling out forms although white applicants were. One Negro teacher who registered was fired allegedly for being "too smart;" this frightened many other teachers.

Marengo, another county in the Alabama black belt, simply seems to have stopped registering Negroes. Of 10,223 eligible, 170 were registered before the Supreme Court decision calling for an end to segregated schools. This, plus formation of a local citizens council, is reported to have hardened the lines of white resistance to Negro equality and to have put the brakes on Negro registration.

In Monroe County, Ala., where 140 of the 5,914 Negroes of voting age are registered, other hopeful applicants said more often than not they found the board of registrars had "misplaced the application forms" or told them to return later. Registrars in Hale County, where 130 of 7,036 eligible Negroes are on the voting roll, have turned down 300 in the past 2 years for "failure to fill out forms correctly."

One Negro teacher in Alabama said she was refused because she didn't know the address of her estranged husband. Many Alabama boards require two voters to vouch for all Negro applicants and some require Negroes to produce white character witnesses. Registrars in one county where about 2 percent of nearly 7,000 Negroes over 21 have registered announced that a "good white man" must accompany Negro applicants.

In a black-belt county which is somewhat less than 50 percent Negro, registrars closed their office when a group of Negroes appeared. Other Negro applicants said they were told when the board would meet but then found no one present on arrival. A Negro leader who encouraged other Negroes to vote reported he was threatened anonymously by telephone and told to stop his activities or he would be run out of town. Only about 200 of over 5,000 Negroes have registered.

A Negro leader in Coosa County, Ala., also said he was threatened. Crosses were burned in front of the homes of two leaders of a Negro voters' drive in Choctow County. In the latter, 112 of 4,819 Negroes of voting age are registered; 28 said they were turned down on their first try, but accepted the second time. Most of those initially refused are teachers; maids and yardmen have found it somewhat easier to enroll.

Birmingham and surrounding Jefferson County present one of the gloomiest pictures for Negroes in the South. In no other major city of the region has it been so difficult for them to vote. Only about 7,000 of 121,510 Negroes over 21 are registered; at least that many more have been turned down. Instead of the standard form and the character witnesses, Jefferson County registrars have employed another method unique in the State: Added questions about government. They might ask on what date the 10th amendment to the Constitution became effective, what was the 14th State to be admitted to the Union, on what date did Oklahoma change from a territory to a State? They have recognized no limits to their power to interrogate. While Negroes have been the board's main target, white union members, particularly if they wear overalls or work clothes, have reported that they sometimes find registration difficult or impossible. Negroes appearing before the board often have been questioned for from 35 to 40 minutes; they have had to line up separately, and the longer the line the longer the questioning.

Strong, in his study of Jefferson County, described the method used by registrars to avoid suits with the following hypothetical case: a person who failed to satisfy the board was told orally he did not qualify; the applicant then secured an attorney and filed a suit, which was a signal for the board to register the plaintiff. His suit collapsed and no court has an opportunity to pass on section 33 of the Alabama Code and the "qualified to register" phrase.[2]

In Macon County, Ala., home of famed Tuskegee Institute, many college trained Negroes have found the barriers impregnable. Negroes outnumber white persons about 5 to 1; of the 14,526 of voting age, 1,100 have registered. By contrast, the Associated Press reported in April 1956, that 2,700 out of a total Macon County white population of 5,000 had registered, or that fewer than 100 white persons over 21 had failed to do so. An Alabama observer said that the board of registrars would sit until all white citizens interested had registered and then resign. In any event, for the major part of 1956, there was no board in the county, for 2 of the 3 members resigned and it takes at least 2 to transact business. This was at least the third time in a decade this had happened.

North Carolina

In North Carolina, as in other States with literacy laws, the registrar has considerable latitude. He can have the applicant copy indicated sections of the State constitution or he can dictate. Some Negroes have protested the use of dictation, since a registrar often reads too fast or uses a particularly difficult section. However, the State board of elections has upheld a registrar's right to use this means of testing.

A Negro attorney in a rural eastern county of North Carolina said that in certain precincts of this and adjoining counties, "It takes a white man only a few minutes to get registered, but it may take an hour for a Negro. Actually, the latter is given an academic rather than a literacy test. In this county, the tests are tough and the literacy rate low, which doubly handicaps the Negro. The tests given here actually require an interpretation of law."

A Negro college graduate in North Carolina who attempted to register for the May 1956, primary said he was turned down because he could not write a section of the State constitution from memory. Some registrars who want to disqualify Negroes have asked for a definition of such words as "ordained," "sovereignty," "posterity," etc. The replies often do not satisfy the registrar.

But there are counties throughout the State, including the rural piedmont and eastern sections, where literacy requirements are ignored for anyone, white or Negro, who wants to register. In others, only Negroes are required to do some reading. In some rural North Carolina counties, Negroes can register with a minimum of trouble only if sponsored by white persons.

Louisiana

Louisiana applicants for registration have been given a rather complicated form and the law has barred any help in filling it out. In most instances, completion is regarded as evidence of literacy although the registrar may, if he wishes, examine an applicant. There has been wide variation in the practice of helping applicants and in the strictness with which forms are scrutinized for mistakes. In some parishes, Negroes have found it almost impossible to satisfy the high standards demanded of them. In others, both Negroes and whites have been permitted to copy from previously completed forms and mistakes have been overlooked.

If a person is unable to complete the form satisfactorily, he still may qualify in some parts of Louisiana. In a number of parishes many white and Negro illiterates have registered under the physical disability provision of the State constitution. This makes it possible in some instances to control their ballot, because such registrants are entitled to ask for assistance in voting. Practice varies widely with respect to registration of illiterates but, as a rule, where literate Negroes have found it easy to qualify, illiterate Negroes also have met few obstacles.

Under one Louisiana statute which adds to the difficulties of Negro voting, two bona fide registered voters can challenge by affidavit the right of a person to be registered. The person challenged has to respond within 10 days by appearing before the registrar to prove his right to remain on the voting list. If a person fails to appear, his name is removed automatically. Citizens council groups have purged several hundred Negroes from voting lists through this device in more than a dozen parishes, including Natchitoches, Webster, and La Salle. They are able to learn which Negroes have registered under another Louisiana law which permits any 25 registered voters, by application, to copy or photostat registration records.

The Colfax Chronicle, county weekly of Grant Parish, reported (October 12, 1956) that members of the citizens council worked in the registrar's office that week in a frank effort to disfranchise the county's 864 Negro voters. The Chronicle also reported:

Their action followed a White Citizens Council meeting in Dry Prong attended by State Senator William Rainach and other Louisiana segregation advocates. W. J. B. Jones of Colfax County, WCC president, said the group voted unanimously to try to purge Negro voters. Louis Earl Stevens, council secretary, subsequently estimated that at least 90 percent of the Negro registrants were challenged in Grant Parish.

Where, instead of writing out colored on registration blanks the applicant simply put "C," the applications were challenged as being incorrect. Each Negro's age in years, days, and months was refigured and often found off by a day or so. The Chronicle checked the first 100 white registrations in one ward and found only one card which would meet the standards set by the WCC for Negroes. Four, including the superintendent of schools, figured their ages incorrectly. In a further check, the Chronicle discovered that not a single member of a citizens council committee had filled in correctly all the blanks. Needless to say, only the Negroes were challenged. Of the more than 700 Negroes purged 2 weeks before the November general election, 399 had cleared the challenges a week before the deadline.

The Chronicle commended Registrar Maxine Mosley for her fairness in dealing with the Negroes challenged.

Not all members of the white community supported the purge effort. District Attorney Sam L. Wells said he would be a witness and sign affidavits for those challenged registrants whose place of residence he knew of his own personal knowledge. J. M. Straughan of route 8, Colfax, wrote the Chronicle:

"I'm a southerner born and raised right here in central Louisiana and I am opposed to integration as strongly as any southerner could be. But what has integration got to do with the removal of Negroes from the registration rolls. I for one, will be glad to sign an affidavit for those colored voters I know to help keep them from being imposed on."

On February 25, 1957, the Justice Department made public some FBI findings on registration of Negroes in Louisiana. Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney III, said the FBI material indicated that testimony by Louisiana Attorney General Jack P. Gremillion to a House Judiciary Subcommittee "might have left a misleading impression in a number of respects." Olney's statement was in a letter to Chairman EMANUEL CELLER, Democrat, of New York, who presided at hearings in which Gremillion testified against the Eisenhower administration's civil-rights proposals.[3]

Olney said that Gremillion had mentioned "some difficulty with respect to voting" in Ouachita Parish, but contended this was "more or less an exception."

In fact, Olney asserted, the FBI investigated the handling of registrations in 10 Louisiana parishes and found that 8,552 Negroes were challenged when they tried to register in 1956.

Olney said that in Ouachita Parish there were some 4,000 registered Negro voters in the early fall of 1956 but that after a purge in October "there were in excess of 3,000 Negro voters deprived of the right to vote in the general election of November 6."

The Justice Department official challenged a number of Gremillion's statements, including his claim that registrants had a free choice in selecting the section of the United States Constitution they wished to interpret as part of their test.

"In none of the 10 parishes is there any evidence that the registrar permitted the applicant to choose which clause of the Constitution he wished to interpret," Olney said.

"Specifically, in the case arising from Ouachita Parish, the investigation by the FBI disclosed that the registrar of voters in examining applicants used a card on which was written an excerpt from the Constitution, which card was given to the registrar by the Citizens Council of Ouachita Parish."

Gremillion had told the committee that when a registered voter was challenged, the registrar sent a record of the challenge to the registrant, including a reply form, giving him 10 days to appear and establish his right to remain on the rolls by presenting statements from three voters registered in the same parish.

Olney said this did not appear to be the general practice in the parishes investigated. In six, he added, registrars "did everything to discourage the filing of reply affidavits in the statutory form and generally refused them when offered." He told Chairman CELLER that the FBI found instances of registrars refusing to accept white persons as supporting witnesses for Negroes on grounds they were of a different race.

There appeared to be a concerted effort in October 1956 by white citizens councils in Louisiana and other Southern States to get Negro registrants off the rolls or to prevent their registration, Olney added.

"With respect only to cases which have been investigated by the FBI," he continued, "the following numbers of Negro voters were challenged in each of the following parishes:

"Bienville, 560; Caldwell, 330; De Soto, 383; Grant, 758; Jackson, 953; La Salle, 345; Lincoln, 326; Ouachita, 3,240; Rapides, 1,058; and Union, 600."

However, there still are areas in Louisiana where there are no Negro registrants to challenge. For example, in one parish, which is over 50 percent Negro, none of the 4,500 Negroes of voting age had registered at the time of the 1956 general election. Only one had tried in recent years. A local priest recounted the Negro's experience: when he appeared, the registrar immediately took him to the sheriff, who asked, "Aren't you happy here? Is something wrong with the way things operate around here? If you aren't happy perhaps we could arrange for you to leave." The hapless Negro promptly assured the sheriff of his happiness and allowed that his attempt to register had been a tragic mistake. He remained in the community but his wife lost her job.

There are no Negroes registered in Tensas, East Carroll, Madison, and West Feliciana Parishes, all counties with populations over 50 percent Negro. "In these parishes," the Louisiana consultant said, "subterfuge is unnecessary to discourage Negro registration. Negroes know they should not and cannot register and therefore rarely attempt to do so."

In the general election in November 1956 Louisiana voters defeated a proposed constitutional amendment designed to help the Citizens Council cut Negro voting even more. The measure was drafted by the legislative watchdog committee on segregation which previously had won approval easily for its proposals. The amendment, which was turned down by an unofficial total of 190,410 to 178,833, required certain administrative steps before a voter losing his registration could take the matter into court. Thus, said the Associated Press in a dispatch from Baton Rouge, it would have set up "administrative barriers to a Federal court action."

South Carolina

In South Carolina the prevalence of discriminatory tactics in some counties where Negroes are in the majority is quite evident. Registration books are moved from place to place to keep Negroes from getting a certificate; they are given literacy tests that have little to do with reading and writing the State constitution, as required by South Carolina law; Negroes complain that if a number go together to register in some counties, clerks will pass only one or two and tell the rest the books are closed for the day. In a few counties, Negroes who had been certified have complied with demands of employers and other white persons that they remove their names from registration books. Some have said they were threatened with harm for attempting to vote, and many landlords reportedly have warned their Negro tenants that if they registered they would be fired.

Calhoun County, S. C., with more than twice as many Negroes as whites—10,449 to 4,304—has no Negroes registered, although 4,437 of them are of voting age. "Any Negro who tries to get a registration certificate is called a smart Negro and sooner or later leaves the community," a field consultant said.

McCormick County, S. C., where the population split is 5,998 Negroes, 3,589 whites, also has no Negroes registered out of the 2,625 over 21. All Negroes who had registration certificates in 1948 had their names purged from the voting list. The majority of Negroes in the county are sharecroppers; reportedly, they could not sell their produce until their names were removed.

In another South Carolina county, Abbeville, where only 15 of the 3,687 Negroes of voting age are registered (as compared to 6,000 of the 8,951 whites), an atmosphere of fear was found. Three years ago a Negro cottonwood worker was said to have been beaten at night for voting. Since then, Negroes have not taken part in elections and almost all of those who had registration certificates have lost them.

Texas

Intimidation as a means of limiting Negro voting in Texas was found to be relatively rare. Recent violence in the State usually has been aimed at school integration, notably in Mansfield. There have been occasional reports of local discrimination against potential Negro voters, generally in the form of a segment of the white population playing on the ignorance of the poorly educated among the Negroes—to imply, for example, that property taxes must have been paid to vote. But, by and large, the poll tax remains the only obvious deterrent.

Virginia

While discrimination in applying provisions of the Virginia poll tax and registration law is not found generally in that State, nevertheless it has been reported in certain counties and a few cities. Some Negro leaders feel that poorer white citizens often experience the same difficulties as do Negroes.

The poll tax can be an effective barrier for the politically uninformed, the educationally handicapped, and the socially disadvantaged. Just the use of words confuses many of the poorly educated who often do not know that in paying their Virginia capitation tax they have paid their poll taxes. Some tax collectors reportedly have discouraged voting by telling Negroes they do not have to pay poll taxes. Many Negroes have reported they did not receive poll-tax bills along with their property-tax notices, as did their fellow white citizens. These and similar methods have been employed to discourage Negroes from paying their poll taxes in some counties and it often seems that only those who know the legal requirements and insist on paying can win their right to register.

As for registration itself, Negroes sometimes encounter further barriers in Virginia. The same discriminatory methods of administering literacy tests found in other States turn up here and there in the State, where in some counties Negroes have to meet all the technical requirements of grammar, punctuation, and handwriting in filling out their application forms; they alone are given reading or education tests, or have to complete printed forms containing legal phraseology. Some white registrars will see white applicants at any time but are busy or ill or do not have their books when Negroes appear. When registrars operate in their homes, this presents a particular problem because of the long-standing southern custom of Negroes appearing in white homes only in a servant capacity.

Florida

In 1940, Florida had 51 counties with no Negroes registered, by 1946, only 4, and 10 years later only 2. However, the number of counties in which Negroes are registered gives an exaggerated picture of the extent of Negro registration. In some counties Negro electors constitute a small proportion of those on the voting lists. This is seen, for example, in the following counties:

County	Negro population over 21	Negro percentage of total population	Number of Negroes registered, 1956
Flagler	872	45.6	13
Gadsden	10,930	56.1	3
Liberty	333	18.1	1
Taylor	1,945	30.5	77

In the counties where Negro suffrage is limited most sharply, fear is a major deterring factor. In parts of the State, indirect methods are used to discourage Negro voters and the open threat has been reported, too. In one county, the first Negro registrants in history were subjected to several forms of intimidation—cross burnings, bomb-throwings and shots fired into their homes. All but one of the registrants in this county withdrew their names from the rolls.

In another Florida county, in the plantation section, it was reported that Negroes, most of whom live in rural areas, are not permitted in the business district on election day. In still another county one supervisor of registration has told Negro applicants, "Come on in and register," while sitting with his legs stretched across the door. Other Negroes complained that loungers around a courthouse told them, "Go ahead and register if you can take what comes afterward."

Georgia

Field studies were made in a number of Georgia counties representative of the various subregional areas of the State. One of these is Early, located in the extreme southwest portion of Georgia on the Alabama line. It is in a cluster of counties considered the hard core of the State in terms of resistance to integration. In such counties as Early, Miller, Seminole, and Decatur, the Negro population is from 30 to 50 percent of the total. In other southwest counties such as Clay, Calhoun, Baker, Dougherty, Quitman, Randolph, Terrell, Lee, Sumter, Webster, and Stewart, the Negro percentage of the total population is over 50 percent. The means of excluding Negroes as registrants in these counties is similar to that reported in other areas of the South. In some, there is the ever present threat of racial violence, which erupts on occasions. Often, police brutality against Negroes indicates to them they cannot depend upon law enforcement authorities to offer them protection if they try to vote. In recent years, economic pressures have been directed against Negroes militant enough to demand educational and political equality.

In some instances, Georgia sheriffs, instead of the boards of registrars, question prospective Negro registrants about the Constitution. Sheriffs, being white and also the "law," Negro applicants thus receive two warnings at one time.

In Early County, only 226 Negroes of the 4,790 over 18 (the legal voting age in Georgia) are registered. Many others who went to the courthouse to register said they later were summoned to appear there before the board of registrars to answer questions. The majority of those who showed up were disqualified and those who did not were removed from the list automatically. This is an effective method of disqualifying Negroes there who often think of going to the courthouse for any reason with misgiving. They know they are not expected to drive their cars up to the courthouse square to park.

Separate ballot boxes for white and Negro votes continue in use in many Georgia counties. This practice of separating ballots on a racial basis is an indirect technique of disfranchising some of the Negro voters who are unwilling to take a chance on having white persons discover how they voted.

Often, racial incidents have an effect both in the community involved and in adjacent counties. There is disagreement on the extent to which they deter registration, but fear of violence is bound to condition the thoughts and actions of some. In Walton County, Ga., many Negroes interviewed said there is more fear of lynching outside the county than inside. This county was the scene of an unsolved daylight lynching in 1946 of 4 Negroes—2 men and 2 women, 1 of whom was pregnant. One Negro in Walton said he did not think that Negroes generally are afraid to register there. He added that the so-called leading Negroes are afraid but the Negro working by the day isn't. Negro teachers and ministers seem to be afraid because of what they may lose; but what it is, I don't know."

Arkansas

In Arkansas, on rare occasions, clerks in the sheriff's office may tend to discourage poll-tax payments through various means of discourtesy. For the most part, however, the poll tax is more important in Arkansas as a source of revenue than as a device for the disfranchisement of the Negro. In 1956, voters rejected an amendment to repeal it. Some important Negro leaders opposed its abolition. They believed that if the State dropped the poll tax it might adopt registration procedures requiring the filling out of forms or answering of questions and that Negroes then would experience far more difficulty than at present.

Mississippi

Finally, Mississippi. All forms of violence, intimidation and discrimination reported from other States were found here. Where other sections usually rely on 1 or 2 means of limiting Negro registration, Mississippi, home of the White Citizens Council, apparently uses them all. As a result, the State which has the highest percentage of Negroes in the country has the lowest percentage registered. Only 4 percent were on the list of qualified voters in 1955, although Negroes make up 41 percent of the total population of voting age.

In the 13 Mississippi counties listed as having a population of more than 50-percent Negro, a total of 14 votes was cast in the 3 elections on which information was available for 1954. Five of the counties had no Negroes qualified and 3 had 1 registered who never voted. In the 7 counties having more than 60-percent Negro population, 2 votes were cast by Negroes in 1954.

Violence, threats, and economic reprisals discouraged Negroes interested in voting in Mississippi. Some instances were publicized but it may reasonably be supposed that others went unreported. In 1955 alone, a string of reports of brutality and illegal tactics came out of the State.

In the early spring of that year, Gus Courts, a Negro grocer at Belzoni, Miss., was told to move from his home and withdraw his name as president of the local NAACP chapter. He was forced to move his grocery store and advised to remove his name from the voting rolls. He refused; and, in November 1955, he was shot and seriously wounded by a group of men in a car who fired into his store.

Recovering from his wounds, Courts told a reporter: "I've known for a long time it was coming, and I'd tried to get prepared in my mind for it. But that's a hard thing to do when you know they're going to try to slip up and steal your life in the night and not in the bright. It's bad when you know you might get shot just walking around in your store. That's a hard kind of life to lead."

Courts was puzzled as to why anyone would want to shoot him for, "I've never been a troublemaker and I've never had on handcuffs. I'm 65 years old and I've never had the vote. That's all I wanted."

Courts' predecessor as NAACP president in Belzoni, the Rev. George Washington Lee, was killed May 7, 1954. The United Press, in a story from Belzoni on the Courts shooting, gave this background on the Lee death:

"The Reverend Lee was shot, allegedly on the day he refused a request from a white citizen that he remove his name from the voters' registration list. In that death, first of three race killings in Mississippi this year, Lee reportedly was driving down a Belzoni street when a car in which two white men and a Negro were riding suddenly came from behind and a shotgun blast shattered the Negro's car."

A coroner's inquest returned a verdict of accidental death and made no reference to the wounds in the dead man's face.

Other incidents in Mississippi in 1955, as reported by wire services and newspapers: T. V. Johnson, Belzoni Negro undertaker, was told to remove his name from the voting rolls if he desired continued credit; the Rev. James Hargroves fled the State after he was threatened with the fate of the Reverend Lee if he continued to work for the NAACP. In August, Lamar Smith, a Lincoln County Negro, was shot fatally; no indictment was returned, although reports indicated there were several witnesses to the shooting. Elsewhere, the home of a Negro leader was fired upon, and crosses were burned in front of the homes of two others. There were additional instances of violence against Negroes for activities other than voting.

If, despite the harassment and brutality, Negroes still try to vote in Mississippi, there is the State's registration law to act as a deterrent. The rigid education test, the essay on citizenship, all the requirements of the tighter registration law passed in 1954, present innumerable opportunities for the white registrar opposed to Negro registration.

LEGAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC FACTORS

The legal weapon most widely used in the South to discourage Negro registration is some form of literacy or constitutional interpretation test.

This weapon is the successor to the white primary—long the most effective method of restricting voting. Another weapon effective in the past, the poll tax, also has lost much of its sting with increased economic opportunity. Today only five States retain the poll tax—Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas, and Virginia.

Some of the requirements in Southern States based on literacy or constitutional interpretation tests include:

Alabama

In addition to the usual basic qualification, the Voters Qualification Amendment of 1951 provides: "The following persons * * * shall be qualified to register * * * those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language which may be submitted to them by the board of registrars, provided, however, that no person shall be entitled to register as electors except those who are of good character and who embrace the duties and obligations of citizenship under the Constitution of the United States and under the constitution of the State of Alabama, and provided, further that * * * each applicant shall be furnished * * * a written questionnaire * * *. Such questionnaire shall be answered in writing by the applicant, in the presence of the board without assistance."

Georgia

A registrant must be able to read correctly in English any paragraph of the State or United States Constitution and correctly write the same when read to him. Only those unable to read or write because of physical inability may qualify if they can understand and give a reasonable interpretation of constitutional sections read to them. There is a property alternative: 40 acres of land in the State on which an elector resides or property in the State assessed for taxation at $500 or more.

Mississippi

In 1954, Mississippi voters approved a constitutional amendment tightening the State's registration law. It makes ability to read and write a prerequisite; before that, an applicant could register if able to read or understand the Constitution when read to him. In addition to literacy, the amendment requires a new applicant to satisfy the county registrar as to his knowledge of citizenship under a constitutional form of government and to state why he feels he should be given the right to vote and what it means to him. Applicants are to write their own statements without aid.

Virginia

Unless physically unable, the prospective voter must apply to the registrar in his own handwriting, without aid, in the presence of the registrar, stating therein his name, age, date and place of birth, residence and occupation at the time and for the 1 year next preceding and whether he has voted previously and, if so, the State, county, and precinct in which he voted last. Also, he must answer on oath any questions affecting his qualifications as an elector, submitted to him by the registrar; questions and his answers must be reduced to writing, certified by the said officer and preserved as part of his official records.

South Carolina

A registrant must be able to "read and write" any section of the State constitution. An alternative is ownership and payment of taxes for the previous year on property in the State assessed at $300 or more.

Arkansas

Except for the usual requirements of age and residence, the one dollar, noncumulative poll tax is the only requirement for voting. Members of the Armed Forces are exempt. Certain adults are required by law to possess a poll tax receipt: those receiving wages, salaries, or other compensation paid from public funds (this includes white and Negro teachers) and those who apply for a license or permit from the State.

Louisiana

A prospective voter must be able to read and write and understand the duties and obligations of citizenship "under a republican form of government." Also, he must be able to read any clause in the State or United States Constitution and give interpretation satisfactory to the registrar. If he is unable to read or write, the applicant is entitled to register if he is a person of good character and reputation, attached to the principles of the Louisiana and United States Constitutions and if he is able to interpret any section of either. If an applicant is unable to read or write due to a physical disability, then the foregoing requirements may be waived. However, such an applicant must be accompanied by two witnesses who are registered voters from the applicant's precinct. No person may be a witness for more than two applicants.

North Carolina

Prospective voters must be able to read and write any section of the Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrar, who may have the applicant copy indicated sections of the State constitution or may dictate any section he chooses.

With such broad discretion left to registrars it is easy to see why Negroes may find it almost impossible to qualify in one county and comparatively easy in the next. In the last analysis, a Negro's ability to vote in a State with a literacy law still often depends on an individual registrar's sense of justice—or prejudice.

Socioeconomic factors also operate in determining the number of Negroes who vote. Racial, economic, and social patterns of any southern community exert a powerful influence on Negro registration.

Statistics on education, urbanization, farm tenancy, income, and racial composition help paint a fairly accurate picture of why Negro registration is above or below average.

Relatively few Negroes are likely to be registered in counties where they make up a large proportion of the population, in counties where education and income medians are low, and in counties that are predominantly agricultural and have a high rate of farm tenancy.

At the same time, in counties where Negroes comprise a large part of the population, white registration tends to be above normal.

Negroes are more likely to be registered in counties where they represent a small percentage of the total population, where they are better educated, are less dependent on the whims of white landlords and employers and are in a sounder economic position generally.

There are exceptions to these generalizations, of course; but Georgia presents a fairly typical picture.

In Georgia's 157 counties with Negro population of voting age, the median percentage of eligible Negroes registered is 25. However, the range of the registration figures is wide.

In only five Georgia counties does the number of Negro registrants exceed the number of white registrants, although there are more Negroes than whites of voting age in 27 counties.

The population ratio and its effect on voting is strikingly shown in Georgia figures. In counties where the percentage of Negroes in the population is below the State average, 69 percent show Negro registration above the State median; 68 percent of the counties above the State average in Negro population are below the median in Negro registration. The association is even more marked in counties with a population over half Negro—80 percent of these fall below the median in Negro registration.

The relationship between education and political participation also turned up in the Georgia survey. In counties where Negroes rank above the State median in the number of school years completed, 89 percent also are high in Negro registration. By contrast, only 37 percent of the counties below the median in Negro educational attainment have high registration figures.

As to the significance of economic factors, it is found that of the Georgia counties having median family income above the State figure of $1,130, 61 percent have high Negro registration. In counties below the median income level, only 35 percent are high in the number of Negroes qualified to vote. In short, Negro registration tends to increase along with overall income.

Also, there is a tendency in Georgia for predominantly industrial counties to rank higher in Negro registration than those primarily agricultural. Among counties in which farm income exceeds manufacturing income, 37 percent are high in Negro registration, as contrasted with 58 percent in counties where manufacturing exceeds agricultural income.

The agricultural counties in Georgia deriving more farm income from livestock, dairying, and poultry are somewhat higher in the percentage of Negroes registered than those in which the income stems largely from row crops. Also, there is a definite relationship between tenancy and registration. Among the Georgia agricultural counties which exceed the State average in the number of farms operated by tenants, only 34 percent have high registration figures, but among the counties below the State average in tenancy, 63 percent rank high in Negro registration.

Social and economic factors which influence Negro registration in Georgia apply in large measure over much of the South.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Norman Jimerson, Alabama Council on Human Relations

FROM: SRC Staff

RE: Anonymous attack on SRC (unsigned pamphlet, "Communism, Negroes, and Integration")

There follows a section by section commentary on this attack.

I. Introduction

1. As a general introduction to the subject of "Communist infiltration" and this type of attack see the attached editorial from the (Greenville, Mississippi) Delta-Democrat Times of August 25, 1957.

2. The FBI, the Justice Department, and other federal agencies keep a very close watch on the activities of Communist individuals and groups and those suspected of subversive activities. At no time has the SRC been listed by the FBI, on the U.S. Attorney General's list of subversive organizations, or on the similar list issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

(Source: U.S. Department of Justice, "Organizations Designated Under Executive Order #10450" and House Un-American Activities Committee "Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications, Re-issued.")

3. It is a well known fact that the Communist party in the United States has been active in seeking support of Negro citizens. As no less an authority than J. Edgar Hoover has repeatedly testified, it is a fine commentary on the good sense and deep patriotism of this group of Americans that the Communists have failed so completely in this effort.

(Source: Masters of Deceit, J. Edgar Hoover; Henry Holt & Co., New York, 1958.)

4. The pamphlet "Communism, Negroes, and Integration" gives the impression of substantial documentation. Yet it is interesting that no individual or organization is identified as author or sponsor. It is a highly questionable procedure to accept at face value any document for which its author(s) will not accept public responsibility. Particularly, when such a document raises serious questions as to the loyalty of established citizens and organizations.

By contrast, this memo is being prepared by the staff of SRC for use by you and your friends who do not have the information herein readily available. It is not done to dignify the irresponsible charges made by a person or persons who would refuse to associate themselves with their serious charges.

This memo is interested exclusively in SRC and SRC board and staff. We do not subscribe to the methods and charges in the "report" and do not presume to speak in defense of, or to place guilt on, any other organizations or individuals mentioned.

Section II - U.S. House of Representatives, Subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities.

1. This section of the "report" does not refer to SRC. However, it is of interest that this hearing was held in Atlanta, site of the offices of the SRC, and that no member of the board or staff of SRC was called to testify.

There is in the SRC files a letter from Congressman Francis E. Walter which states "...The Southern Regional Council has not been cited as subversive or un-American by this Committee nor by the Attorney General."

(Source: Letter, Congressman Walter to George S. Mitchell, copy attached)

Section III - Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

1. As the "report" states, the SCHW was formed--in a spirit of great hope and promise--in 1938. Not until 1944--some 6 years later--was any question seriously raised about the organization. During that time a number of outstanding and loyal Americans were a part of it. To question their motives or loyalty is absurd. For a further interpretation, see the attached editorial from The Atlanta Constitution of May 12, 1953.

2. This section of the report refers to a November 1938 meeting of the SCHW in Birmingham. Mrs. Roosevelt did speak and the President of the United States did send a letter to the meeting. This in itself should give an indication of the nature of that meeting.

Thereafter--and as an excellent example of the methods of this "report"--the unknown author(s) begin to choose only those facts which fit the purpose at hand.

Since serious charges are being made, under the guise of fact, would not it have been more fair to list all the major participants of this meeting?

From the same source as that listed in the "report" we learn that among those people conveniently omitted as having participated in the November 20-23, 1938 meeting of the SCHW, are the following:

Judge Louise O. Charlton - General Chairman (Judge, Birmingham, Ala., U.S. Commissioner and Member of State Democratic Executive Committee.)

Mrs. William Hughes Tarpley - Vice Chairman, Publicity Committee (President, Jefferson County /Ala./ League of Women Voters)

W. Cooper Green - Chairman, Finance Committee (Postmaster, Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. Luther Patrick - Chairman, Sponsorship and Participation Committee (Congressman, Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. John H. Bankhead - Honorary Chairman, Farm Tenancy Section (U.S. Senator, Democrat, Alabama)

John Temple Graves, II - Co-chairman, Race Relations Section (The late Mr. Graves is most widely known as a writer and newspaper columnist in Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. Bibb Graves - Chairman, Freight Rate Differentials (At that time Mr. Graves was Governor of Alabama.)

The Hon. Hugo L. Black - recipient of award (Justice, U.S. Supreme Court)

(Source: Report of Proceedings of the SCHW, Birmingham, Alabama, November 20-23, 1938)

3. As late as 1945 (March 24) at a Washington meeting of the SCHW there appeared as speakers or at the speakers table the Vice President of the United States, a number of Senators, Congressmen, and members of the Cabinet, and no less a "suspect" person that the Hon. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina.

Section IV - Southern Conference Education Fund.

No mention of SRC.

Section V - The Southern Regional Council.

1. The description of SRC history and functions are largely correct; having been taken in good part from SRC reports.

2. The National Americanism Committee of the American Legion did attack SRC in its publication The Firing Line of May 15, 1957. The attack, like the "report"--except that its authors took responsibility for it--was erroneous and misleading. SRC promptly issued a detailed reply. Copy attached.

Some members of the American Legion were and are in opposition to this sort of attack. For instance, in 1958, the American Legion of Minnesota appointed a new Subversive Activities Committee composed of a member of the state Selective Service Commission, the Sheriff of Hennepin County, and the chief of police of St. Paul. This committee issued a report, published in the Legion's official journal without dissent, which said in part:

> ...your Committee refuses to be a part of unsupported attack on individuals or organizations. We feel that > such practices are unfair, undemocratic and in effect, subversive in themselves because they are contrary to America's fundamental precept of innocence until guilt has been proved under due process of law.

> The American Legion, nationally and in Minnesota, has sacrificed some of its prestige and esteem by its zeal in declaring things to be un-American. All too often we have adopted the technique of the dictators when the machinery of democracy would have better served the cause.

3. The SRC does not have available records of the proceedings of the Florida Legislative Investigating Committee--1959 and 1961. However, no member of the board or staff was called to testify and no records of SRC activities were requested. Under these circumstances, it is most unlikely that any serious investigation of SRC could have been conducted.

4. Prior to his association with SRC, Dr. George S. Mitchell was employed by the C.I.O.. Earlier Dr. Mitchell, a respected economist, was employed by Columbia University and the U.S. Government. Dr. Mitchell was a Rhodes Scholar and the first recipient of the annual award of the Catholic Committee of the South.

5. The Southern Regional Council does issue a monthly magazine, New South. Stetson Kennedy did write an article for New South in January, 1946. At that time Stetson Kennedy had written for a number of national publications and had at least two books published by reputable houses. Mr. Kennedy's article on voting in the South is on file for anyone who wishes to read it. A factual analysis of the contributors to the magazine would reveal a distinguished group of Southerners.

6. The SRC has received no support from the Fund for the Republic since 1958. However, all references to this support are accurate---though not complete---and the Council is most grateful to the Board of the Fund for this support. Anyone interested in this aspect of the "Report" might find it of interest to read the full report of the Fund. These reports are public and readily available. They show, for instance, that practically every major religious body in the U.S. received aid from the Fund for the Republic, including the Southern Baptists.

7. The Rev. Robert Hughes was the director of the Alabama Council through 1960. Mr. Hughes is now a Methodist missionary in Africa.

8. Frederick B. Routh, formerly Assistant Director of SRC, was at a meeting at Highlander Folk School in 1957. During that year, Mr. Routh probably attended thirty or more conferences and meetings. None of his other appearances proved that Mr. Routh--or SRC--was Baptist, Catholic, Democrat, Republican, or Rotarian, yet he appeared before groups in each category during 1957. His valuable services to his country in military and civilian life need no documentation here. Mr. Routh is currently Executive Director of the Michigan FEPC, an official state agency.

9. This section of the "report" ends with a list of persons connected with SRC. Following is a list of these individuals, date of service on the SRC Board, and an identification of them.

Albert W. Dent - 1944-present. President, Dillard University, New Orleans, La. (See Who's Who, current edition.)

Rufus E. Clement - 1944-present. President, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga. (See Who's Who, current edition.)

(Note: current Chairman of the Executive Committee of SRC is Mr. John Wheeler, President, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N.C..)

Marion A. Wright - 1944-present. Attorney, retired. Former president, University of South Carolina Alumni Association and University of South Carolina Law Alumni Association.

Horace M. Bond - 1944-45. Dean, School of Education, Atlanta University.

Dr. Charlotte H. Brown - 1944-53. Current employment unknown.

Louis E. Burnham - 1945-49. Current employment unknown.

Clark Foreman - 1944-49. At present, Director, Emergency Civil Liberties Union.

Charles S. Johnson (Deceased) - 1944-56. President, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn. (See Who's Who, 1956.)

Benjamin E. Mays - 1944-present. President, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga. (See Who's Who, current.)

C. G. Gomillion - 1953-present. Dean, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. (See Who's Who, current.)

Paul R. Christopher - 1949-present. Regional Director, AFL-CIO, Knoxville, Tenn.

Aubrey Williams - 1945-50. Publisher, Southern Farm and Home, Montgomery, Ala.

Since the founding of SRC in 1944 it is of interest that out of approximately 300 distinguished Southerners who have served on the board this "report" felt that it could comment on only 19. And, those 19 are discussed without any reference to dates of service.

Section VI - Directors of SRC.

Most of the individuals listed in this section have been referred to in Section V.

Among those not mentioned are:

Leslie W. Dunbar. Mr. Dunbar is Executive Director of SRC. He spoke at Miles College on May 9, 1961, though the account of that meeting is otherwise incorrect. It is of interest that the "report" can find no further comment to make about Mr. Dunbar.

The Rev. C. H. Oliver. Mr. Oliver is prominently associated with the Alabama Council on Human Relations although he is not and has never been "Chairman."

The members (Board of Directors) of the Southern Regional Council are loyal and dedicated Americans. By contrast to unsupported and irresponsible charges it seems appropriate to conclude this section with the full text of a telegram from President John F. Kennedy, sent on the occasion of SRC's annual meeting in 1961.

> The White House Washington DC
> James M. Dabbs, President Southern Regional Council
> 5 Forsyth St Northwest Atlanta
> Please convey my greetings to the participants in the annual meeting of the Southern Regional Council. In working to make equal opportunity a reality in all parts of our national life, the Southern Regional Council is advancing the cause of all Americans. In promoting good will and better understanding among people of all races, colors and creeds, the Council is serving not only the South but the whole country. In supporting efforts to secure the full constitutional rights of all our people, including above all the primary right to vote, you are helping to fulfill the promise of America.

Cordially,
John F. Kennedy

Section VII - Alabama Council on Human Relations.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations (ACHR) is fully capable of defending itself. However, it may be of value to stress the following:

1. The ACHR is not "The Alabama Organ of the SRC." The SRC does give financial assistance to the ACHR but the Alabama Council is completely autonomous with its own directors, staff, and members. Some years ago SRC determined, when helping these state councils become established, that all should be completely independent. This was done with the thought that not only could Southerners best solve their own problems--but that responsible citizens of each state and community could best assess their own needs; the region being an area of great contrast in which no single program or policy could be appropriate for all.

2. Mr. Hughes was jailed in Bessemer, Alabama. His confinement was the result of his refusal to cooperate with the methods of the grand jury. The "report" does not mention the fact that the Rev. Mr. Hughes was later released and that no charges were or have been brought against him or the ACHR. His appearance was as a witness called in a suit against the New York Times and did not legally concern itself with the ACHR or its membership.

3. Koinonia Farms is not--so far as we know--listed by any of the organizations concerned with subversive activity. Mr. Conrad Browne's comment on being "Communist" should have been reproduced without benefit of dots and dashes. It might lead to better evaluation.

4. We are not familar with Claude Williams of Helena, Alabama though we note that he is said only to be a member and none of the long section devoted to him indicates any influence Mr. Williams has on the ACHR programs or policy.

5. The ACHR is a tax exempt organization. This means of course, that the Internal Revenue Service has carefully surveyed its operations and methods and ruled accordingly.

6. The Rev. Norman C. Jimerson is the current director of ACHR. He is a Baptist Minister. He was formerly employed as Chaplain of Hopewell Prison, Virginia. If these are the most serious charges that can be brought against the Rev. Mr. Jimerson, then he must indeed be "as clean as a hounds tooth."

Conclusion:

SRC has not been happy about preparing this memo, for to do so gives a dignity to the anonymous "report" which it does not deserve. However, we have done so in the interest of our friends and supporters in Alabama.

As a final thought we would like to agree with the concluding sentence of the report: "There seems to be little excuse for any reasonably well-informed citizen to continue to associate with these organizations unless said association is knowingly intended."

We wholeheartedly agree.

We have been organized as dedicated and concerned Southerners; dedicated to the belief that the region's problems can be solved by the best of its people and deeply concerned with the enormity and seriousness of the racial problems of the region. An association with these organizations should be in full awareness of and dedication to these ideals. Such is the right--and indeed the duty--of concerned and responsible members of a democratic society.

In October of 1961 Mr. J. Edgar Hoover concluded a report prepared for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee with these observations:

> Unfortunately there are those who make the very mistake the Communists are so careful to avoid. These individuals concentrate on the negative rather than on the positive. They are merely against communism without being for any positive measures to eliminate the social, political, and economic frictions which the Communists are so adroit at exploiting.
> These persons would do well to recall a recent lesson from history. Both Hitler and Mussolini were against communism. However, it was by what they stood for, not against, that history judged them.

The Editor's Prerogative

ONE of the easiest—and most dishonest — ways to assail someone's character is through the "guilt association" route. One of the easiest — and most dishonest — ways to win an argument is to censor the answers of the person assailed.

A case in point is the recent exchange between the editor of the News and Courier of Charleston, S. C., Thomas Waring, and the Southern Regional Council, of which Harold C. Fleming is executive director and the editor of the Delta Democrat-Times is a director.

Editor Waring fired a broadside at the Southern Regional Council, intimating it was Communist-inspired because "sixteen former and nine present directors of the Southern Regional Council have been affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare,' and quoting the American Legion magazine, Firing Line, as a source of information that the Southern Conference was a "defunct communist front organization," noting that the Southern Regional Council "has received many thousands of dollars from the Fund for the Republic, a Northern foundation that acts as paymaster for integration in the South."

Editor Waring also said, mockingly, that "Mr. Fleming and the Southern Regional Council are moderate only if one believes the NAACP is also moderate. The objectives of the SRC and the NAACP are the same — an end to separate schools in the South"

Mr. Fleming replied that on the basis of Waring's kind of argument "the News and Courier can be no more moderate than the Ku Klux Klan, since both have the objective of maintaining a completely segregated school system," but Editor Waring chose to delete this when he printed the letter in his newspaper.

In fact, out of ten paragraphs, the News and Courier only printed four in reply to its own completely unfair, vicious editorial which attempted to link the Southern Regional Council to the defunct and unsavory Southern Conference on Human Welfare.

May we emphasize here that we hold no brief for the Southern Conference, which, like many such organizations, started out with some directors, supporters and members of good intent but fell into bad hands. These men dropped out of the organization when they began to learn of its true motivations.

The News and Courier should have printed Mr. Fleming's letter [illegible] it believes in fair play [illegible]aphs deleted were cut out with what one can only assume was malicious intent because they were the ones that gave the whole letter meaning.

What remained was an innocuous denial filled with generalities such as "This charge is utterly false and is supported by 'evidence' of the most dishonest sort."

What Editor Waring censored were vital bits of evidence in behalf of the Southern Regional Council:

1. The Fund for the Republic has also supplied money to Southern Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians and Catholics. One of the beneficiaries was the Southern Association of Neiman Fellows and Editor Waring was granted, and accepted, a fellowship under this Fund-financed program. We wonder if his fingers felt as ditry then as his conscience must now.

2. South Carolina Governor James F. Byrnes was a prominent speaker at a dinner staged by that now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare in 1945. ("Is one to believe that Mr. Byrnes is a carrier of the dread disease you ascribe to nine of SRC's 80 board members?" asked Fleming. The question was omitted in the News and Courier).

3. One of the past SRC board members, indicted by the Firing Line was the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, who also served on the board of the Southern Education Reporting Service along with Editor Waring of the News and Courier. Mr. Waring also gets money for that too—from the same Ford Foundation that established the Fund for the Republic. (We hope that in gratitude for what might be called a double-tit situation, Mr. Waring at least is driving a Ford or maybe a Mercury). Mr. Fleming wondered if "this means that the SERS and the worthy editor are tainted by this "definite trend of interrelationship"?

4. Another Southern Regional Council director was the late Dr. Howard W. Odom, the South's most noted sociologist, and one of the chief authorities relied upon by Attorney Robert McC. Figg in defending the Clarendon County school authorities who resisted racial integration of their schools in one of the cases involved in the original Supreme Court decision on school integration.

The deleted paragraphs of Mr. Fleming's letter would have made Editor Waring at least as guilty by his associations as he attempted to make Mr. Fleming. As a matter of fact, Editor Waring is guilty only of a very special kind of yellow journalism.

Both whites, Negroes victims of Red plot

BY EDWIN STRICKLAND
News staff writer

A quarter of a century ago, Myles Horton and Donald L. West established in the mountains of Tennessee a school which has become a Mecca for ultra liberals, labor agitators, professional "democracy seekers," those who follow the Communist party line and for hard-core Communists themselves. James A. Dombrowski soon joined West and Horton.

More recently, the school has been specializing in the training of integration leaders.

HORTON, the school's director, declares that he never knowingly registers Communists in the school.

Horton, who calls the "Daily Worker," official organ of communism in America, a "labor paper" and subscribes to it in the school's library, has stated under oath that he is not a Communist.

His assertion has the ring of truth, certainly if the term is restricted to those who are listed on the party's official roles.

MORE WILL BE SAID of this later in discussing testimony concerning Horton and his school, given before congressional committees.

Dombrowski, on the other hand, has been identified as a member of the Communist Party in sworn testimony given in 1954 before the U. S. Senate Committee on Internal Security. The testimony was by John Butler, former Communist Party functionary in Alabama.

Horton was himself ejected from Senate committee hearings in New Orleans in 1954, when he refused to answer questions about Dombrowski's connection with Highlander Folk School. Horton was ordered ejected when he insisted on giving a prepared statement.

DOMBROWSKI HAS also denied that he is a member of the Communist Party "or under party discipline." But his record of service with communist fronts tabs him as a valuable adjunct to party purposes in the South.

He is the former executive secretary for the Communist-dominated Southern Conference for Human Welfare and served as its administrator.

He is currently serving as executive secretary for its successor, the Southern Conference Educational Fund, with offices in New Orleans.

IN 1955, DOMBROWSKI signed an Amici Curiae brief in defense of the Communist Party.

In 1952, he signed an appeal for amnesty for Communist Party leaders jailed under the Smith Act.

In 1948 and again in 1951, he publicly defended the International Workers Order, a Communist sponsored group.

He was a sponsor and a member of The People's Institute of Applied Religion.

A LIST OF ALL his associations with organizations that have been officially declared as communistic, would require several typewritten pages.

As one of the founders of Highlander Folk School, in Monteagle, Tenn., he maintains quarters there known as "Dombrowski's Cottage."

In Butler's testimony on Dombrowski, he asserted that in 1942 he attended a meeting of Communist Party leaders in Thomas Jefferson Hotel in Birmingham. Butler said Alton Lawrence, former Bessemer labor leader of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, introduced him to Dombrowski as a Communist Party member.

LAWRENCE WAS indicted in 1956 on a charge of conspiring to file a false non-Communist affidavit with the National Labor Relations Board.

Lawrence was one time a staff member of the Highlander Folk School.

Another witness, John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Union, AFL, testified before the old Dies committee on un-American activities, that Lawrence, Horton and Elizabeth Hawes were among persons who "attended a secret convention in North Carolina, at which time plans were made for spreading the revolutionary theories throughout the South."

THE SAME WITNESS stated further in testimony:

"In connection with this, I might mention that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., was mixed up in this secret convention, in which these three CIO organizers took a very prominent part.

Paul Crouch, once one of the top Communist Party figures in the South, testified before a subcommittee of the un-American activities committee in 1949 concerning the Highlander Folk School and Dombrowski:

"I WOULD LIKE to mention in this connection," said Crouch, "that the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., was a school organized by Myles Horton and Don West, and which Mr. James Dombrowski shortly thereafter joined . . .".

Speaking of Dombrowski, Crouch said:

"I have met officially with him on a number of occasions as head of the Communist District Bureau of Tennessee . . . at this conference Mr. Dombrowski gave me the impression of being completely pro-Communist and anxious to collaborate with the Communist Party and follow its leadership without taking the risk of actual party membership."

BACK TO CROUCH'S testimony on Highlander:

"The Highlander Folk School is a school operated at Monteagle, Tenn., ostensibly as an independent labor school, but actually working in close cooperation with the Communist Party.

DURING 1954 HEARINGS of the Senate internal security committee, the following conversation took place between Sen. Eastland, Committee Counsel Arens and Crouch during the latter's testimony:

Sen. Eastland . . . "Mr. Crouch, did you ever visit Mr. Dombrowski's home?"

Crouch . . . "I visited the Highlander Folk School where he was working. I didn't visit at his home, but we spent the night at the same home together, Caroline Stevenson's, and he and Leo Sheiner discussed in my presence the hideouts of Communist leaders the night we were traveling to Winter Haven."

Arens . . . "He and Sheiner discussed in your presence the hideouts for Communist leaders, top flight leaders; is that correct?"

Crouch . . . "That is correct, sir."

DURING THE 1949 House Committee hearings, West was identified in testimony as district director of the Communist Party in North Carolina.

West, of Atlanta, was discussed in an earlier article in this series.

Before leaving Drombrowski, it would be interesting to identify a former Birmingham girl, Margaret Gelders Frantz, who is often described as his "good right hand."

Mrs. Frantz still works with Dombrowski in the Southern Conference Educational Fund, which is headed by Montgomery's Aubrey Williams. Mrs. Frantz was also with Dombrowski when he headed the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, in which Williams and Myles Horton were also active.

THE STORY BEGINS in Birmingham in 1922, when she was born Margie Gelders, daughter of Joseph Gelders, who published a sheet known as "Southern News Almanac." Joe Gelders later became secretary of the Civil Rights Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Margie finished Phillips High School in 1939 and attended Radcliff College two years.

In 1940 she and her father, protesting the arrest of George Harris, vice president of the Alabama Farmer's Union, got themselves arrested by Birmingham police and made quite a splash in the "Daily Worker."

(The Alabama Farmer's Union, incidentally, worked closely in its organization with the Monteagle Folk School.)

THE GELDERS, father and daughter, distributed pamphlets in downtown Birmingham protesting Harris' arrest and demanding repeal of a city ordinance known as 1492, under which the city could hold without charge for 48 hours. Arrested with them were Malcolm Cotton Dobbs, secretary of the League for Young Southerners, and F. McGraw, a member of the league. They were all booked on vagrancy charges.

The League of Young Southerners, affiliated with the American Youth Congress, had been active in circulating petitions against the draft law.

(Dobbs and his wife, Pauline, were later active in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and many other Communist front groups.)

IN PREPARATION for the role she was later to play, Birmingham's Miss Gelders became associated in quick succession with several groups later identified as subversive. She also worked with labor unions, and with the Soviet Purchasing Commission, in Washington.

Other groups with which she was identified included the American Youth Congress, League of Young Southerners, American Peace Mobilization, American People's Mobilization, Southern Negro Youth Congress and the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, for which she worked as a paid employe.

Margie met her husband-to-be, Knoxville Lawyer Laurent Brown Frantz, in Birmingham in 1940. He got himself arrested.

THE "DAILY WORKER" screamed that he was "arrested illegally and held in communicado for 24 hours by officers acting in collusion with the Dies committee."

Frantz was closely associated in Birmingham with Robert F. Hall, who was then Communist Party organizer in the South.

Margie moved to Nashville in 1944, but before she left, she made a speech on Jan. [illegible] to a meeting presided over by Rob Hall.

While still in Birmingham, she worked as a clerk for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and later in Evansville, Ill., as an organizer for the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union. Both these groups have been officially declared as [illegible] dominated.

DAVID H. SCULL,

Petitioner,

v.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA EX REL. COMMITTEE ON LAW REFORM AND RACIAL ACTIVITIES, Respondent.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS OF VIRGINIA

To the Honorable the Chief Justice of the United States and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

Petitioner, David H. Scull, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia in the case of Scull v. Commonwealth of Virginia ex rel. Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities.

Opinions Below

The unreported opinions, judgments and orders of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia and of the Circuit Court of Arlington County are attached hereto as Appendix A, infra, p. 19.

Jurisdiction

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia denying petition for writ of error was entered on January 20, 1958. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1257 (3).

Questions Presented

In 1956 the Virginia Legislature established the Thomson "Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities" as part of its program of resistance to school integration. Petitioner was called before the Committee in the course of an investigation described by its Chairman as one to "bust" the NAACP "wide open". Petitioner refused to tell the Committee whether he was a member of the NAACP or other civic and political organizations and for his refusal he was convicted and sentenced. The questions presented are:

1. Was petitioner's freedom of speech and association unlawfully impaired by his conviction for refusing to tell a Committee of the Virginia Legislature investigating racial activities whether he was associated with the NAACP and other civic and political organizations?

2. Were due process and equal protection guarantees violated by petitioner's conviction for refusing to answer questions during the course of an investigation admittedly intended to keep the NAACP, its members, and others "out of litigation" to promote school integration?

3. Was petitioner denied due process by his compelled interrogation before a Virginia legislative committee which had no rules, no reasonable grounds for calling and questioning him, and no identifiable subject under inquiry at the time of his appearance?

Statute Involved

The statute creating the Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities is Chapter 37 of the Acts of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Extra Session, 1956, which is set forth as Appendix B, infra, p. 23.

Statement

Petitioner has been sentenced to fine and imprisonment for his failure to answer a number of questions before a Committee of the Virginia Legislature investigating "litigation relating to racial activities."[1] Evaluation of petitioner's interrogation and of his refusal to answer requires an examination of the legislative history surrounding the establishment of the Committee and of the circumstances leading to his refusal.

1. The Legislative History

Shortly after this Court's 1954 decision in Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483, the Legislature of the State of Virginia undertook a program of massive resistance to school integration.

On August 30, 1954, the Governor appointed a commission to examine the effect of the Brown decision. On November 11, 1955, the Commission submitted its final report to the Governor, recommending a special session of the General Assembly and a constitutional convention for the passage of legislation and a constitutional amendment to confer broad discretion upon the Virginia school authorities to assign pupils and use state funds for the prevention of integration.

On February 1, 1956, shortly after this report, the General Assembly adopted an "interposition resolution" by a vote of 36-to-2 in the Senate and 90-to-5 in the House of Delegates, stating in part as follows:

> "That by its decision of May 17, 1954, in the school cases, the Supreme Court of the United States placed upon the Constitution an interpretation, having the effect of an amendment thereto, which interpretation Virginia emphatically disapproves; * * *
>
> "That with the Supreme Court's decision aforesaid and this resolution by the General Assembly of Virginia, a question of contested power has arisen: The court asserts, for its part, that the States did, in fact, in 1868, prohibit unto themselves, by means of the Fourteenth Amendment, the power to maintain racially separate public schools, which power certain of the States have exercised daily for more than 80 years; the State of Virginia, for her part, asserts that she has never surrendered such power;
> "That this declaration upon the part of the Supreme Court of the United States constitutes a deliberate, palpable, and dangerous attempt by the court itself to usurp the amendatory power that lies solely with not fewer than three-fourths of the States; * * *
>
> "[That Virginia] anxiously concerned at this massive expansion of central authority, * * * is in duty bound to interpose against these most serious consequences, and earnestly to challenge the usurped authority that would inflict them upon her citizens. * * *
> "And be it finally resolved, that until the question here asserted by the State of Virginia be settled by clear Constitutional amendment, we pledge our firm intention to take all appropiate measures honorably, legally and constitutionally available to us, to resist this illegal encroachment upon our sovereign powers, and to urge upon our sister States, whose authority over their own most cherished powers may next be imperiled, their prompt and deliberate efforts to check this and further encroachment by the Supreme Court, through judicial legislation, upon the reserved powers of the States."

On August 27, 1956, the General Assembly was convened by the Governor in an Extra Session to pass anti-integration legislation. The Governor stated in his opening address to the Session:

"The people of Virginia and their elected representatives, are confronted with the gravest problems since 1865. Beginning with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on May 17, 1954, there has been a series of events striking at the very fundamentals of constitutional government and creating situations of the utmost concern to all our people in this Commonwealth, and throughout the South.

"Because of the events I have just mentioned, I come before you today for the purpose of submitting recommendations to continue our system of segregated public schools . . ."

"The principal bill which I submit to you at this time defines State policy and governs public school appropriations accordingly . . ."

"Manifestly, integration of the races would make impossible the operation of an efficient system. By this proposed legislation, the General Assembly, properly exercising its authority under the [State] Constitution, > will clearly define what constitute an efficient system for which State appropriations are made."

In response to this appeal the Assembly enacted a series of bills including a pupil assignment plan,[2] provision for the discontinuance of state funds to integrated schools, and a package of "anti-NAACP bills."

2. Establishment of the Thomson Committee

On the same day that it approved the school bills, the Virginia Legislature passed a package of "anti-NAACP bills," appearing as Chapters 31 to 37 of the Acts of the General Assembly, Extra Session 1956,[3] the last of which created the "Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities", commonly known as the "Thomson Committee" for its sponsor and Chairman, Delegate Thomson. The Act creating the Committee empowered it > "to make a thorough investigation of the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in this State."

To that end, the Committee was directed to collect evidence necessary to determine (1) the need "for legislation which would assist in the investigation of such organizations . . . relative to the State income tax laws", (2) the need for legislation "redefining the taxable status" of such organizations and of donations to such organizations, and (3) "the effect which integration or the threat of integration could have on the operation of the public schools in the State or the general welfare of the State and whether the laws of barratry, champerty and maintenance are being violated in connection therewith.''[4]

3. Petitioner's Interrogation

Prior to and after the establishment of his Committee, Chairman Thomson made public statements that its investigations would be ''devastating to the NAACP,'' would ''bust that organization wide open'' and ''could be used to keep the NAACP out of litigation, which is the heart of the organization'' (Oct. 15 Tr. 47-49).[5] Shortly after its establishment in September of 1956, the Committee initiated investigations and hearings in various Virginia localities. In its hearings the Committee called ''around one hundred'' witnesses concerning the NAACP and one witness concerning the ''Defenders of State Sovereignty'' (Oct. 15 Tr. 31-33).

Petitioner was subpoenaed to appear before the Committee on September 20, 1957, because of unverified allegations appearing in a printed pamphlet entitled ''The Shocking

[4] The "laws of barratry, champerty and maintenance" referred to are included in the six other "anti-NAACP" acts passed with the Thomson Committee measure. These other acts establish in the area of racial activities and racial litigation, registration requirements (Chapters 31 and 32), criminal penalties (Chapters 33, 35, 36) and another investigating committee, the "Boatwright Committee" (Chapter 34). Three of these measures were recently held unconstitutional in a decision by a federal three-judge court in NAACP v. Patty, 26 Law Week 2370 (D.C.E.D. Va.), decided January 21, 1958.

[5] There are three significant transcripts in the record. The first is the transcript of petitioner's appearance before the Committee on September 20, 1957 and is designated as "Sept. 20 Tr.". The second is the transcript of the October 15, 1957, hearing before the Circuit Court of Arlington County on the show cause order and is designated "Oct. 15 Tr.". The third is the transcript of the October 30, 1957, hearing of the contempt trial and is designated as "Oct. 30 Tr.". In a few places where the context is clear, the letters "Tr." are used without dates.

Truth" emanating from the "Fairfax Citizens Council," an organization about which the committee had no information (Oct. 15 Tr. 20, 23-25, 43-45). The pamphlet (designated in the record as Respondent's Exh. No. 1, Oct. 15, 1957) implies some unspecified relationship between petitioner's Post Office box in Annandale, Virginia, and a number of organizations such as the NAACP, the B'nai B'rith, the American Friends Service Committee, and the Fairfax Federation of PTAs.

At the outset of the Committee hearing on September 20, 1957, petitioner demanded to be informed of the question under inquiry before the Committee, whereupon the Chairman simply rephrased the authorizing resolution in terms even more vague than those of the statute itself.[6] Thereupon petitioner was asked a series of questions relating to his membership in, and the use of his mailbox by, various civic and political organizations, including the Fairfax County Council on Human Relations, the NAACP, the ACLU, the ADA, and the American Friends Service Committee. See Appendix C, infra, p. 26. Petitioner refused to answer these questions, as well as questions concerning his involvement in "racial litigation," on the grounds, among others, that they infringed upon his rights under the Federal Constitution. Petitioner's statement refusing to answer these questions on federal constitutional grounds is included as Appendix D to this petition, infra, p. 28.

[6] "CHAIRMAN THOMSON: The subjects under inquiry by the Committee, Mr. Scull, are three-fold:

One—several which primarily do not deal with you, but I will nonetheless state all three—the tax-exempt or tax status of both racial organizations in Virginia and the contributions made to such organizations—that is, the taxable status of them.

The integration or threat of integration on the public school system of Virginia, or the general welfare of Virginia.

The third one deals with the violation of certain statutes which are designed to prevent champerty, barratry, and maintenance, or the unauthorized practice of the law" (Sept. 20 Tr. 4).

4. Enforcement Proceedings

Following petitioner's refusal to answer and pursuant to the procedure provided by the statute (Appendix B, infra, p. 23), petitioner was ordered to show cause before the Circuit Court of Arlington County why he should not be compelled by judicial order to answer the Committee's questions.

i. At the hearing on the show cause order on October 15, 1957, the only witness was Chairman Thomson, who related petitioner's refusals to answer Committee questions. On cross-examination, Mr. Thomson affirmed that he had publicly stated his investigation would be "devastating to the NAACP," would "bust that organization wide open" and "could be used to keep the NAACP out of litigation, which is the heart of the organization" (Tr. 47-49). When asked whether the Committee had investigated any groups other than the NAACP, he stated that it had investigated the "Defenders of State Sovereignty," but conceded that there had been only one witness from that organization as contrasted to "around one hundred" concerning the NAACP (Tr. 31-33).

ii. Chairman Thomson conceded that the Committee had no published rules whatever and the only unpublished rules he could recall concerned the definition of a quorum and a provision for reporting the Committee's proceedings (Tr. 15-16). He affirmed that petitioner had been called because of unverified allegations by the Fairfax Citizens Council (concerning which he had no information) appearing in the pamphlet "The Shocking Truth" (Tr. 20, 23-25, 43-45) and volunteered that, "Of course, I use anonymous telephone calls to begin an investigation with" (Tr. 25). When asked to clarify his statement to petitioner at the hearing concerning the subject under inquiry by the Committee (see supra, n. 6, p. 8), Mr. Thomson was reduced to utter confusion. He was unable to state the subject under inquiry or the need for petitioner's testimony in any terms other than to repeat parts of the authorizing statute, and could make no understandable explanation as to which, if any, parts of the statute were involved in petitioner's questioning nor what he had meant in his statement at the hearing that certain parts of the statute were not involved (Tr. 38-45). He defended the questions addressed to petitioner concerning his civic and political associations on the ground that they would tend to reveal "whether in fact those organizations are racial in character" and would help verify the charges in the pamphlet, "The Shocking Truth" (Tr. 39, 43-45).

iii. Notwithstanding these admissions by Chairman Thomson, the Circuit Court ordered petitioner to appear before the Committee on October 23, 1957, to answer the questions he had previously refused to answer. The Court overruled petitioner's reliance on the Watkins and Sweezy cases and his contention that the Committee's proceedings violated his rights under the 14th Amendment.[7] See Appendix A, infra, pp. 20, 22.

iv. Thereafter petitioner appeared before the Committee on October 23rd and again refused to answer the questions put to him on September 20th.[8] On October 30th petitioner

---

[7] Petitioner's constitutional contentions were succinctly stated in his "Motion to Quash Rule to Show Cause" set forth in Appendix D, infra, p. 30. See also Oct. 15 Tr. 51-68.

[8] The Circuit Judge, in his order of Oct. 15, 1957, refused a stay pending appeal. In the week between October 15th and October 23rd petitioner unsuccessfully sought a stay of the order of October 15 from the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia and from the Chief Justice of this Court, fearing that his failure to employ any available means of review might result in invocation by the courts of Virginia of the doctrine of the Mine Workers case, 330 U.S. 258. Having exhausted the only means available for appeal of the order of October 15 prior to October 23rd when he was required to answer, petitioner contended at his contempt trial on October 30 that the Mine Workers doctrine was inapplicable. This contention was accepted by the Circuit Judge (see Oct. 30 Tr. 47), was tried for civil and criminal contempt. At his contempt trial petitioner expressly reasserted all of his earlier contentions under the 14th Amendment (Oct. 30 Tr. 25; see Appendix D, infra, p. 28); nevertheless he was found guilty of both civil and criminal contempt and sentenced to serve 10 days in the Arlington County jail and to pay a fine of $50.00 (see Appendix A, infra, p. 21). The sentence was stayed pending appeal.

On January 20, 1958, the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia refused petitions for writs of error sought by petitioner from the order of October 15, 1957, compelling him to answer the Committee's questions, and from the judgment and order of October 30, 1957, convicting and sentencing petitioner for civil and criminal contempt for disobedience of the order of October 15. See Appendix A, infra, p. 19. As concerns the October 15 order to answer, the Supreme Court of Appeals was "of opinion that the said order is plainly right"; the Court likewise found that the October 30th judgment of contempt "is plainly right" and affirmed both rulings. This petition seeks review of the judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeals affirming petitioner's conviction and sentence of October 30, 1957.

Reasons for Granting the Writ

The Decision of The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals is in Direct Conflict with Recent Decisions of This Court Upholding Constitutional Rights of Witnesses Before Legislative Investigating Committees

The judgment below upholding petitioner's interrogation and conviction contravenes the principles clearly announced and explicitly applied by recent decisions of this Court in three vital constitutional areas:

by counsel for the Committee in opposing petitioner's request for a writ of error, and by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia which affirmed both the order to testify and the contempt conviction on the merits, making no reference to the Mine Workers doctrine.

1. First Amendment Intrusion

This Court's decisions in Watkins v. United States, 354 U.S. 178, and Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 354 U.S. 234, following upon the dictum in United States v. Rumely, 345 U.S. 41, leave no doubt that compelled disclosure before a legislative committee of personal and political associations is an intrusion upon First Amendment rights justifiable only by overriding governmental need. We respectfully submit that the intrusion herein upon protected freedoms is both more severe and less justified by any governmental need than in any similar case yet presented to this Court.

The briefest examination of the 31 questions petitioner refused to answer (see Appendix C, infra, p. 26) will demonstrate the direct restraint on First Amendment rights implicit in compelling answers thereto. These questions require petitioner to reveal his relationship to local and national civic and political organizations active in the field of civil rights, as well as to individual members of those organizations, in an atmosphere of bitter hostility and local antagonism to such associations. Under Watkins and Sweezy, there can be no doubt that such questioning restrains freedom of speech and association protected by the First Amendment.

Even less than in Watkins and Sweezy is the intrusion in this case justified by any governmental need for the answers sought. The Committee's questioning of petitioner was based on no more than unverified allegations in a pamphlet by an unknown organization which linked petitioner with various civic and political organizations. The only justification that the Committee could offer in the Circuit Court for addressing such questions to petitioner was that they would enable it to determine "whether in fact those organizations are racial in character" and would help verify the charges of petitioner's connections therewith. Certainly if no more than this is required to order a private citizen under compulsory process to testify concerning his associations, then the First Amendment has ceased to impose any meaningful restraint on governmental action.

Moreover, even more than in Watkins and Sweezy, the Committee's inquiry was lacking in authorization from the parent body. The Virginia Assembly authorized the Committee to investigate the activities of organizations "which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in this state." That is not an authorization to do what the Committee says it was doing in petitioner's case, determining whether various organizations are "racial in character." Indeed, the unauthorized nature of the inquiry was explicitly conceded by Chairman Thomson, who testified "we were trying to determine through his testimony whether in fact those organizations are racial in character, whether at a future time the Legislature might wish to authorize an investigation of those subjects" (Oct. 15 Tr. 39) (emphasis added).

Certainly enough has already been shown to demonstrate the absence of any tangible governmental need for the information demanded from petitioner. But we cannot refrain from pointing out to this Court that the intrusion on First Amendment rights in the instant case is not only unsupported by any tangible need but is affirmatively tainted by a clearly unjustifiable and unlawful investigative effort. The only consistently asserted justification, both in the enactment of the Committee's authorizing resolution and in its activities under that resolution, was the illegal and unconstitutional purpose of massive resistance to school integration so candidly conceded by the Committee's Chairman. Legislative investigation to achieve results "devastating to the NAACP" which would "bust that organization wide open" by significantly discouraging membership therein under pain and penalty of governmental interrogation and censure, is plainly contrary to the guarantees of the First Amendment. While this purpose might not in and of itself vitiate an otherwise lawful inquiry based on a legitimate governmental need for the information sought, it certainly is the best possible evidence of the absence of any legitimate governmental need for the information sought from petitioner.

If New Hampshire's interest in restraining Communism and subversion did not suffice in the Sweezy case,[9] then clearly Virginia's effort to bust the NAACP wide open will not suffice to justify invasion of petitioner's First Amendment liberties.

2. Restraint upon Equal and Unfettered Access to the Courts for Vindication of the Right to Non-segregated Schooling

Petitioner's interrogation was part and parcel of Virginia's effort to nullify the right to non-segregated public schooling by restricting access to the courts for the vindication of that right. The legislative history of the enactment of the Thomson Committee's authorization clearly and explicitly reflects the determination of the Assembly, and the Governor who called it into special session, to nullify the right to integrated public schooling by

---

[9] Certainly the need for the information in the instant case is far less than that asserted by the New Hampshire authorities in Uphaus v. Wyman, No. 778, October Term, 1957, in which this Court granted certiorari on April 7, 1958. Cf. Barenblatt v. United States, No. 787, October Term, 1957, in which this Court granted certiorari on April 14, 1958.

harassment of the organization most actively utilizing the courts to vindicate the constitutional right to integrated public schooling. The Committee's questioning of approximately 100 persons connected with the NAACP, while calling but one witness connected with any other organization, is itself a demonstration of how closely Chairman Thomson was able to pursue his public promise that his investigation would be used "to keep the NAACP out of litigation, which is the heart of the organization."

The 14th Amendment assures unfettered and non-discriminatory access to the courts for the redress of grievances and the assertion of constitutional rights. Truax v. Corrigan, 257 U.S. 312, 334; Terral v. Burke Construction Company, 257 U.S. 529; Barbier v. Connally, 113 U.S. 27, 31. Only recently this Court evidenced its concern for equality of access to appellate courts and struck down under the 14th Amendment state action denying such equality. Griffin v. Illinois, 351 U.S. 12. Denial or restriction of access to the courts is no less state action because it is implemented through legislative investigation. Cf., Watkins v. United States, at pp. 188, 196-198.

Petitioner is the victim of a crude, albeit candid, effort to deny the NAACP, its members and others, free and equal access to the courts to obtain the rights recently recognized in the Brown case. Since the Committee's interrogation of petitioner was an instrumentality for the accomplishment of the illegal and unconstitutional purpose to deny to the NAACP, to its members and to other citizens, equal access to the courts, petitioner's conviction contravenes the 14th Amendment's guarantees of due process and equal protection.[10]

[10] Petitioner's contention that the purpose of the inquiry was to restrain free and equal access to the courts does not contravene the statement in the Watkins opinion (at p. 200) that the solution to the problems there raised "is not to be found in testing the motives of committee members."

3. Denial of Due Process Before the Committee

Petitioner was denied those very due process rights which this Court held in Watkins and Sweezy to be due every witness compelled to testify before a legislative investigating committee.

First, the Committee before which petitioner was summoned to appear lacked the minimal procedural safeguards necessary for fair treatment of witnesses. The Chairman of the Committee conceded at the hearing before the Virginia Circuit Court that the Committee had no published rules whatever and, indeed, had only two unpublished rules—one providing for a quorum and the other for recording the Committee's hearings. Certainly the first requirement of any governmental body that presumes to utilize compulsory process to compel testimony is a body of rules upon which a witness may rely in determining his rights. Compulsory interrogation without rules is inquisition, not due process.

Second, petitioner's interrogation was arbitrary and discriminatory because the Committee had no reasonable basis for calling and questioning him. Petitioner was called because of unverified and irrelevant allegations in a pamphlet emanating from an unknown organization. Apparently this was in conformity with the Committee's regu-

---

For, what is relied on here is not covert motives but unsolicited and overt expressions of purpose by the Legislature, the Governor and the Committee. In any case, this Court has not hesitated to strike down, under the equal protection clause, state action whose purpose was found to be racially or otherwise discriminatory. See Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 374; Guinn v. United States, 238 U.S. 347; Grosjean v. American Press Company, 297 U.S. 233; Lane v. Wilson, 307 U.S. 268; Terry v. Adams, 345 U.S. 461. This Court's willingness in equal protection cases to look behind apparently non-discriminatory state action at legislative purpose is compelled by the nature of that constitutional protection itself, for a contrary rule would serve to strip the guarantee of equality of any practical vitality.

lar manner of proceeding, for the Chairman boldly volunteered that he proceeded on the basis of "anonymous telephone calls."

Third, contrary to the due process rule so recently announced in Watkins, the Committee failed both at the time of petitioner's appearance and at the Circuit Court hearing on the show cause order, to produce any understandable subject under inquiry to which petitioner's questioning might conceivably be pertinent. The confusing answer made to petitioner on this subject at the hearing (see n. 6, p. 8, supra) was compounded by the complete inability of the Committee Chairman to adduce in the Circuit Court any recognizable subject under inquiry (Tr. 38-45). Neither the authorizing statute nor the Committee Chairman's contradictory and inconsistent testimony on this issue provided any rational basis upon which petitioner could determine whether he was legally obligated to answer the Committee's questions.

In sum, the absence of rules guaranteeing a modicum of fairness in the Committee's interrogation of witnesses, the lack of any cause or reason for the interrogation of petitioner, and the absence of any recognizable subject under inquiry to which the questions addressed to petitioner might conceivably have been pertinent, render petitioner's conviction a violation of due process of law.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons petitioner's contempt conviction has clearly deprived him of vital constitutional rights in direct conflict with recent decisions of this Court and this petition for writ of certiorari should therefore be granted.

Furthermore, this Court may wish to consider the possibility of summarily reversing the judgment below. The decision of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals is so clearly in conflict with recent decisions of this Court that argument of this case might be deemed unnecessarily wasteful of the time of the Court. Petitioner therefore respectfully suggests the possibility of a summary reversal.

"VIRGINIA:

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE COUNTY OF ARLINGTON.

On October 15, 1957 there came on for hearing before this Court in the above entitled matter the Motion to Quash Rule to Show Cause filed by respondent David H. Scull. Said motion moved that this Court quash and dismiss the Rule issued upon respondent requiring him to appear and show cause why he should not be required to answer certain questions previously asked him on September 20, 1957 when he was subpoenaed to testify before the Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities established by Chapter 37 of the Laws of the General Assembly, Extra Session 1956. Thereupon said motion was argued by Counsel for respondent and petitioner, and the Court took evidence and heard arguments under the Rule previously issued.

The Court having considered the evidence and arguments presented by both sides and being of the opinion that the grounds advanced by respondent are without merit and that he is properly required to answer the questions previously addressed to him by said Committee, it is accordingly ORDERED that the Motion to Quash the Rule to Show Cause served on petitioner on September 20, 1957, be and is hereby denied, and the respondent David H. Scull is ordered at a time and place designated hereinafter to appear before said Committee and answer those questions addressed to respondent which he has previously refused to answer before said Committee on September 20, 1957 at Court Room No. 3, Court House, Alexandria, Virginia, at 10:00 a.m., October 23rd.

Respondent, David H. Scull, having taken exception to the Court's order and having represented that he intends to petition for a writ of error to the foregoing portion of this order, and having requested a stay thereof to permit him to file his petition, it is further ORDERED that the motion of the respondent requesting this Court to stay its order herein be and it is hereby denied.

Given under my hand this 15th day of October, 1957.

Opinion of Circuit Judge Hosmer Rendered October 15, 1957 (Tr. p. 84-85)

"THE COURT: Gentlemen, it seems to me that this case does not fall squarely within the findings in the Sweezy case or in the Watkins case. In both of those cases the legislative enactment was very broad indeed. The statute under consideration, it seems to me, points out definitely three areas of inquiry which the committee is authorized to make and they are with respect to determining the need or lack of need for legislation, which would assist in the investigation of such organizations, corporations, associations, relative to the state income tax laws. That is a definite subject of inquiry so far as the authorization to the Committee is concerned.

And concerning the need or lack of need for legislation redefining the taxable status of such corporations, associations, organizations, and other groups as above referred to and further defining the status of donations to such organizations or corporations from a taxation standpoint; and determining the effect which integration or the threat of integration could have on the operation of the public schools in the State or the general welfare of the State and whether the laws of barratry, champerty and maintenance are being violated in connection therewith.

The situation in this case is different in another aspect. In this case the witness has declined to answer any questions of the Committee based primarily on his contention that the Act of the Legislature is unconstitutional. The attack today is on a broad ground that the authorization of the Legislature should be narrowed in its interpretation by the Court so that the witness is excluded from testifying. That contention will necessarily have to be rejected. The attack on the broad, constitutional ground is, of course, a very broad approach to the question of constitutionality of this Act in saying that the very purpose of the legislation is such that it renders the Act unconstitutional. The Court likewise rejects that contention.

Consideration of the questions asked by the committee shows that the questions are of a preliminary nature and in developing the inquiry to secure the information which the Committee is after appears to the Court to be perfectly proper line of inquiry.

The Court has concluded that the witness should be required to answer the questions propounded to him by the Committee."

The Committee is authorized to make a thorough investigation of the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in this State. The Committee shall conduct its investigation so as to collect evidence and information which shall be necessary or useful in

(1) determining the need, or lack of need, for legislation which would assist in the investigation of such organizations, corporations and associations relative to the State income tax laws;

(2) determining the need, or lack of need, for legislation redefining the taxable status of such corporations, associations, organizations and other groups, as above referred to, and further defining the status of donations to such organizations or corporations from a taxation standpoint; and

(3) determining the effect which integration or the threat of integration could have on the operation of the public schools in the State or the general welfare of the State and whether the laws of barratry, champerty and maintenance are being violated in connection therewith.

§ 3. Said Committee may hold hearings anywhere in the State, and shall have authority to issue subpoenas, which may be served by any sheriff or city sergeant of this State, or any agent or investigator of the Committee, and his return shown thereon, requiring the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, records and other documents. If any person, firm, corporation, association or organization which fails to appear in response to any such subpoena as therein required, or any person who fails or refuses, without legal cause, to answer any question propounded to him, then upon the application by the Chairman, or any member of the Committee acting at his direction, to the circuit or corporation court in the county or city wherein such person resides or may be found, such court shall issue an order directing such person to appear and testify. The Committee may, at its option, compel attendance of witnesses or production of documents by motion made before the circuit or corporation court having jurisdiction of the person or documents whose attendance or production is sought. The court upon such motion shall issue such subpoenas, writs, processes or orders as the court deems necessary. The Chairman of the Committee, or anyone acting at his direction, shall be authorized to administer oaths to all witnesses and to issue subpoenas. Every witness appearing pursuant to subpoena shall be entitled to receive, upon request, the same fee as is provided by law for witnesses in the courts of record in the State, and where the attendance of witnesses residing outside the county or city wherein the hearing is held is required, they shall be entitled to receive the sum of seven dollars after so appearing, upon certification thereof by the Chairman to the State Comptroller.

§ 4. Each member of the Committee shall receive, in addition to actual travel expenses, the same per diem as received by members of other legislative committees, while engaged in official duties as a member of said Committee.

§ 5. Said Committee shall be authorized to employ a clerical force and such investigators and other personnel as it may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, and may expend moneys for the procuring of information from other sources.

§ 6. The Attorney General shall assist the Committee upon request, and the Committee may engage such other legal counsel as it shall deem necessary.

§ 7. The Committee shall complete its investigations and make its report, together with any recommendations as to legislation, to the Governor and the General Assembly not later than November one, nineteen hundred fifty-seven.

2. There is hereby appropriated from the general fund of the State treasury the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars to carry out the purposes of this act.

APPENDIX D

Preservation of the Federal Question

Statement by Petitioner in Refusing to Answer Before the Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities on September 20, 1957

"Mr. Chairman:

"On September 29, 1956, the General Assembly of Virginia passed seven bills designed, broadly speaking, to restrict the free access to the courts of citizens who need to establish or maintain their civil rights. I believe that all of this legislation is unconstitutional and contrary to our heritage of common law, and that consequently this Committee, created by one of those bills as part of a whole legislative program, is without proper jurisdiction to pursue its inquiry.

"I believe that it is not only my civil right but also under some circumstances my moral duty to counsel with a fellow-citizen as to his legal rights if he is ignorant of them, to offer him my support if he is fearful of asserting his rights, and to assist him financially if he is too poor to take the legal steps necessary to establish his rights. It should, of course, be the duty of the executive and of the legislature to see that the rights of all citizens are protected. But when to the lasting dishonor of Virginia our Governor and our General Assembly have done everything possible to discourage our humblest citizens from enjoying their rights, it becomes especially the duty of the conscientious person to see to it that justice is done to the ignorant, the friendless, and the poor. I make no claim here to have done anything extraordinary in this way, but I believe that no agency of the government has the right to question or to interfere with any citizen in the exercise of such a civic role. If such intimidation were sanctioned, then no unpopular cause or helpless minority could be assured of free access to the courts as a protection against tyranny. A disinterested concern for justice for the person from whom there is no possible claim of blood or opportunity of reward has through the ages been extolled as one of the noblest virtues, and a cornerstone of our system of laws. Such a disinterested act is made illegal by the legislation passed last year. I am proud to have protested this action in Richmond before it became law; I challenge it now.

"Consequently, I shall decline to answer any question on this subject put by the present committee unless and until the constitutional validity of its inquiry and the related legislation has been upheld by proper judicial process.

"I believe that furthermore any right which I may exercise personally and individually I may also exercise jointly with other citizens through a voluntary organization or through voluntary contributions, and that the state has no general right to invade the privacy of such voluntary association in order to accomplish unconstitutional objectives. I shall, therefore, equally decline to answer questions put by this committee on this subject, although as in the case of individual activities I shall willingly answer such questions as the highest court to which the matter may be referred shall decide are proper. I fullly recognize the public right to know the officers, directors, and general purposes of every organization which sets itself before the public in any way, but since this is a matter of public information for every organization to which I belong or contribute, I have nothing to add to what the committee can obtain directly from the organization in which it may have an interest.

"The subpoena served upon me goes beyond this Committee's power under its enabling act. I am not properly informed of the subject of inquiry. The question you ask me is beyond your jurisdiction.

"For all of the foregoing reasons, and on the basis of all the rights accorded me under Sections 8, 11, and 12 of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the correlative provisions of the Federal Constitution, I respectfully decline to answer that question."

Motion to Quash Rule to Show Cause Filed in the Circuit Court of the County of Arlington, October 15, 1957

"... The demand made upon Movant to answer said questions is in violation of his rights under the Due Process and Equal Protection guarantees of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution in the following respects and particulars:

(a) The Thomson Committee was established and given investigative authority, as part of a legislative program of "massive resistance" to the United States Constitution and the Supreme Court's desegregation decisions, in order to harass, vilify, and publicly embarrass members of the NAACP and others who are attempting to secure integrated public schooling in Virginia.

(b) The purpose and effect of the inquiries of the Thomson Committee, including those addressed to the Movant, is denial of access to the courts for vindication of Constitutional rights, by harassment and exposure of school integration plaintiffs and members of the organization which is most actively engaged in litigating the integration suits.

(c) The inquiries addressed to Movant violate his rights of free speech, assembly, and petition because they repress freedom of expression and constitute an unjustified intrusion into and restraint upon his association with others in legal and laudable political and humanitarian causes.

(d) The demand for answers made upon Movant by the Thomson Committee is arbitrary and unreasonable inasmuch as there is no justification for the special and selective investigatory authority granted to the Thomson Committee, and nothing in that authority renders pertinent the demand made upon Movant to disclose his civic and political associations and activities.

(e) The Thomson Committee's authorizing resolution is too vague and imprecise to justify compelled testimonial disclosures.

(f) The Committee failed, despite proper inquiry made by Movant, to inform him in what respect its questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry by the Committee.

(g) The information sought from Movant was neither intended to, nor could reasonably be expected to, assist the Legislature in any proper legislative function."

EXPLANATION OF "CHARGES" AGAINST MRS. DAISY BATES AS APPEAR IN THE RECORDS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS STATE POLICE AND PUBLISHED DECEMBER 16, 1957 BY THE CAPITAL CITIZENS COUNCIL, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS

Charge No. 1. - Monroe, Louisiana (Investigation pending)

The facts: Mrs. Bates was with Mr. Bates at Monroe, Louisiana on November 16, 1934 when a pistol was found in the glove compartment of his car. He was arrested and booked for possessing a concealed weapon in spite of the fact that he states that he had a permit to carry such a weapon. Mrs. Bates was also booked "investigation pending," and was immediately released.

Charges Numbers 2 and 3 (Contempt of Court) are really one and the same.

The facts: On March 29, 1946, the Arkansas State Press, of which Mr. and Mrs. Bates are co-editors, published an article which was critical of the manner in which three Negro strikers at a cotton oil mill had been tried and sentenced. The headline of the article reads "Strikers Sentenced to Pen by Hand-Picked Jury."

On April 25th the judge in the case ordered the Bates arrested for contempt of court. On April 29th both were found guilty and fined $100 and 10 days. The Bates appealed with the result "Judgments quashed and causes remanded with directions to dismiss" (South Western Reporter, Arkansas Cases, 196-199, S.W. 2d, page 46, Volume 197 South West Reporter).

Charge No. 4. (Gaming)

The facts: On January 26, 1952 at a gathering of friends at Little Rock, at which the Bates were present, some one suggested a social game of penny ante poker. While the game was in progress officers of the city police force entered this private home and arrested all participants. They were subsequently booked and fined $5 each.

Two days later the Bates protested the arrest to the district attorney who in turn voiced his protest to the mayor. The city police chief was then ordered to have his men desist from such practice in the future. Since then, I am told, there have been no such invasion of the private premises of citizens. Of course this had no affect on the Bates' record of arrest and fine, as unfair as they may be.

Charge No. 5. (Failure to register NAACP)

This charge has to do with efforts of the attorney general of Arkansas to harass and hamper the NAACP in this state.

COMMUNISM IN THE MIDSOUTH

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1957

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SUBCOMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE INTERNAL SECURITY ACT AND OTHER INTERNAL SECURITY LAWS,
OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Memphis, Tenn.

The subcommittee met, pursuant to notice, at 10:45 a. m., in the Federal court room, Federal Building, Senator William E. Jenner, presiding.

Also present: Robert Morris, chief counsel; J. G. Sourwine, associate counsel; Benjamin Mandel, research director; and Frank Schroeder, chief investigator.

Senator JENNER. The committee will come to order.

In the course of fulfilling its obligation of informing the United States Senate concerning the extent of the Communist conspiracy in our country, the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate finds that it must hold hearings throughout the United States.

The subcommittee is doing this in order to determine, on a geographical basis, the extent to which Communists may have penetrated particular areas of our Nation.

Last year, the subcommittee held hearings in New Orleans and in Honolulu.

This year, the cities of Philadelphia and Memphis were selected by the subcommittee.

The basic responsibility of this subcommittee is to produce facts upon which sound legislative judgments may be based.

In the field of internal-security legislation, this requires that the subcommittee seek to determine, in as much detail as possible, the nature and extent of Communist activity. In these hearings, we shall seek information about Communist activity regionally, with respect to the infiltration of particular organizations, and in this area, as it forms a broader pattern of Communist activity generally.

Every witness who has been summoned to these hearings has been called because the subcommittee hopes to secure information about the Communist conspiracy that will help the subcommittee in performing its task of making legislative recommendations to the full Committee on the Judiciary, and through that committee, to the United States Senate.

Legislative recommendations which the subcommittee must make include whether there should be changes in the Internal Security Act, the Smith Act, as well as whether new laws are needed, and the shape such laws should take.

Now, at this opening hearing, we will ask that the first witness be called.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, the first witness this morning is being called because one of the things under consideration by the subcommittee is the problem posed by the Supreme Cout decisions of the last 2 years.

As you know, Senator, there have been 17 or 18 Supreme Court decisions, the effect of which has been to declare as unconstitutional the legislation of various States, municipalities and the United States Government.

The case of Pennsylvania against Steve Nelson is such a decision, and one of the things, Senator, that the subcommittee is considering is the need of new legislation to repair what has been described, by Senators of the United States, as considerable damage, and in line with analyzing this particular aspect of this series of Supreme Court decisions, Senator, we have asked Attorney General Jo M. Ferguson, the attorney general of the State of Kentucky, to testify here this morning.

Senator JENNER. Is Mr. Ferguson present?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. Will you come forward, Mr. Ferguson. Mr. Ferguson, will you be sworn to testify?

Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. FERGUSON. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JO M. FERGUSON, ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF KENTUCKY

Senator JENNER. Will you give the committee your full name?

Mr. FERGUSON. My name is Jo M. Ferguson.

Senator JENNER. Where do you reside, Mr. Ferguson?

Mr. FERGUSON. I reside at Frankfort, Ky.; I am the attorney general of Kentucky.

Senator JENNER. You are the present attorney general of the State of Kentucky?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Morris, you may question the witness.

Mr. MORRIS. How long have you been the attorney general of the State of Kentucky?

Mr. FERGUSON. About a year and a half.

Mr. MORRIS. Does the State of Kentucky have on its books laws regulating sedition and conspiracy against the United States Government?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is true, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. What laws are there now in effect, General Ferguson?

Mr. FERGUSON. They are known as Kentucky Revised Statutes 432.020, 030, and 040, and they are directed against the advocacy of sedition and criminal syndicalism.

Mr. MORRIS. Have the Supreme Court rulings affected any of this Kentucky legislation?

Mr. FERGUSON. They have very gravely affected that legislation, and have very probably rendered it inoperative.

Mr. MORRIS. Specifically, or in a decision handed down in another case?

Mr. FERGUSON. In a decision handed down in another case.

Mr. MORRIS. What case is that?

Mr. FERGUSON. This Steve Nelson case, Pennsylvania against Nelson.

Mr. MORRIS. Is it your testimony, General Ferguson, that the case of Pennsylvania against Steve Nelson has affected the laws of the State of Kentucky?

Mr. FERGUSON. Our court of appeals, which is our highest court, determined that the Steve Nelson case had rendered these statutes at least partially ineffective, and they reached that determination in the case of Braden against Commonwealth.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you have a prepared statement with you this morning?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes, sir, I do.

Senator JENNER. You may proceed with your statement.

Mr. FERGUSON. Thank you, Senator Jenner, and gentlemen. I am grateful for this opportunity to appear before this committee in furtherance of its study of possible legislation to restore a reasonable balance of power between the State and Federal Governments in the field of subversive or seditious activities. I am interested in this field not only as a prosecuting officer attempting to secure the enforcement of his State's criminal statutes, but as an official of a State government which finds its ability to protect its own existence to be weakened by the implications of the recent Supreme Court decision in the case of Pennsylvania v. Nelson.

My State of Kentucky was peculiarly interested in the decision because its highest court had under consideration a case involving its sedition statute at the very moment the Supreme Court opinion was handed down. One Carl Braden, of the city of Louisville, had been indicted along with 5 other individuals for the advocacy of criminal sedition and had been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for 15 years for that offense. The indictments of the other individuals were still pending. The conviction of Braden was necessarily reversed as a result of Pennsylvania v. Nelson. That is Braden v. Commonwealth (Ky., 291 S. W. 2d 843). Eventually the indictments of the other individuals were dismissed for the same reason.

Kentucky is a rural State containing only one large city and populated by an unusually homogeneous group of people. Normally one would expect to find a few instances of seditious activity in a population of this nature. The evidence developed in the prosecution of Braden, however, clearly indicated considerable activity in Louisville, Paducah, and other areas of the State, which activity was not confined to mere theoretical advocacy of any unusual social doctrine or economic theory, but clearly extended to the promotion of violent activities and aimed at riot and insurrection. The details of this evidence can be more clearly given by the Commonwealth's attorney who prosecuted the case in the trial court, Mr. Scott Hamilton, who is here today. It is sufficient for me to say that, in my opinion, the State of Kentucky could not fail to attempt to defend itself and its people from the type of criminal activity denounced by its sedition statute, which activity had so clearly been engaged in by Braden and his cohorts.

The conviction of Carl Braden did not represent any attempt on the part of the Commonwealth of Kentucky to suppress philosophical thought, however eccentric. It did not attempt even to inhibit the advocacy of any social or economic change so long as that advocacy was confined to peaceful and constitutional means. The prosecution of Braden was aimed at his advocacy of criminal sedition, which is defined as the advocacy of change or modification of > the Government, Constitution or laws of the United States or of this State by force or violence or by any unlawful means * * *

Kentucky possessed an early interest in sedition laws. The famous Kentucky Resolutions of 1798 were once almost as well known to the American schoolchild as the Declaration of Independence. Those resolutions, which were prepared by Thomas Jefferson, and introduced in the Kentucky Legislature by John Breckinridge, afterwards Attorney General of the United States, denounced the Federal sedition law of that day on the exact ground that such matters were reserved to State punishment, and were beyond the control of the Federal Government. The position taken by the majority in Pennsylvania v. Nelson is exactly contrary to the position of Thomas Jefferson in the Kentucky Resolutions. In his letter of December 11, 1821, to Mr. John Cable Breckinridge, Mr. Jefferson made a comment which is perhaps not inappropriate to the present situation:

> I fear, dear sir, we are now in such another crisis, with this difference only, that the judiciary branch is alone and single-handed in the present assaults on the Constitution * * *.

Perhaps it was the memory of Kentucky's position in an earlier day which led the Kentucky Justice, Mr. Justice Reed, to write the dissent in the Nelson case which so clearly points out the fallacies contained in the majority opinion. I think it is particularly apparent from Justice Reed's opinion that the majority had no basis for the statement that the exercise of State powers in this field would interfere with the operation of the Federal statute in any way. The Department of Justice has asked that State powers be preserved in this field, and the FBI has made it plain that State assistance is desired by that organization. Indeed, Kentucky's own experience in the Braden case revealed the closest cooperation between the FBI and the State authorities. I think that I can say without reservation that the FBI was as much interested in the prosecution of Braden as the State authorities themselves.

I would like to point out the interest of the National Association of Attorneys General in this matter by filing herewith Resolution No. 12 of the 51st annual meeting of the national association on the subject of Internal Security.

Senator JENNER. It will be so filed and incorporated as a part of the official record of this committee.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ATTORNEYS GENERAL, 51ST ANNUAL MEETING, 1957

INTERNAL SECURITY [1]

Be it resolved by the 51st annual meeting of the National Association of Attorneys General, at Sun Valley, Idaho, June 26, 1957, That the president of this association is authorized to appoint a committee on internal security, such committee to be instructed to confer immediately with interested Federal agencies and other national groups, including the American Bar Association, with a view to preparation of legislation, for introduction at the current session of Congress, designed to reaffirm and reactivate Federal and State internal security controls; and be it further

[1] Adopted by vote of 31 to 10. In favor: Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Alaska. Opposed: California, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington.

Resolved, That the committee shall present its recommendations to the executive committee of this association, and with the approval and authority of the executive committee, the committee on internal security is authorized to appear before the Congress in support of its recommendations.

Mr. MORRIS. I might also state that the attorney general of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, as well as of the State of New Hampshire, have both testified before the Internal Security Subcommittee on this particular subject, and both have stated that the Supreme Court decision in the case of Pennsylvania v. Nelson has created a void with respect to internal security, so far as their States are concerned.

Now, General Ferguson, have you finished your statement?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is my prepared statement.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, is it the position of your own court of appeals that your own particular sedition laws, because of something particular about them, has been invalidated, or is the situation such that the whole area is one that is being denied to the States by the Supreme Court?

Mr. FERGUSON. The position of the court of appeals, as I understand it, is that there is a possibility under the majority opinion of the Supreme Court that a certain small area remains, so, therefore, I would not say that the statutes were completely invalidated, but they are invalidated in practice because of the inability of the prosecution to separate the sedition against the Federal Government from the sedition against the State government.

Mr. MORRIS. And the other aspect of that question was, General Ferguson, was it something peculiar about the particular Kentucky law against sedition that caused its invalidation?

Mr. FERGUSON. No.

Mr. MORRIS. Or was it the general area, that a State shouldn't be engaged in any such legislation?

Mr. FERGUSON. We feel it is the general area, which the Supreme Court majority opinion has held to be Federal, exclusively.

Mr. MORRIS. I wonder if you could develop that for us. In other words, what we are trying to determine, General Ferguson, is this: Has the effect of the Supreme Court decision been that it is almost impossible for States now to proceed and pass legislation in this general area that will survive recent Supreme Court decisions?

Mr. FERGUSON. Yes, that is true, as a general statement.

Mr. MORRIS. Is it that, or is it something imperfect about the existing legislation now?

Mr. FERGUSON. No, it is not the State legislation which is imperfect, I think; I think that the Supreme Court has made it impossible to have any effective State legislation on the subject.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, General Ferguson, generally do you find there is anything now that you can do about it?

Mr. FERGUSON. I feel that I cannot, or that the State cannot.

Mr. MORRIS. That the State of Kentucky cannot?

Mr. FERGUSON. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, is the Communist organization today in Kentucky of such a nature that it would require legislation on the part of the State in order to keep it within bounds?

Mr. FERGUSON. There is undoubtedly Communist activity in Kentucky, which Mr. Hamilton can tell you more about than I can, because of his close familiarity with this particular case, and with the developments which the evidence brought out.

I know that it is the desire of the local FBI men in our State, that our State organizations assist in the control of these activities.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, now, I think it is the contention of the majority in the Supreme Court, that Congress intended that this general area should be preempted by the Federal Government by way of trying to solve it and pass remedial legislation against it. Do you find that that is the case; do you think it is necessary for Kentucky to have legislation?

Mr. FERGUSON. We feel that it would be desirable to have legislation which would restore to our State the power to control activities in this field, at least coordinately with the Federal Government.

Senator JENNER. Any further questions; Mr. Sourwine?

Mr. SOURWINE. No further questions.

Mr. FERGUSON. Senator, if I might say one more thing; our position in Kentucky is that the dissent of Mr. Justice Reed, in which two other Justices joined, is the correct statement of the law, and we have the name here of a 1953 decision in which we feel that the minority decision is correct, and my office agrees entirely with everything Mr. Justice Reed said in his dissenting opinion.

Mr. Reed pointed out that all of the later pronouncements of the Federal Government on that subject show that the Federal Government desires the assistance of the State in the field, and I think Mr. Reed also points out very vigorously in his dissent that there is every indication that the Congress did not intend by the Smith Act to occupy this field exclusively.

Senator JENNER. If there are no further questions, the committee wishes to thank you for coming here from Kentucky and giving us the benefit of your views; it is very important. Thank you very much.

Mr. FERGUSON. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Senator JENNER. Call the next witness.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. A. Scott Hamilton, the attorney general of Jefferson County, Louisville, Ky.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Hamilton, will you be sworn?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. HAMILTON. I do.

TESTIMONY OF A. SCOTT HAMILTON, COMMONWEALTH ATTORNEY, LOUISVILLE, KY.

Senator JENNER. Will you give the committee your full name?

Mr. HAMILTON. A. Scott Hamilton.

Senator JENNER. Where do you reside?

Mr. HAMILTON. 254 St. Matthews Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

Senator JENNER. What is your business or profession?

Mr. HAMILTON. I am the commonwealth attorney at Louisville, the 30th judicial district of Kentucky.

Senator JENNER. Proceed with the questioning of Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Hamilton, I think you are acquainted with the interest of the subcommittee as has been previously stated here today?

Mr. HAMILTON. I am.

Mr. MORRIS. With respect to the possibility that a legislative void may exist as far as the internal security of the United States is concerned; I wonder if you could tell us whether or not the decision of Pennsylvania v. Nelson has created a legislative vacum here that should come to the attention of the Internal Security Subcommittee of the United States?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir, to answer your question, your first question, that is right, I would say absolutely it has, and actually the case of the Commonwealth v. Braden demonstrates that.

In that case, the opinion turns strictly upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the Nelson case.

Now, if I can elaborate a little while, I would like to do it.

Senator JENNER. Proceed.

Mr. HAMILTON. I have made some notes; it has been about 3 years now since we tried this Braden case in Louisville.

Mr. MORRIS. When was the Braden case tried?

Mr. HAMILTON. In November 1954, and I have made some notes within the last few days to refresh my memory and to try to give you gentlemen some insight into the local problems presented in cases of that nature.

At the outset, however, I want to point out that the United States Congress, the FBI, many State agencies, and last, but certainly not least, the Supreme Court itself, have found and stated that the Communist Party in this country is a part of international communism, or to be more specific, is an arm of Russian communism, and actually is subservient to the Soviet Party.

Many undercover agents and former Communists who have left the party have attested to this fact. Actually, some of these witnesses so testified in the Braden case. Some were actually sent to the Lenin School in Moscow to be trained in Communist methods, after which training they returned to this country to teach and to put into effect Russian Communist tactics and strategy in the United States.

The agencies above mentioned and the witnesses have said that their methods of operation are the same throughout the world.

One of their primary methods of operation is to divide and conquer, or to use the language of Communist writers, to stir up trouble among their victims so that they might be taken over.

Now, to demonstrate this, I want to refer to the following exhibit filed in the Braden case, and I might say that if I had the exhibits here, it would take a truck to haul them to Memphis from Frankfort, Ky.

Nevertheless, in the Commonwealth exhibit No. 9, which was seized at Braden's residence, and I might say that among these books and that sort of thing, we found several copies of the same books which would indicate that they were being circulated, passed around and so on, but anyway, included in volume 20 of the Little Lenin Library, there is one entitled "Left Wing Communism and Infantile Disorder," that was written by Lenin.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Hamilton, may I break in here?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Was there direct evidence in the course of this trial that Carl Braden actually was a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. And these are some of the books that were found?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right.

Mr. MORRIS. In his possession?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right, you are right.

Mr. MORRIS. And they were brought to light during the course of the trial?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir; this book is described on its flyleaf as "a popular essay in Marxian strategy and tactics."

On page 80 of that book, we have the following:

> We do not and cannot know which spark—of the innumerable sparks that are flying around in all countries as a result of the economic and political world crisis—will kindle the conflagration, in the sense of specially arousing the masses and we must, therefore, with the aid of our new, Communist principles, set to work to "stir up" all and sundry, even the oldest, mustiest, and seemingly hopeless spheres, for otherwise we shall not be able to cope with our tasks, we shall not be all round, we shall not muster all arms and we shall not be prepared either for victory over the bourgeoisie (which arranged all sides of social life—and has now disarranged them in its bourgois way) or for the impending Communist reorganization of the whole of social life after the victory.

In this same book, speaking of the desire for Communist activities in labor unions, as an example, we have this; Lenin made this statement:

> We must be able to withstand all this, speaking of pressures to keep Communists out of unions, to agree to any sacrifice, and even—if need be—to resort to all sorts of stratagems, artifices, illegal methods, to evasions and subterfuges, only so as to get into the trade unions, remain in them, and to carry on Communist work within them at all costs.

I think it should be observed from the foregoing that Lenin knew and realized that the unions wanted no part of Communists or communism. They are just as loyal to America as we are; yet the Communists were determined to infiltrate labor unions, bar associations, and even, as I will cite here in a few minutes, as was done in Louisville, a simple thing such as parent-teachers associations.

Now, to get back to the Braden case for 1 minute, it was an outgrowth of the prearranged purchase by Braden of a house in a white neighborhood, if you want to call it that, and a day or two later he transfered it to a Negro. Then, 6 or 8 weeks after that date, the house was blown up.

Now, in Braden's material, Communist material that was seized at his home, and this has been cited in evidence in the Kentucky case, we found this letter with a newspaper clipping and it pertains to the dynamiting of a Negro store at Manchester, Ky. Now, this letter was written by a Communist at Lexington, Ky., at least, he lived at Lexington, to Carl Braden at Louisville, and attached to the back of that letter was a newspaper clipping relative to the explosion, and then a written longhand note, and here is the clipping:

Manchester, Ky., July 5—and as I recall, we found that to be July 1953—

A small store building near the southern city limits of Manchester was destroyed by a dynamite blast at 2 a. m. today.

Walter Pennington, 55-year-old Negro owner of the store, estimated his loss at $5,000 and said windows in his home, located next door to the store, were blasted out. Pennington, his wife and 2 children escaped injury. Detective Walter Woods is investigating.

Now, here is what was written in longhand beside the clipping, and I have photostats of these with me.

Request protest resolutions and letters, etc.—called to attention of Negro, labor, etc. organizations. (I was maybe 20 miles away.) Part of a pattern of violence against both unions and Negroes and friends.

Now, I submit to you gentlemen or anybody else that is interested, why would it have been of any interest to Braden or anybody else that the man was 20 miles away when the explosion went off, unless he had something to do with it. That is the line of that letter. Now, that is——

Mr. MORRIS. Are you making the point, Mr. Hamilton, that maybe the Communists themselves are responsible for that?

Mr. HAMILTON. That is the construction we put on it; yes, sir. Now, that is exhibit 88 in the case of Commonwealth v. Braden, and it demonstrates that you have local problems and local infractions of the law growing out of their tactics. So if we in Louisville or Memphis or whatnot, if we have our hands tied, how can we expect to go out and call on the FBI or the United States attorney to prosecute these crimes?

Now, as an example, we wanted to prosecute 1 of the men at least, or 2 of them for blowing up this house in Louisville and the circuit court, after the Nelson case, ruled that we could not show the Communist end of this thing as the motive. Well, any lawyer knows, I am sure you all know if you can't show the motive for the crime, 99 times out of 100, you are not going to be able very well to prove a crime.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Mr. Hamilton, was it the thinking of the State in the Braden case that the damage there, too, was caused by Communists?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right, and I have an affidavit that I will refer to in a few minutes that I think will demonstrate that, coupled with the physical facts of what happened.

Now, also, exhibit 51–F, that is filed in the Braden case, is very significant to us who prosecuted this case, and this is a letter addressed to Carl Braden from the Federated Press, a Communist press organization and it is as follows, and it is dated January 27, 1950.

DEAR CARL: Your wife's story on the eviction of the Negro families was a beaut. If it doesn't sound too ghoulish, I'd say we would like more stories like that. It is part of newspaper work, I suppose, to say "what a terrific story" when news comes in of workers being forced out on strike or getting their heads knocked off by police, or being thrown out of their homes, only later to react as a human being to the suffering involved. FP has been full of good stories like that recently, and it looks like there will be plenty more coming.

Is there any possibility of your getting us some field stories on the mine strike? We haven't had any rank-and-file stories on the strike because our Pittsburgh correspondent, who works on one of the big dailies there, has been sending us nothing but anti-Lewis stories. Result: We had overall stories on the walkout, but nothing indicating the real sentiments of the strikers.

We carried your story on restrictive covenants and are forwarding your note to our Washington bureau for a followup.

Regards,

(Signed) MIRIAM.

Now, I say to anybody, if they think it is a good story because some policeman goes out and beats somebody's head off, or people lose jobs, I don't follow it.

Now, we found also in Braden's possession, and in the possession of others of these people, many copies of a magazine called Political Affairs, and as you know, that is a magazine designated on the masthead as a magazine dedicated to Marxism and Leninism.

Mr. MORRIS. It is the theoretical journal of the party?

Mr. HAMILTON. That is right. Now, they carry articles telling the Communists what to do about lecturing people and how to agitate and so forth, but as an example, they recommend the infiltration of all sorts of organizations, including, as I stated a while ago, such everyday things as the parent-teachers association.

I want to refer to the following, and I will show you where they even tried to do that in Louisville. In the Political Affairs, February 1951 issue, the following appears on page 38, and it was taken from a speech of Gus Hall, who was then the national secretary of the Communist Party, and here is what he said:

More, the shop club must concern itself with mass agitation and propaganda which will be brought to workers not only in personal conversations, not only through leaflets, but also through shop papers edited by the clubs, with the necessary guidance of the leading committees of the party.

In addition, the shop clubs must become organizations whose members are concerned not only with answering the immediate political questions—important as this is—but at the same time should undertake to deepen their own theoretical knowledge through reading the Daily Worker, Political Affairs, and the classics of our movement. * * *

* * * Giving emphasis to the primary role of the shop club, does not imply that our community clubs are not of importance. The community club assumes greater importance than ever. Is it not the community club, through its work in PTA, civil, fraternal, church, social, women's and youth organizations, as well as apartment houses, among the various national groups and in Negro communities, that is helping to bring this about?

He went on, he made this statement in speaking of achieving working class hegemony over nonproletarian forces. He went on and made this statement, and this just demonstrates to me at least that they want to agitate.

In addition, we have to develop a political checkup which will include definite assistance to the individual in his work. Political checkup means not only checking whether this or that leaflet was distributed—important as that is—or whether an individual attended a meeting of a particular mass organization. But it must include checking how the individual Communist answers questions that agitate masses.

Now, to demonstrate that this was applied in Louisville, I want to refer to a letter and it is quoted in full in volume 8 of the transcript of evidence in the Braden case at Louisville, and it is dated May 15, 1950, and it was written by Carl Braden, and I will read it in its entirety. There are 1 or 2 paragraphs of particular importance.

It is addressed to "Dear Bill," and we identified him as being a man named Nightingale in West Virginia, as I recall.

I have enclosed a proof of page 2 of the next edition of the FE CUB. Encircled is a story which Bud James has been instrumental in killing because he is afraid that it will have a bad effect in the shop!

There has been quite a battle over this particular issue for more than 2 months. It started when the women's chapter adopted the resolution because it had the courage to act and the intelligence to see how important it is to fight for peace.

James L. Wright, editor of the CUB, wrote a short piece about the women's action. It stressed opposition to the H-bomb. Now it seems that a couple of ACTU stooges in the plant have been talking about the H-bomb. So Bud scared the daylights out of Sterling Neal and a couple of others among the leadership.

He told them they would be spotted as Reds if this item appeared or if FE got active in the fight for peace. He convinced them that the thing to do is stick to day-to-day fights in the shop. The item was killed.

Then, about a month ago, Wright ran a front-page drawing on peace. Nothing happened. Nobody said anything about it. Nobody called anybody a Red. So Wright wrote the item to go in the May 17 CUB. He got approval of Thomas DeLong, who is acting president of the local.

Now, here is where they try to infiltrate the PTA's, or at least admitted they did.

In the meantime, the women had taken their resolution to a lot of PTA's. Some of them were in favor of it but the local governing body of the PTA refused to act. Everybody in the PTA got to talking about peace, which was what the women's chapter wanted to happen. This resulted in a story in the Louisville Times on May 11—That much more reason why the FE paper should have run something. Still Bud kept the local's head in the sand.

Now, I am going to skip three paragraphs which are not important, and I want to read this one:

However, I disagree with him. I think it is my duty to advise you of actions which I deem harmful to our movement. You can pass it on to higher echelons if you agree with that proposition. Best from Anne and me—and that letter is signed by Carl Braden.

Now, also in Lenin's "Left-Wing" book, to which I referred to a while ago, he makes this quotation:

The strictest loyalty to the ideas of communism must be combined with the ability to make all the necessary practical compromises, to maneuver, to make agreements, zigzags, retreats, and so on—to accelerate the inevitable friction, quarrels, conflicts, and complete disintegration among the bourgeoisie—and to select the proper moment when the disintegration among these "pillars of the sacred rights of private property" is at its height, in order by a determined attack of the proletariat to defeat them all and capture political power.

Now, one of the most astounding exhibits which we found in these papers was a letter written to these people from a bunch of Communists in California. It is rather lengthy and I won't read it all, but I will quote one paragraph of it. In this letter addressed to "Dear Anne and Carl," it appeared that it was from these people in California who were organizing a campaign for the 25 persons who were being prosecuted for contempt of the House Un-American Activities Committee—the Hollywood Ten, the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, and as stated in the letter, a couple of other individuals.

Here is what they had the audacity to have in this letter, and I knew Fred Vinson. He was a close friend of my father. I knew there was not anybody that could put any pressure on him. Nevertheless, they were seeking to find out whether or not they could put pressure on the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Carl, we've been trying and trying to figure out some way to put the pressure on Vinson. What do you know about his political ties in Kentucky? Is there anything useful to be picked up around? Would Stanfield maybe have some ideas, since he comes from Louisa, too?

Louisa was Chief Justice Vinson's hometown.

Anything's worth a try, and the Supreme Court decisions of the last couple of weeks have been horrendous, as you know, not just in relation to our cases, but to the Taft-Hartley and wiretapping deals, too. Naturally, if you ask Giles or Stanfield or anybody about Vinson, don't tell 'em why you want to know.

Now, to me, as I said, that demonstrates how far these people would go if they could go. Now, here is another quote——

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Hamilton, do you think activities such as that, Communist activities which those exhibits described, from which you drew your conclusions, do you think that is activity of such a nature that can be best countered by State activity or can it be better handled by the Federal Government?

Mr. HAMILTON. If I can answer your question in this way, sir, I would like to do it. As I understand it, the United States Congress and the FBI through the Attorney General, all sought to have a mutual cooperative affair, and that is in suppressing sedition and so on, and I think that has been made clear, that the Supreme Court ignored that; that is, they put their own interpretation on it.

Now, I would say to you, if I may, that I think where you have these local situations popping up from time to time, that it is a situation that calls for the cooperation of everybody. Now, as an example, I have a nephew; he is about 23 or 24 now, he spent 18 months in Korea in active service, and to be honest about it, I don't know why we should expect our young men, or old ones for that matter, to go to Korea and other places throughout the world in the Army, Navy, and Air Force and fight for them and risk their lives, and yet local law-enforcement officers such as myself are expected to stand by, with our hands tied. That is the best way I can answer it.

Now, to get back to this proposition about blowing up this house in Louisville, as an example of whether it was communistic or whatnot, I want to refer——

Mr. MORRIS. Bear with me a minute, Mr. Hamilton; can I see if we can relate your last answer to this? Is it contended in the Braden case that Communist agitators blew up the house in order to create an incident?

Mr. HAMILTON. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you think that particular crime—and if that is the case, obviously it is a crime—could best be prosecuted by the State, or should the prosecution be left up to the Federal Government?

Mr. HAMILTON. I would say in that instance, best by the State.

Mr. MORRIS. Why is that?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, mainly because of the local nature of it and the numerical instances and such as that. I mean, you can't have the United States attorney or the FBI prosecuting every riot and rout and explosion that might be caused by a Communist.

Mr. MORRIS. You say, do you not, Mr. Hamilton, that your own court of appeals here held that, inasmuch as one of the ingredients of that crime was the Communist motivation, that the State was prohibited from inquiring into the Communist motivation and, therefore, you could not prosecute the crime?

Mr. HAMILTON. Not the court of appeals, but the judge of the circuit court did, yes, sir; the judge of the circuit court, wherein the case was pending.

Senator JENNER. Proceed.

Mr. HAMILTON. Nevertheless now, in the Political Affairs, May 1950 issue, and I might say that all of these exhibits I am referring to, that I am quoting from, were found in the possession of these people, and I say that in general they have multiple copies of the same book or magazine.

Now, a few words—and this is a quote:

> Now a few words about Negro bourgeois nationalism. Have we had any expression of bourgeois nationalism in the party? The majority of our Negro comrades have played an outstanding role in the struggle against white chauvinism in bringing to the party's attention many concrete examples of white chauvinism, both in individual acts and expressions, and in the work of certain party organizations and committees. This role of our Negro comrades must be encouraged. At the same time we must bring about a situation where our white comrades become the ones who are most conscious and active in the struggle against white chauvinism and assume leadership therein. Only in this way will our struggle be effective.

Now, we have run across letters that play up—or at least try to—to the colored people and miners and so on, and yet we found letters where they referred between themselves to the miners as hillbillies, and to the Negroes as niggers, and all that sort of thing; and I have a quote here somewhere, where, in Russia, as an example, that Lenin and Stalin and so on, said they would use the peasants if they could, and that they would try to help the peasants in certain respects, but only if what they did helped the Communist movement in Russia. So that I would say they are not sincere in trying to help anybody, for that matter.

Now, another interesting sideline that we ran across in some letters and papers—and incidentally Belknap's Hardware Store in Louisville is one of the largest in the city, and we found—and I have photostatic copies of the letters here for that matter—where one of these persons sought employment at Belknap's, using her maiden name, and she wrote to three acquaintances down in the South here and told them that she had applied for a job at Belknap's under her maiden name; that if they received inquiry as to her ability and what not, and education, to give her a good sendoff.

Now, this particular party had a college education; yet she applied, as the letter discloses, for an unskilled position at Belknap's, and if you read the letter, it is inescapable, of course, that what the job was for was to agitate, and it turned out that that didn't work out; she did get the job, but it fell through in a month or two. She couldn't make any headway, but, as I say, that particular person had a college education and she had applied for an unskilled job, and wrote to 3 or 4 of her friends in the South, saying they would probably get a letter from Belknap's as to her background, and to be certain and not tell them about her having a college education, but, other than that, to give her a good buildup.

Now, another thing that we ran into in the case in Louisville—it grew out of an organization up there in New York City—an outfit calling itself the Religious Freedom Committee, filed an amicus curiae brief on behalf of Carl Braden in the court of appeals and said that the Commonwealth was depriving him of his religious freedom. I have never followed the argument and I don't think anybody else did, but nevertheless it demonstrates that they will infiltrate, and try to, if they can, the church or inject religion into something where they know there is no religion, and the best way I can point out that there is no religion in communism is by quoting from Twilight of World Capitalism, a book written by William Z. Foster, the head of the Communist Party in this country, where he said on page 101—I might say we found multiple copies of Twilight of World Capitalism among the possessions of these Communists. They devote, actually as I recall, actually about a chapter of 25 pages, Foster does in that book, attacking religion and referring to what he said about Cardinal Mindszenty and so on. Nevertheless, to sum it up in a nutshell, Foster said that—

> Communism is based upon the profoundest realism, there is nothing whatever metaphysical about it. It is the most down to earth of all political movements. There is no God of any kind anywhere in the Communist cosmos.

Now, the reason I point that out is, as I said, this outfit in New York had the audacity to file a brief in the Kentucky Court of Appeals saying that we had trampled upon Braden's religious freedom, where, as I say, and it is demonstrated by Foster, and all other Communists, that there is no such thing as religion in the Communist world.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you have an atomic energy plant in Paducah?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Has that been a subject of any Communist activity at all?

Mr. HAMILTON. In my opinion, it has. It was never checked out too thoroughly, but as an example, I have here 1, 2, 3, 4 photostatic copies of letters—we have the originals of them—written on the letterhead of the Communist Party of the United States.

As an example, the first one I see is dated November 21, 1947. They actually started building defense plants at Paducah, as I recall, about the beginning of the Second World War, and then later on they did undertake, and they have constructed the atomic powerplant at Paducah.

During a period of about 18 months, they had 150 strikes at the atomic powerplant during the construction of it, at the atomic powerplant at Paducah.

Now, just let me read this No. 1 letter here to you, and I never heard of any other agitation in Paducah; there may have been some, but if there was I never heard of it, or there being agitation among labor or any other source at Paducah, other than what occurred in the atomic powerplant.

Now, this is addressed to I. O. Ford, 511 Washington Street, Paducah, Ky., and I might say he lived there at that time; he subsequently moved to Louisville.

Mr. MORRIS. What is his name?

Mr. HAMILTON. Ford, F-o-r-d.

Mr. MORRIS. Ford?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right; he now lives in California, but nevertheless it is addressed to—

DEAR COMRADE FORD: Johnny showed me your letter and I am replying to it briefly on behalf of both of us and others here.

We are glad to hear that you are constantly carrying on the agitational campaign but I trust that you are taking good care of your health and that you will be back in circulation soon.

With best wishes,

Comradely,

ARNOLD JOHNSON.

Then we have another one; now, that is, as I say, the Communist Party, United States of America, that letterhead; then we have another one, dated January 28, 1946:

To Whom It May Concern:

This will introduce Comrade I. O. Ford of Kentucky who will undertake to reestablish the party organization in Kentucky.

We will greatly appreciate your giving him your fullest cooperation in this task.

Comradely yours,

CHARLES KRUMBEIN.

That is likewise on the Communist Party, United States of America, letterhead.

Mr. MORRIS. Does anything indicate that Mr. Ford was actually working at the atomic powerplant in Paducah, I mean, in and about it, agitating?

Mr. HAMILTON. The only thing I can tell, I have an affidavit from a newspaper reporter at Paducah who said that Ford tried to convert him to communism, but he would not fall for it. We have that affidavit. As far as I know, I wouldn't think Ford had any employment at the powerplant.

Mr. MORRIS. What is your evidence that the atomic powerplant at Paducah was the subject of his activities?

Mr. HAMILTON. I draw that conclusion mainly because I don't know of any other thing that was being agitated at Paducah at any time.

Mr. MORRIS. He was in Paducah himself?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. He lived there?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. His activity was there?

Mr. HAMILTON. He lived there and he moved to Louisville in about 1952 or 1953, I am not certain offhand.

Mr. MORRIS. What else is in Paducah, industrially?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, as I recall, at the beginning of the Second World War, they built other defense plants of various and sundry natures, but primarily the atomic power plant is located in Paducah, and I say to you it is most unusual to have 150 strikes in a period of 18 months at any 1 plant.

Now, if I can read this one photostat—as I say, we have the original; that is on the Communist Party letterhead, too. It is dated January 28, 1945, to—

ELMER JOHNSON,
401 Board of Trade Building,
Indianapolis, Ind.

DEAR COMRADE JOHNSON: Comrade I. O. Ford of Kentucky is delivering this letter to you in person. (He has a letter of introduction from me that he will show you.)

Comrade Ford has volunteered, and we have accepted, to see what can be done to reestablish a party organization in Louisville. He lives about 200 miles from Louisville but, being on vacation, he will be able to spend a few weeks on the above task.

Please give him all connections you have in Louisville—names, addresses, or places where comrades can be found, as well as necessary registration supplies, such as registration cards, party books, stamps, both for 1945 for back dues as well as 1946, and all other necessary material. You are the best judge of the amount to give him.

As regards future connections for Louisville, we suggest they continue to be connected with Indianapolis, if only a mail connection, so that they will at least receive the general communications and other general material we send out. Should you want us to mail to them directly such general materials as we send to all districts, let us know and we shall do so. We of course would need an address, since we have none.

The above is the only way we see of handling this situation. We are not in a position to send anyone in there at present, so please give Comrade Ford all the assistance you can and also after he establishes some degree of organization there, assisted at least to the degree above mentioned.

Comradely yours,

CHARLES KRUMBEIN.

And Charles Krumbein, according to the letterhead, was treasurer of the Communist Party of the United States at that time.

Now, I have another photostat of a couple of letters here written by a Communist in California to I. O. Ford, in Louisville, dated October 1, 1954. One is by a woman; this is just part of it.

I am terribly sorry because you had all that material and data which they confiscated and are able to frame people, other than yourself and your friend, Mr. Brown. What could you do when they barged into your room?

And so on.

Then, there is another letter written apparently by the same person, with no date on it, but addressed to Ford and received among his possessions.

DEAR UNCLE FORD: I have not seen the paper, but I am informed you have hit the front page and most certainly, congratulations are in order. I really think that was something. Wish I had been there to see you.

Now, we have found a clipping of a newspaper article appearing in the Louisville Courier-Journal with Ford's picture on it on the front page, where they staged some sort of a movie at Hancock and Walling Street, there in Louisville during the Korean war; that was a predominantly colored neighborhood, and they blocked traffic and so on and had almost a riot up there, and I assume that is what she was referring to when she was congratulating him upon the agitation.

Now, I could go on for a week talking about this thing. I am not going to, but I would like to mention briefly about this explosion in Louisville.

The Bradens bought this house, as I recall, and I may be off a day or two, on or about May 10; it was a prearranged thing, and a day or two later they transferred it to the Wades, and the house was located at Rone Court, a suburb of Louisville, a neighborhood where only white people had been living, and so on.

So, a couple of days later, he transferred it to the Wades, and then before the thing even was consummated, they sought police protection, and the chief of the county police would not give it to them on the idea that there had been nothing brought to his attention to cause him to think that there would be any trouble and so on; and then it developed according to our information and the testimony, that that house was armed. I would say it probably contained 18 or 20 firearms, made up of power rifles, shotguns, and pistols, and they admitted it was for the purpose of defending it.

So, a short time thereafter, a white man came, by the name of Vernon Bown or Boun, who had never known the Wades before.

He went out and volunteered his services to act as guard, and we found letters and other documents that would indicate that Bown had been a Communist, and it turned out, according to our information, that most of the people that hung around there were Communists.

So the house was blown up by dynamite, and underneath it there was found a portable type radio that belonged to Bown; yet, before the grand jury, Bown was asked, as an example, whether or not he had ever been underneath the house and he refused to answer on the ground that it would incriminate him, and he refused to answer on the same ground on whether or not he had taken the radio under there, and so on.

Now, he was a truckdriver, and it developed that the explosion took place at 12:30 on this particular night, and Bown had gone to Milwaukee, Wis., that afternoon to have a date, he said, with a girl whom he had met once before in his life about a year before; he went up there and stayed a few hours in Milwaukee and then came to Louisville.

So, according to evidence that I will refer to in a minute, we have been told that Bown was the man who more or less engineered this explosion, whether it was set off by a radio station going off the air, or somebody pulling a string, I don't know, but nevertheless, he was to take his vacation about 6 weeks later, which he did, and he went to Wisconsin at that time. That was 6 weeks after that, and spent a couple of weeks up there. On that occasion, he went up and spent 1 night. As I said, he went to a wedding with a girl whom he had only met once before in his life, and he would not answer what we thought were pertinent questions on the ground they would incriminate him.

There were two theories when we looked into this thing; one, that the white people out there wanted to chase the colored people out; the other was that it was Communist inspired.

The white people who lived in that neighborhood readily submitted to lie detector tests, and I have the reports with me from the operator who gave them, and each one without exception passed his test just as clear as he could.

On the other hand, Bown refused to take a lie-detector test, and I asked him 2 or 3 times if he would, and not only personally, but through his lawyers, and he refused to do it.

Now, the people on the other side whom we thought might have had something to do with it, they readily took them; they did not claim their privilege in any wise before the grand jury. I asked them for example, if they bought dynamite; without hesitation they said "No." I asked them if they belonged to the Ku Klux Klan; without hesitation they said "No," but when it came down to the people who were Communists or who we thought were Communists, then they are the ones who started hollering about a witch hunt and claimed their privilege on the ground it might incriminate them.

Mr. MORRIS. The point is that under the existing conditions now, the Supreme Court decisions, you are precluded from inquiring along those lines; are you not?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right, and I will say we were hit another mortal blow as far as Kentucky was concerned, when two of these people, including Mr. Braden, who the grand jury—as late as this past September—wanted to consider evidence pertaining to perjury, and actually before that time, last fall as I recall, we had one witness in before the grand jury who we understood had been a member of the party, and I brought the opinion of the court of appeals with me, and just to show you how hamstrung we are, this more or less turns around the fifth amendment, and section 11 of the Constitution, but just let me, if I may, refer to these two questions and answers. There are no answers, but what the court of appeals said.

Q. Mr. Rhine, regardless of whether or not you are a Communist, I am not interested in that, but do you know whether or not Carl Braden is a Communist?

A. Same answer, I refuse to answer on the ground that anything I may say may tend to incriminate me.

Q. Did you ever attend a Communist Party meeting at Carl Braden's house, without asking or wanting to know what effect such attendance might have had on you, if any effect, but in view of that, did you ever attend any meeting at Carl Braden's house relative to communism, or where a cell meeting was being held?

A. I refuse to answer, and that is my answer.

So, we then certified those questions to the court of appeals; the circuit court in Louisville upheld his right not to answer, and we certified them to the court of appeals on the premise that since the Supreme Court had held we could not prosecute any of these Communists locally, but the fifth amendment did not apply, and section 11 did not apply because they were not subject to a prosecution in the State courts; I assume that you all know that the Supreme Court has held in 2 or 3 income-tax evasion cases in the State courts that the fifth amendment does not apply to State prosecution, but nevertheless, the court of appeals upheld his refusal to answer, and made this statement:

There is no doubt that the information quoted by the Commonwealth attorney could have provided some evidence for a Federal prosecution under the Smith Act or other related Federal statutes. As to the determination of the evidentiary value of the information by a trial judge, we are inclined to follow the reasoning of the court of appeals—and they quote it—

in determining whether a witness really apprehends danger in answering a question, the judge cannot permit himself to be skeptical. Rather, must he be acutely aware that in the deviousness of crime and its detection, accrimination may be approached, and served, by obscure and likely lines of inquiry.

So, we are in a position now, that we can't even prosecute 2 or 3 of these people for perjury.

Now, I have an affidavit here from a fellow who said in substance that I. O. Ford had told him about this explosion being planned, and who planned it and how it was done, and about Bown coming up with this alibi, and so on, but I won't bore you with that, but I want to make an observation that my father was a United States circuit judge at Cincinnati, he was also a United States district judge at Louisville, and I think I am cognizant of what judges are faced with, I mean the problems, but I must say that as a local law-enforcement officer, our hands are tied as far as this sort of protection is concerned, and I am sure that the Supreme Court perhaps followed rules of judicial interpretation in deciding the Nelson case the way they did, but nevertheless, it seems to me that unless the United States Congress would come out and say pointblank that the States are not to have anything to do with it, then certainly there ought to be legislation passed where a State can control this sort of thing.

If there are any questions you want to ask me, I will be glad to try to answer them.

Senator JENNER. Any questions?

Mr. SOURWINE. Sir, you have in your official capacity investigated Communist activity in your particular area?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Have you investigated Communist activity in your area of the country?

Mr. HAMILTON. As an outgrowth of this case, is how I happened to become involved in it; yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. As a result of this case, or as an outgrowth of that case, you have done considerable investigation of Communist activity in your section of the country?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Have you reached a conclusion with respect to whether such activity still goes on?

Mr. HAMILTON. There is no doubt in my mind but what it does; yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Now, you have testified here that the State is powerless to do anything about it?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right.

Mr. SOURWINE. Do you know what power the Federal Government has, to do anything about this particular activity?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, as I recall, last June the Supreme Court practically eliminated even the Federal authorities from such prosecution. I might say, I have a letter probably in my brief case, or a photostatic copy of a letter written by Carl and Anne Braden, Carl Braden having been the one who was convicted and given 15 years and a $5,000 fine, and he was subsequently released after the Nelson case was decided. They are circulating a letter now saying that they are the representatives of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, I believe is the right title of it.

Mr. SOURWINE. All of these documents that you have read and are reading here are being made available to the committee for the files of the committee; is that correct?

Mr. HAMILTON. I can furnish you photostatic copies of everything I referred to, yes, sir; perhaps the originals in some instances. Most of them are in Frankfort, filed there as a part of the appeal in the Braden case.

Let me just make this one more observation if I can. We had a Progressive Party organization there in Louisville, and Carl Braden was the head of it and prepared the bylaws and articles of incorporation and that sort of thing, and it was testified in his trial that he had prepared the news releases and that sort of thing.

Now, to demonstrate just how he was agitating at that time, back in the late forties, I want to refer to page 11 of the brief filed in Braden v. Commonwealth in the court of appeals, and I submit that any American, I don't care whether it is in this courtroom or somewhere else, knows that the statement made by him was not true, and was only done to try to agitate.

It says:

> The Democratic and Republican Parties and their members—

the resolution said—> stand for the war program and high taxes. The Progressive Party declares that these issues should be given a hearing—and then he goes on down there and lists several of them.

Now, down in No. 6—well, start out with No. 5:

> The disgraceful infringement on the rights of 50 million Americans, the Negro people. (6) How concentration camps are now being built in America, under the Korean Act, against those who dissent with the party in power.

Now, I dissent, myself, with the Republican Party; I am a Democrat, and yet I don't know of any concentration camp that I am likely to be sent to, and yet I say that is another concrete example of agitation, and this I might say is a photostatic copy of exhibits, a table of exhibits that were filed in the court of appeals, and I am sure there are a dozen large cardboard boxes there. One more thing, in the boxes that are forwarded, we had seized this book among a lot of other material, as to the Communist Party of the United States, and it came to him as a gift, and he said:

> This book came as a Xmas gift from two young friends who have seen the future and know the reasons and are aiding its birth in the United States.

Now, a note was found with it, apparently a note of transmittal, December 25, 1952, and it says:

> For a good and true comrade to whom much of this book will be a recapitulation of your own contribution toward a better America. Louise and LaRue—and that is the history of the Communist Party of the United States, and on page 285 of that book, there is a title in here that says, "Penetration of the South," and if I could just read a few lines, since we are in the South, I would like to do it. Foster said in here on page 285—

> One of the greatest achievements of the Communist Party during the great economic crisis was its penetration of the South. During the Coolidge years, the party had carried on considerable work in the South, the building of scattered branches, the Foster election tours in 1924 and 1928 and so on, but our real work there began when on August 30, 1930, we established the Southern Worker at Chattanooga, Tenn., with James S. Allen as editor. Conditions in the South at the time were shocking—and so on, and then he refers to the KKK, the Blue Shirts, the Silver Shirts, Black Shirts, Crusaders, the White Legion, and others.

So I say, it is a subject that, after going through the trial in Louisville I could talk about for a month, and I expect I have taken too much of your time anyway.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Hamilton, the sad thing is there is nothing you can do about it today as a State and local official because of the Supreme Court decision; is that right?

Mr. HAMILTON. That's right.

Senator JENNER. And that is where we find ourselves today?

Mr. HAMILTON. That's right.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Hamilton, you have quite a few exhibits there?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. What specifically are those exhibits?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, the ones I brought with me——

Mr. MORRIS. You have got them there in one folder?

Mr. HAMILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Will you tell us precisely what that folder is?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, as an example, this exhibit——

Mr. MORRIS. No; I am preparing to introduce them into the record. I would like you to identify them.

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, the first one that is here contains——

Mr. MORRIS. I mean without dealing with the individual cases, what is that folder that you have there? I would like to offer that in the record. I would like to offer that if you identify them.

Mr. HAMILTON. The folder contains some of my notes that I just brought to refresh my memory. The exhibits——

Senator JENNER. The exhibits you have read from are what exhibits? How would you identify them?

Mr. HAMILTON. Well, the first one is addressed "Dear Anne and Carl," and it contains the paragraph concerning——

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Hamilton, we are not asking you what is in the particular exhibits, but now that you have testified about these particular exhibits, I would like you to tell us what they are, so that I might offer them to Senator Jenner to be inserted into the public record.

Mr. HAMILTON. They were copies of exhibits found in the search of the Communists in Louisville.

Mr. MORRIS. Were they used at the trial?

Mr. HAMILTON. They were used at the trial; yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, I would like to offer those in this record.

Senator JENNER. They may go into the record and become part of the official record of this committee hearing by reference.

(The folder referred to above was marked "Exhibit 1M" and was placed in the subcommittee's file.)

Mr. MORRIS. You had as a witness at the trial one Alberta Ahearn?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right.

Mr. MORRIS. What did Alberta Ahearn testify to at the trial?

Mr. HAMILTON. She testified that she was in the F. B. I. and an undercover agent and that she was a member of certain cells, of Communists, in Louisville.

Mr. MORRIS. Her testimony was restricted to activity of Carl Braden; was it not?

Mr. HAMILTON. Carl Braden and others.

Mr. MORRIS. Even though the others were not parties to the action?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right.

Mr. MORRIS. To the extent of the testimony she put into the record at such trial of Carl Braden, that is available to the subcommittee?

Mr. HAMILTON. Right.

Mr. MORRIS. Was there anything else she experienced as an undercover agent and informant for the FBI that you think would be helpful to the Senate of the United States?

Mr. HAMILTON. She could give you firsthand, or for the public or for the record, however you want to put it, an account of how they operated.

Mr. MORRIS. I mean, we have subpenaed Alberta Ahearn to be here; does she know more about the workings of the Communist Party than she testified to at the trial of Carl Braden?

Mr. HAMILTON. That I am not certain of.

Senator JENNER. She has been subpenaed, hasn't she?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. Anything more?

Mr. MORRIS. No, sir.

Senator JENNER. Thank you, Mr. Hamilton, for being up here to make your contribution to this cause.

Mr. MORRIS. There is one other witness this morning, and the question of committee policy. He has been, according to our evidence, the secretary-treasurer of the Communist Party of Memphis, and we have subpenaed him in order that he might tell us everything he did, about the extent of the Communist Party activity here in Memphis.

He appeared here, as you know, and stated even though he was served last Wednesday, he has not gotten an attorney. Let the record show that Senator Jenner has given him another 24 hours in which to retain counsel and to return tomorrow morning to testify.

Senator JENNER. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. I have two other witnesses here prepared to testify now in executive session.

Senator JENNER. At this time the committee will stand recessed until 2 o'clock, when we will resume the open hearing, and the committee at this time will go into executive session.

(Whereupon, at 12:05 p. m., the subcommittee recessed to proceed in executive session.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The subcommittee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 2:10 p. m., in the Federal courtroom, Federal Building, Senator William E. Jenner presiding.

Also present: Robert Morris, chief counsel; J. G. Sourwine, associate counsel; Benjamin Mandel, research director; and Frank Schroeder, chief investigator.

Senator JENNER. Will the meeting come to order?

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to report to you for the public record today some of the difficulties, administrative difficulties, the subcommittee has been experiencing. We had altogether 30 cases, 30 individual witnesses, who, as evidence and information indicated, were members of the Communist Party in this particular area and its environs, Memphis as the hub, several hundred miles around. At least 30 particular cases came to our attention. We decided, Senator, to call 25 of these witnesses and to make the subpenas returnable today or tomorrow. Ordinarily, under those circumstances, we can expect 70 or 80 percent of the people subpenaed to be present. Now, we had an unusually high percentage of people come in and refuse to testify, for a variety of reasons. There has been one woman who was of particular interest to the subcommittee, Senator, because she is one of the most important Communist Party functionaries—at least, she is the one who pulls the pins around in this particular area in connection with Communist Party activities—has given us the excuse about having a baby within the last few months, and she herself has several other domestic difficulties, and it is very difficult to turn down such a request to be deferred.

Then, Senator, another woman sent us a telegram that she is under a doctor's care and cannot testify. The subcommittee's information is that she was active in the Communist Party in this area. The man who was secretary-treasurer of the Communist Party in Memphis, even though he was served last Wednesday, has now told us he would not be able to testify because he has not as yet obtained an attorney to represent him. As you know, Senator, we have given him another 24 hours in which to obtain the services of an attorney.

Now, there was one other witness, Mrs. Lorch, whom the subcommittee felt was competent to testify about Communist activities, in view of her experiences the last 5 or 6 years. She has come here to testify. And I think, Mr. Schroeder, that there was delay in subpenaing her. Is that correct?

Mr. SCHROEDER. That is correct. I think she said she did not receive the subpena until Saturday.

Mr. MORRIS. However, Mr. Schroeder, I wish you—these delays in serving subpenas have been claimed in here. I wish you would tell us what your activities were on that.

Senator JENNER. Do you want Mr. Schroeder to be sworn?

Mr. MORRIS. Would you, please?

Senator JENNER. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. SCHROEDER. I do.

Senator JENNER. Proceed, Mr. Morris.

You may sit down.

TESTIMONY OF FRANK SCHROEDER, CHIEF INVESTIGATOR OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Schroeder, we gave you the names of 30 witnesses who, as evidence and information indicated, had been members of the Communist Party and would be competent witnesses to testify about Communist activities in this area, at what time?

Mr. SCHROEDER. Monday.

Mr. MORRIS. No; you left Monday.

Mr. SCHROEDER. Oh; a week ago Tuesday.

Mr. MORRIS. Two weeks tomorrow?

Mr. SCHROEDER. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. And you made preparations to come down and serve the subpenas at that time, is that right?

Mr. SCHROEDER. I did, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. And you took the subpenas with you from Washington on what day, Mr. Schroeder?

Mr. SCHROEDER. A week ago today.

Mr. MORRIS. A week ago today. And have you sent them to the cities where were the people to be subpenaed?

Mr. SCHROEDER. I did, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. And you gave to the marshals all the subpenas in your possession by Wednesday of that week?

Mr. SCHROEDER. I did, sir; and other subpenas were given to the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate.

Mr. MORRIS. That was all prior to the date of leaving last Monday?

Mr. SCHROEDER. Yes, sir, for those that were out in Georgia, and Missouri, and Ohio.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, one of the witnesses, who, I was saying, is Mrs. Lorch, her subpena was served at what time?

Senator JENNER. Well, just a moment. For the record, I think I can answer that question, or Mr. Schroeder can—either one.

(Witness excused.)

Senator JENNER. I did not know Mrs. Lorch, and did not know she was under subpena until the recess here after the morning session. I came by this table, I heard a discussion, and apparently it was Mrs. Lorch. She contended she was not served with subpena until Saturday. She lives, I believe, at Little Rock, Ark. So I told Mrs. Lorch that we would give her a continuance of 24 hours to obtain counsel. She said she hadn't had an opportunity to talk to anybody or to obtain counsel.

As you know, it is the policy of this committee—we can't tell when the marshal can serve the subpena—but it has always been the policy of this committee to give time to obtain counsel—will always give time—and I have told Mrs. Lorch that, since she told me on adjournment at noon that she had been served last Saturday, since that is a short term before testifying Monday morning, I gave her a continuance.

But I want to tell the witnesses who are in this area that we have a duty to perform, and we are going to have this testimony. And we will have it here in Memphis. If we don't have it here in Memphis, we will have it at Wasington, D. C. And we are going to get it.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, the reason that— Mr. and Mrs. Lorch are both competent witnesses in this, but the committee is not trying to call Mr. Lorch instead of Mrs. Lorch, as we very often do where we have a husband and wife combination—the reason we haven't called Mr. Lorch down Mr. Sourwine will explain.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Morris, Mr. Lorch is a defendant in a criminal case in Ohio, which was tried the 4th and 5th of April, without a jury, submitted to the judge on briefs, and the case still is sub judice—that is, is pending for decision. And for that reason it was felt it might in some way prejudice his case as a defendant if he were called as a witness while his case is sub judice.

Senator JENNER. I believe, so far as the Lorch woman is concerned, our information covers her activities the last 4 or 5 years in this area?

Mr. MORRIS. That is correct.

Senator, we are prepared to take the testimony of three witnesses.

Senator JENNER. All right, call the first witness.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. West, will you be sworn to testify?

Senator JENNER. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. WEST. I do.

Senator JENNER. You may be seated.

TESTIMONY OF DONALD L. WEST

Senator JENNER. Will you give your name and address, please?

Mr. WEST. Donald L. West.

Senator JENNER. Where do you live?

Mr. WEST. Douglasville, Ga., rural free delivery 4.

Senator JENNER. What is your business or profession?

Mr. WEST. Farming.

Senator JENNER. All right, you may proceed, Mr. Morris.

Mr. MORRIS. Where were you born, Mr. West?

Mr. WEST. Born in Gilmer County, Ga., near Ellijay, Ga.

Mr. MORRIS. Gilmer County?

Mr. WEST. Near Ellijay, Ga.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. I want you to tell the committee very briefly your educational background, will you, please?

Mr. WEST. Well, part of my high school—I went to grade school out at Rome, Ga., worked my way, and from there I worked in a little college in Tennessee, as part—worked my way through the university, Lincoln Memorial School.

Mr. MORRIS. What school?

Mr. WEST. Lincoln Memorial. And from there I went to Vanderbilt University, received a bachelor of divinity degree. And have done advanced study at various educational institutions around about the country.

Mr. MORRIS. And what is your business or profession at this time?

Mr. WEST. I just said, sir, that it was farming. I am trying to run a farm on the Chattahoochee River; in other words, out of Atlanta.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you been in charge of the Communist Party in Atlanta, Ga.?

Mr. WEST. Sir, I would like to say at the beginning that on any questions relative to my past political associations or affiliation, or religious beliefs or political, I will have to respectfully claim the rights of the fifth amendment of our Constitution. I might say further that I am not a member of any political organization. I am only working only on the matter of running a farm, trying to make a living thereby.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, were you a member of the Communist Party 3 days ago?

Mr. WEST. I would have to claim the fifth amendment on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you a member of the Communist Party this morning when you first came into this courtroom?

Mr. WEST. I am sorry, sir, I will have to take the fifth amendment on all such questions.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you a Communist now?

Mr. WEST. I have just said voluntarily that I was not a member of any political organization, including the Communist Party.

Mr. MORRIS. As of this afternoon session?

Mr. WEST. True, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. As of this afternoon session, 20 minutes after 2 o'clock in the evening, October 28?

Mr. WEST. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. At 12:30 this morning, October 28, were you a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. WEST. I have already said, sir, I would have to claim the fifth on all questions regarding my past associations or affiliations.

Mr. MORRIS. On February 15, 1956, did you make a trip to New York City and there visit certain Communist Party functionaries at Communist Party headquarters?

Mr. WEST. I would claim the fifth amendment, sir, on that.

Mr. MORRIS. You have been a contributor to the Communist publication, Masses and Main Stream, have you not?

Mr. WEST. I will claim the fifth amendment on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. In fact, the editor of Masses and Main Stream, Mr. Samuel Sillen, has been an intimate friend of yours, has he not?

Mr. WEST. As I have previously said, sir, I would have to claim the fifth on past associates or affiliations, and claim it now.

Mr. MORRIS. Did he not come from New York and visit in your home at Christmastime in 1954?

Mr. WEST. I take the fifth on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, your wife is Jeannette West?

Mr. WEST. I would take the fifth on that.

Mr. MORRIS. Was she formerly a correspondent in Moscow of the Daily Worker?

Mr. WEST. I would take the fifth on that.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you have a sister, Belle, B-e-l-l-e?

Mr. WEST. I would have to claim the fifth on that.

Mr. MORRIS. To your direct knowledge, has she been a Communist Party organizer in this particular area?

Mr. WEST. I take the same position, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you been the editor of the publication called the Southerner?

Mr. WEST. I would take the fifth on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. All right.

Senator JENNER. Mr. West——

Mr. WEST. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. Do you honestly believe the truthful answer to questions propounded to you by Mr. Morris concerning your wife and your sister would tend to incriminate you?

Mr. WEST. I would take the fifth on that, sir—have to.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Chairman, in view of the responses of the witness, I would rather not prolong this too much. But Mr. Mandel has compiled a long series of exhibits—we of course have enough evidence and information, the sum total of which is that he, this witness today, has been one of the more prominent Communist organizers in the South over a period of years.

I wonder if, Mr. Chairman, subject to more questions by Mr. Sourwine and yourself—I would like to offer this for the record.

Senator JENNER. They may go in the record and become part of the record.

(The material above referred to was marked "Exhibit 2–M" and reads as follows:)

EXHIBIT 2M

DON WEST

"Don West, Louisville, Ky.: This man, fomerly in charge of Atlanta, Ga., for Communist Party, is a preacher and a graduate of Vanderbilt University. He sneaked out of Atlanta on a truck, under a load of gunnysacks, when Assistant Solicitor General Hutson swore out warrants for his arrest. After a short period in New York City, he was sent to Kentucky and there made organizer.

"It has been reported on numerous occasions that he was a part-time employee of the Textile Workers Union, a CIO affiliate and at the same time was district organizer of district No. 23, Communist Party." (Part of the records introduced by Mr. John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L., before the House Un-American Activities Committee on August 13, 1938; p. 129, vol. 1, Investigation of Un-American Propaganda Activities before the House Un-American Activities Committee, August 1938).

Contributing editor, The Negro Liberator (p. 625, vol. 1, ibid.)

Affiliated with the People's Institute of Applied Religion (p. 139, testimony of Walter Steele before the House Un-American Activities Committee, July 21, 1947). People's Institute of Applied Religion has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General in letters to the Loyalty Review Board dated June 1, 1948 and September 21, 1948.

"Mr. MANDEL. (Did you ever meet) Don West?

"Mr. CROUCH. I knew him very well, for many years, as Don West and as Jim Weaver. He was district director of the Communist Party of North Carolina while I was district organizer in the fall of 1934 or early 1935. He then left the Carolinas and went to Kentucky as district organizer of the Communist Party through most of 1935, and then was released from that post and returned to the South, where he has spent most of his time as a writer. The latest news I had was that he was a professor at Oglethorpe University in Georgia and recently published a book of poems" (testimony of Paul Crouch before the House Un-American Activities Committee, p. 191, May 6, 1949).

One of the organizers of the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn. (p. 193, ibid.).

"Mr. RUSSELL. Will you tell the committee what you know about Don West?

"Mr. CROUCH. Yes. I first met Don West in North Carolina in July or August 1934 when he was sent by the central committee to act as central director. He acted in that capacity 1 year, using the name Jim Weaver. During this time he headed the Burlington defense committee. He was released from North Carolina to go to Kentucky as district organizer of the Communist Party. After leaving Kentucky he went to his old home in Georgia, where he engaged in literary pursuits for some time, and I understand at present he is a professor at Oglethorpe University, and the author of a recently published book of poems. He is a brother-in-law of Nat Ross, southern representative of the central committee of the Communist Party, and a brother-in-law of Bart Logan, a former district organizer in North Carolina; and a sister of Don West, Jeannette Weaver, has been Daily Worker correspondent at Moscow over a number of years" (p. 209, ibid.).

"Mr. TAVENNER. (What do you know about) Don West, of Bethel, Ohio?

"Mrs. EDMISTON (former member of the Communist Party). He was a minister; of what religion I don't know. He was also a Boy Scout leader at Bethel, Ohio. He was identified as a Communist Party member and an active member of the American Peace Mobilization.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How did you know he was a member of the Communist Party?

"Mrs. EDMISTON. He was identified to us by Steve Grattan, secretary of the Communist Party at Columbus (p. 2716, testimony of Martha Nichols Edmiston, House Un-American Activities Committee hearings regarding Communist activities in the Cincinnati, Ohio, area, pt. 1, July and August 1950) (on p. 2726, ibid., Mrs. Edmiston identifies West as being minus one finger on one of his hands).

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Morris, I have two questions not in the area where the witness said he would have to claim the fifth amendment. Maybe we can get answers.

Senator JENNER. All right, proceed.

Mr. SOURWINE. When were you last in Knoxville?

Mr. WEST. Sir, I could not remember when I was last in Knoxville.

Mr. SOURWINE. You have been in Knoxville this year?

Mr. WEST. Not that I recall, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. On March 17 of this year?

Mr. WEST. I don't remember that.

Mr. SOURWINE. Do you know Helen Parsons?

Mr. WEST. I would have to claim the fifth amendment, sir, as to all my past associations and acquaintances.

Mr. SOURWINE. Do you know whether Helen Parsons lives in Knoxville?

Mr. WEST. I do not, sir. I could not say truthfully that I do know.

Mr. SOURWINE. I want to refresh your memory and give you an opportunity to correct the previous answer. Isn't it true that on March 17, 1957, you visited Helen Parsons' home at Knoxville?

Mr. WEST. I would have to claim the fifth on that, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Now, we will go back to the prior question when I asked you whether you were there in March of this year. Do you want to change your prior answer?

Mr. WEST. I said, sir, that I could not recall, and I would have to take the fifth amendment on any questions——

Mr. SOURWINE. You now take the fifth amendment on that?

Mr. WEST. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. I think you previously stated, Mr. West—however, the record will speak correctly—that you could not recall?

Mr. WEST. That is true.

Senator JENNER. Now, do you recall, or do you take the fifth amendment?

Mr. WEST. I take the fifth, sir, upon the question.

Senator JENNER. That is all, then.

Mr. MORRIS. Sir, I have one more question I would like to ask you. I would like to offer——

Mr. Barber, will you offer this piece of paper to the witness?

I wonder if you will read that for us, Mr. West. Begin reading, so that you will be able to identify it in your own mind and give us a general idea what it is.

Mr. WEST. You want me to read aloud?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes. At least, the beginning of it, until you are able to answer whether you identify that.

Mr. WEST. Do I have to read this, sir? I mean——

Mr. MORRIS. Well, I am asking you to.

Mr. WEST. And do I have to read it?

Mr. MORRIS. Can you?

Mr. WEST. Yes, sir. It is:

Correspondence: Any person or persons handling mail or correspondence with sharecroppers, farmers, or tenants or organizers in the South should remember the following elementary rules.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you author that?

Mr. WEST. Beg your pardon?

Mr. MORRIS. Did you author that? Did you write that? Did you compose it?

Mr. WEST. Sir, I would have to take the fifth amendment on that.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Mandel. I wonder if Mr. Mandel would read this in the record?

Senator JENNER. Proceed, Mr. Mandel.

Mr. MANDEL (reading).

Pointers on work in the South. 1. Correspondence: Any person or persons handling mail or correspondence with farmers, sharecroppers, tenants, comrades or organizers in the South should remember the following elementary rules:

(a) Envelopes should never be addressed by typewriter, handwriting is better, and should not be too flashy—better if somewhat poor. Always use title (Mr., Mrs., Miss, etc.). Never use business envelopes.

(b) Don't use return address of our offices, use some innocent address, better if a house address. If writing to a Negro, use address from Negro section of city. If name of a company or business house is used, use one that corresponds to the kind of package or envelope sent.

(c) Packages must always be well wrapped (so they don't fall apart in transit) and must look innocent. Don't send papers openly, but if a bundle, put in a box, so that it looks like a gift or something personal. In addressing, abide by rules given for letters. Single copies of paper should be sent first class.

(d) Time: Don't send packages or letter to any given address too often. Alternate, have at least 2 or 3 addresses in each locality, if possible. Don't continue sending bundles for too long a time to one address. Three months' limit.

(e) By all means, do not send any circular letters as third class. Send first class, following directions for letters. They expose at once. If the organization is known, on rare occasions, such can be done. But don't make this a practice.

(f) Content of letters; When writing letters, always, although writing business matters, make letter appear as personal. Address person as "Dear Friend," etc. Avoid mentioning names, do so only when absolutely necessary. Always use very simple language. Experience shows that letters from our office have not been understood by sharecroppers, and necessitated a "learned" person to transcribe same.

Some general suggestions:

(a) Always avoid too much mail. Try to get along with as little as possible.

(b) Have all southern mail and addresses handled by one responsible person, who has been assigned to do it.

(c) Build up a definite machinery to handle contacts, addresses, etc. Use past experience of our organizations.

(d) Do not mail letters and packages to the South with other office mail. This practice should be followed all the time.

(e) Always remember the following:

1. One letter, wrongly handled, can subject receiver to terror, discrimination, etc.

2. The mailing apparatus is part of the United States spy system.

3. Farmers, sharecroppers, tenants, etc., always live in localities where "local inquisitiveness" is rampant.

To editors: Some things to remember.

(a) Always use very simple picturesque language. Avoid all long words. Don't try to prove your intelligence by high language. It usually brings the opposite result.

(b) Avoid using names of people. (This does not apply to our enemies).

(c) Names of places, if connected with definite events, often give away our friends. Be careful how such is used.

(d) Often a detailed account of an event will expose those connected with it. Such material should not be used.

(e) Don't write long articles.

(f) Use letters from friends.

1. Try and save the southern language, terms and names of things; changing such will greatly lessen value of article or letter.

2. By all means, use such correspondence. Our papers contain too little from the South.

3. When in doubt, as to facts, data, etc., of letter or article, get in touch with the nearest organizer.

Mr. West. May I say just a word, please, sir, Mr. Morris?

Mr. Morris. Yes, Mr. West.

Mr. West. I know that—see, in the first place, I only received the subpena late Friday afternoon. I haven't consulted any attorney or anybody else, and I know that in a case like that I could say that I did not author it and there might be someone who might swear that I did, but I am going to take a chance and give a frank answer. I have never seen nor heard that reading in my life, as far as I can recall, and I certainly did not author it. Now, that is the plain answer to that.

Mr. Morris. Is your testimony, Mr. West, that——

Mr. West. My testimony is that I did not write the piece of paper, and as far as I can recall I have never seen it or heard it read in my life.

Mr. Sourwine. Did you write the original of which this is a copy?

Mr. West. Sir, I said I did not author that piece of paper.

Mr. Sourwine. Did you write the original of which this is a copy, Mr. West?

Mr. West. That is what I am trying to say.

Mr. SOURWINE. You did not?

Mr. WEST. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you write a—or send in information to be set in a memorandum of this general nature and content at any time?

Mr. WEST. Not that I recall, sir. As I say, I have never recalled having ever seen or heard this particular paper or writing.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you know Carl Braden?

Mr. WEST. Beg your pardon?

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know Carl Braden?

Mr. WEST. I would have to take my former position, sir, that I claim the fifth.

Senator JENNER. You might identify him. What is it, Carl Braden, worked formerly for the Courier-Journal and was——

Mr. MORRIS. Former newspaperman, who was a defendant in a criminal case.

Mr. WEST. I would have to take the fifth.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. West, as I understand, you are claiming the fifth amendment on all matters concerning Communist activities or affiliations?

Mr. WEST. As I say, any questions concerning affiliations and associations in the past, I claim the fifth amendment, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. When were you last in Monteagle, Tenn.?

Mr. WEST. I can't remember, sir, when I was last in Monteagle, Tenn.

Mr. SOURWINE. Were you there over the past Labor Day weekend?

Mr. WEST. You would know that better than I. I was not. That I will answer you flatly, that I was not.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were not there?

Mr. WEST. No, sir.

Senator JENNER. No further questions.

Mr. MORRIS. I have no questions.

Senator JENNER. Then you may be excused, Mr. West.

Mr. WEST. May I return home, sir?

Senator JENNER. That is all right.

(Witness excused.)

Senator JENNER. Call the next witness.

Mr. MORRIS. Dr. Franklin.

Senator JENNER. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I do.

Senator JENNER. Be seated.

TESTIMONY OF DR. RALPH FRANKLIN

Senator JENNER. Will you state your name?

Dr. FRANKLIN. My full name is Ralph Franklin.

Senator JENNER. Where do you reside?

Dr. FRANKLIN. My present address is Morehouse, Mo.

Senator JENNER. You may proceed.

Mr. MORRIS. What is your business or profession?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I am a physician.

Mr. MORRIS. Your full name is Doctor——

Dr. FRANKLIN. I use the title "Doctor," yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. What is your full name?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Ralph Franklin.

Mr. MORRIS. Dr. Ralph Franklin?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Dr. Franklin, you formerly lived here in Memphis; did you not?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir; I have lived here all my life until the last 3 or approximately 3 years.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. Now, while you were in Memphis, did you belong or did you join the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Will you tell us the circumstances, Dr. Franklin?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I was a student at the University of Tennessee College of Medicine at the time, and I was approached and befriended by several people, who, in turn, asked me to join the organization, which I did.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, who were the people, Doctor?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Dr. Vincent Myers.

Mr. MORRIS. Dr. Vincent Myers. Is he a physician here in Memphis?

Dr. FRANKLIN. No, sir; he graduated at the University of Tennessee in my class.

Mr. SOURWINE. That is M-y-e-r-s?

Dr. FRANKLIN. M-y-e-r-s.

Mr. MORRIS. Did he reside here in Memphis?

Dr. FRANKLIN. His family moved here, if I am not mistaken, from Ohio, and he lived here several years prior to attending medical school here.

Mr. MORRIS. And then how long did you remain a member of the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I am not exactly sure of the exact dates. However, I feel it is approximately 18 months.

Senator JENNER. I don't understand you. Eighteen months ago you left the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. No, sir.

Senator JENNER. Or 18 months you remained an active Communist?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I was a member of the Communist Party for 18 months in Memphis.

Senator JENNER. I see.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you join, approximately?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Sir, I can't recall the exact date. However, it must have been in the early part of 1954, the first few months of 1954.

Mr. MORRIS. And then when did you leave the party, 18 months later?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Approximately 18 months later; yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. Now, when did you completely detach yourself from the Communist Party? Was the transition a gradual one or sudden?

Dr. FRANKLIN. It was a gradual transition, sir. There was a transition period in which I had subscribed to the National Guardian, and had received publications from the Liberty Book Club, which, I, through my own thinking, considered subversive, if you want to use the term. I also read the Daily Worker for a short period of time while I was in Cincinnati, the first few months that I was in Cincinnati. That was in June of 1955.

Mr. MORRIS. You were——

Dr. FRANKLIN. Excuse me, July of 1955.

Mr. MORRIS. What were the motivations that took you into the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Well, it is a many-sided question; I mean, a many-sided answer. It would involve several factors. First of all, the friends whom I knew as members of the party were intelligent and seemingly sincere, and were well versed in the current events and political situations of the day, and during that period of time I was rather—shall we say, immature.

Mr. MORRIS. Politically immature?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Politically; yes, sir. It appealed to me at that time, and thinking in terms of an idealistic or straightforward proposition, I considered it the right thing to do, which I don't right now.

Mr. MORRIS. You feel you have come to know the nature of the Communist organization and it is something you want no part of?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir; that is true.

Mr. MORRIS. And what were some of the events that brought this disillusionment about?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Well, there were several. No. 1, the Communist doctrine preaches the equality of the members of the party, and as you feel—they have you feel that the organization is trying to further your knowledge of world events so that you may act upon your own as an independent individual and become more politically mature. I was in a constant wrangle during the period I was within the structure of the Communist Party because of the fact that this was not the case.

Secondly, events which occurred afterward, Khrushchev's outpouring of crimes that Stalin had committed during his many years as chief of the Communist government of the U. S. S. R. of course was a tremendous shock to me, having felt that—or having been told, rather, that—and personally feeling that it was right that these things were not true, and until out of the words of their own mouth they stated that they were true.

And, secondly, the Hungarian situation, of course, that quashed the entire matter; that was beyond all realm of consideration of anything that could be considered right and just.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Doctor, while you were a Communist, you even made financial contributions, did you not?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. You were a young struggling doctor, but, nevertheless, scraped together money to give the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I was somewhat pressured, and also felt volitionwise I should do my part as best I could.

Mr. MORRIS. All right.

Mr. SOURWINE. You say you were a member of the Communist Party for about 2 years?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes; approximately.

Mr. SOURWINE. About 18 months?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir; approximately; yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Were you, sir, a member of the Communist Party in 1952?

Dr. FRANKLIN. No; I was not.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were not?

Dr. FRANKLIN. No, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Do you remember receiving in 1952 a memorandum of what purported to be a telecast of events of Vincent Hallinan and Charlotta Bass, who were the Progressive Party's candidates for President in that year?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir; I remember having received memorandums. I also remember having seen them on television.

Mr. SOURWINE. Yes, sir. Do you know what it said in that memorandum?

Dr. FRANKLIN. No; I do not.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were not at that time to your knowledge on anybody's Communist mailing list?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Not to my knowledge. I would have to think that I—I cannot think so, at the time.

Mr. SOURWINE. And are you the Dr. Ralph Franklin who wrote a letter to the Memphis Commercial Appeal March 7, 1954, attacking big-business investments from time to time?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you write another letter to the Memphis Commercial Appeal April 4, 1954?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir; I believe I wrote two letters.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were a member of the Communist Party in the spring of 1954?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you give the Communist Party $5 at that time?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I don't remember the exact amount. I could certainly have.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were selling the National Guardian at that time?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I was trying to get subscriptions.

Senator JENNER. That was one of your assignments; was it?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Sir?

Senator JENNER. That was one of your assignments in the Communist Party?

Dr. FRANKLIN. More or less; it was urged.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you and your wife give a farewell party for Dr. Vincent Myers and his wife at your apartment at 826 Scott Place in December 1955?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. The central theme of that party was playing a record, The Investigator?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Where did you get that record, Dr. Franklin?

Dr. FRANKLIN. I can't recall that at the present time. I believe I sent for it through an advertiser in the National Guardian.

Mr. SOURWINE. The Communists were promoting that record; were they?

Dr. FRANKLIN. Through the National Guardian, I believe they were; yes, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Now, do you remember attending a going-away party—? I asked you about that.

Senator JENNER. No more?

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, I would like to state at this time that this particular witness has been extremely frank and forthright with the committee, and, inasmuch as we encounter such a wall of silence from people who have been members of the Communist Party, that I would like to make an extraordinary point of thanking this particular witness for his forthright testimony.

Senator, if more people come forward and tell their experiences within the Communist Party, as this witness has done today, we would very easily and very accurately know all about the Communist Party, and it would no longer hold any threat to the United States of America.

Senator JENNER. May I add, Mr. Morris, that here is a typical example of the policy of this committee. This young doctor was brought into a private, secret executive session. We have much information that is not going to be discussed here today. But the doctor came into the private, secret executive session of our committee back in this room and made a clean breast of this whole story.

And, Doctor, if more people would do what you have done, this menace of communism would not be as threatening today. I, too, as acting chairman of this committee, want to congratulate you for getting your feet back on the right path, and ask you to keep them there.

Dr. FRANKLIN. Thank you very much.

Senator JENNER. Thank you. You are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. MORRIS. Alberta Ahearn, please.

Senator JENNER. Do you swear that the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mrs. AHEARN. I do.

Senator JENNER. Be seated, please.

TESTIMONY OF ALBERTA AHEARN

Senator JENNER. Will you state your name for the committee?

Mrs. AHEARN. Mrs. Alberta Ahearn.

Senator JENNER. Alberta what?

Mrs. AHEARN. Ahearn.

Senator JENNER. And where do you reside?

Mrs. AHEARN. In Louisville, Ky.

Senator JENNER. What is your business or profession?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, I am keeping house for my daughter and a boarder, and I do some sewing at the present.

Senator JENNER. All right, you may proceed, Mr. Morris.

Mr. MORRIS. All right. Where were you born?

Mrs. AHEARN. July 28.

Mr. MORRIS. I am sorry. Where?

Mrs. AHEARN. In Louisville, Ky.

Mr. MORRIS. And I presume you are older than 21?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you for a period of time work as an undercover informant of the Federal Bureau of Investigation?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. I wonder if you would tell us, in fact, the period there.

Mrs. AHEARN. I worked as an undercover informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation from the latter part of 1948 to December of 1954.

Mr. MORRIS. And what was the locale of that operation?

Mrs. AHEARN. Louisville, Ky.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you have occasion—well, how many particular cells of the Communist Party did you get to meet during that time?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, I was changed actually four times.

Mr. MORRIS. So, in other words, you were in four different cells?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. What was the makeup of these cells, Mrs. Ahearn? Were they numerous; how many people were in them?

Mrs. AHEARN. Usually 3 or 4, not over 5.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. Why were they kept small?

Mrs. AHEARN. They were kept small so that information wouldn't leak out.

Mr. MORRIS. In other words, it was a security measure, as I get it?

Mrs. AHEARN. Security measure, that is right.

Mr. MORRIS. And you have the feeling that perhaps it was the rule that the party kept these particular units small in number?

Mrs. AHEARN. I was told they were.

Mr. MORRIS. You were told they were?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir; that is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you know or did you have a feeling that there were other cells operating in Louisville apart from the ones you were a member of?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. But you could not identify people in other cells, as you told us in executive session, because you did not meet in these closed cells?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right. There is one person that meets there, would meet in the city group and tell things that happened in the various cells, the other cells in the city.

Mr. MORRIS. Yes. You took part, Mrs. Ahearn, backing the Communist fronts; did you not?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. The security measures are not invoked so rigidly in those?

Mrs. AHEARN. No.

Mr. MORRIS. Party security measures?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Because it is a Communist-front organization, and so far as participation is concerned, they can say to the world, "This is only the American Peace Crusade," or whatever it is supposed to be. Is that right?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you operate within the framework of the Louisville Peace Crusade?

Mrs. AHEARN. I was chairman of the Louisville Peace Crusade for several years.

Mr. MORRIS. For years?

Mrs. AHEARN. Several years.

Mr. MORRIS. Who put you in charge of that?

Mrs. AHEARN. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Braden.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Braden put you in charge of that?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir; they recruited me into the party.

Mr. MORRIS. They what?

Mrs. AHEARN. They recruited me into the Communist Party.

Mr. MORRIS. So they recruited you into the Communist Party. Were they members of any of your cells?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; they were.

Mr. MORRIS. They were?

Mrs. AHEARN. Most of them.

Mr. MORRIS. Both Carl Braden and his wife?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. What is her first name?

Mrs. AHEARN. Anne.

Mr. MORRIS. Anne. Now, how many people participated with you in the work of the Louisville Peace Crusade?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, it varied. You mean Communist Party members, or just people in the club.

Mr. MORRIS. We are talking now about the front organization rather than the cells.

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. You said that the Louisville Peace Crusade was a Communist project, is that right?

Mrs. AHEARN. Right.

Senator JENNER. It was Communist dominated; you were head of it?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Senator JENNER. Who was secretary?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, when we first began, Mr. Clifford Young was secretary, then later went back to his home somewhere in Illinois.

Senator JENNER. Went back where?

Mrs. AHEARN. To his home in Illinois.

Senator JENNER. Was he a Communist?

Mrs. AHEARN. I don't know.

Senator JENNER. Who succeeded him as secretary?

Mrs. AHEARN. Mr. I. O. Ford.

Senator JENNER. Was he a Communist?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Senator JENNER. In other words, you, as the head of it, and Mr. Ford, as secretary, completely dominated the Louisville Peace Crusade?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. How many people did work on that activity, Communist or non-Communist?

Mrs. AHEARN. Oh, about 15 or 20 people.

Mr. MORRIS. About 15 or 20 people. I wonder if you would tell us generally what was the purpose of that organization?

Mrs. AHEARN. To promote the peace propaganda.

Mr. MORRIS. How did you go about it?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, we were affiliated with the American Peace Crusade, and we would receive instructions from them as to what to do. We would discuss them in party meetings, then carry on the orders from there.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, was the American Peace Crusade a Communist——

Mrs. AHEARN. Well——

Mr. MORRIS. Pardon?

Mrs. AHEARN. I could not say.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, if you will, tell us further how the organization operated.

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, as I said, we did various things. We promoted a postcard campaign during the Korean war to stop the war at the 38th parallel, and we put out leaflets each month, something like Trade With Red China, or McCarthyism, and the H-bomb.

Mr. MORRIS. What was that, "Trade With Red China"—what was that?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, it was a leaflet instructing people to trade with Red China, that we would get more trade that way.

Mr. MORRIS. In other words, you were then in the American Peace Crusade, and in the framework of the Peace Crusade you were trying to promote trade with Red China?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. What was that about McCarthyism?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, it has been quite a while; it was something about McCarthy and the big lie, something to that effect.

Mr. MORRIS. What was the rationale of that particular thinking?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, these hearings were just—they did not mean anything.

Mr. MORRIS. These hearings? You mean congressional hearings?

Mrs. AHEARN. Congressional hearings, yes, sir; and it was to tell people not to pay any attention to it.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you put out much literature to that effect?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; very much so. We mailed literature, and we would receive material from the American-Soviet Friendship, too.

Mr. MORRIS. For what purpose?

Mrs. AHEARN. To send it out through the Peace Crusade.

Mr. MORRIS. On that particular subject we were discussing?

Mrs. AHEARN. No; maybe not on that particular subject we were discussing, but we would get possession of it.

Mr. MORRIS. The American Council for Soviet Friendship did send material to the Peace Crusade, and you would distribute it in Louisville?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Was that very extensive material sent down?

Mrs. AHEARN. Quite a lot of the time.

Mr. MORRIS. Did it come from New York?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. That was headquarters in New York of the American Council for Soviet Friendship?

Mrs. AHEARN. In fact, Mr. Marshall was in Louisville at one time.

Mr. MORRIS. Beg your pardon; I didn't hear it.

Mrs. AHEARN. Mr. Leland Marshall was in Louisville at one time.

Mr. MORRIS. Was Mr. Braden working? Did he work then?

Mrs. AHEARN. He was employed by the Courier-Journal.

Mr. MORRIS. What was he doing with the Courier-Journal?

Mrs. AHEARN. Some sort of newspaper work; don't know just what it was.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you make any effort, for instance, to join labor groups, or church groups, or parent-teacher groups?

Mrs. AHEARN. I was asked to join them.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; not a parent-teacher group, but Negro labor council and several church groups.

Mr. MORRIS. Why, for instance, did the Communists ask you to join church groups?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, they thought that we could work through these church groups and sort of gain a sort of form of respectability through these church groups.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you in fact join church groups?

Mrs. AHEARN. I did.

Mr. MORRIS. When you joined church groups, did you dispense Communist propaganda from that vantage?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, we would try. Now, at one time there was a group called a militant church group.

Mr. MORRIS. A militant church group?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. That is at Louisville?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is at Louisville.

Mr. MORRIS. What did they do?

Mrs. AHEARN. They promoted a lot of things pertaining to integration, or things like that. Then there was a group called interracial hospital group, which was just a group that worked on trying to get Negroes into the city hospitals.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, Mrs. Ahearn, did you, from these various vantage points, give out any of that material that came from the American-Soviet Friendship at New York; did you then pass that out to members of church groups?

Mrs. AHEARN. Sometimes we would mail them to members of church groups.

Mr. MORRIS. Would they be received by members of the church as something coming from other members of the church group?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, no; we would just mail them out to various people without a name on them; sometimes would have the Peace Crusade, but we usually just sent them out. Sometimes sent them to labor groups, and just various groups that we had.

Mr. MORRIS. And you were in position, though, that you were dispensing Communist propaganda as members of a church group, you said for the purpose of having respectability?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. It would be more effective in carrying out the work?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you do that?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; whenever we could.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you terminate your relation with the FBI?

Mrs. AHEARN. When they had the sedition trials in Louisville, Ky. That is December 1954.

Mr. MORRIS. And at that time, did you testify?

Mrs. AHEARN. I testified.

Mr. MORRIS. And, therefore, the real nature of your relation with the Communist Party was known to the Communist Party?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. I notice you mentioned in the executive session that you joined the Farm Equipment Workers Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Farm Equipment Workers was a union; is that right?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; International Harvester Workers Union.

Mr. MORRIS. Was there a local at Louisville?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. To your knowledge was that local controlled by Communists?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, I could not say. I would think they were, but could not prove it.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, you are speaking technically, now; before you can say anybody is a member of the Communist Party or a Communist, you have to be able to swear they are; is that correct?

Mrs. AHEARN. Yes; all I can say about this Farm Equipment Workers, Mr. and Mrs. Braden were employed by this union as publicity agents.

Mr. MORRIS. And what was the women's auxiliary of that union?

Mrs. AHEARN. Well, Mrs. Braden was also in this women's auxiliary, Mrs. Sterling Neal, and we would promote various things, maybe petitions or something of that sort.

Mr. MORRIS. I have no more questions at this time of this witness.

Senator JENNER. Any further questions?

Of course, I believe you testified that you did not know how many other cells might have been operating in Louisville?

Mrs. AHEARN. I thought there were 3 or 4, but couldn't be certain.

Senator JENNER. Three or four more cells besides the ones you were in?

Mrs. AHEARN. That is right.

Senator JENNER. But you have no way of identifying them as fellow Communists?

Mrs. AHEARN. No.

Mr. SOURWINE. There is one phase of this also I think I would like to ask the witness a question about.

You said one representative from each cell would meet, I believe I understood you to say in the city room?

Mrs. AHEARN. City group.

Mr. SOURWINE. Oh, were you the one who met in the city group representing your cell, Mrs. Ahearn?

Mrs. AHEARN. No; I was not, but Mrs. Braden was chairman of the overall city group.

Senator JENNER. No further questions?

No further questions. You may be excused.

(Witness excused.)

Senator JENNER. Now, do you have any other witnesses to call at this time, because of the fact that you have had so many illnesses, delays, doctors' certificates, or babies, and so forth?

Mr. MORRIS. Let me check with Mr. Barber.

Are there any more witnesses present now? Are there any other witnesses present in the room? Don't identify yourselves necessarily.

Senator JENNER. That have been in executive session? I don't know.

Mr. MORRIS. There is one gentleman here. Would the man who has been talking to Mr. Mandel for half an hour not leave? I don't want to identify him, but if he will remain I would appreciate it, the man who has been talking to——

Senator JENNER. Please remain. There are no other witnesses.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Senator, no other witnesses here who have been in secret executive session.

Senator JENNER. We will have to go in executive session in the morning. Therefore, I believe the open session in this room will begin about 11 o'clock.

Mr. MORRIS. Yes.

Senator JENNER. With that announcement, we will stand adjourned in open session until about 11 o'clock. But the executive session will be earlier.

(Whereupon, at 3:02 p. m., the subcommittee was adjourned.)

COMMUNISM IN THE MIDSOUTH

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1957

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SUBCOMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE INTERNAL SECURITY ACT AND OTHER INTERNAL SECURITY LAWS,
OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Memphis, Tenn.

The subcommittee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 11 a. m., in the Federal court room, Federal Building, Chairman James O. Eastland presiding.

Present: Senators Eastland and William E. Jenner.

Also present: Robert Morris, chief counsel; J. G. Sourwine, associate counsel; and Benjamin Mandel, research director.

Senator JENNER. The committee will come to order. Call the first witness.

Mr. MORRIS. Inasmuch as Senator Eastland is not in the chair at this time——

Senator JENNER. He has to make a phone call; he will be right back.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Greenberg was scheduled to be our first witness; suppose we begin another witness while we are waiting.

Senator JENNER. All right; he will be right back, he just went to make a phone call.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Stauverman, please, will you come forward?

Senator JENNER. Mr. Stauverman, will you be sworn? Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Sentor JENNER. You may be seated. Will you give the committee your full name?

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD J. STAUVERMAN

Mr. STAUVERMAN. My name is Richard J. Stauverman.

Senator JENNER. Where do you reside, Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. 522 West Belden Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Senator JENNER. What is your business or profession?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I am a teacher.

Senator JENNER. Where do you teach?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I teach at Wright Junior College in the city of Chicago.

Senator JENNER. And what subjects do you teach?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Physics.

Senator JENNER. Physics?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. I think the record at this point should show Mr. Stauverman is accompanied by his counsel.

Mr. SMITH. Would you like for me to make an appearance?

Senator JENNER. Will you, please?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Stauverman is represented by Benjamin E. Smith, counsel, from New Orleans, La.

Senator JENNER. Proceed, Mr. Morris, with the questioning of the witness.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Stauverman, what do you teach?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I have answered that.

Mr. MORRIS. I know, but I want to develop it.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I teach physics.

Mr. MORRIS. Physics; to whom?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. To students.

Mr. MORRIS. I mean, they are college students, are they not?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. What is the name of the college where you are teaching?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I have answered that question before.

Mr. MORRIS. I would like you to be a little more specific, Mr. Stauverman. I don't want to pursue it too long, but we would like to know generally what is the nature of the physics you teach and to whom you teach.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Wright Junior College is the name of the school. I teach a course of mechanics, heat and sound; one in electricity, light and modern physics, and one in electronics.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, in addition to your teaching, Mr. Stauverman, do you engage in any extra teaching—I mean, are you a member of the physicists organizations?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I am a member of the professional societies, American Institute of Physics, the American Association of Physics Teachers, Institute of Radio Engineers, and that is all I can think of right now. I think that is all.

Mr. MORRIS. In connection with your membership in those distinguished organizations you have just told us about, do you attend conventions, do you keep up with the work of those organizations?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I have not attended any of their conventions; I receive their publications, that is all.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you remain active in the organizations?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Well, no; I would say that I am not active in the organizations.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, do you consult with or confer with other physicists?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Only with my fellow faculty members.

Senator JENNER. Outside of your regular classroom work in the Wright Junior College, do you tutor students?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. No, sir; I do occasionally give individual aid to students who ask for it, but I receive no pay for that.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you born in Birmingham, Ala., May 8, 1924?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, you attended Georgia Tech, did you not?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. You told us it is no longer called Georgia Tech, is that right, in executive session?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. No, it is still called Georgia Tech; the correction was that it was not called Georgia Tech University, it is just Georgia Tech.

Mr. MORRIS. And VPI?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. And Emory University?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. What degrees do you hold, Doctor?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. A bachelor of arts and master of science.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you receive your degrees from Emory University?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, did you live in Atlanta, Ga., in the years 1948 and 1949?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, I lived there at that time.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you then close to one Homer Bates Chase, a Communist Party organizer in Georgia in that particular period of time?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I stand on my constitutional rights and refuse to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. What constitutional rights are you referring to, Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. The fifth amendment, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. In other words, you do not want to be a witness against yourself?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, inasmuch as this subcommittee has always recognized such a claim of privilege by the witness, I suggest that it be recognized here at this time.

What were you doing in Atlanta during that period of time, Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is when I was a student.

Mr. MORRIS. After you left Atlanta in 1949, where did you go then?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I left Atlanta in 1950; I moved to Chicago at that time.

Mr. MORRIS. You moved to Chicago; now, were you a member of the Communist Party in Atlanta while you were there?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I stand on my constitutional rights under the fifth amendment; I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, when you went to Chicago, what did you do in Chicago, in 1950?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I got a job.

Mr. MORRIS. You got a job where?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I don't see the pertinency of that question.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, were you a teacher of physics at Wright Junior College, 3400 North Austin, Chicago, at that time?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. No, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you teach there later?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Where did you teach in 1950, if you taught?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. In 1950 I was not teaching.

Mr. MORRIS. What did you do in 1950, sir?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I worked in a factory; I was——

Mr. MORRIS. Did you have any other job in Chicago in 1950——

Senator JENNER. I don't think the witness had completed his answer. He started to say "I was—." Go ahead.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I was laboratory technician in a factory.

Mr. MORRIS. Laboratory technician in a factory?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. What factory was that?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Here again, I don't see that this is pertinent. I wish you would explain the pertinency of the question.

Senator JENNER. Well, let's put it this way, Mr. Stauverman, at this particular time were you a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I refuse to answer that question under the protection of the fifth amendment.

Chairman EASTLAND. Were you doing work for the Communist Party?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I again refuse under the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, that brings out the pertinency of my question; we have reason to believe that he was active in the Communist Party at that time, and I had in mind when I asked him the question what his particular job was, it was with the view toward determining whether or not there was a connection between the job and the membership in the Communist Party, and for that reason I asked him the specific nature of the job.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Will you repeat the question, sir?

Mr. MORRIS. You told us that you were a laboratory technician in a factory in Chicago in the year 1950, and I asked you what factory, and then you challenged the pertinency. I think I have explained it.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. The factory was the Transparent Package Co., which is located in Chicago. They make sausage casings.

Mr. MORRIS. They make what?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sausage casings.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, after that, Mr. Stauverman, what was your next employment?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. My next employment was instructor in electronics at DeForrest's Training, Inc.

Mr. MORRIS. At DeForrest's——

Mr. STAUVERMAN. DeForrest's Training, Inc.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you do that?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I was there from 1951 to 1953.

Mr. MORRIS. After that, did you teach in Wright Junior College?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. No; after that I came to Memphis where I taught for 1 year.

Mr. MORRIS. Tell us about that, when did you come to Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I came to Memphis in September 1953. I was employed by the home mission board of the Congregational and Christian Churches and taught mathematics at LeMoyne College. I was here approximately 1 year; I do not remember exactly when I left.

Mr. MORRIS. You were employed by the Home Mission Board?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. The Home Mission Board of the Congregational and Christian Churches; that to the best of my memory is the name of the group that employed me. I am not certain of the title they give to their department, but that is what it amounted to.

Mr. MORRIS. And what was the nature of your work?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I taught mathematics.

Mr. MORRIS. For the board?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. And you were also a teacher at LeMoyne College?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct; that is where I taught.

Mr. MORRIS. That is here in Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, from September 1953 until August 1954, did you pay Communist Party dues to the Communist Party in Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the privilege of the fifth amendment and refuse to answer that question, sir.

Chairman EASTLAND. Well, now, you know, do you not, that there is a Communist underground in Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Would you repeat the question?

Chairman EASTLAND. Do you know whether or not there is a Communist underground in Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I plead the privilege of the fifth amendment on that question.

Chairman EASTLAND. Did you ever secure information for the Communist underground in the city of Memphis, in west Tennessee?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the fifth amendment on that question also.

Chairman EASTLAND. State whether or not you belonged to a Communist Party cell in Memphis while you were parading here as a schoolteacher.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I refuse to answer that question on the protection of the fifth amendment.

Chairman EASTLAND. Isn't it correct now that your principal work in the city of Memphis and the principal reason for your coming was on a mission of the Communist Party?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. My principal work in the city of Memphis and my principal reason for coming here was to teach mathematics at LeMoyne College.

Chairman EASTLAND. Now, you were not given any Communist mission when you came here?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I take the privilege of the fifth amendment, sir, in refusing to answer that question.

Chairman EASTLAND. That's right, sir. Now, who got you in LeMoyne College—I think that is very significant—who got you your job there?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I applied for a position. The application was directed, if I remember correctly, to the board of trustees of the college, and that was the manner in which I got the job.

Chairman EASTLAND. Yes; now, isn't it true that one individual was responsible for your being employed by LeMoyne College?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I will have to plead the fifth amendment on that.

Chairman EASTLAND. Of course. Do you know Mr. Lorenz?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I am well acquainted with Mr. Lorenz, yes, sir. He and I are personal friends.

Chairman EASTLAND. Personal friends. Isn't it true that he got you your employment at the college?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Well, sir, I don't understand the pertinency of this question. I would like an explanation.

Chairman EASTLAND. Well, the pertinency of the question is that our information is you were here on a party mission. We are just trying to connect it up; that is all.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, maybe if I give here what the background of this particular information is, the pertinency may become clearer to the witness. We have reason to believe that Mr. Lorenz assisted you in coming to LeMoyne College and got you your job, and then reported back to the Memphis Communist Party that they would shortly—now, this is the late summer or early fall of 1953—that he, Lorenz, would have a new transfer in the Communist Party from Chicago, referring to you, and that Mr. McGurty and Mr. Greenberg of the Memphis Communist Party then went to Chicago to investigate you and found you were satisfactory and worthy of being in the Memphis Communist Party. Now, did I state the situation correctly?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the privileges of the fifth amendment, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, after you arrived here in late summer or early fall of 1953, did you pay $10 in back dues to the Communist Party when you arrived?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the fifth amendment on that one, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Did Mr. McGurty ever tell you that, if anyone should ask you if you were a member of the Communist Party, you should deny it?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the privileges of the fifth amendment on that question, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you, among other things, sell subscriptions to the National Guardian? That is a Communist journal.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I take the privileges of the fifth amendment, in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you active in the Labor Youth League from the period of 1951–57?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Could you please explain the pertinency of the question?

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Mandel, I wonder if you would identify for us the Labor Youth League?

Mr. MANDEL. The Labor Youth League is cited as a subversive organization by the Attorney General.

Mr. MORRIS. What is it specifically, so that they will understand?

Mr. MANDEL. It is a successor of the Young Communist League. It is specifically a Communist organization operating among young people.

Mr. MORRIS. Its purpose is to recruit young people into the Communist orbit; is it not?

Mr. MANDEL. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, with that description, would you answer the question?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I plead the privileges of the fifth amendment in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. We have reason to believe you have been active in the Labor Youth League from the period 1951 to 1957, mostly in Chicago; have you been active in the Labor Youth League in Chicago?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. It seems to me that I answered that question just a minute ago; didn't I?

Mr. MORRIS. By claiming your privilege?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, I added the Chicago element to it.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Well, I again claim the privileges of the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know whether or not you were investigated by the Communist Party in 1954 because you reached Mr. Greenberg at his secret address in New York and you were, therefore, investigated on the grounds you violated Communist Party security?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I claim my constitutional privilege there; I refuse to answer the question.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you, Mr. Stauverman, at any time try to reach Mr. Greenberg in New York?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I don't understand the pertinency of this question either.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, this question is very pertinent, Mr. Stauverman, because the information that we have received bears on the conspiratorial nature of the Communist Party. We have reason to believe that Mr. Greenberg because of some high classification imposed by the Communist Party officials on his location in New York, that people of the Memphis Communist Party were not to be in touch with him up there for security purposes—security from the Communist Party point of view—and that you violated the orders of the Memphis Communist Party by being in touch with him at his New York address, and that, therefore, you brought upon yourself an investigation. We would like to know whether or not that is correct. We have reason to believe it did occur and we want to ask you about it.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I claim my privileges under the fifth amendment in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you ever call upon Greenberg in New York?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I again claim my constitutional privilege.

Senator JENNER. Ask him if he knows Mr. Greenberg.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know Mr. Greenberg?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I claim my constitutional rights in refusing to answer that question.

Senator JENNER. Is that the fifth amendment?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, will you tell us whether or not you called on him at his home in New York after he had left Memphis?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I again refuse to answer on the basis of the Constitution.

Mr. MORRIS. Can you recall whether or not, as a result of that episode, you were under suspicion by the Communist Party?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I refuse to answer that question on the basis of my constitutional privileges.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, have you been active in the Northeastern Peace Conference in Chicago?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. The what?

Mr. MORRIS. The Northeastern Peace Conference in Chicago?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I would like to have the pertinency of that question explained, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, we have reason to believe that the Northeastern Peace Conference is a Communist organization or at least is infiltrated by Communists and we were wondering if you participated in that as a person who, at the time, was a member of the Communist Party, and, therefore, you are qualified to tell us whether or not there are any connections between the Communist organization and the Northeastern Peace Conference, and you are a competent witness. We ask you to tell us about that.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I claim my constitutional rights, sir, in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. After you left Memphis, you went back to Chicago, did you not?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That's right.

Mr. MORRIS. After you left there, what was your first teaching assignment in Chicago?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Wright Junior College.

Mr. MORRIS. How long did you teach there?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I taught there for a little bit more than 1 year.

Mr. MORRIS. From when?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. From September 1956, until the present.

Mr. MORRIS. Until when?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Until now.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you a Communist now, Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, regarding my present political affiliations——

Mr. MORRIS. I didn't ask you that; I asked you if you are a Communist now, Mr. Stauverman.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I am answering the question, sir. At present, the only possible political affiliation I know of which I have, would be with one of the major parties of the United States. It is possible that under the laws of Illinois I am a member of the party in whose primary I voted. This is a point of law with which I am not familiar, but I will say with that exception, with that possible exception, I am not a member of any party, including the Communist Party.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Stauverman, do you mean to imply by that answer that in your opinion membership in the Communist Party is merely a political association?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, would you explain the pertinency of this question; you might also explain the question; I don't understand it.

Mr. SOURWINE. You were asked if you were a member of the Communist Party. You framed a reply which put membership in the Communist Party in the context of merely political association. I am asking you if that was intentionally done for the purpose of implying that in your opinion membership in the Communist Party is only a matter of political association?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I still don't understand what you mean by political association.

Mr. SOURWINE. You used the words first; you know what you meant by them. I am using them in the context in which you originally used them.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I claim my constitutional rights in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. SOURWINE. You know, don't you, that the Communist Party is part of a worldwide conspiracy?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I plead the privileges of the Constitution in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Stauverman, were you a Communist when you were served with a subpena here last week?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I refuse to answer that question under the protection of the Constitution.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit that, in answering the question as the witness does, it is part of a pattern that we find. We have been told that one of the officials of the Memphis Communist Party has instructed the people when they are subpenaed to immediately consider themselves detached from the Communist Party; then when they actually come to testify, they say they are not now members of the Communist Party, but when you ask them whether they were a member of the Communist Party at the time of the subpena, they claim their privilege. In that way, they claim to have the advantage that when their appearances is reported, they are referred to as ex-Communists or former Communists. Actually they are still Communists, but I think it is part of the pattern, Senator, and I might call your attention to it. I have no more questions.

Mr. SOURWINE. I have two questions. Do you recall that Mr. Lorenz, who was your fellow teacher at LeMoyne, came under suspicion of subversive activity while you and he were teaching at LeMoyne?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I do not recall that.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you, sir, secretly help students of LeMoyne to draw up a petition to the secretary of the American Missionary Association in New York, the board that runs LeMoyne College, in behalf of Mr. Lorenz?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, if I answered that question, you might be able to find a witness to contradict me, and, therefore, I claim the privilege of the Constitution in refusing to answer.

Mr. SOURWINE. Do you know that there was a student petition in behalf of Mr. Lorenz?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I never saw any such petition, sir; I don't know whether there was such a petition or not.

Mr. SOURWINE. You state you never saw such a petition?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. That is correct.

Mr. SOURWINE. I am asking you, did you know there was such a petition?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I heard that such a petition was being circulated. However, I never saw it, and I did not know if such a petition was circulated. I do not know what its wording was or anything about its contents or any of the people who signed it or circulated it.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you tell Mr. Hollis Price, the president of LeMoyne, that you had no knowledge of such a petition and didn't have anything to do with it?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I don't remember.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you, in fact, have anything to do with such a petition, did you have anything to do with assisting students in drawing up such a petition?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I will plead my constitutional rights in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Stauverman, did you get into contact with your present attorney through the intermediacy of a third person?

Mr. STAUVERMAN. I don't understand the pertinency of this question, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. I will explain it; the committee has information which leads it to the tentative conclusion, at least, that you have been a part of the Communist conspiracy. You appear here; you are from, at the present time, the North, Chicago; you appear here with an attorney from New Orleans. The committee is interested in knowing whether you were put into contact with this attorney through Communist sources.

Mr. STAUVERMAN. Sir, I plead the privilege of the fifth amendment in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. SOURWINE. I have no more questions.

Mr. MORRIS. I have no more questions.

Senator JENNER. I have no further questions.

Mr. MORRIS. You are excused from further testimony; is that right, Mr. Chairman?

Chairman EASTLAND. Yes.

Mr. MORRIS. You are excused from further testimony.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Chairman, the next witness is Mr. Greenberg. The reason Mr. Greenberg is called, he resides in New York City and we believe he has been the secretary-treasurer of the Communist Party of Memphis.

Senator EASTLAND. Hold up your hand, please, sir. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. GREENBERG. I do, sir.

TESTIMONY OF ALFRED HENRY GREENBERG

Mr. MORRIS. Will you give your full name and address to the shorthand reporter?

Mr. GREENBERG. Alfred Henry Greenberg.

Mr. MORRIS. Where do you reside, Mr. Greenberg?

Mr. GREENBERG. 35 West 87th Street, New York City.

Mr. MORRIS. And what is your business or occupation?

Mr. GREENBERG. Before proceeding with any further testimony, sir, I would like to point out that I am not represented by counsel. I do not have advice of counsel. As I notified the committee, before leaving New York, I was subpenaed on Wednesday night, and it would take 2 business days to get an attorney from New York City to Memphis; this was insufficient time and I requested by telephone, by wire, and by special delivery letter a postponement.

I am anxious to testify before this committee, in view of the allegations against me, but I do not feel I am capable to do so without advice. When I testified yesterday in executive session, I was told I was given 24 hours to get counsel.

I telephoned New York and attempted to find out if I could get counsel. I again telephoned my attorney in New York and he couldn't come, but on my behalf he attempted to get competent counsel in New York, but again the notice was too short. Again, on his advice, I contacted a number of Memphis attorneys whose names I can make available to you if you wish.

I was finally able to get Mr. Walter Chandler, who accompanied me here to the executive session here this morning; the former mayor of Memphis who, as you know, testified in the executive session that he was unable to serve as my counsel, but that I had come to him and he did say I had attempted to get counsel, that he was not competent in these matters, that he suggested that I should have counsel of my own choice who has experience on these constitutional questions, and the court questions and the court decisions on these matters.

For that reason, sir, I respectfully request adjournment so that I can appear before this committee and testify with counsel of my own choice.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Greenberg, as I told you in executive session, to have counsel before this committee is merely a privilege.

Mr. GREENBERG. It is a privilege I wish to exercise, sir.

Senator JENNER. It is not a right. You were subpenaed last Wednesday, and really you are here for the purpose of testifying in this particular area.

To clear the record up, Mr. Morris, what information does this committee have concerning Mr. Greenberg in relation to Communist conspiracy in relation to this particular area, Memphis, Tenn.?

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, we have information and evidence which indicates that, even though Mr. Greenberg is now the assistant editor of a women's publication in New York City, he was very active in the Communist Party here in Memphis for quite a period of time.

For instance, we have been told that he was the secretary-treasurer of the Communist Party of Memphis from the period of 1954 generally. We would have to ask him exactly when that assignment began, and when it ended. For instance, on one occasion here in Memphis he boasted that he had a Communist study group in Memphis for students, which he had developed to the point where they were ready to be recruited into the Communist Party.

On December 17, 1951, there was a meeting in Mr. Greenberg's home, at which meeting Greenberg laid down the law, speaking of Memphis: "Memphis is one of the most important places in the South." He urged the necessity of setting up Communist classes among Negroes and starting industrial cells in Memphis.

We also have reason to believe he was the Memphis correspondent for the Daily Worker, certainly in the year 1952 and possibly later.

Now, during the underground period of the Communist Party in Memphis, it was required that each unit of the Communist Party have a mimeograph machine and paper. Mr. Greenberg was the custodian of the paper and the machine here in Memphis.

We also have reason to believe he was arrested in Memphis July 22, 1950, for obtaining signatures on the Stockholm peace petition without a permit, and when Mr. Henry Clay Moss was arrested in Memphis in September 1953, he had in his possession a list of the electoral districts of the Communist Party which had been prepared by Mr. Greenberg.

We had evidence that, in 1951, he had made intensive effort to keep particular Communists from breaking away from the Communist Party. One witness subpenaed was Rita Handman, who was active in the Communist Party under the name of Ann Bartel. She now is in New York. She was subpenaed but was not able to appear for family reasons. She was director of the southern regional committee of the Communist Party. She was in Memphis March 3 and 4, 1956, as director of the southern regional committee of the Communist Party and on Communist Party business. She had superintended the work of Mr. Greenberg while he was operating here in Memphis and we were particularly anxious to ask him here in Memphis about that particular activity.

Now, there is much more on this witness, but I do want to show the general nature of the reasons why this witness was called to Memphis, because most of the competency bears on the Memphis area.

Mr. GREENBERG. Well, sir, I am anxious to testify——

Senator JENNER. Pardon me just a moment. I am sure you can see from this résumé of information that this committee has, why you were needed here as a witness in the Memphis area.

Now, you appeared this morning in executive session, which is the custom of this committee, and with you was a very distinguished attorney and public citizen of this community, Mr. Chandler, a former Congressman and former mayor, and as I recall, Mr. Chandler said from what he knew there was no reason why you shouldn't and couldn't testify here this morning.

Do you still feel in view of the information that this committee has already given you, about the matters on which we are going to question you, do you feel Mr. Chandler is not competent to represent you in this hearing?

Mr. GREENBERG. Mr. Chandler told me and told the committee that he felt he was not competent to advise me adequately. He recommended that the committee allow me to have counsel of my choice in New York City to advise me.

I do not feel this is an unwarranted request. As far as testifying to these matters in Memphis, I can testify as accurately in any place in this country as I can here today, but I do not have counsel to represent me and I am unable to testify at this time. I am very anxious to do so in view of the allegations——

Senator JENNER. We have witnesses in this area who could corroborate or deny your testimony, and that is why it is easier and more convenient to everybody concerned to take testimony here.

Now, Mr. Chairman, since I handled this matter before you arrived, since this witness takes this attitude, I do again want to state for the benefit of future hearings that the privilege of having an attorney is only a privilege extended by this committee and certainly is not a right. This gentleman has been subpenaed since last Wednesday and you can easily tell that the work in the United States Senate would be stopped by continuous delays of this type.

However, in view of what has been said, and in view of the fact that Mr. Chandler, as I recall, said in the executive session, from what he knew there was no reason why he couldn't or shouldn't testify, but if the witness feels as he stated, Mr. Chairman, it is my recommendation in this particular case that this witness be given a further extension of time and that he be heard at some future hearing.

Chairman EASTLAND. That will be granted.

Mr. GREENBERG. May I be notified?

Senator JENNER. You will certainly be notified, and in the meantime, you give the name of the attorney whom you contacted and we will notify your attorney when we want you here, and that will not require the serving of another subpena.

Mr. GREENBERG. I notified Mr. Sourwine.

Senator JENNER. Put it in the record.

Mr. GREENBERG. Should I tell him now?

Senator JENNER. Yes.

Mr. GREENBERG. Robert Z. Lewis, of New York City.
Senator JENNER. Lewis?
Mr. GREENBERG. Lewis.
Senator JENNER. What address?
Mr. GREENBERG. I believe it is 11 East 51st, I am not certain.
Senator JENNER. Is he with a firm or an individual lawyer?
Mr. GREENBERG. He is in the telephone book as I am, and have been since living in New York City.
Chairman EASTLAND. Mr. Greenberg, you are not released from the subpena, you understand?
Mr. GREENBERG. No, I am under subpena, but you will notify me of the time?
Chairman EASTLAND. We will give you additional time and you will be notified.
Mr. SOURWINE. It will be of some value to have an understanding that notice will be given to Mr. Lewis if we are unable to get in touch with him.
Senator JENNER. That is the understanding, isn't it? We will notify your attorney of the time.
Mr. GREENBERG. Yes.
(Witness excused.)
Mr. MORRIS. The next witness is Mr. Lorenz.
Senator JENNER. Will you be sworn? Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?
Mr. LORENZ. Yes, sir.
Senator JENNER. Your attorney is Benjamin E. Smith?

TESTIMONY OF PHILLIP J. LORENZ, JR.

Senator JENNER. Give your name.
Mr. LORENZ. Phillip J. Lorenz, Jr.
Mr. MORRIS. And where do you reside, Mr. Lorenz?
Mr. LORENZ. Fayette, Iowa.
Mr. MORRIS. Fayette, Iowa?
Mr. LORENZ. That is correct.
Mr. MORRIS. What is your business or profession?
Mr. LORENZ. I am a teacher.
Mr. MORRIS. Where do you teach?
Mr. LORENZ. At Upper Iowa University.
Mr. MORRIS. I didn't hear that.
Mr. LORENZ. Upper Iowa University.
Mr. MORRIS. Upper Iowa University; where is that?
Mr. LORENZ. That is in Fayette, Iowa.
Mr. MORRIS. Where were you born, Mr. Lorenz?
Mr. LORENZ. Atlanta, Ga.
Mr. MORRIS. On April 15, 1924?
Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.
Mr. MORRIS. I wonder if you would tell us of your educational background.
Mr. LORENZ. I received my bachelor of science degree from Oglethorpe University in 1949, and my master of science degree from Vanderbilt University in 1952.
Mr. MORRIS. What university was that?

Mr. LORENZ. Vanderbilt.

Mr. MORRIS. Vanderbilt; I am sorry. What degrees do you have?

Mr. LORENZ. I have a bachelor of scienec and master of science degree.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you attended any other college?

Mr. LORENZ. Yes, I took some courses at Northwestern University.

Mr. MORRIS. When was that?

Mr. LORENZ. That was in 1949, 1950, I think; I am not quite certain.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, what do you teach at Upper Iowa University, Mr. Lorenz?

Mr. LORENZ. I teach physics.

Mr. MORRIS. I wonder if you would tell us specifically what physics you teach at Upper Iowa University?

Mr. LORENZ. I teach general physics; I teach a science survey course known as man of the physical world; I teach an intermediate course known as electricity and magnetism. I teach mechanical thermodynamics and heat, introduction to modern physics, and light, and I wouldn't necessarily be teaching all of those courses in one semester.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you a member of any professional organization?

Mr. LORENZ. I am a member of the Southeastern Chapter of the American Physics Society and the Iowa Electrical Science.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you active in those organizations?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, I would be classified by the rules and regulations as an active member.

Mr. MORRIS. Where else have you taught, Mr. Lorenz; I mean, would you begin with your present job and just go back?

Mr. LORENZ. I taught at Kentucky Wesleyan College prior to my present post.

Mr. MORRIS. That is in Owensboro, Ky.?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. How long did you teach there?

Mr. LORENZ. Two years.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you come to Upper Iowa College?

Mr. LORENZ. In August or September 1956.

Mr. MORRIS. For 2 years prior, therefore, you went probably in August, 1954, to Kentucky Wesleyan?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Where did you teach before you went to Kentucky Wesleyan?

Mr. LORENZ. At LeMoyne College.

Mr. MORRIS. That is here in Memphis?

Mr. LORENZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you teach at LeMoyne?

Mr. LORENZ. From the fall of 1952 through the summer of 1954.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, what did you do prior to your coming here to LeMoyne to teach in the fall of 1952?

Mr. LORENZ. I was a student at Vanderbilt University.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you have any other employment other than your teaching employment which you told us about, Mr. Lorenz?

Mr. LORENZ. Yes, I worked in the Transparent Package Co. in Chicago, Ill.

Mr. MORRIS. At the same time that Mr. Stauverman worked there?

Mr. LORENZ. Part of the time.

Mr. MORRIS. And were you and he both teachers together at LeMoyne College?

Mr. LORENZ. For a period of 9 months, yes.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you help Mr. Stauverman get his job at LeMoyne College?

Mr. LORENZ. What is the pertinency of the question, sir?

Mr. MORRIS. Well, the evidence indicates to us that both you and he were members of the Communist Party. We want to find out, among other things, whether one Communist Party member helps another Communist Party member to get a job and for what purpose.

Mr. LORENZ. Would you repeat the question again for me, please?

Mr. MORRIS. I wonder, Mr. Reporter, if you will assist me and read the question back?

(Question read.)

Mr. LORENZ. My answer to the question would be as follows: Mr. Stauverman is a very close friend of mine and he visited my house in the late summer of 1953, I believe, sir, and at that time LeMoyne College did not have a mathematics instructor and certain officials in the school when they saw that here was an available man, suggested that he consider applying for the job. I would say definitely, sir, that I was not a major instrument in his obtaining that employment.

Mr. MORRIS. Maybe a minor instrument; is that your explanation?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, insofar as he was visiting at my house, his physical proximity was certainly due to my invitation.

Mr. MORRIS. Tell us this; did you report, after it appeared as if he was coming to LeMoyne University, did you report back to the Memphis Communist Party—this is now in September 1953—that you would shortly have a new transfer to the party from Chicago?

Mr. LORENZ. I stand on my constitutional privilege in refusing to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. And to your knowledge, did Mr. McGurty and Mr. Greenberg, who preceded you in the witness chair, thereupon go to Chicago to investigate Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. LORENZ. Once again I claim my constitutional privilege.

Mr. MORRIS. And did you hear that they reported back to the Memphis Communist Party that Stauverman was O. K.?

Mr. LORENZ. I will not witness against myself on this.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, you have been the State literature chairman of the Georgia State Communist Party, have you not?

Mr. LORENZ. I will not witness against myself on this.

Chairman EASTLAND. That is the fifth amendment?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, I am paraphrasing the fifth amendment.

Chairman EASTLAND. That is all right.

Mr. MORRIS. You have been a member of the Communist Party of Atlanta, have you not?

Mr. LORENZ. I will not witness against myself on that.

Mr. MORRIS. From the period 1953 to 1954—and this is the period we are most interested in, as far as you as a potential witness are concerned—were you chairman of the Communist Party of Memphis, specifically called the Communist Party Club in Memphis?

Mr. LORENZ. I won't witness against myself on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, have you ever been a member of the executive committee of the Memphis Communist Party?

Mr. LORENZ. I won't witness against myself on that.

Chairman EASTLAND. You think you would be testifying against yourself if you answered that question; is that what you say?

Mr. LORENZ. That is my understanding of it.

Chairman EASTLAND. All right.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you have clandestine meetings—and I use the word clandestine in the sense that you were being very careful in not wanting to be known—with Lawrence McGurty at night baseball games?

Mr. LORENZ. I am a lover of sports, sir, but I plead my constitutional privilege on that.

Mr. MORRIS. Are there night baseball games here in Memphis?

Mr. LORENZ. I imagine there are, sir; there are in most cities.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you attend any of these night baseball games—this is generally now, I am not asking you whom you were with on that occasion.

Mr. LORENZ. I don't really recall, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. You don't recall whether you went to any night ballgames in Memphis?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, if I did, it would have certainly been a rare occasion.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you ever go to a night baseball game with Lawrence McGurty or meet him at a night baseball game?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, on that I claim my constitutional privilege.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Lorenz, your wife is also a teacher, is she not?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. Where does she teach?

Mr. LORENZ. At the West Union Elementary School in Iowa.

Mr. MORRIS. Where is that?

Mr. LORENZ. In Iowa, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, to your knowledge is she a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. LORENZ. I will claim my constitutional privilege on that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, do you remember being told by Lawrence McGurty on one occasion to deny Communist Party membership if anyone asked you about it?

Mr. LORENZ. I will claim my constitutional privilege.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Mr. Lorenz, I would like to show you a paper entitled, "Pointers on Work in the South" which purports to be an instruction to members of the Communist Party as to how they should conduct themselves under certain circumstances, with a view toward preserving the security of the Communist Party. I showed that to you in executive session; I am going to ask you if you have ever seen that before in any other form.

Mr. SOURWINE. May the record show that this is the same paper that was read into the record yesterday by Mr. Mandel?

Senator JENNER. It will be so shown.

Mr. LORENZ. Sir, in regard to the question, I fear that I will have to rely on my constitutional privileges.

Mr. MORRIS. The question was, have you ever seen it before; the other question is, Did you ever circulate it in any form, in whole or in part?

Mr. LORENZ. My answer would be the same, sir.

Senator JENNER. You mean, if you gave a truthful answer to that question it might tend to incriminate you?

Mr. LORENZ. Of course, you understand that I saw that paper in the courtroom yesterday and also in the executive session.

Senator JENNER. But I think the question was "circulated." Did you ever circulate it?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, I claim the privilege of the fifth amendment there; I won't witness against myself and——

Senator JENNER. All right.

Mr. MORRIS. I have no more questions, Mr. Chairman.

Senator JENNER. Any further questions?

Mr. SOURWINE. Just a few, if I may. Mr. Lorenz, were you aware while you were teaching in LeMoyne that a petition in your behalf was sent to New York signed by various students?

Mr. LORENZ. I knew, sir, that such a petition was prepared and that signatures were secured on that petition, and I seem to remember that it was sent to the board, but I can't be absolutely sure on that last point.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you ever discuss with Mr. Hollis Price, the president of LeMoyne, the question of whether you had any knowledge about the preparation of that petition?

Mr. LORENZ. I really don't recall.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you tell him you had nothing to do with it and had no knowledge of the petition?

Mr. LORENZ. I don't recall, but I will say this, the petition did not come from me and neither did I encourage getting up the petition.

Mr. SOURWINE. You have stated you knew the petition was prepared; how did you know that?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, as I recall some of the students must have mentioned it to me.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did you ever discuss that petition with Mr. Stauverman?

Mr. LORENZ. I simply don't remember it, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Lorenz, did you get in contact with your present counsel through the intermediacy of a third person?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Who was that person?

Mr. LORENZ. Mr. Stauverman recommended counsel to me.

Mr. SOURWINE. You then had contact with Mr. Stauverman before you came to Memphis, after you had been subpenaed; is that right?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Mr. SOURWINE. Did he call you or did you call him?

Mr. LORENZ. What is the pertinency of the question?

Mr. SOURWINE. Well, you have testified with regard to the fact that Mr. Stauverman made recommendations. I am simply expanding the question. I want to understand the circumstances surrounding this matter. We want to learn whether you asked Mr. Stauverman for his recommendation or whether Mr. Stauverman called and he recommended counsel?

Mr. LORENZ. Could you be a little more specific, sir; I still don't understand the pertinency of the question.

Mr. SOURWINE. When was it after you were subpenaed that Mr. Stauverman got in touch with you, or with him?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, I can't see what this has to do with the legislative purposes of this committee.

Mr. SOURWINE. This committee is investigating Communist activity, and Communist activity involves conspiracy. The circumstances of the appearance of yourself and Mr. Stauverman with the same counsel, a counsel from a different part of the country from that in which either of you lives, and a different part of the country from which the hearing is being held, is a circumstance that strongly indicates that there was some concert with respect to the employment of counsel. The committee attempted to learn from Mr. Stauverman whether there was any Communist activity involved. Mr. Stauverman took the fifth amendment on that question. The committee wants to know what you know about the matter, and since you and Mr. Stauverman have both been engaged, according to the information and testimony which is in the committee's possession, in Communist activity, the committee is endeavoring to find out whether you acted in concert or separately in making up your minds how you were going to deport yourselves when you came before the committee. Now, that is the background of the pertinency of the question I am asking you. Now, I will ask you this specific question. You testified you did get in contact or were in contact with Mr. Stauverman after you had been served with the subpena; you testified here. Now, I will ask you when was that and who initiated the contact?

Mr. LORENZ. I plead the privileges of the fifth amendment.

Mr. SOURWINE. Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as this witness has testified that he was in contact with Mr. Stauverman, and has then proceeded to challenge the pertinency of the question and has now had the pertinency explained to him, I believe he has waived his privilege of the fifth amendment. The fifth-amendment privilege is not a device to be used by a witness when he does not wish to testify; and, since the witness has already stated he was in contact with Mr. Stauverman, it would appear that the details of that contact, at least insofar as when it took place, could not in any way incriminate the witness, and I ask that the witness be ordered to answer the question.

Senator JENNER. Yes: Mr. Lorenz, the Chair so rules, and I now ask that you be ordered to answer the question.

Mr. LORENZ. Will you repeat the question?

Mr. SOURWINE. Yes; after you had been subpenaed to appear in this hearing, when did you get in contact or come into contact with Mr. Stauverman and who initiated that contact?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, I would say it happened in this way, Mr. Sourwine. Shortly after I received the subpena, I telephoned Mr. Stauverman and, since I knew of no attorneys in my area who have skill or background in these procedures, I asked him if he could help me secure an attorney; and it was at that time, of course, that I discovered that Mr. Stauverman had also been subpenaed by the committee, and apparently he had already made some attempt to secure counsel, and I asked him to allow me to, if possible, also use the man he selected.

Mr. SOURWINE. Thank you, sir; now, I will ask you, do you feel there is anything in that testimony that you have just given that is likely to incriminate you in any way?

Mr. LORENZ. Well, sir, frankly, I still don't understand the pertinency of the question. Now, of course, you understand that there is always the danger of an innocent question leading to other questions that might be incriminating, and that was my honest opinion of the matter.

Mr. SOURWINE. I have no more questions.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Lorenz, I believe you stated in executive session you know Daniel West?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Senator JENNER. Where did you first meet him?

Mr. LORENZ. As I recall, sir, I first met Mr. West when he came to Oglethorpe University as a teacher; I was a student at the time.

Senator JENNER. Mr. Daniel West was a teacher in Oglethorpe University?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct.

Senator JENNER. Now, did you know him at that time or since as a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. LORENZ. I will not witness against myself on that, sir.

Senator JENNER. Are you now a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. LORENZ. At the present time I am not a member of any political organization.

Senator JENNER. I am not asking you about political organizations.

Mr. LORENZ. Including——

Senator JENNER. I am asking you about the Communist Party.

Mr. LORENZ. I am not a member of the Communist Party.

Senator JENNER. Were you a member of the Communist Party when you received the subpena to be here?

Mr. LORENZ. No, sir; I was not.

Senator JENNER. When did you disassociate yourself from the Communist Party?

Mr. LORENZ. On that, I plead the privilege of the Constitution.

Senator JENNER. The fifth amendment?

Mr. LORENZ. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you a member of the Communist Party a month ago?

Mr. LORENZ. To all questions of that nature, Mr. Morris, I will have to plead the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you a member of the Communist Party 2 weeks ago; this is October 29; 2 weeks ago would be October 15?

Mr. LORENZ. I am trying to remember the date when I received the subpena. Could you help me out?

Mr. SCHROEDER. Last Wednesday.

Mr. MORRIS. Last Wednesday you were subpenaed?

Mr. LORENZ. What was the date?

Mr. MORRIS. That would be the 23d.

Mr. LORENZ. Sir, I cannot answer your question then.

Mr. MORRIS. In other words, when I asked you if you were a member of the Communist Party on October 15, you refused to answer claiming your privilege?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you hear you were to be subpenaed before you actually received the subpena?

Mr. LORENZ. I beg your pardon?

Mr. MORRIS. Did you hear you were to be subpenaed?

Mr. LORENZ. No, sir; I had no idea.

Mr. MORRIS. Until you actually received the subpena?

Mr. LORENZ. That is correct, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. I have no further questions.

Senator JENNER. No further questions. You will be excused.

(Witness excused.)

Senator JENNER. Call the next witness.

Mr. SMITH. Are both of these witnesses now released from the subpena?

Senator JENNER. I can't hear you.

Mr. SMITH. Are both of these witnesses now released from the subpena?

Senator JENNER. Yes, sir; they are excused and released from the subpena.

Mr. SMITH. Thank you, sir.

Senator JENNER. Thank you for your cooperation. Mr. McGurty, will you be sworn. Do you swear the testimony you give in this hearing will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. MCGURTY. I do.

Senator JENNER. You may be seated. Will you give the committee your full name?

TESTIMONY OF LAWRENCE E. McGURTY

Mr. MCGURTY. My name is Lawrence Edward McGurty.

Senator JENNER. Where do you reside, Mr. McGurty?

Mr. MCGURTY. 3658 Townes Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

Senator JENNER. And what is your business or profession?

Mr. MCGURTY. Until this morning I was a shipping clerk at Richards Manufacturing Co.

Senator JENNER. Here in Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. MCGURTY. Memphis, Tenn.

Senator JENNER. All right; proceed with the questioning, Mr. Morris.

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. McGurty, you have been active in the Communist Party here in Memphis for some years now, have you not?

Mr. MCGURTY. Yes, sir; that is true.

Mr. MORRIS. And you have made it clear to us in executive session you would be willing to tell us all about your participation in the Communist Party?

Mr. MCGURTY. I think I made it clear in the executive session that I would talk about my activities in the Communist Party.

Mr. MORRIS. Yes, sir; we appreciate that. Now, Senator Jenner, we were told yesterday by Dr. Franklin who appeared to us as being a rather forthright witness that, after Franklin left the Communist Party, that Mr. McGurty, in spite of the fact that he had been a member of the Communist Party for many years, also left the Communist Party.

We have reason to believe that in March 1957, you asked the Daily Worker people to stop sending the Daily Worker to your home, in about March 1957?

Mr. MCGURTY. No, I don't believe I had any connection with the Daily Worker.

Mr. MORRIS. You no longer receive it, do you?

Mr. MCGURTY. The subscription expired.

Mr. MORRIS. You didn't renew it; is that right?

Mr. MCGURTY. I didn't renew it; no.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, the personal estimate of myself as counsel, and I think other staff members here, is that this man may be in an area that we should take consideration of. I think there is reason to believe that he has recently left the Communist Party, within the last, let us say, 6 months, or maybe it is a longer period, but let me see. You have been a Communist until recently?

Mr. MCGURTY. I would say it was a lot longer than the period you mentioned.

Mr. MORRIS. Until when?

Mr. MCGURTY. I believe, and I would like to say this, that you mentioned that I have been a Communist for a long number of years. I would say that I had no actual connection for great periods of time with Communist activity, because I would be isolated from it. In other words, when I would be working on a boat, or when I would be working in a small area.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you join the party?

Senator JENNER. Yes, that is the way; when did you join?

Mr. MCGURTY. Well, I told you in executive session that, as far as I could recall, it was either late 1946 or the early part of 1947.

Mr. MORRIS. All right; now, as late as November 1956, you were distributing the Daily Worker, weren't you, November 1956?

Mr. MCGURTY. No, I don't believe that is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. You paid Communist Party dues in November 1956, didn't you?

Mr. MCGURTY. No, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. When did you last pay Communist Party dues?

Mr. MCGURTY. I can't remember the exact date, but it seems to me it is almost 2 years ago.

Mr. MORRIS. Almost 2 years ago?

Mr. MCGURTY. Yes, I think it is.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you sure you didn't pay Communist Party dues in the fall of 1956?

Mr. MCGURTY. I am not sure of it, but it seems to me it is a longer period of time than what you think.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, there are other things, Senator, which indicate to me that the witness did have some tapering off activity, at least it seems to be tapering off activity in about the fall of 1956. I don't care to argue with Mr. McGurty——

Mr. MCGURTY. I don't want to argue.

Mr. MORRIS. Because the time element is not important here, but I think, Senator, since the man has recently left the Communist Party, and generally if someone is in that intermediate state of leaving the Communist Party, emotionally, he is not in an emotional state to be a good witness, I suggest we defer the examination until some further time.

Senator JENNER. It has been the experience of this committee, and we have had other cases just like yours, and that is another reason why we have executive sessions; we have found that people like you who have been members of the Communist Party, in your case since 1946, have a period of what we call twilight in breaking away.

Mr. MCGURTY. May I interrupt you, Senator?

Senator JENNER. Yes.

Mr. McGURTY. I would like to tell you as I did in the executive session that I have no knowledge of any conspiracy in the Communist Party. I have no knowledge of any illegal activities in the sense, when I say illegal activities, any of the known—the regular facts that people say about Communists, as bombing or anything like that. I have never seen anything like that in all the period I was in it.

Senator JENNER. In other words, you just paid dues and carried out chores and assignments?

Mr. McGURTY. No; I was voluntarily connected with the Communist Party; nobody forced me into it.

Senator JENNER. That is what I say, but you paid dues; you were a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. McGURTY. I believed in it.

Mr. MORRIS You went to the New York State leadership school?

Mr. McGURTY. I did not go to any school while I was in the party.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you go to leadership school?

Mr. McGURTY. No, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you ever have any training?

Mr. McGURTY. I had no training except books I have read, or discussions I would have, and at the present time you say I am in the twilight; I don't think so.

Senator JENNER. Are you still a Communist?

Mr. McGURTY. No, Senator; I told you——

Senator JENNER. All right; that is the point I am trying to make. We have had witnesses like you before. Now, we want to help you, we want you to help us.

Mr. McGURTY. Senator, I would like to say this; ever since I had my own mind, I tried to think for myself and the only reason I disconnected myself with the Communist Party was because I was forced to in order to make a living for my family.

Senator JENNER. Economic reasons?

Mr. McGURTY. Economically, yes, sir; I couldn't get a job, I couldn't hold a job.

Senator JENNER. As a Communist?

Mr. McGURTY. Senator, while I was a Communist Party member, people knew my views; people knew how I stood on issues, but, of course, I didn't go around with a label saying, "I am a Communist," but they knew where I stood on issues, and just in June I talked to two FBI agents.

I said: "If you know of any act that I have committed that is against my country," I said, "you should get an indictment and put me before the jury, because," I said, "my past is clear as far as I am concerned." I know you don't believe it, but that is the way I feel about it.

Senator JENNER. Well, this much we do know about you from your own testimony, that you are now no longer associated with the Communist Party?

Mr. McGURTY. That is right.

Senator JENNER. And I think in view of that circumstance, this committee should defer any further questioning of this witness.

Mr. McGURTY. You mean this has to go on for years and years? It was 6 years to the day that I was up here before.

Senator JENNER. That would be up to us to decide. Since you are now disassociated from the Communist Party, you may see fit down the road somewhere, as other Communists have, to come in and help this committee.

Mr. McGurty. Senator, they do it because they want to be informers; I could never do that. I feel as Senator Eastland said——

Senator Jenner. We are awfully glad that you are not now associated with the Communist Party.

Mr. McGurty. I am not.

Senator Jenner. And that you are not now carrying on activity in the Memphis area, and for that reason I think that this hearing in connection with this witness should be recessed, and we do hope you finally make clear your transition and see our side and realize that this thing with which you were working was a conspiracy. It has been so defined by many people in our country——

Mr. McGurty. Senator, people define——

Senator Jenner. Just a moment, please; as a conspiracy that is out to overthrow and destroy this country.

Mr. McGurty. I deny that.

Senator Jenner. And we want to congratulate you on breaking from the party, and I think at this time the committee will stand at recess. We are to come back in open session at 2 o'clock. All witnesses under subpena will be here at 1:30. We go back in open session at 2 o'clock.

(Witness excused.)

(Whereupon, at 12:15 p. m., the subcommittee was adjourned.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The subcommittee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 2 p. m., in the Federal courtroom, Federal Building, Chairman James O. Eastland presiding.

Present: Senators Eastland and William E. Jenner.

Also present: Robert Morris, chief council; J. G. Sourwine, associate counsel; Benjamin Mandel, research director; and Frank W. Schroeder, chief investigator.

Chairman Eastland. The committee will come to order.

Mr. Morris. Mr. Reece, will you be sworn, please?

Chairman Eastland. Will you hold up your right hand?

Do you solemnly swear the testimony you are about to give is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. Reece. I do.

TESTIMONY OF SAMUEL REECE

Mr. Morris. Give your full name and address to the reporter.

Mr. Reece. Samuel Reece is the name.

Mr. Morris. Is that spelled R-e-e-c-e?

Mr. Reece. Yes, sir; Samuel Reece.

Mr. Morris. And where do you reside?

Mr. Reece. I did not get you.

Mr. Morris. Where do you live?

Mr. Reece. 2750 Wilson Avenue, Knoxville, Tenn.

Mr. Morris. In Knoxville?

Mr. Reece. Yes, sir.

Mr. Morris. Were you born on September 21, 1894, at Blaine, Tex.?

Mr. REECE. You will have to ask that question again.

Mr. MORRIS. Pardon?

Mr. REECE. Would you mind asking that question clearer?

Mr. MORRIS. You won't tell us whether or not you were born at Blaine, Tex., the 21st day of September in the year 1894?

Mr. REECE. I won't answer on constitutional rights.

Senator JENNER. I can't hear the witness.

Will you take your hand away from your mouth?

Mr. REECE. I just had my teeth pulled, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. He says he had his teeth pulled and it is difficult to talk out.

Senator JENNER. Speak into the mike; maybe that will help. Pull the mike up, please. Now, what was your answer, sir?

Did you get the answer, Miss Reporter?

Mr. MORRIS. He says he refused to answer, invoking his constitutional right.

What constitutional right, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. Constitution, fifth amendment, of the United States.

Senator JENNER. Fifth amendment?

Mr. MORRIS. It seems fantastic, Senator, that his acknowledging that he was born at Blaine, Tex., on September 21, 1894, could possibly be any link in any chain of circumstances that would lead to conviction for a crime.

Chairman EASTLAND. I am ordering and directing him to answer that.

Mr. REECE. I can't hear you.

Chairman EASTLAND. I order you to answer the question.

Mr. REECE. I did not get the question, sir.

Chairman EASTLAND. Repeat it.

Mr. MORRIS. Where were you born?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer that question on the fifth amendment, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you born in Blaine, Tex.?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. I ask he be directed to answer both questions.

Chairman EASTLAND. He is ordered and directed, on penalty of contempt, to answer the question.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you going to answer the question, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question, sir.

Senator JENNER. For what reason?

Mr. REECE. I don't understand you.

Senator JENNER. Why do you decline to answer the question?

Mr. REECE. You have got where I was born there, haven't you?

Senator JENNER. I say why do you decline to answer that question?

Mr. REECE. I stand on my constitutional rights, yes, sir.

Senator JENNER. What constitutional right?

Mr. REECE. Fifth amendment.

Senator JENNER. Fifth amendment of the Constitution?

Mr. REECE. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, you joined the Communist Party, did you not, through a man named Kenneth McDonnell?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer that as previously stated, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, in 1942 you worked for the Government, the WPA, did you not?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer that question.

Mr. MORRIS. You refuse to answer on what grounds, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. Constitutional right, fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Fifth amendment. Now, you also worked in a restricted area, shortly after 1942, after you worked on WPA, you also got a job in a restricted area at Oak Ridge, at the atomic energy Oak Ridge institution, did you not, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question.

Chairman EASTLAND. Now, weren't you there as a spy? Did you work at Oak Ridge as a spy?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer, sir.

Chairman EASTLAND. On what grounds?

Mr. REECE. Fifth amendment.

Chairman EASTLAND. Why, any decent man would be glad to answer the question whether he was a Communist spy or not.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, in 1956—in 1956 did you know a woman named Helen Parsons, a Communist Party Member named Helen Parsons?

Mr. REECE. I did not understand you.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know a woman named Helen Parsons?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question as has been previously stated.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know a woman named Maud Russell? She is a woman who lectures and poses as an expert on the Far East. She has been identified to us as a member of the Communist Party. Do you know Maud Russell?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. During the past year, didn't Maud Russell take Helen Parsons to your home?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question, sir, on the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, in the early 1950's, weren't you dismissed from Oak Ridge as a security risk?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer, sir, as previously stated.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you been chairman of the local division of the Communist Party with the headquarters at Mascot, Tenn.?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, while you worked at Oak Ridge, were you a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you have access to any classified material at Oak Ridge?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question, sir, on the grounds it might incriminate me.

Mr. MORRIS. Did you pass out any classified material you may have had access to to any person you knew to be a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the questions, sir.

Senator JENNER. For the same reason, fifth amendment?

Mr. REECE. Yes. sir.

Mr. MORRIS. What has been your education, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question on the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Senator, in view of the responses, I am getting to the first questions——

Are you a Communist right now, Mr. Reece?

Mr. REECE. Repeat it.

Mr. MORRIS. Pardon?

Mr. REECE. I did not get the question, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Are you now a Communist?

Mr. REECE. I decline to answer the question on the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Are there other questions? In view of the witness' stated responses, I think it would be purposeless to go on.

Senator JENNER. No questions.

Mr. MORRIS. Stand aside.

Mr. REECE. Does that mean that I can go home now?

Mr. MORRIS. Yes; you may go.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Standfield.

I would like the record to show, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Standfield, the witness now coming forward to testify, declined to testify in executive session, an opportunity we give to witnesses to insure their protection in case we have the wrong, mistaken identity, or in the event that person may have been a member of the Communist Party and has broken away and wants to cooperate with the committee. Mr. Standfield was asked the question, and he declined to testify thereafter.

Chairman EASTLAND. Do you solemnly swear the testimony you are about to give is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I do.

TESTIMONY OF RUELL STANDFIELD

Mr. MORRIS. Will you give your full name and address to the reporter, Mr. Standfield?

Mr. STANDFIELD. My full name is Ruell Standfield.

Mr. MORRIS. And where do you reside?

Mr. STANDFIELD. 21 Mercer Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you born on September 19, 1906, in Dubois, Ill.?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I believe that is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. And where do you work now, Mr. Standfield?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I tell you, that is kind of a funny question to ask. If you would have asked me where I worked up until I was called here, I might not have——

Mr. MORRIS. Up until when?

Mr. STANDFIELD. Up until I was called here, now, because I might not have no job now. So if I told you where I was working now, might be telling a lie.

Mr. MORRIS. Where were you working, then?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I was working at the American Advertising Department.

Mr. MORRIS. Where?

Mr. STANDFIELD. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. MORRIS. In what capacity?

Mr. STANDFIELD. Shipping clerk, assistant shipping clerk.

Mr. MORRIS. All right. Now, you were in Memphis in 1943, were you not?

Mr. STANDFIELD. On that, what has happened this morning, as being here with no representative, no legal advice, I am bound to take precautions to protect myself. This morning a man was denied his constitutional right because he had answered the question before. Now, if you would state the time there—you said 1944?

Mr. MORRIS. Well, we have been informed that you were in Memphis in 1944, worked for the E. L. Bruce Lumber Co. Now, is that information accurate?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I believe it is.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, were you a member of the Communist Party while you were in Memphis in 1943?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I reserve the rights, as an American citizen, of the 1st, 5th, and 10th amendments of the United States Constitution, not to answer the question. However, if I should answer it, I would say this, that whoever, or if anybody has inferred to you that I was, they are misquoting the truth, their father is dead, and their mother was never married.

Mr. MORRIS. You mean—well, are you denying you are a Communist?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I said I took the 1st, 5th, and 10th amendments, and refuse to answer the question, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Well, the committee will——

Chairman EASTLAND. Mr. Standfield, the chair is going to recognize and do what it can to protect your rights. You can't take the fifth amendment, and turn around and partially answer a question. When you do, you waive the right to take the fifth amendment.

Mr. STANDFIELD. I——

Chairman EASTLAND. Now, wait just a minute, sir.

Mr. STANDFIELD. Yes, sir.

Chairman EASTLAND. I know that you are not a lawyer, and I can tell you don't realize the trap that you got yourself in. Now, I am warning you, and that is what the law is. Now, I am not going to make you answer the question. You have waived the right to take the fifth amendment on that question.

But, counsel, he did not know—it was ignorance. I am going to ask him again. But, now, if you waive it again, then we are going all the way.

Mr. STANDFIELD. May I——

Chairman EASTLAND. And make you answer the question.

Mr. STANDFIELD. May I get a clarification on that, sir?

Chairman EASTLAND. Yes, sir.

Mr. STANDFIELD. If you ask me a question, and I take the fifth amendment, you are going to force me to answer the question?

Chairman EASTLAND. Well, you turn right around and waive your right to take the fifth amendment, because in substance you answer the question. You can't say, "I take the fifth amendment, but if I answer it, somebody is lying." You have waived it when you do that. Now, I realize that you did not know what the law was. Now, I am not going to require you to answer it, because I don't think you knew it, but I want you to realize that when you answer like that, now, we are going to insist on your answering hereafter, since you know what the law is.

Mr. STANDFIELD. All right.

Chairman EASTLAND. We want to be just as fair and protect your rights, and I think it is part of my duty as chairman to protect your rights and advise you what your rights are.

Mr. STANDFIELD. Thank you, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Mr. Standfield, are you the person who invited Lawrence E. McGurty to his first Communist meeting?

Mr. STANDFIELD. Fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, Mr. McGurty has told someone—I won't identify the person he has told—that you were in fact the person who took him to his first Communist Party meeting. Was that a truthful statement?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I reserve my rights under the 1st, 5th, and 10th amendments.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, do you know a man named Joe Stern of Cincinnati?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I am afraid if I don't take the fifth amendment on that, I will be like the gentleman here this morning who lost his right to take it further on, so I will be forced to take it.

Mr. MORRIS. Now, have you set up a new group—have you and Joe Stern together, jointly, set up a new nonparty group at Cincinnati, Ohio, the purpose of which group is to enable members to keep in touch with the Communist Party, but at the same time truthfully state that they are not technically members of the Communist Party?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I will take the fifth amendment on that. But if I had——

Mr. MORRIS. Could I break that down for you? Could I break it down? Maybe you can answer some part of it and not others. I have asked you if you know Joe Stern, and you refused to answer. Have you organized a group of any kind in Cincinnati?

Mr. STANDFIELD. There is no group in Cincinnati that I know of.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you organized a group of people?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I will take the fifth amendment on that, sir. I haven't got time——

Mr. MORRIS. Now, were you a Communist Party organizer in Texas in 1940 under the alias of George Bradley?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I take the same 5th—1st, 5th, and 10th.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you ever used a name other than Ruell Standfield?

Mr. STANDFIELD. First and fifth.

Mr. MORRIS. Have you ever been a Communist Party organizer in Texas?

Mr. STANDFIELD. First and fifth.

Mr. MORRIS. In 1946 and 1947, were you regularly attending Communist Party meetings at the Union Hall in Charleston, S. C.?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I will have to take the fifth amendment, sir, there on that, as well as any other.

Mr. MORRIS. In 1940, were you president of the Food, Tobacco, and Agricultural Workers Association at Charleston?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I believe the records will show that, sir.

Mr. MORRIS. That is a fact, you were the president?

Mr. STANDFIELD. That is right.

Mr. MORRIS. Is your wife living with you at Cincinnati, Mr. Standfield?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I am divorced; I am separated.

Mr. MORRIS. You are separated. In 1945, when you were president of the Food, Tobacco, and Agricultural Workers Association, were you a Communist?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I was not—I will take the fifth amendment.

Mr. MORRIS. Do you know where your former wife, Rebecca Standfield, the wife from whom you are separated, now resides?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I can truthfully say I don't know.

Mr. MORRIS. You were divorced on August 2, 1951?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I believe that is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. Sir, I have no more questions of this particular witness. Are you a Communist now, Mr. Standfield?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I will have to take the fifth amendment on that.

Mr. MORRIS. In 1935, you were sentenced to 5 years in San Quentin, were you not?

Mr. STANDFIELD. That is correct.

Mr. MORRIS. And the charge there that you had, you were recklessly in possession of an explosive?

Mr. STANDFIELD. That is the charge.

Mr. MORRIS. Were you, in fact, recklessly in possession of explosives?

Mr. STANDFIELD. When the United States Senate investigated the case, the Governor of Ohio—the Governor of Illinois gave me an unconditional pardon, which I have in my pocket.

Mr. MORRIS. Unconditional pardon. Did you know Al Greenberg?

Mr. STANDFIELD. Where would he be from? I know so many people.

Mr. MORRIS. I see. Well, Senator, I asked him about Al Greenberg. I was trying to ask you questions only to follow the evidence we have on hand. Our evidence indicates Rebecca Standfield, his divorced wife, was associated with Al Greenberg here in the Communist activities.

Now, I am asking if you knew Al Greenberg, the Al Greenberg who was a Communist here in Memphis?

Mr. STANDFIELD. I don't believe I do.

Mr. MORRIS. We have no reason to believe you know him, but for the record——

Mr. STANDFIELD. Well, it is 14 years since I was here.

Chairman EASTLAND. Let him answer.
